At the Hotel Brighton the gates were of course closed to all but the Prince and his suite, but it is satisfactory to be enabled to state, on excellent authority, that a splendid breakfast was in readiness for the visitors, which no doubt the recent sea voyage made peculiarly acceptable. The Garde Impériale protected every entrance, and the Cent Garde (dismounted) lined the vestibule. Some of our Life Guards were amongst the crowd, and Corporal Sutton, the "Commander-in-Chief of the British army in France," was more than once mistaken for "Un General Anglais." It appears that on the preceding evening this now distinguished warrior had been giving his French friends of the Cent Garde a specimen of that dexterity with the sword which had often enabled him to cut a sheep in two, at the Gladiatorial exhibitions of Saville-house. The British cavalry were on this occasion dining with their friends, the Cent Gardes, at their magnificent quarters, "The Chateau," and his Majesty the Emperor hearing of the party sent thirty bottles of champagne to give the necessary vivacity to the entertainment. After dinner, and "the usual loyal toasts," feats of arms and of martial prowess became naturally the topic of conversation, and the British Commander-in-Chief volunteered to cut a bar of lead in two with his sword. The Frenchmen were astonished at the proposal, but much more so when they saw the deed actually done, and the strongest and most powerful of their own body was valorous withal. But, alas! though strong and valorous withal, he had not cut sheep in two at Saville-house, and so, after about a dozen desperate cuts, he was obliged to give up the task in tears and perspiration. Then the bar was examined and a fracture was hinted, but Corporal Sutton repeated the stroke, suggesting at the same time the possibility of cutting a small waisted man in two in a similar manner. "Truth is stranger than fiction." Here was the celebrated trial of skill between Richard Cœur de Lion and Saladin in the "Talisman," enacted over again by a corporal in the Life Guards and a French heavy dragoon, and excited quite as much interest in the spectators. The Frenchmen, although behaving with all their usual politeness and good humour, would evidently have been better pleased that their comrade had cut the bar, and a little English midshipman who was present implored his countryman, with tears in his eyes, not to make the second attempt, if he was not quite sure of his hand, lest the national character should be imperilled by the failure of Corporal Sutton, of her Britannic Majesty's Life Guards. It is pleasing to have to add that this little episode did not interrupt friendly communications, but that Corporal Sutton, having good naturedly attributed his success more to slight of hand and practice, than strength, the Emperor's excellent champagne was finished in the most amiable manner imaginable.

SHOOTING.

CAUTION AS TO THE USE OF FIRE-ARMS.
(To the Editor).

SIR,—As the shooting season has commenced, may I beg of you to insert in your widely circulated columns this letter, which I trust may be of great use to the sporting world, and for which I venture to hope I shall not be complained, when I bear in mind the many unfortunate accidents with guns which have befallen numerous sportsmen (occasioning misery and sorrow in families otherwise happy) from the mere want of care and caution in the simple process of cocking and uncocking the locks of their guns, and from the unpardonable fault of many sportsmen in playing with the backs of their guns when they have but little else to do.

Suppose the sportsman to have fired one barrel of his gun, and then, being desirous of reloading the discharged one, he lets down the cock of the loaded one to half-cock. Now, nothing can be more imprudent than this, for it frequently happens that, instead of the sear going into its place, it catches on the edge of the half-bent of the tumbler; with his gun in this state he reloads, and, should he be lucky enough not to shoot himself from the jar of loading, he is sure, when next he fires the reloaded barrel, to discharge both. I have even known this to occur in firing off a gun with enfeebled locks, when the discharge of the barrel has caused the sear of the remaining lock to move from its proper position to the edge of the full-bent of the tumbler, and the sportsman, unaware of his danger, has reloaded with his gun in this state, and an accident has been the consequence.

Now, let me beg of all sportsmen, in uncocking their guns, to let the cock down past the half-bent, and then to draw it back to the half-cock; in so doing the sear must come into its proper place and all will be well, taking care that the fingers do not touch the triggers, as it may prevent the locks acting properly. To carry the gun cocked at any time is dangerous and unpardonable, as also with the hammer resting on the cap; in fact, the gun is only safe when at half-cock.

The use of a thick glove upon the right hand is very dangerous; for, in uncocking and cocking a gun, the glove may, with an imperceptible pressure upon the trigger, occasion the same disarrangement of the lock as above stated.

Another cause of accidents with guns arises from the carelessness with which some sportsmen neglect attending to the position of the gun in loading, buying the gun pointing at their heads, instead of invariably keeping the stock outside the left foot, when the gun, pressing against the leg, will not point in the direction of the head or any part of the person. In loading, turn the gun a little to the right to load the left barrel; your hand will not then be in danger of the right one; and accidents have occurred from the heedless manner in which sportsmen have returned their ramrods after loading, by placing their right hand over the muzzle of the gun, which would have been entirely avoided simply by adjusting the rod in the pipe, and sending it home with the forefinger of the right and the thumb of the left hand. Look at the gun, but never let the gun look at you, is my golden rule; and I can assure all sportsmen that safety-guards are of but little use when carelessness is predominant.

The recoil of the gun, so often complained of, arises, in nine cases out of ten, from the not holding the stock to the shoulder, but to the arm; the proper holding of which will be greatly facilitated by keeping the right elbow well down, when the stock will fit the shoulder with greater firmness. Some gentlemen, if told this, would be quite offended; but I hope these remarks will offend none; for I am sure few could be more capable or more willing to give sound advice upon this subject than myself, who have had the experience of nearly forty years, and the advantage of many of the best opinions in the sporting world, to form my judgment upon.

Let me caution every one against bringing a loaded gun into the house. Always discharge it before entering; and do not content yourself with taking off the caps, and saying "All's well," for the danger is almost as great with the caps off as with them on; for the percussion-powder often comes out of the cap and is left upon the nipple, and the greatest danger may be apprehended from the false security which is presented to the unconscious hunter of the gun.

Another important point which I would offer to the consideration of your readers is, that the locks of their guns should always be kept perfectly clean, as also the triggers, and should act with perfect freedom. A very small quantity of the best oil placed on the axle-tree, or where the tumbler works in the lockplate, would do good, as the want of this attention has often been the cause of many accidents with locks; but I recommend all sportsmen to send their guns to their gunmakers after the season is over, that they may be put in order, instead of permitting them to lie in their dirt until the eleventh hour, as I am sorry to say, too many do.

The gun, when loaded, should never be carried with the muzzle downwards, as it sometimes happens that in carrying it so some dirt or snow will lodge itself in the muzzle unobserved by the sportsman, and the barrel, when next fired, will either bulge or burst at the muzzle—this I have often known to be the case. I would therefore recommend the sportsman always to carry his gun upright at the full extent of the arm, as a dragoon carries his carbine when dismounted, and, should he think that by any chance dirt may have got into the barrels, he should invariably run it down upon the charge, and thus he will escape all possibility of accident.

Certainty alone can insure safety; if, then, any doubt be entertained as to whether the gun be properly loaded or not, draw both barrels of the shot, and flash the powder off. To draw the charge, the barrels should be taken out of the stock, the caps removed, and the thumb drawn over the nipples, in order to efface any remains of the percussion powder that may be left on the top of them. When the gun has missed fire, you are at once aware there is an obstruction in the breech, and it should be a warning to you to act cautiously, by taking the nipples out and seeing they are clear; put some powder in the breech, screw the nipples in again, and flash off. By following the above suggestions you will, in all probability, avoid the serious calamity of the powderflask exploding in the hand while in the act of reloading.

The care and caution I have suggested would, I believe, prevent ninety-nine out of 100 of what are generally termed "accidents with guns," but what I designate as the results of carelessness.

In the belief that these few suggestions would, if thoroughly adhered to, be the means of preventing many a careless wound and heart-rending scene, I have ventured to intrude myself upon your notice, trusting that, by the aid of your all-powerful columns, I may be the cause of lessening the number of gun accidents that occur during every shooting season.—I am, Sir, your most obedient servant, 170, New Bond-street.

THE COURT.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert embarked at Osborne on Monday evening, at a quarter past nine o'clock, on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, for Boulogne. His Royal Highness was attended by his grace the Duke of Newcastle, General Lord Sabin, Major-General Wetherall, D.A.G., Major-General the Hon. C. Grey, Lieutenant-Colonel Biddulph, Captain the Hon. D. de Ros, and Captain du Plat.

Her Majesty the Queen accompanied his Royal Highness in the royal yacht until it was off Portsmouth, when her Majesty, attended by the ladies and gentlemen of the royal household, proceeded on board the royal yacht Fairy, and returned to Osborne.

Her Majesty walked out on Tuesday morning with her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent.

The royal children took their usual walking and riding exercise.

It is stated that her Majesty and her illustrious Consort are expected to arrive at Balmoral on Friday next. The new palace is advancing, but will not be ready for the reception of the royal family before the next autumn. It is expected that by the beginning of October the electric telegraph will be complete from London to Balmoral.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

The Earl and Countess of Chesterfield have, during the past week, entertained a select party at Brethby-park, near Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Viscount and Viscountess Maitland, Viscount and Viscountess Newport, the Hon. Francis Villiers, the Hon. Mrs. George Anson and Miss Anson, have been among the guests of the noble earl and countess.

The Duke and Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Adeliza Fitzalan Howard, purpose remaining at Glossop-hall, near Sheffield, until the week after next, when the noble duke and duchess return to Arundel-castle. Lord and Lady Edward Howard are staying at the castle.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Westminster have arrived at Motcombe-house, near Shaftesbury, from visiting the Earl and Countess of Macclesfield, at Sherborne-castle, Oxon.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Ailsa are residing at Culzean-castle, Ayrshire, surrounded by a select party.

The Duke and Duchess of Northumberland will shortly remove from Alnwick-castle to Stanwick-park, his grace's seat in Yorkshire, to reside a few weeks previous to taking up their abode at Alnwick for the winter.

Viscount and Lady Emily Dangarvan have arrived at Marston hall, near Frome (the Earl of Cork's seat), from a tour of visits.

Lord and Lady Southampton have arrived at Whittlebury. The noble lord commences the hunting season next month.

Viscount and Viscountess Mahon and family are staying with the Earl Stanhope, at Chevening, near Seven Oaks, Kent.

Viscount and Viscountess Canning have sailed in his lordship's yacht, the Fair Rosamond, on a cruise in the Baltic, where the noble Paymaster-General will visit the English and French fleets, returning to England at the close of the month, when her ladyship will go in waiting to the Sovereign at Balmoral.

The Duke and Duchess of Grafton are entertaining a select party at Euston-hall, Suffolk.

The Earl and Countess of Ashburnham will shortly leave Ashburnham-place, in Sussex, on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Breadalbane, at Taymouth-castle, N.B., where a very distinguished party has arrived. The Countess (Dowager) of Ashburnham has left Ashburnham-place, for her Marine-villa, St. Lawrence, Kent.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Abercorn do not intend visiting Baron's-court, the family seat in Ireland, this season.

The noble marquis and marchioness purpose passing the winter at Brockett-hall, which the noble marquis has taken, for a term, of Lady Palmerston.

Lord Brougham is entertaining a small party at Brougham-hall. The noble and learned lord is expected to leave for his chateau in the south of France early in the ensuing month.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston have been on a visit to Sir Augustus and Lady Clifford, at Westfield, Isle of Wight.

The Earl de Grey is staying at Studely-park, near Ripon. The noble earl's regiment, the Yorkshire Hussars, assemble at York this week after next, and, from his lordship's attendance with that brilliant yeomanry corps, he will be detained in the north until late in the ensuing month, when the noble earl repairs to Wrest-park, Beds, to welcome a succession of visitors.

The Countess Colclough has returned to Cranios-house from the German spas.

Lord Telesdale and the Hon. Miss Mitford have arrived at his lordship's seat in Oxfordshire for the autumn. The noble lord commences the hunting-season at the close of the month.

Lord and Lady Nass have arrived at Bremore, Dunbeath, Caithness-shire.

Mr. and Lady Elizabeth Repton have left town for Ireland.

The Duke of Beaufort leaves his shooting quarters in Perthshire at the close of the month, and, after a brief visit to the Earl and Countess Howe, at Gopsall-hall, Leicester-shire, goes to Badminton for the hunting season.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Ailesbury are entertaining a select circle at Tottenham-park, near Marlborough.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Stafford have arrived at Dunrobin-castle on a visit to the Duke of Sutherland. The Earl and Lady Constance Grosvenor are also staying with the noble duke.

The Earl of Jersey, we are happy to state, is gradually regaining his health. The Countess and Lady Clementina Villiers return at the close of the month from a tour in Scotland.

DEATH OF SIR JOHN ASHBURNHAM, BART.—We have to record the death of Sir John Ashburnham, Bart., which melancholy event took place a day or two since at his residence at Gnesting, Sussex.

METROPOLIS.

CITY OF LONDON REGISTRATION OF PARLIAMENTARY VOTERS.—Mr. T. Y. McChurche will commence the revision of the list of voters for members to serve in Parliament for the City of London, on Monday, the 18th inst., at Guildhall, and according to the returns made to him under the act, the claims and objections this year will be:—Freemen and liverymen, claims, 0; objections, 93; inhabitant householders, claims, 121; objections, 407; total claims and objections, 621. Last year they were:—Freemen and liverymen, claim, 1; objections, 308; inhabitant householders, claims, 173; objections, 1,012; total claims and objections, 1,494.

EXTINCTION OF BARTHOLOMEW FAIR.—The last of anything connected with the long-since defunct "Bartlemey Fair" has just expired. Saturday was the day upon which the Lord Mayor should have proceeded to Smithfield and read the proclamation, which is part of the charter for holding the market, for the fair. The act of Parliament for removing the market to Copenhagen fields has at length relieved the corporation of going through the useless ceremony, and, as the law of removal comes into operation next year, of course there was no necessity for his lordship to attend and proclaim the fair in compliance with the charter which sanctioned the holding of the market.

BIRTHS IN LONDON.—Last week the births of 816 boys and 809 girls, in all 1,625 children, were registered in London. In the nine corresponding weeks of the years 1845—53 the average number was 1,367.

Our Opera-Glass.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—The Spanish dancers appeared on Monday night in two new ballets, both of decidedly Spanish complexion, and both well received. Various national dances were performed by the corps de ballet and by Señora Nema and Signor Ruiz, both of whom were warmly applauded. The dresses were pretty, the grouping effective, and the whole performance was characterised by that startling activity and energy of movement which are the prominent features of the national dances of Spain. The ballets, it seems, created the greatest sensation at Paris, and are entitled the Flower of Murciana and Los Monelos de Madrid.

ASTLEY'S.—Mr. William Cooke's truly wonderful elephants having finished a most brilliant career in Paris, are now performing at Hamburg to crowded audiences, and will shortly return to Astley's Amphitheatre, appearing in a new spectacle expressly written for these Eastern wonders. We understand that Mr. Nelson Lee, the celebrated pantomime author, has at this early period sent in his Christmas offering, which is highly approved of and accepted. The subject was selected by Mrs. William Cooke, and is of a most elaborate character.

STRAND THEATRE.—During the week "Hard Times" and "Faust" have been successfully continued with the addition of a screening novelty from the pen of Mr. Robert Soutor, entitled "Never Taste Wine at the Docks." The success which attended the prior productions of this author ("The Past Coach," "A Deed without a Name," &c.), led to the expectation that his present force would make a hit. It has done so, and, moreover, the roles assigned to Mrs. Long, Miss P. Beaumont, and Messrs. Bernard, Howard, Sidney, and Romer, suit their respective capabilities to a shade.

BRITANNIA THEATRE, HOXTON.—Though hyper-critics call the Britannia a "saloon," and not a "theatre," we could easily point out many establishments in London, even with the word "royal" prefixed to them, where neither the orderly conduct of the audience, nor the business of the stage, nor the pieces selected, can at all reach the standard of the Britannia. For the present and part of the coming week, an excellent version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" stands in the bills. We were ourselves fortunate enough to be recommended a few evenings since to pay a visit to the Britannia to witness the performance of Miss Clara St. Cassé in the role of Eva St. Clair, and we now have no hesitation in pronouncing her to be the best actress of her years on the British stage. Just eleven years old, she plays the piano, sings, and acts with a talent denied to many who are twenty years her seniors. It has been painful to us, on many occasions, to listen to children badly drilled into romances and Juliet, and Richard, but the case of Miss Clara St. Cassé is far different. With her all is nature, not art; and there is a pleasing archness about her performance which could never be attained by mere study, or through tuition. The audience were so delighted on the evening we attended, that one song received four encores! The young lady accompanies herself on the piano, which considerably adds to the effect of her singing. Notwithstanding the hot weather, she nightly fills the Britannia, and deservedly so. This is the first theatre in which she has appeared in London, but in the country we find she has played this, her favourite part, of Eva very frequently—viz., 231 evenings, according to the following list:—At Bristol and Bath, first engagement, 50 nights; second engagement, 21; third engagement, 12; Plymouth, first engagement, 13; second engagement, 6; Ryde, 22; Rochester, 6; Newcastle-on-Tyne, 12; Sheffield, 37; Leeds, 8; Hanley, 6; Wolverhampton and Shrewsbury, 9; Newport, Monmouthshire, 10; Bolton, 5; Barn-staple, 6; and at Exeter 5 nights. The performances on Wednesday evening next are for the benefit of Miss Charlotte Borrow, when Mrs. S. Lane will re-appear. This will ensure a bumper.

MR. MORRIS BARNETT.—Few play-goers of ten years' standing will fail to recollect with pleasure this gentleman's delineations of French character, ere he quitted the stage to follow exclusively the pursuits of literature. The success of several of his plays, more especially "The Serious Family," in America, has led to various tempting offers, inducing him to visit the United States. Before his departure, he intends giving a series of twelve performances at the Adelphi theatre, which he will commence on the opening night, with his famous character of Monsieur Jacques, in his own drama of that name—Musical Transcript.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Return of admissions for six days ending Saturday, Sept. 2, 1854: numbers, including season tickets, 49,878; received for admission, £2,565 6s. 2d. Monday, Sept. 4 (shilling day): admission at the doors, 9,050; admission by season tickets, 355; total, 9,405. Tuesday, Sept. 5 (shilling day): admission at the doors, 8,639; admission by season tickets, 553; total, 9,192. Wednesday, Sept. 6 (shilling day): admission at the doors, 7,797; admission by season tickets, 629; total, 8,426.

WORCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.—The festival opened on Tuesday morning under most favourable auspices, but with one disappointment—the absence of Miss Dolby, who was set down to take some principal parts in the Dettingen Te Deum and anthems. Miss Dolby had arrived in Worcester, but unfortunately was exceedingly unwell. In her absence, Mr. Jabez Jones, a local artist of considerable talent, and formerly of the Worcester Cathedral choir, undertook at short notice the music allotted to Miss Dolby, which he accomplished with considerable ability, though of course the unavoidable absence of the lady occasioned some disappointment to the Worcester public, with whom Miss Dolby is a great favourite. The arrivals commenced at an early hour, and at ten o'clock, the hour fixed for the opening of the doors of the cathedral, the cleanly and well-kept streets of the fine old city were filled with fashionably-dressed people, wending their way in carriages and on foot towards the sacred edifice. The weather was all that could be desired—cloudy and pleasant, and wanting that excessive heat which has marked the weather of the last fortnight. The cathedral itself is more massive and plain in the exterior than its fellow of Gloucester, though opinions differ as to the respective merits of the interior. The nave was divided into three classes of seats—the floor for the élite, a spacious gallery sloping from the floor to the west window for second-class (the best position in the cathedral), and the aisles for the accommodation of those whose means did not permit them to include in the higher places. The approaches to each "class" were distinct, but in the absence of any strict placards many strangers made the circuit of the cathedral and its precincts before they discovered the right entrance. Several new painted windows have also been lately let into the cathedral; one of them is a memorial to the late Queen Adelaide, who lived for some time at Witley Court, about eight miles from Worcester, and now the residence of Lord Waril. Shortly before eleven o'clock, the corporation, headed by the sword of state and mace, entered the cathedral, and were received by the Very Rev. the Dean (Dr. Peel). They took their places, about thirty in number, at the foot of the western gallery, on the floor of the nave, and facing the orchestra, which extended from the opposite end of the nave to the organ-loft, the organ itself forming the background. The Lord Bishop and the canons and minor canons of the cathedral, with the lay clerks and choristers, entered about the same time, and took their appointed places, the Bishop on his throne near the pulpit, on the south side, and the clergy and choristers close to the orchestra. The morning prayers were chanted by the Rev. Robert Sanders (minor canon), who also read the second lesson. The Rev. T. L. Wheeler (minor canon) read the first lesson of the day. Previous to the commencement of morning service, Mr. Arnott, of Gloucester cathedral, played a voluntary on the organ, which was substituted for the usual Esther overture, which had become a stock piece at these festivals. The preces and responses were Tallis's; the Grand Chant was used for the Venti, and, for the Psalm, a fine chant by the Rev. W. H. Havergal (a resident of Worcester) was employed. The choral service had a grand effect, the masses of sound in the "Amen," and again in the Gloria Patri, floating along the vaulted roof, had a magnificent and overpowering effect. The exhortation which precedes the Venti, "Praise ye the Lord; the Lord's name be praised," was given with effect. The Te Deum was the prescriptive one by Handel, that composed for the Dettingen victory. Mr. Jones took the parts allotted in the books to Miss Dolby, viz., the opening solo in the quartet, "The glorious company," the difficult trio, "Thou sittest at the right hand," and the beautiful concluding solo, "Lord in thee have I trusted." In the chorus, "To the Cherubim," Bumann's bassoon was, as usual, beautifully effective. Harper's trumpet obligato was as perfect as usual, but Mr. Weiss was hardly equal to it. The beautiful solo, "When thou tookest upon thee," which is written in the base clef, but is usually given to a tenor, was nicely rendered by Mr. Lockety. Mr. Weiss sang, "Vouchsafe O Lord," and, in his anxiety to be correct in the reading, he loses that powerful effect which Phillips used to give to this beautiful composition. Nevertheless, there was an improvement manifest. The anthems were Purcell's "O sing unto the Lord" (after the third collect), and Blow's "I beheld, and lo!" before the sermon. The latter was confided to Mr. Jabez Jones, Mr. Lockety, Mr. Weiss, and Mr. Thomas, of Worcester cathedral; and the former to Mrs. Weiss, Mr. Jones, Mr. Lockety, and Mr. Thomas. Both these anthems are well-known; but it is due to Mr. Thomas to notice his creditable execution of the solo, "Declare his honour unto the heathen," in which he displayed the quality of his voice. The succeeding duct, by Mrs. Weiss and Mr. Jones, was also admirably managed. The sermon was preached by the Rev. C. R. Somers Cocks, M.A., vicar of Wolverley and of Neen Savage, in this diocese, who selected rather a lengthy text, 2 Kings iv., 1—7: "Now there cried a certain woman the wives of the sons of the prophets unto Elisha saying, Thy servant, my husband, is dead." Upon this text the reverend preacher founded an excellent discourse, applying it to the particular occasion. Handel's Grand Coronation Anthem, "My heart is inditing," was given after the sermon by Mrs. Weiss, Mr. Jones, Mr. Lockey, Mr. Weiss, and another, whose name did not transpire. The attendance was not so large as had been anticipated, but parties are reserving themselves for the Eljah and the Messiah, all the reserved tickets for which performances were already disposed of—a circumstance we believe beyond precedent. The attendance at the cathedral exhibited a remarkable coincidence, the numbers present being 1,305, whereas at the last Worcester Festival the number was 1,312. The collection at the doors for the benefit of the clergy charity was nearly £250, which included £25 given by the Corporation. Among the donors present were Lord Sandys, Lord Ward, Lord Haddington, Sir E. H. Lechmere, Mr. Laslett, M.P., Mr. Pakington, &c.

At the Carignano a drama has been produced called "L'Assedio di Silistria," in which Turks and Russians perform prodigies of valour. One of the principal episodes is a love-passage between the daughter of Mussa Pacha and a son of the Russian general, the marriage of the lovers concluding the piece.

At Turin a new opera, by M. Cagnoni, entitled "Amori e Trappolo," has been well received at the Teatro Gerbino. Mme. Lipparini, the prima donna, is well spoken of, and the other performers, Messrs. Errani, Bonafous, and Frizzi, are also eulogised.

Mlle. Rachel is announced to make her rentrée at the Français, on the 10th, as Camille, in "Horace." Bressant will only appear in about six weeks, and comes back in a new piece; Madame Plessy's rentrée will not take place for some months to come.

In consequence of the difficulties which have arisen between M. Perrin and the Dramatic Authors' Society, he has deemed it expedient to resign the management of the Théâtre Lyrique, the privilege of which is now consequently in abeyance.

All real lovers of the drama will be charmed to learn that the admirable comedian, Bonfils, whose state of health had been for a length of time considered nearly hopeless, has surprisingly recovered, and will shortly again delight the public with his performances.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, July 15.—We had a slight disturbance in the streets the other day, which curiously illustrates the liberty of the press in this free country. Mr. Bateman, the father of the two little actresses, so well known for the precocity of their talents, and whom you had in England some time ago, offered a prize of $1,000 for a drama to be enacted by the children. There were twenty-one competitors, but all their compositions were rejected on the ground that they did not suit the children's talents, and a drama was produced which carried off the prize. Immediately after the award, it was discovered that the successful piece was written by Mrs. Bateman, the mother, and she confessed that she threw it off in an incredibly short time. The editor of the California Chronicle, an exceedingly well-conducted paper, in a sharp criticism, easily accounted for the facility and despatch with which the prize drama was produced, by the fact that it was plagiarized—taken wholesale from a play or a farce written for the stage some time back, in which the scene was laid in California. This discovery created a great sensation, and Mr. Bateman determined to take his revenge, "according to the manner of the country." He waited, with several of his friends, in the street, until the editor came by, when he attacked him with his fist. This is the proved testimony as given by the editor:—"A friend parried the blow. I drew my pistol (he had been warned, and armed himself on his way to his office), and at the instant was seized from behind, and my arms pinioned by a stout man, an accessory to this attempted murder; and, being thrown upon my knees in the struggle to retain my weapon, one of Bateman's friends held me while Bateman fired at me twice from behind a cart, where he had shielded himself." A general firing hereupon took place, and, as the streets were crowded, and ten shots were fired, it seems a miracle that no one was killed. The matter was investigated before the Recorder (the police magistrate), and he punished the offence by a fine of $300 imposed upon Mr. Bateman. Judging from the Recorder's reasoning, I should conclude that, had the firing not taken place in the public streets, where the lives of "women and children" were put in danger, the assailant would have been let off scot-free. The editors of this country are in continual scrapes, and several of them have been shot for their writings.

PROVINCIAL.

EXCESSIVE MORTALITY FROM CHOLERA.—DEPTFORD, Monday Evening.—Since Friday a portion of the lower part of this town, near the dockyard, has been the scene of a terrible visitation of cholera. Between midnight of Thursday and this morning nearly forty human beings have perished in one street alone, and it was stated this afternoon that there are nearly twenty more hopeless cases lying in the same street and the adjacent courts. The immediate locality of this terrible outbreak is New-street, Wellington-street, Deptford, a long street of old houses, many of them uninhabitable or in ruins, while, with few exceptions, all those which are tenanted are in a very dilapidated state. The inhabitants are principally decent labouring people. Up to Thursday last there had been a few cases of sickness creating no alarm. Upon that evening a man working at the Crystal Palace was brought to his house in New-street, ill of the cholera. His landlady, who let him in, was so alarmed at his appearance, that she was instantly taken ill, and before daybreak both had died. Before twelve o'clock the next day (whether through sudden panic or otherwise) others were dead and dying, and the mortality has kept spreading since then, to the fearful extent above mentioned. The bodies of the deceased parties were not removed or even confined until last night about eleven o'clock; when the parochial authorities came into the street with a van. As many shells as possible were obtained, and the bodies brought out of the houses in sheets and turned into the coffin, and taken to the dead-house in the churchyard, a small brick building, not above 100 yards from the place. Owing to the number of bodies some had to be removed uncoffined, a few have been left by their friends undressed. In one instance, a young man, an engineer, who lived in a small cottage, had been left there dead. The place was locked up, and had been some days, and the authorities had to force the door to get at the body. It is scarcely possible to describe the scene of misery. Small knots of women and children may be seen crying in the streets, afraid to enter their houses. All of the medical gentlemen of the district have been unremitting in their attentions. In Flagon-court, a small cité de roc turning out of Wellington-street, four children in one family died in a few hours.

TAVISTOCK.—A School of Design has just been established in this town, and Mr. T. Chevalier has been appointed the master by the Government department of Science and Art, Marlborough-house. His Grace the Duke of Bedford has kindly presented the local committee with £10 towards defraying the expenses of the cost of the models, &c., for the school; his Grace has also signified his intention of paying the whole cost of the models for the three public schools, that they may at once be connected with the Institution.

WYCHWOOD FOREST FAIR.—This delightful holiday will be held on the plains of Wychwood Forest, on Wednesday the 13th inst. To lovers of rural scenery and picnic parties, this event, as usual, will afford a rich treat; access being easily obtainable by Great Western Railway to Oxford, thence by Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. From the immense multitude of persons expected from all quarters, it has been found requisite to debar the public from crossing the fields and plantations, and to recommend them to keep to the main road, leading from the station to the scene of gaiety.

CHOLERA.—SUNDERLAND, September 6, 1854.—Two cases were reported last week as having been fatal; both parties were of intemperate habits, and resided in an unhealthy locality. The health of this thickly populous town is in general exceedingly good.

SCOTLAND.

BEQUEST TO THE POOR OF PERTH.—William Walker, Esq., of London, has bequeathed £1,000 to the poor of his native city, to be expended in blankets, coats, and oatmeal, in the month of November in every year.

THE DIRTIEST TOWN IN ALL SCOTLAND.—We have this week had a visit from an officer of the Board of Health, who has reported that he has found Wick the dirtiest town in all Scotland.—Northern Echo.

ATTEMPTED MURDER OF AN INFANT BY A MOTHER.—ATROCIOUS CASE.—Jane Harrington, a dirty-looking female, twenty-six years of age, described on the charge-sheet as the wife of a carpenter's labourer, residing at No. 5, Harrow-street, Mini-street, Southwark, a densely-populated neighbourhood, chiefly inhabited by the lowest characters, was brought before Mr. A. Beckett by Sergeant Gidding, T.M., an active officer, charged with wilfully administering a deleterious drug to her infant child, seventeen days old, with intent to destroy its life.—Sergeant Gidding stated that he received information, while on duty about one o'clock that afternoon in the neighbourhood of St. George's Church, that a child had been poisoned by its mother, at No. 5, Harrow-street, in the Mini. Witness proceeded there at once, and, on making inquiries of parties in the lower part of the house, he was directed to a back room on the first floor. The room in question was miserably furnished, and on a scanty bed he found a male infant in a dying state. The prisoner was in the same room with other parties connected with the house, who followed him in, and he then went up to her and asked her what she had done to the infant? She replied, in a sorrowful mood, that she had made a mistake, and gave the child a quantity of laudanum instead of the medicine directed by the doctor. Witness looked at the infant, and found it in a very emaciated state, which induced him to convey it immediately to St. George's workhouse, and place it under medical attendance. He then took the prisoner into custody, and charged her with attempting to destroy her child.—Mr. A. Beckett: Did she say anything in answer to the charge?—Sergeant Gidding: All she said was, that she administered a quantity of laudanum to the child by mistake, and she was sorry for it.—Mr. A. Beckett: Have you heard how she has treated the infant?—Gidding: Yes, sir. I have been told by one of the lodgers that, on Monday evening, she left the infant out in the streets quite cold, and refused to take it in, although repeatedly asked by the neighbours.—Mr. A. Beckett: Have you any evidence in court to prove that?—Gidding: I have not, sir, as I have only just now taken the prisoner into custody. However, I shall be able to produce witnesses on a future day, to prove that the prisoner has acted very cruelly to the infant. She found she could not leave it exposed to the cold, and then she administered laudanum to the infant.—Mr. A. Beckett: Where is the infant now?—Gidding: In the infirmary of St. George's workhouse; but I don't expect it will live many hours.—Mr. A. Beckett: Have you reason to believe that she intended to destroy the child's life?—Gidding: I have, sir; and, if she is remained for a day or two, I shall be able to bring forward witnesses to substantiate that fact.—Mr. A. Beckett: What is her husband?—Gidding: He is a carpenter's labourer, and, I believe, a very steady man; but the prisoner is a badly-conducted female, and her mind appears to be impaired with drink.—Mr. A. Beckett: Then you have no evidence to give against her to-day beyond what you have stated?—Gidding: I have not, sir.—Mr. A. Beckett: Then I shall remand her, to enable you to produce the witnesses, and in the meantime you will be able to ascertain the state of the infant.—The prisoner, who seemed to be quite unconscious of the offence she was charged with, remained silent during the examination of the sergeant. She appeared to be labouring under a species of insanity, and was, by direction of the magistrate, immediately conveyed by the gaoler to Horseonger-lane gaol.

LAMBETH.

The sergeant on duty from the L. division of police informed the magistrate that a charge appeared in one of the sheets against Sarah Russell, a prostitute, who had been locked up, on a Saturday night, for drunkenness. In the course of the morning she, at her urgent request, was removed to her lodgings, where she was attended by the divisional surgeon, and died on that morning.

In another charge of drunkenness the constable who took it had since been seized with cholera, and could not attend.—The magistrate at once discharged the party in custody.

BRUTAL MURDER OF AN INFANT BY ITS NURSE.

FINAL EXAMINATION AND COMMITTAL OF THE PRISONER.

On Tuesday, upon the arrival of the Government van at the Marlborough-street Police-court from the House of Detention, Clerkenwell, a considerable crowd of persons had assembled in order that they might have an opportunity of indulging their curiosity by seeing the woman, Trophy Knight, who, on Wednesday, the 20th ult., was charged at Marylebone Police-court, before Mr. Long, with the wilful murder of an infant entrusted to her to nurse and take proper care of. Upon the prisoner alighting from the vehicle she was saluted with cries of, "You cruel creature, you murderer!" and the same ebullitions of execration continued until she was formally given into the custody of Addey, the gaoler, by whom she was locked up in one of the cells. When the prisoner was placed at the bar, she was, as upon the former occasion, quite cool and collected, and paid not the slightest regard to the anxiety evinced in the case by a crowded court, composed principally of very respectable persons, whose sympathies had been aroused in reference to the brutality in question.

Inspector Allison, D. prior to any witness being called, said: Your worship, I have attended at the inquest held this day before Mr. Wakley, and the jury have returned a verdict of wilful murder against Trophy Knight, the prisoner.—Mr. Long (to the Inspector): You have other evidence to bring forward, have you not?—Inspector: I have the mother of the child here, sir; she was not here before.—Mr. Long: Let her be sworn.

Anne Groves, a respectably-attired woman, here got up into the witness-box. She was almost overpowered by her feelings for a time, but, after a gush of tears, she was enabled to make her statement.—Mr. Long: Where do you reside?—Witness: At 18, Berkeley-street, West.—Mr. Long: Did you give birth to a child?—Witness: I did, sir.—Mr. Long: Into whose care did you give it?—Witness: Into the prisoner's.—Mr. Long: How old was it?—Witness: Eleven months.—Mr. Long: Had it been baptised?—Witness: Yes.—Mr. Long: What was its name?—Witness: Henry.

Mr. Long directed that the mother should at once go to the hospital with the view of identifying the body. She did so, and was accompanied thither in a cab by Mr. Ormrod, the house surgeon of the institution, as also by Inspector Allison. Upon their return the prisoner was again placed at the bar.

Mr. Long (to Ann Groves): You have been to the hospital and seen the body of the child?—Witness: I have, sir.—Mr. Long: Is that child yours?—Witness (sobbing): It is, sir.

The surgeon, Mr. Ormrod, having been re-sworn, said: Since the first inquiry I have made a post-mortem examination of the body of the child, and I found the head covered with bruises, apparently caused at different times. There were scratches all over the face, and marks of the same kind on the buttocks and on the back. I examined the head first, and on removing the scalp I found blood effused between the scalp and the membrane that covers the pericranium. The effusion corresponded with the marks of the external bruises. There was a fissure over the right side of the frontal bone, which, however, did not penetrate through it; it was about an inch long. On removing the skull-cap I found blood effused over the surface of the brain, between the brain and the dura mater. There was much blood also effused at the base of the brain, more particularly on the left side. The bleeding did not seem to come from the rupture of any large vessels, but from several smaller vessels in the dura mater. These appearances were quite sufficient to account for the child's death.—Mr. Long: What other appearances did you observe?—Witness: I examined the chest and the abdomen, and I found every internal organ perfectly healthy; some of the glands about the navel were slightly enlarged, but not tubercularly, so that emaciation proceeded from starvation and not from disease. I believe that the blues which the child received, in the emaciated condition in which it was, were the cause of its death.

Davis, J.B.D. said: I was on duty on Tuesday, the 20th August, in Cambridge-place, near St. George's Hospital, and saw a crowd of persons coming from there, amongst whom was the prisoner. I asked what was the matter, and was told by a party present that the prisoner ought to be taken into custody for killing her child. I asked prisoner where the child was, and she said it was in the hospital. I went in and saw the house-surgeon, Mr. Ormrod. He gave the prisoner in charge.—Mr. Long: Did she make any remarks?—Witness: Not then, your worship; but on the way to the station-house, she said, "I have not killed the child, nor allowed it to die in any way; it fell off the bed and struck its mouth on the corner of a box." I saw upon the bed hangings some marks of blood, which were quite fresh.

Mr. Long (to the prisoner): Do you wish to ask the witness any questions?—Prisoner (indifferently): No, sir, I have nothing to say to him.

There being no further evidence, the whole of the depositions were read over by Mr. Phillips, the clerk.

Mr. Long (to the prisoner): You are charged with the wilful murder of a child. Have you anything to say? You are not obliged to say anything unless you think proper; but whatever you do say will be taken down in writing, and may be given in evidence against you upon your trial.—Prisoner (calmly): I shall reserve my defence.

She was fully committed for trial for the murder of the infant, and when brought out of the cell by Addey, the gaoler, and led by him to the van which was to convey her to Newgate, the execrations against her were loud and deep.

THE INQUEST.

On Tuesday morning, at ten o'clock, Mr. Wakley resumed the inquiry into the cause of the death of Henry Groves, an infant child, who, it was alleged, had died from brutal injuries inflicted upon it by Trophy Knight, with whom the unfortunate deceased had been placed as a nurse-child, at the Bank of England police-house, South-lark, Wharfed, Pudding-lane, near St. Mary's Hospital. The following letter was read:—

Whitehall, Sept. 2, 1854.
Sir, I am directed by Viscount Palmerston to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this date relative to an infant before you which stands charged with the murder of Henry Groves, and I am to inform you that his lordship has instructed the governor of the House of Detention at Clerkenwell, that he has no objection to his producing the woman, Trophy Knight, now in his custody, charged with the murder of the child, at the adjourned inquest, in the custody of his own officers.

Lord Palmerston, however, desires that you will expressly understand that this course is not to interfere with the appearance of the prisoner Knight before the magistrates by whom she stands committed at the time appointed for her examination. I am also to desire that you will make a requisition, in due form, to the governor of the House of Detention, for the production of the prisoner at the inquest.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, (Signed) H. WADSWORTH.

Thos. Wakley, Esq., Counsel for Abolition.
The Coroner also read the letter written by him to the gaoler of the House of Detention, and his reply, enclosing a copy of the resolution of the court of quarter sessions, on the report of the visiting justices, as explanatory of his reasons for not being able to comply with the Coroner's request to produce the prisoner, the resolution being a direction to the gaoler not to send any prisoner before a coroner unless he had a competent authority. The Coroner said the refusal of the gaoler to produce the prisoner would, he should suppose, enable Lord Palmerston to look into the subject, and ascertain what really was his power. After a somewhat prolonged inquiry the jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder against Trophy Knight." The Coroner then bound over the several witnesses to appear and give evidence on the trial, and issued his warrant for commitment of the prisoner to Newgate. The prisoner Trophy Knight was at an early hour conveyed in the prison van to Marylebone police-court, the proceedings of which appear in another column.

PARIS, Thursday, Sept. 7.

Discontent in the Army of the East—Impression made by Prince Albert at Boulogne—The other Royal Visitors—The Emperor—Dr. Veron's Memoirs—Louis Philippe—M. Thiers—Mlle. Rachel—Mismanagement of the Grand Opera—Family Attachment Extraordinary—New Race-course at Paris.

OUR reports are flying about town from the army in the East, which is described by letters from Varna and Constantinople as so thoroughly disheartened and disgusted with the miserable inaction to which it has been kept so long, that there have been more than once apprehensions of open mutiny. The troops from Africa compare the proceedings of their former commanders in Algeria with their present inglorious inaction. The indefatigable activity of the late Marshal Bugeaud is referred to with delight, and the names of Changarnier and Lamoricière are constantly in their mouths in contrast with that of St. Arnaud; and cries for these generals, who have so often led them to victory, have been heard from the men, in spite of the expostulations of their officers. It is very possible that there may be some exaggeration in these accounts, but that deep dissatisfaction prevails there is no doubt. Its worst feature is, that all the world feels that the discontent of the soldiers is founded on reason and justice.

The Black Sea and the Baltic have been this week rather thrown into the background by the brilliant doings at the camp in the north, which have absorbed general attention. The feeling occasioned by the royal visits to the Emperor is one of unmixed satisfaction, though the extreme brevity of the sojourn of the King of the Belgians and the King of Portugal has been remarkable. The great favourite of the fête is unquestionably his Royal Highness Prince Albert, whose good looks, and far more his unaffected affability, have charmed tout le monde. All the letters from Boulogne received here teem with accounts of his movements and conversation; and from the general testimony of all who have had the honour to approach him, it would be quite impossible to make a more favourable impression than that created by his Royal Highness on all classes, not omitting the ladies. With a tact that does much credit to his knowledge of mankind, the Prince is said to have thrown aside the reserve and formality which is, perhaps, necessarily imposed upon royalty on your side of the water; and is not less distinguished for his general courtesy and amableness in public, than for his amiable cordiality of manner and kind deportment to all around him. He carries back with him to England golden opinions, not only of his manners, (which go for much in France), but of his character, accomplishments, and excellent sense. The proceedings of the Emperor on this visit were marked by the magnificence which usually distinguishes him; unostentatious respect and attention towards his illustrious guest were everywhere visible, and a doubt produced on the Prince an impression no less favourable than that he left behind him. It is positively stated that his Royal Highness has accepted an invitation, on the part of his Majesty, to visit Paris next summer, during the period of the "National Exhibition." This is far from improbable, but I cannot vouch for the truth of the rumour. It seems, however, certain that the King of the Belgians, whose stay was so unobtrusively abridged by the dislocation of his Cabinet at this critical moment, has promised to renew his visit; and it is by no means unlikely that we may have a little congress of crowned heads here in Paris next year. All accounts agree that the Emperor's style of receiving his visitors was right royal, and that the noble military array on the occasion was in every way worthy of France and of the name of Napoleon.

The "book" of the day here just now is the fourth volume of Dr. Veron's Memoirs, which contains, mixed up with much egotism, many curious details on subjects in which everybody finds an interest. Beginning with the late royal family, he gives letters of curious interest, the most remarkable feature of which, considering the doctor's position, is, that they contain not a word that reflects discredit on that unfortunate family, who appear, both in prosperity and exile, to be the butt of more falsehood and malignity than were ever directed against a single name. Louis Philippe was not a great man, nor was he a fitting ruler for France, which requires a firmness and grandeur of mind in her monarch which he never possessed. But had he been the cunning, selfish, and unscrupulous hypocrite his enemies depict him, his family would now reign in the Tuileries. The most interesting part of the work to the politician is Dr. Veron's account of M. Thiers, who seems to have played Don Quixote to the Doctor's Sancho Panza or rather perhaps Archer to Veron's Scrub. It appears that the great merit of this active little intriguer was his sharpness in detecting the means to annoy the government by the newspapers. Besides having the command of the Constitutionnel, which Dr. Veron, being chief editor, laid at his feet, he secretly maintained friendly relations with the Courrier Français, the Messager, and the National, all in the fiercest and most violent opposition to the Government and the King. The Doctor relates, with amusing simplicity, how often M. Thiers—for whom he had done everything—having once got into power, threw him overboard, scarcely appearing to recollect his existence. What appears so strange in all this is, the fact that in a popular revolution like that of 1830, a country like France should only have thrown up one public man of note, and that man M. Thiers.

The Doctor's anecdotes of Mlle. Rachel—the lowness of her origin, her poverty, and early struggles—are all interesting. One of the best is that of her application to M. Provost, of the Français, who prepares candidates for the stage, to be admitted among his pupils. Having eyed the poor, thin, ill-clad aspirant, Provost recommended her to "vendre des fleurs." "Go, my girl," said the comedian, "go and sell flowers"—a piece of advice, by the way, not uncharacteristically suggested by her appearance, which then was exceedingly unpromising for the theatre. In a few years after, on the night of one of her early triumphs, when the stage was covered with flowers, after the fall of the curtain, she quietly remarked to M. Provost—"Je pourrais maintenant Monsieur suivre votre conseil d'autrefois, et vendre des fleurs." Provost, who is not only a wit but a man of sense, congratulated her on his having made such an egregious error of judgment, and they have since been excellent friends. Dr. Veron was a most useful friend and "protector" of the young tragedian in the early part of her career—a point on which he says rather too much in the volume before us.

The ministerial manager of the Grand Opera has just got into a dilemma with the press. It appears that on the opening night, this gentleman not only curtailed the usual number of missions for each journal, but that to some papers he sent no mission at all. In consequence of this omission, the entire press has agreed to leave the future performances of the Grand Opera quite unnoticed; and a meeting of the editors has been called to arrange whether they shall not also omit the name of the opera in the usual daily list of the entertainments of the evening. The minister, unlike ordinary directors, has the proud satisfaction of knowing, that whatever loss his proceedings may inflict on the theatre, they will not affect his own cash-box—lucky fellow!—but that of the country. This is likely to take place, it would seem to some extent, for though, on the opening night (Wednesday the 30th ult.), the house was crowded to excess, on the next representation it was half empty.

A singular instance of family attachment, of the franchise, was disclosed by the trial of a man named Brodberger, a native of Schweiz, last week, before the Court of Assizes of the Department of Moselle. The circumstances were as fantastically atrocious as ever figured at the Ambigu. He had been drawn for the army, and having a most inveterate dislike to a soldier's life, he made every possible effort to avoid entering the service, and they all failed; when, on learning that the eldest son of a widow was by law exempted from serving, on the ground that his aid was required for the management of the family, he resolved to become entitled to this exemption by the murder of his father! This fearful crime he actually carried into execution, with a coolness and determination almost without example. He waylaid him in a field, and beat in his skull with a stone. The agitation of the culprit first excited suspicion, and the state of his clothes, covered with his victim's blood, led to his arrest, when he fully confessed his crime. To fill up the measure of singularity in this atrocious case, the verdict of the jury should not be forgotten. It was—"Guilty, with extenuating circumstances!" Many of the verdicts in France are, in fact, only calculated to bring the system of trial by jury into complete contempt; but this stands out in exemplary and shameful disregard of justice and feeling.

The race-course, to which allusion has already been made as in course of formation at Longchamps, between the western side of the Bois de Boulogne and the banks of the Seine, is now completed. The ground, a fine soft, springy turf, is described by cognoscenti as worthy of Epsom or Newmarket, while the general scenery, accommodation for spectators, &c., is all that the most exigent need require. It is expected that the Paris October races will inaugurate the race-course, and that the hard, dusty old Champ de Mars, with its sanguinary historical parpèze, will never again be employed for a purpose for which it is so entirely unfit.

THE REVIEW AT ST. OMER.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

HIS MAJESTY THE EMPEROR and his Royal Highness Prince Albert reviewed the troops on Wednesday in the Plains de Envercy. All the French generals were presented to Prince Albert, who, in addressing them, expressed great satisfaction at the appearance and discipline of the troops, and his hope for a continued entente cordiale between the two nations. The royal party then returned to Boulogne. Another review took place on Thursday at Honvault.

WE HAVE DATES FROM CONSTANTINOPLE to the 28th ult. These accounts state that Saïd Pasha, the new Viceroy of Egypt, had been solemnly instituted. The expedition of the allied forces was to leave Varna on the 1st of September. Marshal St. Arnaud had issued an order of the day, dated Varna, August 25, acquainting the troops that the destination of the expedition was the Crimea, and that the duty of the allied forces would be to take Sebastopol as a pledge of peace. The flags of the three Powers, says the order, will soon be greeted on the walls of Sebastopol with cries of "Vive l'Empereur!"

CAMPFIRE PRODUCING INSANITY.—The Toronto Colonist says:—"We are informed that no less than eight persons have been admitted into the lunatic asylum in a state of insanity, occasioned by consuming quantities of campfire to prevent cholera. Some of them carried it about in their pockets, and kept from time to time eating small quantities of it. Others took it dissolved in brandy. In all cases where it was taken in any quantity, it produced insanity. It is a fact well-known that a comparatively small quantity of campfire will set a dog mad, and that he will soon afterwards die."

A.L.O.E.—The twenty-sixth anniversary of the Loyal Ramsgate Grand Lodge of True Faith, and the third of its becoming the P.G.L. of Kent, under the G.L.E., established in London in 1850, was celebrated by a dinner on Monday. A numerous assemblage of brothers sat down to an excellent repast, which was served by Tr. Elson in his usual superior style. On the cloth being removed harmony became the order of the evening, interspersed with the usual loyal and other toasts customary on such occasions. Among the brothers present were several members of the G.L.E., also several members of the No. 4, St. George's Lodge, held at Tr. White's Maidstone Arms Inn. The whole affair passed off in a highly satisfactory manner.

WARNING TO PUBLISHERS.

We beg to call the attention of publishers to the subjoined police cases heard on Tuesday, before Mr. Alderman Farebrother, at Guildhall.—The following book and music-publishers were summoned at the instance of Mr. Manzzi, the keeper of the printed books and manuscripts in the British Museum, for not delivering copies of certain works within one month after publication.—Mr. Harding, of the firm of Messrs. Bray, Warren, and Harding, solicitors to the British Museum, appeared in support of the informations.—Mr. Thomas Dean, of Thredneedle-street, was summoned for not supplying "Gentility and Economy Combined," price 2s. 6d.—Messrs. Darton and Co., of Holborn-hill, were similar defaulters with regard to "Peter Parley's Annual for 1851," price 5s.—Mr. George Frederick Crutchley, of Fleet-street, for not delivering "Crutchley's Seat of War—the Baltic, &c.," price 1s. 6d.—Mr. Harry May, of Holborn-bars, for similar neglect respecting a piece of music called "Upon the Baltic Sea," price 1s. 6d.—Mr. Richard Holmes Laurie, of Fleet-street, for omitting to send a copy of "Lamie's Plan of London, Westminster, and Southwark, as Trigonometrically Surveyed by John Outreart, 1851," price 12s.—Mr. George Henry Davidson, of Peter's-hill, Doctors'-commons, for not supplying No. 707 of the "Musical Treasury," price 3d.—The whole of these gentlemen settled the matter without coming into court.—Mr. Henry Tolkien, of King William-street, appeared to answer the information charging him with neglecting to furnish the British Museum with a copy of a piece of music called "The Guardsman's Farewell," published at 2s. 6d.—Mr. Tolkien said he thought the Museum authorities were rather sharp upon him, because the piece of music in question had only been published a few weeks, and it was entirely an accidental omission that the required copy was not sent before.—Mr. Harding said he hoped it would not go forth that the authorities of the British Museum were sharp upon any one, as they never took such proceedings except in cases of palpable neglect. In the present instance the defendant had not delivered any work for years.—Mr. Tolkien said he was not aware that he was required to do so, as his catalogue was made up of non-copy-right works, consisting of foreign productions reprinted in this country. The same compositions were being published by every other publisher in London, and therefore the Museum would have about 100 copies of one thing.—Alderman Farebrother said if the defendant had imported foreign publications he would not be compelled to supply copies to the Museum; but if he reprinted them in this country, he brought himself under the act of Parliament and its consequences in case of non-compliance.—Mr. Tolkien said as soon as he had received information that the required copy had not been delivered, he sent one to the Museum, but it was refused.—Mr. Harding said it was refused because the summons had been issued.—Alderman Farebrother said if it had been an expensive work there might have been some object in not supplying a copy, and £5 would not have been too severe a penalty, but as it was only a half-crown work, he thought 10s. would be sufficient.—Mr. Tolkien said he hoped the alderman would dismiss the summons, and he would not neglect to send copies of works in future.—Alderman Farebrother said if the work in question was a good piece of music it would soon pay the penalty, or the defendants could raise the price of it.—Mr. Tolkien asked if he was obliged to send a copy now, after paying the value of it?—Alderman Farebrother said certainly, as that was part of the penalty.—The defendant then paid 10s. fine, 2s. 6d. value, and 4s. costs.

The Bulwark, or "Reformation" (!) Journal, for August, 1854.

Price twopence-halfpenny, or half-a-crown per annum; or per post, three and sixpence per annum. Edinburgh: Printed by T. Constable, Printer to her Majesty.

Our readers now know as much about The Bulwark (!) as we did till half an hour ago. Although published in Edinburgh, it seems, by its title-page, to be sold also in London, by Messrs. Seeley and by Messrs. Nisbett, both very highly respectable firms, either of whom, we will be bound, knew nothing of the ridiculous 47th page of the August number till it reached them in print from the Scotch publisher, himself probably ignorant of the wares he then issued for sale. In manuscript Mr. Seeley or Mr. Nisbett would have never allowed such trash to pass their notice. They would, in London, have expunged it; but in Scotland there are, unfortunately, some folks who out-herd Herod in their bigotry and caveat scribendi. There is no pleasing them. The Bulwark seems to be of that ilk. Adorned itself, on its title-page, with a well-selected specimen of the pictorial art, representing (O! what taste The Bulwark displays!) a street fight, with one man sprawling on his back in the gutter, two others engaged in pugilism, shillelaghs flourishing aloft, and missiles threatening a lamp pendent at what appears to be the window of a Scotch church, this Bulwark, we say, in its August number, at page 47, has the following article, which we here reprint verbatim et literatim—

POPULI INFLUENCE OVER THE PRESS.—The Papists have great influence over the London press, as any one who examines may easily discover. We lately found in a paper called The Peck, June 23, which professes only to treat of horses, dogs, &c., a sentimental picture of the departure of Jesuit missionaries from France, and the following article:—

"The ceremony depicted in the present engraving lately took place in the chapel of the Maison des Missions, at Paris, on the occasion of six missionaries departing for China. Nothing is so imposing as this simple adieu; it is like a scene of home, to which very few witnesses are admitted. The young missionaries kneel before the altar, their companions ranging themselves in a circle round them, and imploring heaven to succour them in their arduous task. One of the superiors, after a discourse full of zeal and hope, comes from his pulpit, and kneels before the neophytes whilst standing on the steps of the sanctuary; he embraces the feet that are prepared to undertake the holy pilgrimage, and blesses them as a father would his children. After th; superior, the novices, each in their turn, kiss the feet, and embrace, as for the last time, their brethren, who go forth to the extremities of the world, resigned even to death, for the propagation of their faith."

Of course this is one way of gradually familiarising the people with Popish sentiments, and requires to be watched.

Does the BULWARK dare to charge THE FIELD with desiring to "gradually familiarise the people with popish sentiments," and add that it "requires to be watched?"

We are not Papist; and as to the BULWARK's charge, we deny it: it is altogether false. The BULWARK may watch us as much as it likes. In doing so—thanks to the Protestant (not "Papist") clergymen and laymen who weekly favour us with communications on all heads (except, indeed, that of broken heads in the street, with which the BULWARK takes a shorter method of "familiarising the people," viz., by a wood-cut), in doing so, we repeat, the BULWARK may—for to watch THE FIELD it must borrow and read THE FIELD (we don't accuse it of buying it, since it "professes only to treat of horses, dogs, &c.")—the &c. does not include street-fights or prize-fights, nevertheless—the BULWARK, we again say, may have many an opportunity of acquiring sound knowledge, and of at least learning better manners, than to beg a question and then build upon it, and print an attack upon a contemporary which has never crossed its narrow path in a religious, moral, or pecuniary way, which never knew that such a champion publication existed even in a butter-shop, where, however, it cannot but soon become thoroughly, and indeed best, known, if its proprietors apathetically permit its paid writers to pen down their more ideas and uncharitable opinions unchecked by that discretion which certainly characterises the Scottish nation as a whole, and which, moreover, is never absent from the brain or breast of a Scottish gentleman. We have simply noticed this twopenny-halfpenny attack on THE FIELD to show how any of our contemporaries may, like ourselves, "get a little stab in the back." But, Allah Kerim! this stab is not mortal; and all we have now, therefore, to add, is to express our congratulations to all concerned that the BULWARK's fire is not, like that before Bomarsund, quite an extinguisher; that it has not frightened away any of our subscribers, whom, at this present opportunity, we beg most heartily to thank for their continued support, and truthfully to assure them that the "Popish influence over the press" does not extend to THE FIELD, "which anyone who examines may easily discover;" that we do not "profess only to treat of horses, dogs, &c." (we can bite as well as bark, and the BULWARK shall not ride over us); and that as companions to "the sentimental picture of the departure of missionaries" in THE FIELD, which our subscribers must have seen—we can't, for the life of us, even yet perceive how we aid Popery by such an illustration—we now recommend our readers to certain pictures published, of course in better taste, in the BULWARK, which, in its August number, in addition to the street-row on its wrapper, gives an illustration of "Ugo Bass tortured by the Inquisition," and "The Martyrdom of Archbishop Cranmer," all selected, of course, to obliterate party spirit and promote Christian charity. Bah, BULWARK! "Reformation" to you! Cuddle up your own monthly magazine, and leave the Press alone.

Sporting Review: September. Rogerson and Tuxford, Strand.

A capital half-crown's worth. Most of the articles are written with the best taste and feeling. "Home and the Pleasures of the Country," "The Shooting and Hunting Interregnum," and "Summer Rambles," are well worthy of perusal. "Notes Venetice" must afford amusement to all who take an interest in horses and dogs; while, at the same time, it proffers a "wrinkle" to not only the mere tyro, but the more practised sportsman. "An Evening with the Old Uncle" is anything but a bore. The continuation of "Ernest Athorley," by Lord William Lennox, will be welcomed. "Craven" and "The Druid" also furnish their clever contributions. The author of "Turf Pencilings" evidently writes con amore; his heart is with the sport. As we are on the eve of the St. Leger, we shall give his opinion on the subject:—

What a fortnight may bring forth it is hard to say, but I am still for Aerobath; and if certain good Yorkshire Julgers are not very far out, Midsummer will run uncommonly well. Clariton is engaged to ride her; but if Mr. Padwick buys her, as he thinks of doing, Wells will, of course, have the mount. It is a year since I have seen her, but she was a wonderfully racing-looking thing then. My "weak-snow" forebodings about King Tom have been but too true, and his failure, and Hermit's non-entry, have sadly plucked the heart out of the coldest. Calamus and I can ought to be forward; but The Trapper seems a very doubtful case, as his peepers are always ready for action whenever there is the slightest disposition shown to back him. Knight of St. George is not likely to stay, and unless Star of Surrey is to shine suddenly forth again, and Marryas to get into his two-year-old form, there seems really nothing else of mark to go for it, unless Mr. Major has proved a veritable sorcerer with Autocrat. It is, however, thought that there will be a large field, quite as bad in quality as in Newminster's year.

The embellishments—Sir Charles Napier, drawn and engraved by W. H. Gibbs; and "The Passion of the Horse," plate 4, from a painting by J. F. Herring, sen., and engraved by E. Hacker—are admirable. The likeness of the gallant admiral, appearing at the commencement of the shooting season, would seem ominously indicative of some stirring reports from the Baltic.

The Art Journal. G. Virtue and Co.

The September number contains "The Council of War at Courtray," engraved by J. Godfrey, from the picture by L. Maghe, in the Vernon Gallery; and "The Autumn Gift," by Lavee, in the same collection, engraved by J. C. Armytage. Both are admirable works of art, retaining and rendering almost all the beauties of the original pictures, that it is possible to reduce to black and white. There is also a very excellent plate by E. Brandard, a view of Windsor Castle, from a picture by T. B. Pyne, full of sunny light and beauty. The articles are good and interesting, particularly "The Progress of Painting," "The Author of English Painters," and "Pre-Raphaelism," and "The Artist's Festa; Rene."

The English Cyclopædia. Bradbury and Evans.

Part XVII. of this really great standard work equals in every respect its predecessors.

The Newcomes. By THACKERAY. Bradbury and Evans.

This number completes the first volume, and leaves its readers in a delightful state of anxiety for the next. Horace is promoted, and as Prince de Moncontours is present at Mr. Barnes Newcome's wedding, which ceremony the Earl of Kew did not attend, being prevented by the unfortunate termination of his duel with Castillounes, by whom he is brought down with grim satisfaction. "It was well for this young milor that he fell at the first shot, my dear," the exemplary young Frenchman remarked, "a second might have been yet more fatal to him; ordinarily, I am sure of my coup, and you may conceive that in an affair so grave, it was absolutely necessary that one or other should remain on the ground." Kew is nursed by Lady Walham, and the ball extracted. The Empress of Kew visits her Frank, "and in an over excess of anxious affection, rushing in, mistakes a bolster for her leg, and in so doing throws away a quantity of affection." Ethel is still at Baden, and when the Countess arrives, indignantly remonstrates with her upon the humiliation of her position. To give a quotation from this part would give us pleasure; but we think extracts from Magazines are not always justifiable—they make sad holes in the fair proportions of a monthly number.

Handley Cross. Bradbury and Evans.

Mr. Jorrocks pursues "the tenor of his way," fortunately for the reader's pleasure, anything but an even one. Alas! poor Jorrocks, the commissioners, after a long and careful investigation, return a verdict of insanity, adding, that "Mr. Jorrocks had been incapable of managing his affairs since he took the Handley Cross Homestead." Leech's drawing of "Pigs in the Melon Prime" is full of quaint humour.

Fraser's Magazine. J. W. Parker and Son.

Fraser is even stronger than usual this month. The "Session and the Ministry" is a good article, powerfully written, and, unfortunately, too true. Equally good is an article by "An Experienced Junior," "How to get on at the Bar." Perhaps the most important article in this number, is, however, "The Church Among the Tall Chimneys," with its Church Statistics; nor must we omit to mention those on "The Mercantile Marine" and "The Garrisons of the Crimea."

The Book of South Wales. By CHARLES FREDERICK CLIFFE. Hamilton, Adams, and Co.

We draw attention to this very excellent guide to some of the most interesting localities, and most beautiful scenery in the United Kingdom, including the Bristol Channel, Monmouthshire, and the Wye. It is well illustrated with maps and engravings. Altogether, this book does credit to the compiler and the publisher.

The Epitomis. J. Riddell, King William Street, City.

The first part of this new literary miscellany promises well. The original papers are good. The general contents not only multitudinous, but highly interesting and well selected. When we say that there are upwards of two hundred articles for eleven pence, and that they are admirably written, containing fiction, reviews, progress and practice, abstracts of patents, agriculture, gossip, écume d'esprit, fire-side reading, domestic, and correspondence, we certainly say much to recommend it.

NEW MUSIC.

The Princesses of England, a set of waltzes, composed by Mrs. HAYES. T. G. Bates and Son, 6, Ludgate Hill.

This is a very charming and sparkling set of waltzes, bearing the names of our beloved Queen's daughters. They have much of the quality and style of Strauss; are simply arranged, varied in character, and keys. If we are called upon to prefer any one, we should select that bearing the name of Princess Louisa. It is in two flats; the time admirably marked for dancing, and piquant in the extreme.

RECOLLECTIONS, POLITICAL, LITERARY, DRAMATIC, AND MISCELLANEOUS, OF THE LAST HALF CENTURY.—This work, to be published by subscription, is now preparing for the press, from original notes, documents, and correspondence, and will form two volumes, post octavo, price one guinea. It will contain anecdotes and notices of several hundred persons of various ranks, who have stood forth prominently in their vocations before the public, and with whom the writer, the Rev. J. Richardson, LL. B. (of the Times), was personally acquainted.

MISS AGNES STRICKLAND, the well-known authoress, has been on a visit to Mr. Cranford, at Cranford Castle, for a few days past. Miss Strickland left on Thursday for Pollock House and Fingask Castle. Her forthcoming volume (Mary Queen of Scots) of the Lives of the Queens of Scotland, is expected to be published soon.—Glasgow Daily Mail.

MARYLEBONE FREE LIBRARY.—A record has been kept at the Marylebone Free Library, in Gloucester-place, New-road, of the books used by the visitors during the last six months, and forms an interesting index of the reading tastes of those who are in the habit of frequenting a free library. During the short period of its existence the Marylebone Free Library has received no less than 17,397 visits, and issued 18,163 volumes. The following is a statement of the various deliveries of books:—Strickland's Queens of England, 67; Boswell's Johnson, 51; Franklin's Memoirs, 31; Chambers' Journal, 475; Chambers' Miscellany, 145; Naval and Military Sketch Book, 141; Fireside Journal, 86; Working Man's Friend, 78; Half Hours with the Best Authors, 170; Colonies of Australia, 77; Russell's Modern Europe, 40; Thiers' French Revolution, 147; Bancroft's America, 62; Illustrated London News, 698; Thackeray's Pencilings, 156; London Journal, 918; Penny Cyclopædia, 153; Chemistry, 45; Rudiments of Painting, 56; Steam Engine, 30; Handbook of London, 68; Picking's Races of Men, 37; Bacon's Works, 33; Humboldt's Cosmos, 39; Thorpe's Yule Tyle Stories, 119; Shipwrecks of the Royal Navy, 101; Valentine Vox, 242; Uncle Tom's Cabin, 147; Collection of Travels, 126; Gulliver's Travels, 42; Southey's English Admirals, 32; McCulloch's Geographical Dictionary, 59; Life of Bismarck, 150; Lever's Jack Hinton, 128; Lever's Tom Burke, 112; Life of Nelson, 150; Life of Wellington, 42; Layard's Nineveh, 95; Goldsmith's Animated Nature, 136; Macaulay's History of England, 178; Hume and Smollett's ditto, 91; Grote's Greece, 137; Goldsmith's Greece, 40; Milton's Poems, 49; Byron's Poems, 98; Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, 39; Hood's Poems, 30; Shakespeare's Plays, 152; Old Curiosity Shop, 113; Barnaby Rudge, 155; Black House, 291; Pickwick Club, 206; Nicholas Nickleby, 190; Martin Chuzzlewit, 77; Oliver Twist, 225; David Copperfield, 139; Christmas Books, 71; Scott's Ivanhoe, 125; Scott's Waverley, 57; Scott's Pirate, 110; Scott's Rob Roy, 105; Scott's Talisman, 48; Arabian Nights, 561; Don Quixote, 177; Robinson Crusoe, 318; Bulwer's Paul Clifford, 140; Bulwer's Pelham, 115; Bulwer's My Novel, 55; Bulwer's Caxtons, 58.

IMPROVED IRISH DICTIONARY.—An interesting meeting was held in the bar-room of the Court-house, on Thursday, for the purpose of considering a proposition bearing upon the elucidation of the Irish language in connexion with the Government Commission for publication of the ancient and Breton law. The subject was warmly taken up by the meeting, and its importance unanimously admitted.—Armagh Guardian.

SMOKING SONG.

40—"Sparkling and Bright."

Floating away like the fountain's spray,
Or the snow-white plume of a maiden,
Our smoke-a-realis the to the starlit skies,
With blissing fragrance lavin.
Chorus—Then smoke away till a golden ray
Lights up the dawn of the morrow,
For a cheerful cigar like a shield will bar
The blows of care and sorrow.

The leaf burns bright, like the genius of light
That dash in the braids of Beauty,
It nerves each heart for the hero's part
On the battle plain of duty.
Then smoke away, &c.

In the thoughtful gloom of his darken'd room
Sits the child of song and story—
But his heart is light, for his pipe beams bright,
And his dreams are all of glory.
Then smoke away, &c.

By the blazing fire sits the gray-haired sire,
And infant arms surround him,
And he smiles on all in that quiet old hall,
While the smoke-curls float around him.
Then smoke away, &c.

In the forests grand of our native land,
When the savage coult's the emol,
The pipe of peace brought an sweet release
From toll and terror blended.
Then smoke away, &c.

The dark-eyed train of the mabils of Spain
Neath their arbor shades try lightly,
And a gleaming cigar, like a new-born star,
In the clasp of their lips burns brightly.
Then smoke away, &c.

It warms the soul like the blushing bowl,
With its rose-red burden streaming;
It drowns it in bliss like the first warm kiss
From the lips with love-balls leeming.
Then smoke away till the golden ray
Lights up the dawn of the morrow,
For a gleaming cigar like a shield will bar
The blows of care and sorrow.

ARMY.

A YANKEE, who came over to the mother country some time ago, was asked, on returning, how he liked Great Britain. "Well," he said, "England is a very nice country, exceedingly fertile, well cultivated, very populous, and very wealthy; but," continued the Yankee, "I never liked to take a morning walk after breakfast, because the country is so small that I was always afraid of walking off the edge."

THE AMERICAN BANY MARKET.—The Stark county (Ohio) Agricultural Society is offering premiums for the finest specimen of Young Americans. Here is the list:—For prettiest baby, five dollars and diploma to mother; for second prettiest baby, three dollars and diploma to mother; for third, two dollars and diploma to mother; for largest and heaviest child under twelve months old (age to be considered), five dollars and diploma to mother; for second largest and heaviest child under twelve months old, three dollars and diploma to mother; for third, two dollars and diploma to mother. The above is not a fair list. All the rewards go to the mother; no encouragement to fathers!—American Paper.

TO PRESERVE EGGS.—Take any quantity of fresh eggs and bury them upright in salt; by this means they will keep good for a year.

Advertisements.

INIMITABLE VICTORIES.—THE WINNERS OF TWO GREAT HANDICAPS SPLIT IN SUCCESSION, WITH ONLY ONE HORSE FOR EACH.

MESSRS. HOWARD AND CLINTON have again to congratulate their subscribers upon a decisive and profitable victory—Bulwer only being their rival for the Leamington Stakes. From first to last they advised nothing else. In their first Warwick Circular they told subscribers to "back Bulwer immediately" (the horse was then at 4 and 10 to 1). This advice was decisively and imperiously repeated in their advertisement, where they say, "We give but one horse, that horse is not long odds, will very soon be at a short price, and is certain to win." In their final circular they reiterate that "Bulwer is sure to win." And again, in their advertisement on the morning of the race, they use the following emphatic language:—"Nothing can beat our horse for the Leamington. We cannot recommend anything else, unless subscribers like to put a little on No. 68 (Pantofline) for a place;" and had not the latter, in an unworthy attempt to steal the race by a "crowd," put himself out of the run, he would have been second, and their subscribers would have had two winners in one race! The amount of percentage already received on the Bulwer whinnings shows that their subscribers own a very heavy stake, which was doubtless increased by their whinnings on Virago, for the Harlech Cup.

At the York Meeting, Messrs. H. and C.'s advice was equally decisive. Besides eight winners of minor events, they won the Great Ebor Handicap with Grand Inquisitor only. Their advice in that case was fully as decisive and imperative as with Bulwer. It was exactly as follows:—"In their printed circular for the York Meeting they told their subscribers to 'back Grand Inquisitor immediately.' This was sufficiently definite, but, in case any lingering doubts might prevent their subscribers from taking full advantage of the advice, they addressed them by advertisement on Tuesday in these terms:—'The Ebor is a certainty for our horse, No. 21 (Grand Inquisitor), look him for all the money you can get on. To make assurance doubly sure, they repeated the assertion in their advertisement of Wednesday. "Our horse, No. 21, is sure to win." And, in their advertisement on the morning of the race, they assured their subscribers there was no change in their opinion, information, or confidence.

Now, these are no half-and-half successes, no splitting of victory among three or four possible or probable winners, but clear, bold, decisive, and profitable "hits." Messrs. H. and C. told the public and their subscribers that they had doubted their stuff for the Antwerp Meeting; York was the first important Meeting in which this double shift was employed; Warwick was the second. The brilliancy of the results have fully justified their increased expenditure, and the next decision on which their energies will be displayed is one of even still more importance, viz.,

THE DONCASTER MEETING.

Messrs. H. and C. have invariably had a splendid week at Doncaster, but for the reasons above stated, they expect to surpass all former years. The St. Leger they back upon as a certainty, and they have also some first-rate things for the other events, on which their subscribers will also be able to net a good stake.

CEASE-REWATCH AND CAMBRIDGE SHIRE.

Messrs. H. and C. can only reiterate their previous statements, still that they give out horse only for each of these great events, all dark and at long odds, and that now is the time for getting well on. PER CENTAGE.—Subscribers who have not yet sent, are requested not to delay, as the Doncaster List is now ready for issue, and will not be sent to any who omit to forward per centage. TERMS.—Doncaster Meeting, 10s. 6d.; Cease-watch or Cambridge, 10s. 6d.; or all subscription to end of season, £1. 1s. 6d. 6p. on winnings. They have also a Special Correspondence List, the terms for which may be known on application. ADDRESS.—H. and C., Post-office, Coventry-street, Solio. Post-office orders payable to Henry Howard.

P.S.—Messrs. H. and C. remind subscribers that they execute their commissions with good men, at a charge of 5 per cent.

SARSAPARILLA and CHAMOMILE RESTORATIVE PILLS, for Purifying the Blood and Strengthening the Digestive Organs, are suited for either sex, and will prove a certain cure for Indigestion, loss of appetite, diarrhoea of sight, tubercles, wasting of the flesh, leucorrhoea, skin diseases, rheumatic and nervous affections, and all impurities of the blood arising from whatever cause. By the diligent use of this purifying medicine the energies of the whole nervous system will be augmented, a more powerful healthy action of every faculty produced, feebleness and all the deplorable symptoms of disease will vanish, and strength and health be restored. They have also a specific action on the secretions and excretions, and assist nature to expel from the system all humours and impurities through the lungs, liver, kidneys, and skin—a power possessed by no other medicine. They are also especially calculated to cure scrofula, mercurial diseases, scorbutic eruptions, gout, rheumatism, pains in the bones, ulcers, sores, or any long-standing chronic malady. They will speedily cure the many distressing diseases peculiar to women.

Prepared by W. A. FRENCH, or at the Laboratory, 309, Holborn, two doors west of Chancery-lane. Price 1s. 4d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. per box. Either size sent free per post, on receipt of the price in cash or stamps.

DEAFNESS.

DEAFNESS.—Dr. MANFRED'S IMPROVED DISCOVERY—the New Treatment for instantly restoring Hearing without operation, use of instruments, blistering, leeching, physicking, proding, syringing, or the usual absurd treatment. One consultation is sufficient; a permanent cure is guaranteed to any sufferer of forty or fifty years' duration. This truly wonderful discovery is known and practised only by Dr. H. Manfred, who has made diseases of the ear his entire study both in hospital and private practice. The new treatment is applied by him daily on numbers of applicants with perfect success in every case, enabling persons to hear conversation with ease and delight, and almost instantly removing those noises in the head and ears. Thousands of letters from persons cured, any of which may be seen. Dr. Manfred, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, Consulting Surgeon in Diseases of the Ear only, will receive patients daily, from ten until five, free of any charge, except in those cases where restoration of hearing is positively certain. Dr. Manfred, 31 R.C.S., 72 Regent-street, London.

NOTICE! (Entrance, first door in Air-street.)—Just published, free by post for eight stamps, a Method for Self Cure, for country patients only.

CHARLES LENNY,

Coach and Harness Manufacturer,
20, NORTH END, CROYDON.

BEGS to call attention to his Broughams, Chariots, Barouches, with his registered noiseless wheel-plate, thus shortening the distance between the wheels, and lessening the draught for the horse, allowing the wheels to lock quite under, and having high front wheels.

C. L. has constantly on sale Cabs and Driving Phaetons, Stanhope and single Horse ditto, Pony Carriages, and Park Phaetons. He also solicits attention to his Newport Pagnel and other Carts, either with panels or wickerwork sides, and to his Bagot Cart, in panel or wickerwork, easy of access, and possessing all the advantages of the Malvern Cart, but less expensive.

He has also a large stock of Croydon Basket Carriages, cheap and elegant, and in every variety of shape, either for sale or building to order, with or without heads, to suit either the Shetland Pony or the Horse.

C. L. would also invite an inspection of his registered Phaeton in basket-work, suitable either for one or a pair of ponies or horses.

Carriages of all kinds let on hire for long or short engagements.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bannage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 224, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a single truss, 16s., 21s., 24s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Double truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Post-office orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly ELASTIC and COMPRESSIONABLE, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, VARICOSE VEINS, SPRAINS, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like ordinary stockings. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each. Postage, 6d.

WATER
POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8½ in. long, 2½ in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water, but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded off by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits all the way through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Exportor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

March 10, 1852.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

IF YOU WANT LUXURIANT HAIR,

WHISKERS, &c., use Dr. DE GASTRO'S RIVINAL EXTRACT, the only compound for the Hair ever issued by a Physician, and approved of by the Faculty. In hundreds of cases it has succeeded where everything else had failed in restoring the Hair, however lost, preventing its falling off, strengthening it when weak, nourishing scurf and dandruff, and checking greyiness. For the speedy production of Eyebrows, Whiskers, Moustachios, &c., its operation is certain. Suitable for two months' use sent free by post on receipt of 21 penny postage stamps, by Dr. DE GASTRO, 10, Hornsey, Middlesex. Persons who have been deceived by the various oils, pomades, &c., now advertised, are earnestly invited to try this Extract. Sold at 10, Chichester-place, Gray's Inn-road. A Quarterly Report of Cures, Testimonials, &c., sent post free on a stamped and directed envelope.

TO SPORTSMEN.—Her Majesty's

Royal Letters Patent, for valuable and extraordinary improvements in the most powerful and brilliant Telescopes, Campe, Opera, Line, course, and Perspective Glasses, to know the distances of objects viewed through them of great importance to Sportsmen, the Army, Navy, and others. Messrs. S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Abchurch-lane, Piccadilly. Observe—Opposite the York Hotel. These Telescopes possess such extraordinary powers, that some three-and-a-half inches with an extra eye-piece will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double stars. With the same Telescope can be seen a person's countenance three-and-a-half miles distant, and an object from sixteen to twenty miles. They are of larger, and all sizes, with increasing powers accordingly.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION, 1854. A valuable, newly-invented, very small powerful waistcoat-pocket glass, the size of a walnut, by which a person can be seen and known one-and-a-half miles distant. They answer every purpose at the race-course, at the open-house, country scenery, and ships are clearly seen at twelve to fourteen miles. They are invaluable for shooting, deer-stalking, yachting, to sportsmen, gentlemen, game-keepers, and tourists. Open and Race-course Perspective Glasses, with wonderful powers; an object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant. Newly-invented Spectacles. The most useful defective sight is brought in its youthful, natural, and original state. Invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme deafness—39, Abchurch-lane, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

DO YOU WANT LUXURIANT HAIR,

WHISKERS, &c.?—No other compound for the Hair has maintained such an enduring celebrity as EMILY DEAN'S CHUNIKENE. It is guaranteed to produce Whiskers, Moustachios, Eyebrows, &c., in a few weeks, and restore the Hair in baldness, from whatever cause, strengthen it when weak, prevent its falling off, and effectually check greyiness in all its stages. For the nursery, Dr. Wilson says, it is unrivalled. Price 2s. per package (elegantly perfumed), sent post free on receipt of 21 penny postage stamps, by Miss DEAN, 374, Manchester-street, Gray's Inn-road, London. Sold by every Chemist in the Kingdom.

"In one fortnight it produced a beautiful set of moustachios."—H. Adams.

"It has prevented my hair falling off."—J. Hickson.

"It has quite checked the greyiness that was coming on."—Mrs. Elder.

RUPTURES EFFECTUALLY

CURED WITHOUT A TRUSS.—All sufferers from this alarming complaint are earnestly invited to consult or write to Dr. LESLIE, who guarantees them relief in every case. HEALTH RESTORED.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—

An Extraordinary Cure of Dropsy, after suffering for eighteen months. Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. Briggs, Chemist, Gough, dated February 15th, 1853.

TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of dropsy, recently effected by your valuable medicine. Captain Jackson, of this place, was afflicted with dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swollen, and water oozed as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary. Notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all was of an avail, until he commenced using your Pills, by which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured, and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.

I am, Sir, yours respectfully,

(Signed) G. BRIGGS.

Sold at the Establishment of Professor HOLLOWAY, 211, Strand (near Temple-bar), London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicines throughout the civilized world, at the following prices:—1s. 12d., 2s. 9d., 3s. 6d., 4s., 5s., and 6s. each box.

N.B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

DANTZIC, Monday.

On Saturday evening one of the forts at Bomarsund was blown up—the conflagration was visible thirty miles off. The new fort was burning two days and nights. Eight hundred French troops are dead. A Russian steamer, with flag of truce, was at anchor amidst the English fleet at Ledsund, on Saturday. On 20th August a large steamer came out of Helsingfors and made for Cronstadt. She was chased by the Euryalus, and returned to Helsingfors.

DESPATCHES FROM CAPT. SCOTT, R.N.

(ENCLOSURE No. 1 Sir Charles Napier's Letter No. 410)

Her Majesty's ship Odin, Led Sund, Aug. 25.

Sir,—I have the honour to state that, in pursuance of your orders, dated the 18th of August, I proceeded with her Majesty's ships Odin, Alban, Gorgon, and Driver, under my command, towards Kumblinge, and the islands east of it.

Rather than return to your flag without intelligence, I resolved to attempt a passage to Abo, and on Monday at daylight, leaving the larger ships at anchor, I took all the masters in the Alban, surveyed and buoyed off a passage for ten miles to Bergham, and then returned for the other ships; but, the Gorgon grounding, delayed us for that night.

On Tuesday we made our way in safety into the comparatively main open track to Abo, beyond Bergham; at two p.m. observed a small steamer watching us, and at three p.m., several gun-boats moving a body of troops from the point (one and a half mile to the north-west) up to the chain across the narrow entrance to the harbour.

Having approached to within 3,000 yards, the Alban stood in to sound. The entrance of the harbour was closed by two impediments; the one in front appeared to be a chain laid on a floating platform, the other of stakes and booms, between which the gun-boats were stationed at regular intervals, and the steam vessels (four in number) were under the shelter of the points.

About four p.m. the Alban fired the first shell, which burst over one of the gun-boats. I then commenced firing, and was followed at intervals by Gorgon and Driver, but with little or no effect that we could discover, except that of fully answering my purpose in drawing a return from the masked batteries and gun-boats. Only one of the former, at the end of the boom, mounted a gun or guns of large calibre and long range, but which was concealed from our view by a point of land. The others, three in number, about one mile to the west of the boom, as far as we could judge, did not in any one case mount more than five, or less than three small guns. A fort, of apparently eight or nine large guns, at a distance, constructed to enfilade both passages, fired repeatedly, but the shot invariably fell a very short distance beyond the south end of Little Beckholm.

As my object was not to attack Abo, but to examine its defences, I contented myself with firing a shot occasionally at the gun boats, or whatever looked like a masked battery. In the meantime Commander Otter, in the most zealous and gallant manner, after going as close as it was prudent in the Alban, pulled in with his gig, sounding just within range of the gun-boats and batteries, which were all the time keeping up a constant fire.

The sum of the observation I have been able to obtain with his assistance, and that of Commanders Cracroft and Hobart, amounts to this—seventeen row boats, two guns each, and about twenty oars on each side, four steam-vessels (all small), two having the flag with cross anchors in it, and another, were observed steaming away through the channel to the eastward of Beckholm. Three (if not four) masked batteries and another, I think, in course of construction, for the position of which I refer you to the very clear delineation executed by Commander Otter.

The channel appears to be very narrow, and the thick woods were evidently full of soldiers. We learnt that our arrival had been anticipated (as we expected, knowing that we had been watched by a steamer for some days), and that four thousand additional troops had been sent on the previous day, and five thousand more were expected to arrive on the following day; that there were six steamers, five small and one large (the latter we did not see), and eighteen boats and two guns, and eighty men, besides soldiers in each.

I have, &c., FRANCIS SCOTT, Captain.
Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B.,
Commander-in-Chief, &c.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

The French steamer Souffleur, with General Bodisco and a number of Russian officers on board, took in coals at Elsinore on the 26th ult., and proceeded on her way the following day.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—General Bodisco, who was taken prisoner at Bomarsund, has arrived at Havre.

AT BOMARSUND, during the action, there was one Frenchman who did good service. He crept on his face and hands under the fort, his only protection being a large stone. He was there for sixteen hours, and fired no less than 200 rounds of ammunition, and killed about 150 Russians. According as a fellow would put out his head, pop went the Frenchman's gun. The French are dead shots at 600 yards.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

The 21st Fusiliers arrived at Malta on the 21st, and sailed for the East.

Although it was contemplated to withdraw the 10th Royal Hussars from the East Indies for service in Turkey, the idea is abandoned, and the corps will remain its due time in the East Indies. The draft of this and other regiments are waiting ready to embark for Bombay per the Earl of Balcarra.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

Orders have been issued for 100 men and two officers of the 97th, and fifty men and two officers of the 88th, to embark at Portsmouth to join the service companies of their regiments in Turkey.

COLLECTION.—We rejoice that the recommendation of the general assembly is at length to be carried into effect, in the collection to be made in all the churches and chapels belonging to the Church of Scotland. In Edinburgh alone about 200 families have been for several months receiving weekly allowances proportioned to their need; and we agree with the general assembly in their deliverance "That it would be a disgrace to the country that the wives and children of those under arms in defence of our national honour should be reduced to the necessity of being supported as paupers." The appeal to our patriotic and Christian benevolence cannot fail to receive a generous response. By anticipation, some of the congregations in British America have already made liberal collections for this national object.—Edinburgh Courier.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

COMPLETE REJECTION OF THE CONDITIONS OF PEACE.—BERLIN, Sept. 1.—"General Count Benckendorff, who has arrived at Puthus from St. Petersburg, has carried thither to the King the news that Russia replies by an absolute refusal to the last propositions of the Vienna cabinet supported by that of Berlin." On Saturday last Prince Gortschakoff, the envoy, having ascertained that no relaxation of the French and English conditions of peace was to be obtained, presented a copy of a note addressed to him by Count Nesselrode, the effect of which was that the Czar would not negotiate on the basis offered by the Western Powers.

The Moniteur states from Bucharest that nearly the entire Turkish army has passed into Wallachia.

A letter from Bucharest states that so enthusiastic was the reception given to Omar Pasha on his entering that place, that his carriage was literally covered with flowers thrown to him as he passed.

Her Majesty has bestowed on Omar Pasha the cross of Grand Commander of the Bath.

Jassy, Aug. 15th.—On the 2nd of Sept. the headquarters of Prince Gortschakoff will be transferred from this place on to the Russian territory. The Russian Government has given orders that all towns and villages, where the enemy may show himself, shall be reduced to ashes. Those who do not obey this order are to be punished as traitors.

SINOPE, BLACK SEA, AFTER THE BOMBARDMENT.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

AUSTRIAN PROCLAMATION TO THE INHABITANTS OF MOLDO-WALLACHIA.—Baron Hess, commander of the 3rd and 4th Austrian army corps, issued the following proclamation when the Austrian troops crossed the frontier:—"Inhabitants of Wallachia and Moldavia,—In accordance with a convention concluded between the Emperor, my most gracious sovereign, and the Porte, the Austrian troops now enter the Principalities. They will remove from you all the evils of war, and bring you the blessings of peace. Receive, then, those who will care for your future peace and security with kindness and confidence, and they will prove worthy of them by their behaviour, discipline, and subordination. The privileges granted to you by the Sublime Porte will remain in full force, but I expect from the authorities all possible assistance in providing proper quarters and provisions for the troops, for whose necessities indemnification will always be made. All the authorities are now instructed from this day forward [the date is not given], to apply in all matters to F.M.L. Count Coronini, who has been appointed by his Majesty to the command, under my directions, of all the troops in the two Danubian Principalities, or to the military organs by him nominated."

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 24.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, who has been suffering from a sore foot, arrived in the Bosphorus last night, and landed at Therapia. He will stay a few days, and then return to Varna.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

MARSEILLES, Tuesday.—The Sinai has brought news from Constantinople to the 25th ult. General Guyon is appointed to the command of the army in Asia. Mustapha Pasha retires disgraced.

The Russians have captured a Valaque vessel, which was carried to Sebastopol. Why was Sebastopol left unwatched? O for a Nelson!

The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has appointed Lieutenant-Colonel H. F. Williams, C.B., Royal Artillery, to be her Majesty's Commissioner at Kars; and her Majesty, by commission, dated August 7, 1854, has been pleased to grant that officer the local rank of colonel while so employed; and the Lieutenant-General of Ordnance has sanctioned the appointment of Lieutenant Teesdale, Royal Artillery, as aide-de-camp to Colonel Williams. The colonel has joined H.M.St. Highflyer at Trieste, for passage to the Black Sea.

Captain Baddeley having been appointed adjutant to the field batteries in Turkey, under the command of Colonel Lake, has resigned the Adjutancy of the 2nd battalion, and proceeded to the seat of war to assume his new duties.

The mission to Constantinople of Nénir Aga, Schamyl's nephew, has had the desired issue. Schamyl will support the Turks in Asia with 80,000 men.

General Guyon was high being taken by a party of Russians near Hadgi Velikoi. He owes his escape to having cut off the top of a Cossack's lance with his sword, and to the swiftness of his horse during a chase of eight hours! The day following, Iskender Bey, and Mr. —, the correspondent of the Morning Chronicle, were also nearly falling into the hands of the Russians. They galloped up to the Russian outposts at Konrouk-Dèrè, and after taking a good sight at the Cossacks, were galloping back, when a shower of unsket-balls was sent flying at them. A hall struck on a stone close to the correspondent's stirrup, and several went within half an inch over his head.

An English gentleman, Mr. Balfour, correspondent of a London daily journal, died recently (about July 24), in Erzeroum. He was interred with much ceremony in the Armenian burial-ground. The corpse was accompanied to its last dwelling-place by all the European population, and the whole consolate body. The impressive burial service was read by the Rev. Mr. Peabody, a member of the American missionary establishment in Erzeroum.

Notwithstanding the Turkish defeat at Kars, the whole aspect of affairs would be completely altered were Anapa taken by the allies—a conquest which might be accomplished with no great difficulty. The place is strong, but by no means impregnable; and it would be perfectly practicable to land in its immediate neighbourhood a force sufficient to haffle any attempt to raise the siege. The capture of this fortress would probably be the signal for a general movement of the Cossacks against Russia, which, if successful, would intercept the communication between Tiflis and Moscow.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

The Vice-Admiral of the Turkish fleet, Osman Pasha, Captains Oseon Bey and Ali Bey, and the midshipman Chali Effendi, who were taken prisoners at Sinope, are now at St. Petersburg.

A letter from Odessa, of the 22nd, in the Cologne Gazette, states that several vessels of the allied fleets had appeared in sight of the port on the 20th. The garrison took the alarm, and the inhabitants, who remembered the effect of the French and English guns, were in the greatest consternation. However, the vessels, after a little delay, withdrew in the direction of the East, and official placards were immediately posted up, announcing to the inhabitants of Odessa that the enemy had withdrawn because it was convinced of the superiority of the Russian forces.

STEAMERS.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. TERMAGANT AND VALOROUS WITH RUSSIAN PRISONERS.—SHEERNESS, Sept. 5.—This day, at two p.m., her Majesty's ship Valorous, sixteen guns, Captain C. W. M. Buckle, arrived in this harbour, having left Ledsund on the 27th August, arriving at Copenhagen on the 30th August, and left Sept. 1, leaving the Stromboli at Elsinour, coaling, which made the signal that she was coming home. On the 2nd she passed the Sphinx, six guns, towing the St. Vincent, with Russian prisoners on board, making a signal that her captain (Mansell) had died the day previous of diseased heart. Valorous has brought six women (wives of Russian soldiers) home with her, and two children; also the Crown Bailiff of Aland, named Isak Hermann Ohlsson, who refused to allow the inhabitants to furnish provisions to the English, in consequence of which he was captured by Capt. Sullivan, of the Lightning.

This day, at noon, the Termagant, twenty-four guns, screw, Captain Hon. K. Stansfeldt, arrived at Sheerness, having left Ledsund on the 20th August; touched at Faro and Bornholm, and called at Elsinour, where the ship was placed in quarantine. She brings home 201 prisoners, including three officers and their wives; seventeen died on the passage of cholera, which, however, has now left the ship, with the exception of six or eight Russians, who are fast recovering, and about ten of her own ship's company are slightly ill. She brings home eighteen invalids, together with Captain Major and two lieutenants for promotion. She met the Wrangler two days back, all well on board, bound for the Baltic. The whole of the prisoners were put on board the Devonshire. They appear to have behaved themselves exceedingly well, but, as far as appearances go, are as dirty and ill-looking a set of men as one can possibly imagine, enveloped in a long grey coat, with no jacket underneath, and look as if they had not washed themselves for a month at least. They admire the provisions beyond measure, and they have been allowed spirits, to counteract the prevailing sickness. Every morning, when they get up, they turn towards the sun, and cross themselves. She is ordered immediately to Portsmouth, to take in her guns and get ready for service with all possible dispatch. She has had foul winds, and has steamed all the way. It appears Mr. A. F. Marescaux, mate, has rendered essential service in interpreting for the French troops going out and the Russians coming home. The names of the Russian officers are Captain Swaroff, Captain Meedan, and Lieutenant Blum. All three of the officers have their wives. Mr. Alfred Marescaux was on board the Penelope when fired upon by the fortress of Bomarsund on the 14th of August last, and gave assistance with the boats of the Termagant under Lieutenant Jenkins.

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

The Minister of Marine has ordered from the Imperial foundry of Rouelle two howitzers in bronze, No. 12, on the new plan, for the use of the fleet. They are to be called Odessa and Bomarsund.

The steam corvette Gorgone left Toulon on the 1st for the Black Sea, with 300 passengers, among whom were forty Poles, going to enter the Turkish service. The remainder were sailors, destined to fill up the vacancies in the squadron.

The steam packet Caïre, belonging to the Messageries Impériales, left Marseilles on the 1st of September for Constantinople, with 260 passengers and twenty-two Sisters of Charity, who volunteered their services to attend the hospitals attached to the army of the East.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

On the 26th ult. seven small vessels, freighted with flour, were captured by the English cruisers in the White Sea.

Another Russian prize, the Problem, taken by H.M.S. Cruiser, has just arrived in the West India Docks.

The scale of victualling the Russian prisoners of war is two-thirds of A.B. allowance, except in bread, which is to be served out to them in full allowance—viz., 1lb. of biscuit or 1½lb. of soft bread. Their articles of weekly food will be as follows: Biscuit or soft bread, sugar, tea or chocolate, oatmeal, mustard, pepper, vinegar, fresh meat daily (when it can be procured), or fresh vegetables, salt pork or salt beef, peas, flour, suet, and currants or raisins, when fresh meat cannot be procured. There were, prior to the arrival of H.M.S. Termagant and other vessels, only three Russian fishermen on board the Devonshire at Sheerness, and they expressed themselves highly satisfied with their rations. They declared they eat more meat in one week where they now are than they could obtain in one month when they were at home at their avocation as fishermen, and they would be truly happy to have their families to share their present fare with them. Stores of every description for the purpose of cleanliness, such as wash-tubs, soap, towels, &c., will be liberally served out to each mess, also mess traps for use.

THE LATE COURT-MARTIAL AT WINDSOR.

VERDICT AND SENTENCE ON LIEUT. PERRY.

On Monday morning it was communicated to Lieutenant Perry that the following verdict and sentence in his case, which has recently engaged so much attention, had been agreed to:—

"Not Guilty on the first charge. Guilty on second, third, and fourth charges. Permitted to retire from service by sale of commission."

The first charge, on which Lieutenant Perry is acquitted, was as follows:—

1st. For having in a certain letter, dated Windsor-barracks, July 24th, 1854, and addressed to Colonel the Hon. Arthur Upton, president of the court-martial then and there assembled for the trial of Lieutenant Thomas Fergus Greer, which letter bore the signature of the prisoner, and was then and there delivered to the said Colonel Upton, made the following slanderous statement respecting his commanding officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Garrett, viz., that after repeated acts of violence against myself (meaning the prisoner), by other officers of the 46th, while the regiment was in Dublin, in my bedroom, I reported the circumstance to Colonel Garrett, who reproached me, and called me a fool for my pains; he, the said prisoner, then well knowing that so much of the said statement as related to Colonel Garrett, viz., the words, "who reproached me, and called me a fool for my pains," was false.

The three charges on which Lieutenant Perry has been found guilty, and for which his virtual dismissal from the army has been pronounced, are as follows:—

2nd. For having, in the said letter, made the following further statement:—"I then patiently submitted to a series of indignities, when I complained to Major Maxwell, who represented the facts to Colonel Garrett; upon which he gave the offenders a reprimand. So weak was the effect of the reprimand or caution given by Colonel Garrett that, though the acts of aggression were discontinued, I was persecuted in other ways, until I threatened to appeal to the General of the district, and sent a letter to that effect to Colonel Garrett. On it being known that I was determined upon such a course, I was earnestly entreated by several of my brother officers to forbear making any complaint. I did forbear, and from that time I was relieved from any repetition of the annoyance and indignities under which I had formerly laboured;" he (the prisoner) then well knowing that so much of the said statement with reference to Colonel Garrett as is comprised in the following words: "Until I threatened to appeal to the General of the district, and sent a letter to that effect to Colonel Garrett"—was false, and that he (the prisoner) had never made any threat to Colonel Garrett, either by word of mouth or in writing, that he would appeal to the General of the district.

3rd. For having, on the 21st of July, 1854, at Windsor, when examined as a witness before the court-martial which was then and there being held for the trial of Lieutenant Thomas Fergus Greer, in the reply to the following question: "Will you swear positively that Captain Nicholas did not reprimand officers against whom you had made a complaint to the commanding officer?" made the following answer—"I have taken an oath already. Captain Nicholas never, to my knowledge, censured anybody, he himself (meaning Captain Nicholas) having ill-treated others in joining; he (the prisoner) then well knowing that so much of the said answer as is comprised in the following words, "he himself having ill-treated others in joining," was false.

4th. For having, on the day and year aforesaid, and at the place aforesaid, in a certain letter addressed and delivered by him (the prisoner) to the Deputy-Judge Advocate officiating at the trial of Lieut. Thomas Fergus Greer, made the following statement:—"Major Maxwell has stated an oath that Captain Nicholas never ill-treated young officers. I could put questions to prove that he did, and that he (meaning Captain Nicholas) aids and abets everything of the kind that takes place;" he (the prisoner) then well knowing that so much of the said statement as imputed to Captain Nicholas "that he ill-treated young officers, or aided and abetted others in so doing," was false.

SENTENCE ON LIEUTENANT GREER.

This officer, who was tried upon a charge of having been guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in the following instance:—"For having on or about the night of the 25th or morning of the 26th June last wilfully struck and offered other personal violence to Lieutenant Edward James Perry, of the 46th Regiment; and secondly for having at the same time and place used provoking, insulting, and disgusting language to the said Lieutenant Perry, calling him swindler, blackguard, and using other language of an offensive and insulting nature," has been acquitted, but ordered to sell out.

Lieutenant Waldy was ordered to be severely reprimanded in consequence of his conduct in connexion with the letter written by him to Lieutenant Perry, and produced in court after his denying its contents.

RIFLE CANNON.—Captain Norton, well known for his inventions in war projectiles, writes as follows to the Cork Reporter:—"I read in your columns lately that a failure in experiments with the 68-pounder rifle cannon was perpetrated in the presence of her Majesty, at the Needles, Isle of Wight. Had the shot or shell been constructed after the manner described in my pamphlet on projectiles, page 18, there would have been no failure. I am justified in believing so from the fact that I fired more than one hundred shot and shell from my four-groove rifle cannon, in the Victoria-park, frequently using the same shot and shell without a single failure. I will engage also to discharge shot made of mud, the mud to be properly cooked by previous pressing and baking after the most approved manner of patented brick-making. The natives of the East Indies, who use the pellet or ball-haw, make their balls of heavy blue or yellow clay well kneaded and mixed with oil. I have frequently shot these balls from a pellet-haw with its full force against a rock, when they would rebound like a racket-ball without breaking. A ball made of stone would fly to pieces on the same trial.—Your obedient servant, J. NORTON."

MAJOR A. D. DE WANGENHEIM, the last of the surviving officers who served under Frederick the Great, died a few days since at Altdam, near Stettin, at the age of nearly ninety-two.

THE GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH.—The following is the list of the members of the Medical Council appointed by the President of the General Board of Health:—John Ayrton Paris, M.D., F.R.S., President of the Royal College of Physicians. Sir James Collins Brodie, Bart., F.R.S., Sergeant Surgeon to the Queen, Consulting Surgeon to St. George's Hospital. Sir James Clark, Bart., M.D., F.R.S., Physician in Ordinary to the Queen and to his Royal Highness Prince Albert. James Alderson, M.D., F.R.S., Fellow and Treasurer of the Royal College of Physicians, Physician to St. Mary's Hospital. Benjamin Guy Babington, M.D., F.R.S., Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, late Physician to Guy's Hospital. Alexander Tweedie, M.D., F.R.S., Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, Physician to the Fever Hospital, Examiner in Medicine in the University of London. William Baly, M.D., F.R.S., Assistant-Physician to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, Physician to the Millbank Penitentiary. William Lawrence, F.R.S., Vice-President of the Royal College of Surgeons, Surgeon to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, Surgeon Extraordinary to the Queen. John Simon, F.R.S., Surgeon to St. Thomas's Hospital, Officer of Health in the City of London. Richard Owen, F.R.S., Professor of Zoology in the Royal College of Surgeons. Nathaniel B. Ward, Master of the Society of Apothecaries. John Bacot, Inspector of Anatomy, Member of the Senate of the University of London. William Farr, M.D., Registrar-General's Office.

HEALTH OF LONDON DURING THE WEEK.—(From the Registrar General's Report.)—In the week that ended on Saturday last 2,515 persons died in London. This number exceeds the average 1,243 by 1,267, but is 251 less than the number of deaths in the week that ended Sept. 1, 1849, when the cholera was epidemic, and 2,796 persons died. The air was stagnant in the early part of the week. No rain fell; the sun shone brightly; and the temperature of the atmosphere and the Thames ranged from sixty to seventy degrees. 1,287 deaths are referred to cholera, 243 to diarrhoea. The deaths from cholera during the last nine weeks have been 1, 5, 26, 133, 399, 644, 729, 847, 1,287. The present cholera epidemic, like that of 1848–9, has appeared in two eruptions. The first broke out earlier (Aug. 21, 1853), the latter eruption later in the year (July 5), than the corresponding eruptions in either the epidemic of 1832–3, or of 1848–9. Up to the date of Sept. 1, 1849, 8,117 lives were lost in London during fifteen weeks destroyed by cholera; in the present epidemic 4,070 lives have been lost in the eight weeks ending Sept. 2. Although a little more than a fourth part (616,635) of the population (2,362,236) of this vast city is on the south side of the Thames, 2,317 of the 4,070 deaths from cholera have happened in the southern districts. And there the mortality is still heavy; 101 persons died of cholera last week in Bermondsey. On the north side of the Thames there has been a remarkable outbreak in the St. James's district.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

The match between vessels not exceeding seven tons (R. L. Y. C. measurement), open to any yacht club, will be sailed on Saturday next, September 16th. The prize is a purse of £20, being £15 for the first yacht, and £5 for the second, starting from Erith at eleven a.m., down round a flag-boat moored off Rosherville, and up to North Woolwich. The following rules and regulations are to be strictly observed; and any yacht not conforming to them will be disqualified:—All yachts entered, must be at the usual place at Greenwich, at four o'clock, p.m., on the 9th of September, for the purpose of being measured. The yachts to be at their stations at eleven a.m., on the 16th inst. and to moor with their own anchors in a line between buoys laid down for that purpose by the committee; and weigh their anchors previous to starting. Yachts not in the proper line, in the opinion of the commodore, at the time of starting, to be disqualified. No open boats or skiffs will be allowed to sail. In all other respects the rules of the Royal London Yacht Club will be observed, so far as they are applicable.

The monthly meeting of this club will be held at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi Terrace, on Monday, the 18th instant, at 8 o'clock, p.m. The prize of £15 for yachts not exceeding seven tons, and £5 for the second yacht, open to yachts belonging to any club, will be sailed for on Saturday, the 16th of September. The yachts will start from Erith at eleven o'clock, a.m., and a small steamer will accompany the match, tickets for which, price 3s. 6d., may be obtained of Mr. C. P. Farmer, 77, Blackfriars-road. Members wishing to dine at the club dinner, at six o'clock on Monday evening, are to give notice of their intention to Mr. Elder, before two o'clock on that day. Each member may introduce one friend, upon giving such notice. Among the yachts for sale are the Diavolo, fifteen tons, O.M., cutter, price £210; Rumbler, seven tons, O.M., cutter, price £70; Comet, 28 tons, O.M., cutter, price £320; Wave, six tons, O.M., price £40; Water Witch, eight tons, O.M., yawl, price £90; Georgiana, eighteen tons, O.M., yawl, price £120. For particulars apply to the secretary.

Saturday's race will not, as hitherto, be confined to craft belonging to members only, but will be open to yachts belonging to any club, and will extend from Erith down round a flag-boat moored off Rosherville, and up to North Woolwich. The entry list closed on Wednesday night, and is as follows:—

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

On Tuesday evening last the members of this club met at Anderson's, and, for the first time, were under the necessity of voting a member into the chair, the flag-officers being out at the various regattas round the coast. Robert Armitage, Esq., having been called upon to preside, the hon. sec. read the minutes of the previous meeting, after which the twelve candidates (whose names were given in our last number) were unanimously elected. The two silver cups, won by the Pearl and the Levant in the recent third-class match on the Serpentine-river, were then presented to their winners, John Purnell and William Bmdock, Esqs., by the chairman, preceded by some very appropriate remarks. A vote of thanks was passed to Dr. Guest, the chairman, and G. F. Bounor, Esq., for various acts of courtesy and assistance rendered to the club. Notice of motion was given by Mr. Bernard Luxton that the future club matches on the Serpentine-river be sailed earlier in the season, permission having been granted for the sailing of second-class matches on that river (twelve-foot yachts on the water-line); and the Sailing Committee are to meet on Tuesday evening next at the Club-house, upon that and other special business.

ROYAL MERSEY YACHT CLUB.

The usual house dinner took place at the Marine Station on Tuesday evening last, the 5th inst., Commodore Little-dale presiding. Afterwards, the business of the meeting commenced, and Mr. Melling, the hon. secretary, placed the proceedings before the commodore. Mr. A. W. Bowman, and Mr. J. O. Ryder, merchants, of Liverpool, were ballotted for and duly elected members, and Mr. Charles Woodward, the brother of the owner of the Mirage cutter yacht, was nominated for membership. The closing cruise of the yachts, to sail in company under the flag of the commodore on board his fine schooner the Ariel, 117 tons, was fixed to take place on Wednesday next, the 13th inst. The yachts to assemble off New Brighton at nine a.m. This finishes the yachting season of this club for the year, after which the yachts will be dismantled for the winter months. The opening of the St. George's Hall, and the meeting of the British Association, which immediately follows, will occupy the attention of the members, and the town in general, for the remainder of this month, and it has been deemed desirable to have the yachting closing cruise over as speedily as possible.

POOLE YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

The third annual regatta of the Poole Yacht Club has duly come off. The weather on Tuesday being most propitious, the quays were lined with large numbers of pleasure-seekers, attired in holiday-dress. The competition was not very great; many yachts familiar to us were not, as could have been wished, seen competing for the prizes.

The prize of £10 for yachts belonging to the Poole Yacht Club, not exceeding ten tons, was won by Mr. W. Bond's Surprise, beating Mr. Mussholwitz's Susan and Mr. T. Belbin's Poom.

The prize of £6 for Yachts belonging to the Poole Yacht Club, not exceeding five tons, was won by Mr. J. Witchell's Eva, beating the Traunt and Vixen.

The prize of £4 for small class yachts belonging to the port of Poole, not exceeding four tons, was won by Mr. W. Meadins's Petrel, beating Mr. Cribb's Frome and Mr. Burd's Vixen.

The prize of £15 for cutters under eighteen tons, O.M. belonging to any Yacht Club, was won by Mr. R. Roberts's Vesper, beating Mr. C. J. Stoud's Gem, after a well-contested match.

The match between sprit-sail boats, belonging to the port of Poole. First prize £1. 10s., second £1. 5s., third £1, fourth 15s., fifth 10s., sixth 5s. After a well-contested race, the boats came in as follows:—Black Bess, Stokes, 1; Dolphin, Collington, 2; Champion, Blundell, 3; Leave-me-Alone, Hughes, 4; Abicore, Roder, 5; Civility, Reeks, 6.

During the afternoon there was a large party on the quay at Brankens Island, and boat and galley races, duck-hunts, &c., followed each other in succession. A display of fireworks closed the day.

WEDNESDAY.

A match for £25, £15, and £10, for schooners and cutter yachts belonging to any port. Time race. The following entered:—

Phantom	S. Lane, Esq.	24 tons.
Surprise	W. Bond, Esq.	19 "
Vesper	J. Roberts, Esq.	15 "
Sea Serpent	J. Washill, Esq.	25 "

The Phantom arrived, leaving her competitors considerably in the rear. Another match was also made up for the yachts belonging to the port of Poole.

DOVER AND CINQUE PORTS REGATTA.

The annual regatta for Dover and the Cinque Ports took place at Dover on Tuesday week. Phoebus donned his holiday garb, and turned out for the nonce, a scorching day. The sea, without a ripple, seemed more than ever graceful to the eye. The morning was unclouded, without a breath of wind. A fleet of beautiful yachts lay motionless upon the water. This was a great damper for those interested.

The promenades and drives were lined with distinguished residents and visitors. Equipages belonging to several of the patrons were observed upon the carriage drives; and the crowd on foot, clustering round the committee's stand, was a very gay one. The German band attended during the day, and performed some excellent selections.

First Race.—A sailing match between yachts, over fourteen and not exceeding forty tons O.M. Half-a-minute per ton allowed for difference of tonnage. Entrance money, £1. 1s. For a cup of the value of £30.

Five yachts started:—The Avalon, London, thirty-five tons, James Goodson, Esq.; Bonita, Bristol, thirty tons, Thomas Barnes, Esq.; Maude, Lowestoff, twenty-five tons, Capt. Andrews; Amazon, London, thirty-six tons, A. J. Young, Esq.; Ino, London, twenty-five tons, Thomas Groves, Esq. Three—the Avalon, Bonita, and Maude—with considerable difficulty, crawled to the first buoy, and then drifted with the tide far out of the sight, if not of the recollection, of the spectators, nothing more being heard of them till they drifted back again at 9 p.m.; at which hour some passionate lovers of yachting were vainly endeavouring by the aid of night glasses to make out the colours of the winning vessels. The following is the official return received from the committee:—

Avalon	8.30
Maude	8.50

The Second Race was a bye match for £20. Three-quarters of a minute allowed per ton. Two yachts entered:—The Kitten, Ipswich, ten tons, Thomas Harvey Esq.; and Thought, London, twenty-five tons, Geo. Coope, Esq.; but as neither wind nor water would carry either of these vessels beyond the first buoy, the match was postponed.

Third Race.—Between first-class four-oared regatta-built galleys, not exceeding twenty-nine feet in length. Belonging to the Cinque Ports. For a purse of £17, to be divided as follows:—First boat, £12; second boat, £3; third boat, £2. This was the only interesting contest of the day. Four boats started: The Arrow, Ramsgate, white, E. Goldsmith; Topsy, Dover, red, J. Graveney; Surprise, Hastings, blue, H. Roberts; Mosquito, Dover, yellow, W. Spice. The boats started from the westward by a signal from the committee boat, and the following is the order in which they passed the east buoys:—

Arrow	M. S.
Surprise	5.25
Topsy	5.35
Mosquito	5.43
	5.45

It was thought that the tidal disadvantage experienced by the Topsy in her passage up the course would be compensated by the strength of the current on her return. This proved correct; for on turning the westward buoy, we find her only four seconds behind her principal opponent, and in advance of the other boats. The Mosquito did not reach this buoy:—

Arrow	M. S.
Topsy	10.52
Surprise	10.50

Third buoy:—

Arrow	M. S.
Topsy	10.52
Surprise	10.50
	0.0

It was apparent that Topsy could not receive this lost ground, unless some extraordinary chance transpired to befriend her. No such good luck happened to her; and, although slightly gaining upon her competitors in the run down the course, the pull up to the committee boat proved, as was anticipated, too much for her. Fourth buoy:—

Arrow	M. S.
Topsy	21.34
Surprise	21.66
Topsy	22.6

The Ramsgate boat came in first, performing the distance in 24 min. 44 sec.; the Hastings boat was 36 sec. in her rear. The match was an interesting one, although displaying none of the prow and prow rowing which often takes place. The efforts of each crew obtained great applause.

FOURTH RACE.—Between second-class four-oared regatta-built galleys, not exceeding twenty-nine feet in length. Belonging to the Cinque Ports. For a purse of £10, to be divided as follows:—First boat, £7; second boat, £2; third boat, £1.

Alarm, Folkestone (Pink)	R. Dule	1
Melita, Dover (Green)	S. Phippards	2
Mosquito, Dover (Red)	W. Spice	3

A beautiful display of fireworks took place in the evening near the Waterloo Crescent.

During the day Thompson's life-preserving seat was tested with the most perfect success. Rear-Admiral Yates and Captain Herriek, R.N., who were present, both expressed their high approval of the invention as an efficient means of saving human life.

On Wednesday the bye match between the Kitten and Thought proved a more interesting contest than the yacht race of the previous day. The vessels started at 12h. 5m., and arrived at the following hours:—

Thought	M. S.
Kitten	4.30

The Kitten was declared the winner by 84 minutes, in consequence of the allowance for tonnage afforded her by the regulations. There was a numerous company of spectators.

At the regatta hall on Tuesday evening, among the hundred distinguished visitors, were Lord and Lady North, Miss Eden, Mr. Dering, Mrs. Colonel Grant and Miss Grant, Mrs. Colonel Girardol, Mr. Walters (4th Regiment), Mr. Smith (4th Regiment), Captain Oxenden (Rifle Brigade), Lieut.-Colonel Grant and officers of the Royal Artillery, the officers of the Royal Staffordshire Militia, the officers from Hythe, Canterbury, and Deal garrison, &c. &c.

EXMOUTH REGATTA.

Thursday week was the day appointed for the Exmouth annual regatta. The wind and weather were exceedingly favourable. The principal part of the day's festivities took place on the beach walk, which was decorated with evergreens and flowers; flags gaily floated in the breeze, and the numerous vessels were gaily trimmed. The Exmouth band played several enlivening tunes, which added greatly to the hilarity of the day. The number of visitors was larger, if anything, than formerly. The sports were of the best description, the yachts sailed capably, and the rowing was exceedingly good. The contest for the Ladies' Purse excited much interest.

In the evening there was a tradesman's ball at the Dolphin, which was very well attended.

A prize of £15 for yachts of any rig not exceeding twenty-five tons. The only yacht entered for this race was the Vampire, and there was consequently no race.

A purse of £7 for yachts not exceeding ten tons, won by the Fairy, (C. Bricknoll, Esq.), beating Lily of the Valley (Shewers), Pamella (Curnell), and Teetotal Star, (Perry).

A purse of £5. 5s. for yachts not exceeding nineteen feet keel, won by Julia (Moss), beating X.L. (Thynman), Witch of the Wave (Tupper), and Woodon Shoe (Perrin).

A purse of £3 for third-class yachts, won by William and Charlotte (Lyn), beating Arab (Pine), and Vampire (Shewers).

The ladies' purse of £5 for four-oared boats to be rowed for by gentlemen amateurs; won by the Amateur (E.A.B.C.), beating Fly and the Sylph.

Prize of £2 for boats not exceeding twenty-four feet keel; won by Saucy Jack (Lyn), beating Elizabeth, Ellen, and the Lena.

Prize of 30s. for two-oared boats; won by No Name (Langbeorn), beating Go On (J. Pyne), and the Jenny Lind (Dewdney).

The sports terminated with a most amusing punt chase for £1, which was well contested.

CLEVEDON REGATTA.

On Tuesday week a regatta was held here under the distinguished auspices of Sir A. H. Elton, Bart., the Mayor of Bristol, W. P. L. Buckle, Esq., F. Shilton Esq., and other gentlemen, for the ostensible purpose of rewarding those hardy sons of Neptune, the fill pilots, a class of men who

"lead a merry life

In the glassy calm or tempest strife."

The weather was most propitious, and the Bristol and Exeter Railway Company having announced an excursion train for the occasion, thousands of persons availed themselves of the opportunity of visiting this delightful and charming spot, and, at one period of the day, there could not have been less than from four to five thousand persons present.

However much the attraction of foreign climes might win the traveller from his native land, were he to explore the riches nearer home we feel confident he would be amply repaid. The coast of England possesses numerous bays and spots—the most charming imaginable—and not the least amongst them stands Clevedon, which, in addition to its natural attractive features, is being provided by the estimable Lord of the Manor with every appliance of comfort and luxury for the increased enjoyment of visitors. About two o'clock the boats having taken up their position, and everything being in readiness, the signal was given by J. Williams Esq., for starting, when their sails gracefully bent to the wind, and away they flew like fairies over the tranquil bosom of the deep. For the prizes for skiff-rigged boats, there were entered the John, belonging to Samuel Rimley; the Osprey, to Thomas Adams; the Severn, to James Fisher; and the Angelina to John Brooks. The Severn, previous to starting, was the favourite, and she took the lead, closely followed by the John, Osprey, and Angelina, in which position they rounded the light ship, when the John had gained considerably on the Severn, and was close upon her stern, with the Osprey and Angelina near at hand. The Severn rounded the ship in 31 minutes, the John 33½ minutes, the Osprey 34½ minutes, and the Angelina 36½ minutes. At this point the race became most exciting, and every expedient was resorted to to accelerate the speed of the boats, the Osprey for a considerable distance being, to use a sporting phrase, neck-and-neck with the John, and in all probability would have won the first prize had she not, in her eagerness to head the John, by gaining the assistance of the tide run into shallow water, and caught the ground. From this she speedily extricated herself, but to find she had lost the best prize, the Severn beating the John by five minutes. The following is the order in which they arrived, and the amount of the prizes:—1st, Severn, £3; 2nd, John, £2; 3rd, Osprey, £1; and 4th, Angelina, 10s.

The second race was for spritsail boats, for which the following started:—Fidelity, belonging to John Wellington; Caroline, to Joseph Hunt; British Queen, to John Bailey; and Elizabeth, to John Bound. The Caroline took the lead, followed by the Elizabeth, British Queen, and Fidelity last. When about halfway to the light-ship the Fidelity passed the Elizabeth, and the contest became very animated. All used their best endeavours to round the ship first, but they might be said to have rounded her altogether, so near akin were the sailing qualities of the respective boats, and they came in in the following order:—Caroline, 1st; Fidelity, 2nd; Elizabeth, 3rd; and British Queen, 4th.

A rowing match succeeded to the above, between the following boats:—Queen Mab, belonging to Peter Vowles; Ariel, to R. Westley; Cricket, to Joseph Knowles; and the Shrew, to Richard Bound. This race afforded some excellent sport. At starting Queen Mab took the lead, the others following in the order named above, and the race was won easily by the former. The prizes were—for the first boat, £1; 2nd ditto, 15s.; 3rd ditto, 10s.

In addition to the regatta, there was a small but very choice collection of greenhouse and hothouse plants, and an exhibition of cottagers' garden produce, held under a marquee, in the Copse-road field; the entrance to which was very tastefully decorated with evergreens and floral devices, as was also the interior. Sir A. H. Elton had a very beautiful display of verbenas, petunias, and other plants, cut verbenas and hollyhocks. Two floral devices also were sent from Clevedon Court, which, for the blending of colors and arrangement of the flowers, were much admired. C. W. Finzell, Esq., had a charming collection of greenhouse plants, and his fuchsias were truly magnificent. Messrs. Garaway and Mayes had a collection of verbenas, dahlias, hollyhocks, fuchsias, calceolarias, lobelia, fen de roy, humen elegans, arancaria excelsa (Norfolk Island pine), lillium, lancifolium album, speciosum, and a collection of pinuses. Dr. Shipton had some very superior vegetable marrows, and the produce of the cottagers, A. Cople, G. Lee, E. Gurney, W. Carey, T. Moore, (Yutton), Jas. Windsor, and A. Pritchard, was very commendable.

The Weston Hanoverian band was in attendance, and played, during the day, several pieces of music, in a very superior style.

A variety of other entertainments were provided for the amusement of the public, concluding with a brilliant display of fireworks by Professor Barn, of the Clifton Zoological Gardens, the principal feature of which was a representation of the bombardment of Odessa.

WINDERMERE YACHT CLUB.

The yacht-race for the handsome silver cup, value £50, presented by F. D. P. Astley, Esq., of Fell Foot, took place on Thursday last. The day was beautifully fine, but the wind was irregular, being at times almost calm, and at others blowing in strong breezes. The starting-point was Cockshot, a little below the ferry, and the course was down the lake to Fell Foot, and back, and down again, a distance of altogether about twenty miles. There were fourteen boats started, and the coming-in was as follows:—

Mr. Dixon's, of the Ridding, Lily 1
Mr. Liddlestale's, of Liverpool, Edith 2

The others were all well up. The Lily was the winner last year, and has thus won the laurel two years successively. After the sailing match, a splendid lunch was given at Fell Foot, by F. D. P. Astley, Esq., to a large party of friends. Amongst the company present were—Gny Gisborne, Esq., and Hon. Mrs. Gisborne; Miss Jones, and Master Percy Jones, daughter and son of Brigadier-General Jones, and brother and sister of Mrs. Astley, of Fell Foot, and all the gentry in the surrounding neighbourhood.

STARCROSS AND EXE REGATTA.

The annual regatta took place at Starcross. The weather was favourable. The town of Starcross was all life and bustle. Arches, adorned with evergreens, had been erected—triumphal arches, of course—intended, perhaps, to mark the temporary triumph of pleasure over business considerations. Flags gaily floated, and the loyalty of the place was suitably shown by a numerous display of national banners. Ample sources of merriment were provided. Punch and Judy, actuated, like all other public characters, by a wish to promote the public good, had taken care not to allow so favourable an opportunity of furthering that object to pass by unimproved. Merry Andrews performed their best feats, and made their best jokes; and the mountebank family in general were well represented, and received that patronage which it was their earnest endeavour, by strict attention to all on-lookers, and easy charges, to suit all customers, to merit.

The aquatic sports commenced at about half-past two o'clock, and were admirably kept up. The number of entries was larger than usual, and the boat racing was extremely good. The contest for the silver cup (for amateurs) excited much interest, and for some time there was a close run. The Amateur was successful, and was loudly cheered on the completion of the race.

In the evening donkey racing, and other amusements, were carried on.

The Marine Band, from Plymouth, was in attendance, by kind permission of Col. Coryton; and the excellent music formed one of the principal sources of gratification.

The following is a list of the races:—

The Devon and Exe Silver Cup, to be sailed for by yachts not exceeding twenty-eight feet, was won by the Lily of the Valley (Shears), beating the Romata (Carnell), and Julia (Moss).

The Steward's Purse, to be sailed for by boats not exceeding eighteen feet keel, was won by Vision (Mitchell), beating E. L. (Topman), and Dozcod (Perham).

The Ladies' Cup, to be rowed for by amateurs, was won by the Amateur (Exeter Amateur Boat Club), beating the Fly (Exeter Fly Boat Club), and Undine (Turner). The Nymph (Mackenzie) also commenced this race, but was quickly distanced.

The Exchequer Cup, to be rowed for by two-oared watermen's boats. Three to run or no race. First boat, £2. 10s.; 2nd, £1. 10s.; 3rd, £1; fourth to save the entrance. Won by the Fairy, beating Eliza and Lucy.

The Starcross Purse to be rowed for by four-oared boats not kept for pleasure, and not exceeding twenty-seven feet keel. Three to run or no race. First boat, £3. 10s.; 2nd, £1. 10s.; 3rd, to save the entrance. Waft, 1; Saucy Jack, 2; Mystery, 3.

Pair of Silver Sculls, to be rowed for by amateurs in two-oared boats, kept exclusively for pleasure. Fanny, 1; Vision, 2; Probe, 3; Defence, 4.

The model race for a silver anchor was awarded to Mr. Matthews, of Exmouth.

TEIGNMOUTH REGATTA.

This very fashionable and delightful watering place was the scene on "regatta day" of the greatest gaiety, which, owing to the favourableness of the weather, a beautiful breeze blowing, with a bright sunshine, could not but induce a great number of persons to seek amusement. The town presented a very cheerful appearance, flags flying from a great number of houses, and the Den—the grand rendezvous of the day—being decorated its entire length with the flags of every European nation, among which we particularly noticed the British ensign floating proudly above the Russian eagle—its proper position. The fine band of the Royal Marines was present. Altogether we doubt much whether Teignmouth ever witnessed a more successful regatta. The following is a list of the races:—

A prize of twenty guineas, in money, for yachts of any rig, fifteen tons and upwards, the property of a member of a yacht club. Phantom, T. Lane Esq., twenty-five tons, beating Annie, S. Triscott, Esq., twenty-two tons; Coquette, — Holdsworth, Esq.—won easily.

A prize of eight guineas, for pleasure boats belonging to the port of Teignmouth, not exceeding twenty tons, was won by Ithiel, Wm. Stiggins, 13 tons, beating Ruby, Parmenas Thomas, twelve tons, and Mary, Wm. Hearne, ten tons. This race was looked forward to with much anxiety, inasmuch as the owner of the winner, W. Stiggins, was one of the unfortunate pilots who was upset and nearly lost his life on the bar some few years since, and this vessel was raised for him by subscription; but her sailing qualities had never but once before been tested, as we understood, in a race, and the Ruby was the favourite; but it was very soon discovered she had no chance, and the race was won easily.

A piece of plate, value five guineas, the gift of the ladies of Teignmouth for four-oared boats not exceeding thirty-four feet, to be rowed by amateurs, was won by the Amateur, Mitchel, Exeter, E.A.B.C., thirty-two feet; beating the Sylph, Moss, Exeter, thirty-two feet; Undine, Turner, E.B.C., thirty-two feet; and the Flirt, Pratt and Reed, thirty feet. This was a most spirited and exciting race, the boats keeping well together throughout, and had not the Undine taken the wrong side of the mark boat in rounding, it is more than probable the above figures might have been transposed.

A prize of five sovereigns for four-oared boats not thirty-four feet, was won by the Amateur, E.A.B.C., beating the Flirt, Pratt, and Reed; and the Sylph, W. Elms. A very excellent race.

A prize of four sovereigns for four-oared boats not exceeding twenty-eight feet, was not run for, owing to a want of entries, which the committee very much regretted, as they had money in hand.

A prize of fifty shillings for two-oared boats, was won by The Sisters, Wakeham, Shaldon; beating Brightside, Gasking, Babbicombe; and The Pet, Nias, Torquay. Sarah Ann and Frolic also started. The Sisters won by several lengths.

A Sculling Match for one sovereign, won by Falcon, Bickford, Teignmouth; beating The Frolic, Carnal, Torquay.

A Punt Chase, for a sovereign, concluded the aquatic sports, which excited some fun, as the punt being soon caught, the rower contrived to get sufficiently near shore as to jump on land, and evade being captured also, which is a sine qua non of this race, and we left him endeavouring to elude his pursuers amidst the throng of spectators.

TOPSHAM REGATTA.

The Topsham and Exe Regatta took place on Wednesday week. The weather during part of the day was fine, but in the evening there were frequent showers. The number of visitors was not so great as on former occasions; but the racing went off capitally. Triumphal arches were erected in various parts of the town, and the Topsham and other bands played during the day. The racing commenced in the afternoon, and did not conclude till dark.

First Class Sailing Yachts. Prize of £6. For this prize there were four entries.

Pamella Towning,
Lily of the Valley Shears,
Julia Moss,
N. L. Topman.

The following was the order in which the boats returned:—

Julia,
Lily, Pamella.

Second Class Yachts. Prize of £1. 7s. 6d. The following entries were made for this race:—

Vision H. Mitchell,
Dry Cod Maypole,
Woolen Shoe Bradford.

This prize was won by the Vision.

Third Class Yachts. Prize of £3. 10s. The following were the entries:—

The Arab W. Pyne,
William and Charlotte Pain,
Pett Thos. Row,
Yamphie Shears,
Two Brothers Litton.

These returned in the following order:—

Vampire,
Two Brothers, Arab,
Pett.

The Ladies' Cup, value 6 gs. For this prize three four-oared boats started:—

The Undine,
The Amateur,
The Fly.

The result was objected to by the crew of the Undine, and it awaits the determination of the committee.

Prize for Four-oared Fishing Boats, value £3. The following boats started:—

The Lionel Wamell,
The Eliza Pym,
The Speculator Luxon.

This was decided in the following order:—

1. The Eliza,
2. The Lionel.

Prize for Two-oared Fishing Boats, £1. 15s. The following entries were made:—

Algee and Lucy Tront,
Fly G. Wamell,
Reward Satalers,
Frolic Pym,
Fairy Litton.

The boats returned in the following order:—

Fairy,
Reward,
Fly, Frolic.

The proceedings were wound up by a variety of rural sports, and by dancing on the bowling-green, which was patronised to a considerable extent.

FALMOUTH ROYAL REGATTA.

This regatta took place in August. The pilot boats were summoned at 10.28 by the usual signal (a pilot Jack) from the starting vessel, and a gun, to take their stations at the buoys, which were drawn for in the usual manner, and in a short period twelve beautiful cutters, of which the port has good reason to be proud, appeared ready to take up their stations; but it was with much difficulty this could be done, owing to a timber vessel belonging to the port, named the Peronia, Capt. Aitkin, in ballast, having taken up a position immediately in the way, and more particularly so in that of the most important and largest class, viz., the before mentioned pilot cutters. The master was requested in the politest manner to remove his vessel for a short time, and any expense which might thereby be incurred the committee would pay; but notwithstanding the majority of the owners (some of whom were on board the starting vessel) were anxious it should be done, he distinctly refused, to the great annoyance both of the competitors and of the spectators, and there she remained in the way of every one for the whole of the day. One pilot boat (No. 6), in consequence of this unnecessary obstruction thus placed in the way, came in contact with another vessel at anchor, and necessarily lost much time in getting away. Notwithstanding this serious impediment, by the great exertions of the managing committee, at 11.26 the starting gun was fired, and the start was such as to show every one that the parties having charge of these beautiful vessels perfectly understood their work. The course selected (No. 2) was from the buoys round a boat moored south-east of the lighthouse, thence round a boat off Penzance Point, leaving both on the starboard hand, round a boat in the Cross Channel, and then round a starting vessel, leaving these marks on the port hand. Twice round the course. The wind continued light, and on the first round the boats came in the following order:—

No.	Yacht	Captain	h. m. s.
7	Victoria	Elias Chard	4 15 0
1	Harriet	N. Vincent	4 37 0
4	Gen	John Chard	4 58 10

It was quite impossible, from the state of the weather, for the boats to go a second round, and the committee decided to award them as follows:—The three above named, £3 each; and the following boats, viz., the Vic, Alarm, Water Nymph, Vincent, Dan, and Wasp, not having rounded the starting vessel, but having done their best endeavours to do so, to receive 30s. each. The others, viz., Perseverance, Dash, and N. Jenkins, not having attempted to go round the course, were excluded, for further consideration.

At 12.52 the signal was made, and the gun fired for the pleasure boats not exceeding eight tons to take their stations, and the following beautiful craft came to the buoys:—

Frolic R. A. Mangin, Esq. Falmouth.
Cygnets J. Chudlers, Esq. Falmouth.
Blue Eyed Maid T. Beauchamp, Esq. Dartmouth.
British Queen F. Williams, Esq. Falmouth.

Much interest was excited about this race, but the unfortunate state of the weather prevented its being done in such a style as was anticipated from four such splendid boats. They arrived as follows:—

	1st round.	2nd round.
Frolic	3 40 0	7 55 0 silver silver.
Cygnets	3 44 5	7 55 18 silver cup.
Blue Eyed Maid	3 27 0	gave in, being after eight
British Queen	3 35 0	o'clock.

The next was for an old class (the 16), a favourite class from the number of entries and the great competition which have always prevailed in it. They returned as follows:—

	h. m. s.
William, of Truro, J. Bryant	7 55 0 silver cup.
Active, of Truro, S. Wade	7 55 10 ditto, seventh prize
Primrose, of Falmouth, J. Blee	7 56 0 won by Mr. Wade.
Coro, of Truro, G. Beer	7 58 0

The two first were therefore awarded the prizes. The other boats entered were the Breeze and Susan, but were after time. The Experiment had been entered, but met with an accident two days before the regatta. The Primrose was a newly-constructed boat, and smaller than the others, measuring only thirteen feet six inches, but in the first round was the leading boat.

At 1.15 the signal was made for the eighteen-foot pleasure boats, and when the gun was fired the following boats started:—

Jean, Falmouth, H. Trethowan.
Ida, Truro, W. H. Chellow.
Stormy Petrel, Falmouth, J. A. Michell.

This race not being concluded in time, the committee decided on their sailing again on the 31st.

In the regular order the signal was made for the 15 feet 6 inch lug-sail punts to take their stations; and at 2.5 the starting gun was fired. Seven boats started, and they came in the following order:—

Olds and Fids, of Falmouth, S. Colenzo	2 0 0
Hornet, of Falmouth, J. Mayn	1 10 0
Lilly of Falmouth, W. Roberts	1 0 0
Mystery, of Falmouth, J. Somers	0 15 0
Rosebud of Falmouth J. Trautman	0 10 0

The next class was the market and oyster boats, and at 2.45 the gun was fired for their start. They returned as follows:—

	h.	m.	s.
Augusta, 22 feet of Falmouth, R. Richards ..	7	50	0
Win Green, 25 tons, St. Mawes, Wm. Green ..	7	55	30

Clara, 25 feet, Falmouth, S. Dowie ..	7	59	0

Prior to starting, many objections were made to the William Green being allowed to compete with the other boats, most of whom were not more feet in length than she was tonnage. She was also a decked vessel, and the others open boats; but the committee not anticipating that such a craft would be entered, the necessary precautions to exclude her had not been taken, and she was unavoidably allowed to run; but the committee expressed their great surprise that the owner, who has been for many years connected with boat and yacht racing, should have taken the advantage of entering such a craft against the boats, and we trust they will take especial care to prevent the recurrence of a similar circumstance.

In the rowing matches, True Blue beat Circe and Josephine, and Argus beat Ondine and Camilla. In the gig and punt race the gig was victorious. The company was more numerous than for years past, and Wm. Currie, Esq., was chairman of the committee, with W. H. Miller, Esq., as honorary secretary.

VIRGINIA (CO. CAVAN) REGATTA.—THURSDAY, August 17.

Once a year the quiet little town of Virginia is frightened from its usual propriety, and the placid waters of Lough Ramor disturbed by the unusual number of strange craft that are seen skimming along its surface, and shooting through the numerous green islands that stud its bosom. The "Regatta day" is looked forward to by all sorts of people with a vast deal of expectation; and certainly, on Thursday week, we can hardly think that any of them were disappointed. So far as a glorious day, and a bright summer's sun shining down upon as sweet a spot as this green isle contains, could give enjoyment—there was as much as any reasonable mortal could sigh for. Combined with which there was a very pretty assemblage of the fair sex, with beauty enough about them to "Shake the saintship of an anchorite."

So that, on the whole, even those accustomed to larger gatherings of the human crowd, and a more splendid bill of fare than the day's proceedings afforded, might find enjoyment enough to lure them to the shores of Lough Ramor.

The racing is acknowledged by all to have occasioned unparalleled interest. Five events were announced to have come off, and in every respect, we are happy to add, the terms of the programme were strictly adhered to. A grand four-oared race, for the silver vase presented by Lord Beective, inaugurated a new epoch in the racing at Virginia, and consequently occasioned much excitement amongst the fashionable assemblage present. The competing boats were the Stella, pulled by Messrs. Kennedy, Shaw, and others of the Brunswick Club; the Umbra, manned by Messrs. Keough, Duff, and Fitzgerald, of the University Club; and the Shannon, which bore a right trusty crew in the persons of her owners, the Messrs. Smyth, of Portlister Castle. The start took place precisely at four o'clock, and the three boats got off well together, and maintained their respective positions at a steady pace as far as the third flag. At this point the University boat began to show slightly in advance, and notwithstanding every effort on the part of her antagonist, continued to keep the advantage to which her splendid qualities pre-eminently entitled her. A beautiful contest then lay between the Shannon and the Stella—the former having the advantage until they neared the winning-post, when a few gallant strokes brought the Stella ahead, and ultimately placed her second in the lists. The other events resulted as under:—

The Virginia Challenge Cup, value 30 sovs, for two-oared boats, pulled by gentlemen.

Lord Beective's Bunty	1
Mr. Smyth's Blue Bell	2
Lord Beective's Tartar	3

The Tuen Prince, for two-oared boats, pulled by watermen.

Lord Beective's Bunty	2

Cavanahoe Sweepstakes, for two-oared boats, pulled by gentlemen.

Mr. Buckley's Kiplie	1
Mr. Smyth's Blue Bell	2

Scurry Sculling Stakes.—This race was won, after an amusing and closely contested race, by Mr. Henry.

A ball and supper, comprising the life of the country, afterwards took place at the Headford Arias.

BANGOR (CO. DOWN) REGATTA.—TUESDAY, August 15.

On the above date, the postponed time-race from the regatta on the 2nd August, came off. Out of seven boats that accepted, but five put in an appearance—namely, Cloud, Bloomer, Lightning, of Holywood, Jenny, and Rob Roy, of Bangor. The prizes were:—First boat, £3; second, £1. 10s.; third, 10s. The course was from Bangor Quay-end, round a flag-boat at Ballyholme, thence round one at Castle Dobbs, round a buoy in Bangor Bay, going a second time over the course—the entire distance being about twenty miles, and winning between a flag-boat and the Quay-end. The weather was of the most variable description, and the wind about west. At twenty-five minutes past two o'clock, a beautiful start was effected, all the boats going off together, Cloud leading, closely followed by the Jenny, and other boats keeping well up, and all passing the flag-boat in the following order:—

Starting.	Winning.	Length of keel.
n. m.	n. m.
Cloud	2 52	27 feet.
Jenny	2 54	ditto.
Bloomer	3 3	15 feet.
Rob Roy	3 0	15 ditto.
Lightning	3 1	20 feet.

The Lightning gave up early in the race. This is the second time this season that Bangor boats have taken the first prizes from their Holywood competitors. The first prize in this race was won by Mr. Thompson's Jenny; second, by Mr. Kennedy's Cloud; third, by Mr. McCutcheon's Bloomer; both of Holywood. It may be here remarked, that the great length of time occupied by the race was attributed to the fact of the boats having been becalmed for a considerable period on the County Antrim side of the Lough.

Russian Prizes.—In consequence of a communication from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the Commissioners of Customs have caused to be transmitted to the collectors and comptrollers, and other principal officers at the several ports throughout the kingdom, for their information, a description of a Russian schooner-yacht, the Rogneda, which vessel is stated to have been sold under very suspicious circumstances, and is now called the Colibri.

ROYAL BELGIAN REGATTA.

ANTWERP, Aug. 23 and 24.

Yachts of all nations raced for the Duke of Brabant's Cup. Course, 33 miles. Wind, S.W. The start took place at 10h. 20m. 10s.

Name.	Tons.	G. Coops.	Owners
Thought	28	1	1
Avalon	35	2	2
Bonita	23	3	3
Fawn	25	4	4
Victorie	18	5	5
Sperver	18	6	6
Petrel	16	7	7

Mr. Insinger's Mermis, 53 tons, R.A.C., though entered, did not arrive in time to race. The Avalon received the prize, owing to the Thought, which reached the goal at 2h. 20m. 0s., not being able to produce her register. The entrance money was handed over to Bonita as a second prize. Avalon was only four minutes astern of Thought.

A CHALLENGE TO THE THOUGHT.

MR. EDITOR.—When a yachtsman stoops to the use of language, such as the Editor of Bells Life finds it—(as you would)—imprudent to print, the less that is said in reply the better. I shall therefore content myself with stating the fact that the yacht Thought, according to the measurement adopted by the R.T.Y.C., is twenty-eight tons, and by that of the London Club, thirty-one tons. With respect to her sailing qualities, as compared with those of the Phantom, I am perfectly willing to give them the fairest trial, and for that purpose I propose that the two vessels should sail five matches, all of them in the Thames, or two of them in Southampton waters, each match to be for £50 a side. There is no doubt that both yachts are at present in their best possible trim, and therefore ready to sail on the shortest notice; so that I feel no hesitation in saying that should this proposal not be accepted to within three weeks, I shall consider the Phantom at liberty, and give her her rest for the winter.—Yours, &c., S. LANE.

Grove-place, Tottenham, Aug. 30, 1851.

[We have been informed that the sailing-master of the Thought is letting his tongue travel too fast about the Phantom; this should not be. We could say more, but we "cut it in half" of which the above is but the first portion.—Ed.]

RETURN OF THE BALTIC MILITARY EXPEDITION.

(By International Telegraph Company's Line, via the Hague.)

DANTZIC, Thursday.—General Baraguay d'illiers, commander-in-chief of the French expeditionary troops in the Baltic, with General Niel, of the Engineers, arrived here last night in the Fulton. They have proceeded direct to Paris overland. The landing troops are also embarked, and will return at once to France.

THE EXPEDITION TO THE CRIMEA.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

PARIS, Friday.

Letters from Constantinople of the 30th of August announce that Prince Napoleon and the Duke of Cambridge, together with the Rifles and several other regiments, have gone up to Varna from Constantinople.

Lord Raglan was to embark at Varna in the Caradoc on the 2nd of September, and the expedition to rendezvous at Baltschik.

Letters from Varna of the 29th state that the Guards, and the 28th, 42nd, 44th, 73rd, and 93d Regiments, had already embarked, and that the Light Division was under orders to embark.

A great portion of the French force was to embark at Bourgas and Baltschik.

Lord Cardigan's division was also under orders to embark at Varna.

General Sir John Burgoyne had arrived. The expedition is composed of 25,000 English, 20,000 French, and 20,000 Turks.

The troops are described as animated with great enthusiasm.

The cholera had almost entirely disappeared.

RETREAT OF THE RUSSIANS IN ASIA.

Schamyl, with 20,000 Circassians, has made an incursion into Georgia, defeated the Russians, and carried off some important hostages, including forty ladies.

Count Behtoff has blown up the fortresses of Bayazid, and evacuated the city. His army is falling back on Erivan.

Several Russian agents have been seized at Damascus, for exciting rebellion against the Porte.

HORRIBLE MURDER OF A MAN BY HIS WIFE AND SON.

One of the most diabolical cases of murder that have ever disgraced the annals of this country, has been just committed at Trowbridge. The facts of the case are, unhappily, too convincing to admit of the slightest doubt; for, extraordinary to relate, the murder was actually committed in the presence of several spectators. The name of the murdered man was Daniel Napper, and on the Wednesday, his son, James Napper, quarrelled with another brother, who had lately returned from transportation. The father interfered to separate them, and incurred the displeasure of his son James by striking him. On the Thursday evening they were all drinking together at the Bear Inn, when a second altercation took place. James Napper struck his father, knocked him down, and kicked him severely. The wife then fell upon her husband, taking hold of him by the hair and repeatedly striking his head on the ground, swearing she would murder him. They all three then left the Bear Inn and went towards home. What occurred after they left is narrated by John Mayell, the landlord, who says that while he was standing at the door of his house he heard some quarrelling going on, and saw the deceased knocked down by his son, who struck him a blow with his fist. While the deceased was on the ground, his son knelt upon him and struck him again several times; he then knocked him severely in his ribs and side, the wife standing by at the time and offering him every encouragement. The son next took his father by the shoulders, raised him up to a sitting posture, and then dashed him violently to the ground, his head coming in contact with the hard road. The deceased was then quite insensible. All this took place in so short a space of time, that the witness said he had no opportunity to interfere. The son came into the taproom some time afterwards, when he did not appear to be intoxicated. Witness remonstrated with him on his conduct, but he only replied that, "It served the old—right," and that if he was not dead already, he would not care about subjecting him to similar treatment again. This statement is corroborated by James Brown, a clothworker, who says he was passing when he saw the deceased on the ground, and saw his wife catch hold of him by the hair and thump his head on the ground, saying "By G—, I'll murder thee!" The deceased was then in a state of insensibility, and the son afterwards took him by the shoulders, and threw him backwards on the ground with all his might. Witness lifted the deceased on his knee, but the son still attempted to strike him, and said he would give any one who took his part "a—good hiding." The wife and son then left, but, after they had gone a short distance, turned round and said, if the deceased came home that night they would "finish him off." The deceased, however, was shortly afterwards taken to his house, where he soon died. Another person, named William Pearce, a mason, also deposed to the same facts. These circumstances having come before the coroner, he made a preliminary inquiry, which has resulted in his committing the son and the wife of the deceased to Deverges goal. The history of the Napper family is very remarkable. The deceased was transported when a youth for theft; and in the year 1839 was tried for the murder of a common pedlar, named William Bishop. He escaped conviction owing to an informality in the indictment. Dennis Napper, another son, has just returned from transportation. The inquiry before the coroner has been adjourned.

THE DUKE OF ATHOL'S GOLD-DIGGINGS.—During the last week gold has been found in the north of Glenbreghnan, Kilmichael, on the property of his grace the Duke of Athol; and has also been found to the north of the Cairnwell, on the property of James Farquharson, Esq., of Invercauld. In both places the precious metal is found embedded in the detached pieces of rock which there abound. From an analysis made, that which has been found near the Cairnwell is as pure as any got in Australia. The existence of gold in these quarters was discovered by a Mr. Lowden, a gentleman lately returned from Australia, where he had been resident for upwards of twelve years, and in the immediate vicinity of gold-diggings.

FATAL FIRE IN SACKVILLE-STREET, PICCADILLY.—On Thursday morning, between the hours of one and two o'clock, a fire broke out at Miss Elizabeth Morton's lodging-house, No. 19, Sackville-street, Piccadilly. The inmates were aroused by the shrieks for help issuing from the back-room on the ground floor. On entering it they found Miss E. Morton wrapped in fire. An alarm was immediately raised, when the police on duty were despatched for the engines, which promptly arrived from King-street, Chandos-street, and Wells-street, followed by the parish engines. In the meantime, Miss Morton was extricated from her frightful situation, and the flames extinguished. Every assistance was afforded by some medical men residing in the house, but such were the extensive injuries she received that she has since expired. The fire was caused by a candle setting fire to the furniture while reading in bed.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR.—Warwick, favoured by glorious weather, and a very large attendance, has been productive of capital sport, though, considering the numerous entries, the fields were somewhat of the smallest. Speculation, too, has been a little more brisk; and, though no great changes were effected, the remembrance of the near approach of Doncaster was kept alive, and the betting on the Leger acquired a more spirited tone.

For the great race of the week—the Leamington Stakes—six out of the ten horses I named were starters, in an attenuated field of nine, when, at the time, some fourteen or fifteen were expected to see the post. My remarks were wound up in these words: "But it strikes me that the issue will rest between Badbee and Lurley." There I should have stopped, but I added—"And I have a strong fancy that the latter will prove the winner." My fancy was, however, demolished by the reality of a length and a half; but, be that as it may, I sent you first and third. Lurley's name was omitted, because I had a keen recollection of his running for the Brighton Stakes, though I suppose we must now charitably assume that the sea breeze did not agree with the son of Lamproot and Burlesque. This case of swerving against another horse, coming so close upon the Cornish affair at York, is likely to occasion an unpleasant feeling, and ought to prove a warning to the younger jockeys; let us trust, however, that it will be the last mishap of the season. In the other races, my selections were generally fated to run second; my choice, Rose, the worst favourite, too, of the lot, all but pulled me through for the Borough Handicap, Hanover contriving to beat her by a head.

As the attention of all trifles will now be directed towards Doncaster, I have a word or two to say with respect to the St. Leger. On the 28th of July I wrote this line, "Dervish won't do for the Seller." Boardo has now not only taken his place, but excels him in the estimation of some of the cognoscenti. But, admitting that the stable made one mistake, why should it be proof against another? Despite of trials and the betting, I must own that I have but little faith in the defeated hero of the 2,000 Guineas, who then started with the odds on him. Between two stools, according to the old adage, a man is like to come to the ground; but, here there are three; for, in addition to Acrobat, who maintains his ground at 7 or 8 to 1, Dervish has still supporters at a long price. A short time will prove who's right and who's wrong; but of this be assured, the settling will be pretty heavy. Many imagine that, owing to the moderate pretensions of the horses engaged, the field will be a large one, but I am not of the number. To my notion, eight or nine will be the extent of those found at the post on Wednesday next. Let him but start, and my voice must be for Acronar, with Ivan or Midsummer for second, while The Trapper and the crack dispute the honours for third place. Autocrat has come with something like a rush, but, though Mr. Major may have worked wonders with him, I fancy that should the present dry weather continue, the ground will be all against him.

Rabgill is likely to become an immense pot for the Great Yorkshire Handicap, and, from his running with Ratajatin in the Lotherian Handicap, must be a dangerous customer. The most formidable opponents to success may be Calamus, Typee, and the Inquisitor.

It is my intention to run through the different items set down for decision on the splendid race-course at Doncaster during its four days' gathering, and you will receive such addition to my letter in time for your Saturday's edition, when I may, perhaps, claim the privilege of amending the opinions I have herein hurriedly expressed.—Yours,
Thursday, Sept. 7, 1854. TOBY PEEVES.

MANCHESTER.—FRIDAY.

The business transacted here to-day was very limited, most of our leading speculators having attended at Lincoln. For the Leamington Stakes the only horses were Baalbec, Ilaco, and Lurley.

Bolardo, Trapper, and Hannibal, were each backed for trifling amounts for the St. Leger.

The transactions on the Cesarewitch, or Derby, will hardly justify a quotation.

Leamington Stakes.
7 to 1 agst Baalbec (t) 10 to 1 agst Lurley (t)
5 to 1 — Ilaco (t) 15 to 1 — Kidnapper (t)

St. Leger.
2 to 1 agst Bolardo (t & off) 12 to 1 agst Midsummer (t)

LINCOLN RACES.—THURSDAY, August 31.

The Broomfield Stakes of 5 sovs each, with 25 added. For all ages. One mile, 7 subs.

Mr. Ewbank's b c Snowdon Dunhill, by Lago, 4 yrs, 9st 5lb, G. Oates 1

Mr. J. Osborne's b c Cherry Brandy, 2 yrs, 6st 4lb, Carroll 2

Mr. Norton's b c Courtenay, 2 yrs, 6st 4lb, Bates 3

Mr. Green's c Talester, 3 yrs, 8st 4lb, M'Lean 4

Mr. Wood's b c Falcun, 3 yrs, 8st 4lb, Clement 5

Mr. Cotton's b c Knight of the Village, 2 yrs, 6st 4lb, Harrison 6

Betting—6 to 4 agst Courtenay, 2 to 1 agst Cherry Brandy, and 4 to 1 agst Snowdon Dunhill. Cherry Brandy showed in advance for about one hundred yards, when Tadenster took up the running, and, with Cherry Brandy and Courtenay well laid up, carried it on to the distance, where he dropped off, and left Cherry Brandy in front, with Courtenay and Snowdon Dunhill in close attendance. The heavy weight passed Courtenay half up the distance, reached Cherry Brandy in the last three strides, and won on the post by a head. A bad third. The others beaten off.

The Lancashire Handicap Stakes of 10 sovs each, 1 ft, and only 3 if declared, &c, with 100 added. Two miles. 38 subs, 21 of whom declared.

Mr. Barton's b k f Jetty Treffz, by Melbourne, 3 yrs, 5st 4lb, Witherington 1

ROYAL CONGRESS AT BOULOGNE.

The Prince Consort steamer to Folkestone has entered Boulogne harbour with the horses and servants of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and several of the Guards with their horses. The port is thronged with French and English. The Customs and Chamber of commerce make no charges for landing the horses, and all the usual rules and restrictions are dispensed with.

Boulogne has become the residence for a month of the Emperor, who takes personal command of the army of the north during the period of the great manœuvres. The King of the Belgians, the King of Portugal, H.R.H. Prince Albert, a Prussian envoy, statesmen, and general officers from all parts of Europe, are coming to partake the hospitality of the Emperor of the French, and will, in fact, make Boulogne the seat of a kind of congress of the Western Powers. His Majesty having left Paris at forty minutes past two o'clock on Thursday afternoon, arrived at Boulogne at eight in the evening.

(From the Boulogne News Times.)

We understand that Prince Albert arrives here on the 4th of September. The British Ambassador to France has taken apartments at the Hôtel Pavillon Imperial; Soliman Pacha and his son, Iskander Bey, have also taken apartments; many English officers and nobles have done the same. Lord Hardinge, General Wetherell, and a brilliant staff will be present. Some City aldermen and councillors will display their horsemanship on the field-days. That his Majesty the Emperor intends to cement the happy feeling now existing between the two countries is evident. The King of the Belgians proceeds by water from Ostend to Calais, and from that town posts to the review ground. The Prince de Chimay attends his Majesty. At present in Boulogne, is the Earl of Dundonald, who looks as hearty and robust, as vigorous in mind and body, as most men at forty-five.

THE BALTIC.

DANTZIC, Friday.

On Sunday, the 16th August, General Baraguay d'Hilliers and Vice-Admiral Napier went up to Hango. In their sight the Russians blew up the fortifications, and retreated to Aho, where there are 15,000 troops.

Abo will be attacked by the Allies.

The Medin, Scott; Gorgon, Cracott; Driver, Hobart; and Lightning, Sullivan, engaged eighteen Russian gun-boats, carrying about fifty men each, and four steamers, at Abo, on the 18th of August, without loss.

Admiral Martin, with a small squadron, is gone up the Gulf of Bothnia.

The French have not yet left Bomarsund. General Baraguay d'Hilliers, General Jones, and Admiral Parseval-Descheunes, have had a look into Helsingfors. The passage to Abo is found to be extremely narrow. The French have lost 600 men by cholera. Arrivals from Aland are, therefore, subject to quarantine in Sweden.

The fort of Bomarsund has been destroyed.

Nineteen Russian prisoners are gone to Helsingfors to be exchanged for men belonging to the Valorous.

THE EXPEDITION TO THE CRIMEA.

VIENNA, Sept. 1.

The expedition against the Crimea is about being carried into effect. Marshal de St. Arnaud, the Commander-in-Chief, had returned from Constantinople, and the movement was to take place on the 2nd of September.

THE PRINCIPALITIES.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 21.

The Turkish army is moving hence, in order to operate upon Galatz and Ibraïl.

THE AUSTRIANS ADVANCING.

According to advices dated the 23rd ult. the Austrian troops had advanced into Wallachia as far as Kimpoling, and a detachment of them was expected at Slatina on the 28th; so also upon the road leading direct to Bucharest the Imperial troops had reached Ursey, and they were positively to arrive at the Wallachian capital by the 5th of September, where a brilliant reception is being prepared for them.

VARNA, Aug. 24.

The total deaths among the English army of 34,000 men, up to August 14, had amounted to 433. The deaths among the French were much more numerous, but not at all so much so as has been represented.

THE ASSAULT AT BEULAH SPA.

On Thursday, Mr. Francis R. Newton was brought up from Hovsenonger-lane gaol, and his brother attended in discharge of his heavy recognisances, to be further examined, at Lambeth Police-court, on the charge of committing a murderous assault on the person of Mr. Stewart Ker, a gentleman residing at No. 56, Brompton-crescent, Brompton-square, at the Beulah Spa, Norwood, on Friday, the 4th of last month.

Mr. Parry the barrister, and Mr. Wootton appeared for the prosecution; and Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Depré for the defence.

Mr. Parry, addressing the Hon. G. C. Norton (who sat for Mr. Elliot), said he appeared on behalf of the prosecution, and begged to observe that he did not desire or did not intend to go into any of the particulars on that day, as the unfortunate gentleman who had been so seriously injured was unable to attend, nor was it possible for him for some time to be present to give his evidence. He (Mr. Parry) was, however, happy to say—happy on account of Mr. Ker himself, and happy also on account of the young gentlemen who were the defendants in this serious charge, and whose anxiety, as well as those of their friends, must have been very considerable for the last four weeks—that a favourable change had taken place in the hitherto serious state of Mr. Ker, and that there was now a hope that, if he continued to progress favourably, he would recover; but as he had before said, it would be some considerable time, under the most favourable circumstances, before he would be in a condition to attend and give his evidence. He (Mr. Parry) should merely read the certificate of the medical gentleman in attendance upon Mr. Ker, and leave the case, as regarded the future appearance of the defendants, in the hands of his worship. The learned gentleman, in conclusion, read the certificate he alluded to, of which the following is a copy:—

"August 30, 1851.

"We certify that we have visited Mr. Stewart Ker this day. His symptoms have assumed a more favourable character; and, should no untoward events arise, there is reasonable hope of his ultimate recovery.

(Signed)

HENRY CHARLES JOHNSON,
JOHN STANLEY CHRISTIAN.

Mr. Norton was happy to find that a favourable change had taken place, and that there was a reasonable hope of his recovery; and, as regarded the accused parties, he did not think he could legally receive bail for their appearance, at the present stage of the inquiry, beyond a week. Had the case been originally heard by him the question of bail would have been easily settled, as he certainly should not take bail; but acting for Mr. Elliott, and the gentleman appearing for the prosecution having no objection to the admittance of Mr. Francis Newton to bail as well as his brother, he should call on the former to put in bail—two sureties in £500 each, and himself in £1,000, and the latter, himself in £500, and two sureties in £250 each, to appear at this court on that day month.

ATTEMPTED MURDER AND SUICIDE.—LOVE AND JEALOUSY.—Some alarm was created on Friday evening in the neighbourhood of Walworth, in consequence of a rumour that the potman of the Duke of Suffolk Tavern, Brandon-street, Walworth, had murdered his fellow-servant, and afterwards committed suicide by hanging himself. On Saturday, having sufficiently recovered, he was brought before the Hon. G. C. Norton, at Lambeth Police Court, and remanded.

Our Letter-Bag.

THE SPUR.

Sir,—I am very sorry to be obliged to trouble you with some more of my remarks upon the use of the spur by ladies; but as a party very much interested in this question, I think the letter of "Anti-Humbug," requires more comment.

Your correspondent says: "We know spurs are worn by nearly all gentlemen in the hunting-field, on the race-course, in the park, and on the road,"—a fact, the truth of which I entirely deny. As I have never been in the park, I cannot answer for that; but I know that not nearly all gentlemen wear the spur on the road. But, supposing they do, it is, I believe, allowed that a lady's horse is subjected to a severe training than a gentleman's, and that a gentleman's horse might require a spur, which a lady's would not. I am sure the severity of my training—when neither whip nor spur were wanting—has rendered the spur unnecessary on the heel of any fair rider to punish obstinacy.

I admit, sir, that "nearly all"—and apply all—gentlemen wear the spur in the hunting-field; and I admit, too, that if ladies hear they must use the spur, far I am quite sure, from experience, that fear, if any, horses would not require more pain than that occasioned by the whip to enable them to carry their fair burthens through the intense fatigues of a long race. Of course, if ladies like it, they have quite a right to the (to them) amusement of the hunt; and, in that case, they will certainly require to wear, and use frequently, a long-roveled spur. But I believe this is a use of the spur which few ladies will find necessary; and I do not see the reason for inferring that because gentlemen use the spur in the field, ladies who do not hunt should use it in the road. But, sir, there is another reason why ladies should not use the spur, which does not apply to gentlemen, and that is the very reason brought by "Justin" in favour of their use of it; namely, that it is "administered under the friendly shelter of the habit." Ladies have no certain knowledge to what extent they are punishing their horse; and I know, from experience, that they frequently, in the excitement of a gallop on a weary steed, inflict very much more severe punishment than they intend. Several times, when my only excuse was intense fatigue, has my fair torturer unconsciously smothered her habit with my blood, flowing from the agonising wounds of her spur.

One more point of difference there is between the use of the spur by ladies and gentlemen, which appears to me conclusive against the use of it by the fair sex. A lady can only use her spur on one side of her horse, which, in many cases of obstinacy, must render it useless, and will cause the horse at all times, from the pain, or from the fear of pain, to go at an uneven pace, very unpleasant, I should think, to his mistress.

Then, sir, are my reasons for maintaining that the spur should not be used by ladies, and not because it is painful to the horse. Sad experience has taught me that it is no sound argument against the use of anything which ministers to the enjoyment of men or women that it causes us pain. "Anti-Humbug" seems to have compassion for carriage-horses; but, in his laudable and proper desire that nothing should prevent a lady's enjoyment, he seems to have no belief in—certainly no feeling for—our sufferings. And yet, sir—though I quite believe most ladies do not willingly inflict upon us more pain than is necessary for their enjoyment—it cannot be denied that the life of a lady's riding horse, especially one whose lot is cast at Brighton, is no very enjoyable one. Night after night are my limbs actually pained by excessive fatigue, for almost without any intermission throughout the day do I carry ladies. Again, sir, as "Justin" remarks, "all know how fond ladies are of galloping," a fondness which ladies almost invariably gratify. Without the least consideration for their horse's weary limbs, they force us along at a tremendous pace, up the steepest hills (of this they are particularly fond), and along the heaviest roads; and then, sir, even the very humane, whose feelings would not allow them to whip an obstinate animal, have a habit of constantly tugging at the bridle, thus keeping the mouth in a continual state of agony—or it is nothing short of it, as "Anti-Humbug" would soon discover—and of unremittingly loading us with their whips; and not infrequently is it our miserable fate to have to carry ladies who show as little feeling in their use of whip and spur upon the sides of those who bear them, as if we were devoid of all capability of suffering, and not "endowed with susceptibility to bodily pain, like themselves." Sir, when I read a letter like that of "Anti-Humbug" in your paper, I cannot help earnestly desiring that the writer of it might, for one day, be permitted to put the gallantry he so evidently possesses to the test, and to be harassed by carrying the sometimes an slight weight of some fair "Amie," and receiving from her hand and heel the whip and spur, the pain or infliction of which he seems so little to regard. I think then he would not imagine it humbug to write against the infliction of unnecessary pain upon horses, or "anti-humbug" to write against humanity. He would not think it humbug then to maintain that horses have as much feeling of pain as the lady who whips or spurs them, or "anti-humbug" to maintain that the fair rider should whip or spur completely irrespective of their feelings. Sir, we "Brighton Ladies' Riding Horses" must and do lead a life of pain and toil. All that we have a right to ask, and all that we do ask, of those ladies whom faithfully we serve, and whose pleasures we so much increase, is—not to make our lives more painful than is necessary for their enjoyment.—I remain, sir, your very obedient servant,

A BRIGHTON LADY'S RIDING HORSE.

EMIGRATION.

Sir,—Premising on your kindness and desire to oblige, I venture to trouble your columns with the following queries:—

As there are many gentlemen farmers in this country who hesitate to embark their little capital at the present high rents, small returns, and expensive system of good farming, but who would gladly emigrate to a good field, could you or your readers point out a country where the settler would meet with a temperate climate—perhaps cool rather than hot, such as Australia—good land, plenty of game, and peaceful security? It is puzzling to read the different books, each extolling its favourite, and pointing to the diseases, &c., of the rivals. Chambers speaks highly of "Lake Canadama." Can you give us any information as to its climate, soil, &c.? The Canada Company extol the Huron tract, and offer inducements; but a work on New Brunswick points to the acute and fever of that country. In short, we want a disinterested opinion, which shall be obviously looked for by your obedient servant, CALEDONIA.

[The coast of Syria, and the lands around Antioch, are much spoken of at present. Some papers thereon have appeared in the Nautical Magazine.—ED.]

OSBALDESTON.

SIR,—I beg to enclose you a copy of an original letter, now in my possession, written by the family butler to an innkeeper, on the occasion of the birth of Squire Osbaldeston.—Your obedient servant,
August 29.

OLD FERRIER.

"London, December 26, 1786."

"Mr. Boyce,—In a few days I shall answer your last letter more fully. At present, I will only tell you that Mrs. Osbaldeston was this morning brought to bed of a son. I would, therefore, have you set the bells ringing, for which you will give to the ringers two guineas, and I would have you spend five guineas up at Cooks, and two and a half at Coulsons. I would have you ask all the tenants of H. Bushell, and who else of H. Bushell you think proper; but I beg you and the gardener will take great care of your candle when you go home at night. Let the same quantity of meat and wheat be given to the poor as was last Christmas-day.—Your humble servant,

"ROBERT RUSSELL."

"P.S.—Upon my showing this letter to Mr. Osbaldeston, he says he would have you let all the people of H. Bushell have a part of the beer, tenants or not tenants."

LADIES AND THEIR HORSES.

I suppose, Mr. Editor, you are an admirer of that most noble of domestic animals, the horse, and, as a matter of course, you appreciate the beauty of woman; so that I conclude you will agree with me in thinking that when we have them both together—a handsome woman in the most becoming of dresses, a riding habit, mounted upon a fine horse—the effect is strikingly beautiful. No doubt the inherent beauty of the objects is what excites our admiration; but when we see a gentlewoman riding and directing a powerful horse, our interest in the sight is much increased by witnessing mind exercising a superiority over mere animal power. If the fair equestrian exercises her power tyrannically, or even thoughtlessly, and without consideration of the feelings of the animal she has in subjection, the picture our imagination has conjured up is destroyed, and we reprobate her conduct. But, on the other hand, if from timidity, or over tender-heartedness, she merely sits on the back of her steed and allows him to carry her at the pace he likes, and where he chooses, the illusion also vanishes. It is when a lady (handsome of course) has sufficient gentleness of disposition and affection for her horse to treat him kindly when he behaves well, but possesses enough of spirit and courage to enable her to chastise him when he deserves it, that we have the "beau ideal" of a female equestrian.

To see a beautiful woman rewarding her horse for his exertions to please her, by patting his neck with her soft gloved hand and speaking kindly to him, is a pleasing sight, but that gloved hand is also very properly employed in chastising him when he refuses to do his best to meet the wishes of his mistress.

To realise the above conception, then, of female equestrianism, a lady should manage her horse with kindness alone, if that will attain the end, but must be prepared to apply her whip or spur also, if required, whether for stimulus or correction.

I beg, Mr. Editor, you will treat these lines as I recommend horses to be treated, according to their merits: if they deserve kindness, give them a place in your paper; if not, light your cigar with them.—I am, your obedient servant, DISCRIMINATION.

HORTICULTURE.

NEW YORK STATE FAIR.—The American Institute and the New York Horticultural Society will unite with the State Agricultural Society in the fair to be held at Hamilton-square on the 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th days of October next. The amount of premiums offered exceeds $600 dollars. It is intended to make this one of the most interesting and important exhibitions ever held in the United States.

AGRICULTURE.

ABUNDANCE OF THE CROPS.—A friend writing to us from the Midland district, says: "To-day (Wednesday) I have been to Newark, where I found the farmers in excellent spirits, and well they may be. Last year the yield of grain was one-third below the average, this year it is one-third above; consequently the harvest will turn out two-thirds more grain than last year. Nobody ever before saw such crops, all getting ready for grinding; while the labour of reaping and garnering averages £16 each farmer less than usual." And yet, in the face of stubborn facts like these—in the face, too, of the gratifying reports from the continent, and from America—every attempt is made to bolster up prices.—Liverpool Albion.

THE HARVEST IN SOMERSET.—The late fine weather has been of the utmost benefit to the crops, and all harvest operations are proceeding with the greatest activity in the corn-growing districts of this county. The wheat near Taunton is particularly good, and has been cut and the main portion carried. In the neighbourhood of Bridgewater the barley is excellent, and the yield is expected to be very good; it is mostly cut, and in many cases secured. Oats and beans are likewise in excellent condition. There is a much greater breadth of land under potatoes than last year, and they are in better condition, and, to all appearance, have not suffered so much from the blight. The green crops are generally good, but the present fine harvest weather is unfavourable to the turnips, which require rain.—Somerset Gazette.

LOWER HEDDER RIVER SHOW.—The 25th instant is fixed as the day on which this display is to take place. Messrs. Creek, Bain, and Soden, are the stewards, and Mr. Wing secretary. There will be a steepstakes for the best show of three varieties of agricultural roots from the same farm; and also eottagers' prizes for the best display of onions, carrots, parsnips, celery, cabbage, potatoes, and nosegays.

LONGEVITY OF FARMERS.—A venerable matron of North Alabama, 93 years of age, gave an old folks' tea-party a few days since, and among the guests who were present were four ladies of the respective ages of 86, 82, 80, 70, and three gentlemen of 85, 80, and 78—making the united ages of the eight persons (including the hostess) 649 years, an average of 81. Six of these persons own farms on which they reside, all in one neighbourhood of less than a mile square, and have been residents of the town over fifty years.—Boston Traveller.

BARNET GREAT CATTLE FAIR.—This important and extensive cattle fair, which continues for three days, commenced on Monday. Great interest annually attends this distinguished fair, not only from the numbers brought forward, which on the present occasion amounted to a fair numerical computation, to nearly 50,000 head of cattle alone, but the beasts exhibited consisted of some of our most choice breeds in the United Kingdom. By break of day drove and drove kept arriving in rapid succession, most of which were in excellent condition. By nine o'clock business commenced most actively, the best Devons making £12 to £15; Herefords, £10 to £12; Durhams and the large Lincoln, £14 to £16 per head. The Scots also went off freely, the best Highlands at £8 to £11; Norfolks, £10 to £15 per head. The best Welsh steers were also in great demand, and realised satisfactory prices. The young and inferior beasts of all sorts of course went at lower figures; nevertheless, the demand was brisk, prices rising in favour of buyers. The Irish beasts were in excellent condition, and from their improved breed, attracted many buyers, yearlings making £4 to £5, two and three-year old steers £7 to £8 per head. The attendance of buyers from all parts was numerous, and by two o'clock nearly 20,000 head of store beasts had changed hands. The show of beasts and in-calf cows was extraordinarily good, the Yorkshire beasts selling at £12 up to £26 each; Suffolk, £12 to £16; Welsh, £8 to £10. Some very choice Alderneys realised £20 each. The sheep fair was not worth notice. In the horse fair prime cart-horses went off freely, but prices were much below those of last year. Welsh ponies, of which there were many hundreds, went off in rapid succession at £8 up to £12 each.

COMMERCE.

THE TEA TRADE.—Aug 28: The deliveries in London made up for the week are 667,371 lb., being an increase compared with the previous week.—Sept. 4: The deliveries in London for the week were 600,101 lb., being a decrease compared with the previous week.

Markets.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The English funds opened at the prices of Saturday, but they subsequently experienced a decline, from which there was only a partial rally. Consols for money, which left off at Saturday at 95½, were first quoted 95½, whence they receded to 94½, but returned before the close of business to 95 to ½. For the account the last quotation was 95½ to ½. Bank Stock left off at 209 to 211; Reduced, 95 to ½; and Long Annuities, 4½. India Bonds and Exchequer Bills showed an improvement, the former closing at 4s. to 7s., and the latter at 4s. to 6s. premium. Exchequer Bonds were likewise higher, the last quotation being 98½.

TUESDAY.—Consols opened for money at 95½, and then receded to 94½, recovered to 95½, and closed rather sellers at that fraction. For the account they have been done at 95½ to ½, and at the close of business were finally quoted 95½ to ½. There has been business in Bank Stock at 209½ to 11; Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, 95½ to 6; Three-and-a-quarter per Cent. Annuities, 93½ to ½; Long Annuities, expiring Jan. 5, 1860, 4 13-16 to 11-16; Ditto, thirty years, expiring Oct. 10, 1859, 4 9-16; India Bonds under £1000, 4s. premium. Exchequer Bills have been very firm at 4s. to 6s. premium for all grades; and ditto Bonds, 1859, Three-and-a-half per Cent., have improved to 98½ to 9.

WEDNESDAY.—Consols for money, which left off on Tuesday at 95 to ½, opened without alteration, and improved to 95½ to ½, at which they closed with a steady appearance. For the account on the 17th of October the last quotation was 95½ to ½. Bank Stock left off at 209 to 211; Reduced, 95½ to ½; India Stock, 226 to 229; India Bonds, 4s. to 7s.; Exchequer Bills, 4s. to 6s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99½. The transfer books of Bank Stock, Long Annuities, and Reduced, closed to-day for the dividends, and the two former will re-open on the 19th of October, and the latter on the 20th.

THURSDAY.—The English funds opened this morning at the improved quotations of Wednesday, but the market was subsequently dull, partly from an absence of business, and partly from a statement that Austria, notwithstanding the recent rejection of her proposals by the Emperor of Russia, has decided for the present not to declare war. The first quotation of Consols for money was 95½ to ½, and they left off at 94½ to 95. For the 17th of October the final price was 95½ to ½. India bonds left off at 4s. to 7s. premium, Exchequer Bills 4s. to 6s. premium, and Exchequer Bonds 98½ to 99½. Bank Stock and all the other descriptions, except Consols, are now shut for dividends.

FRIDAY.—Consols opened at 94½ to 95, went to 94½ to 95.

SMITHFIELD.

FRIDAY, September 1.—There is a full supply of beasts; the demand for them is tolerably active, at fully Monday's rates. The number of sheep is about as usual; they are more in demand than on Friday last, and prices consequently rather better. Lambs are more readily disposed of, but there is not much advance in prices. Trade is very dull for calves. Our foreign supply consists of 386 beasts, 1,420 sheep, and 291 calves; 450 beasts from the northern and midland, and 95 milch cows from the home counties.

MONDAY, September 4.—We had a very large supply of beasts, and the demand was comparatively small; consequently prices were reduced, and several remained unsold. The number of sheep was about the same as on Monday last, and, on the average, quotations were not much altered. Lambs were in demand at fully late rates. Calves met with a very ill sale. From Germany and Holland there were 2,175 beasts, 5,230 sheep, 250 calves, and 180 pigs. Spain, 890 sheep; Scotland, 70 beasts, and 2,700 from the northern and midland counties.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DERBY, September 5.—There was but a limited supply of fat beasts to-day, but they fully maintained last week's prices. The number of sheep and lambs was about the average, without alteration of price. Fat and store calves were scarce. Beef made 6d. to 6½d; mutton, 6½d. to 7d; lamb, 7d; veal, 6½d. to 7d per lb.; pigs, 9s. 5d. to 9s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 6s. 6d. per stone, commencing Aug. 21; hides, young, 8s and above, 3½d. per lb; ditto, young, under 8s, 3½d; old cows, all weights, 3d; cut hides, 2½d; calf skins, 10lb. and under, 4d; above 10 and under 16, 4½d; above 16, 5d; all cut calf skins 1d. less.

LIVERPOOL, September 4.—An average number of stock was brought forward at the cattle market this morning, all of which met a ready sale at the following quotations: Beef, 3½d. to 6½d; mutton, 6d. to 6½d.

MARK LANE.

FRIDAY, September 1.—The country dealers were offering a fair quantity of new English wheat this morning, and prices generally accepted were about 3s. to 4s. below those of Monday last. Holders of foreign wheat would have consented to a reduction of 2s. to 3s. per quarter, if, by so doing, business of moment could have been done. As it was, transactions were trifling in both wheat and flour. The arrivals of oats have been large, chiefly from Archangel, and this description must be noted 6d. to 1s. cheaper than on Monday. Barley, beans, and peas underwent no change. London averages: Wheat, 62s. 3d.; barley, 50s. 10d.; oats, 26s. 7d.; rye, 40s. 1d.; beans, 11s. 10d.; peas, 45s. 10d.

MONDAY, September 4.—The supply of new English wheat at market this morning was not so large as last Monday; the quality and condition, however, very fine. Upon the three sales made on Friday last no reduction can be quoted, but prices may be regarded at 5s. to 6s. below those of Monday last. Foreign wheat but little inquired for, and sales made with difficulty at a reduction of 5s. to 4s. per quarter. Barley flour 1s. to 2s. cheaper, and country sack flour 3s. to 4s. lower. No alteration was made in the London top prices. Grinding barley gave way 6d. to 1s. per quarter. The arrivals of foreign oats are large, and such were obtainable at a decline of 1s. to 1s. 6d. per quarter. Beans and peas must be noted 1s. to 2s. cheaper.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

CROFTON, September 2.—Wheat, white, 50s. to 64s.; ditto, red, 40s. to 50s.; barley, grinding, 26s. to 28s.; oats, 21s. to 31s.; rye, 37s. to 40s.; peas, 32s. to 37s.; beans, 19s. to 46s.

DANFORTH, September 2.—Wheat, white, 56s. to 66s.; ditto, red, 52s. to 62s.; white ditto, new, 56s. to 64s.; red ditto, 42s. to 50s.; harrow beans, 12s. to 46s.; mazagan ditto, 34s. to 38s.; maple peas, 36s. to 40s.; barley, grinding, 25s. to 32s.; oats, feed, 21s. to 26s.

LEWIS, September 5.—We have a very small market, and, contrary to expectations, only a very limited supply of corn. Wheat sells freely to the millers, and the decline in price cannot be called more than 1s. per quarter. At the close of the market the growers showed more firmness, and less inclination to sell, even at this reduction. But little barley offering, and not a free sale. We quote prices to the growers: Wheat, red, 42s. to 18s.; ditto, white, 50s. to 55s.; barley, 21s. to 27s.; beans, 36s. to 40s.; peas, 32s. to 36s. Averages for the week ending September 2, 1854: wheat, 43s. quarters, at 61s. 7d.; oats, 9 quarters, at 26s.; peas, 20 quarters, at 37s. 8d.

SEVENOAKS, September 2.—Wheat, white, old, 58s. to 62s.; new ditto, 60s. to 61s.; old red, 51s. to 55s.; new ditto, 56s. to 60s.; barley, new, 28s. to 32s.; oats, old, 21s. to 28s.; peas, 36s. to 40s.; beans, 41s. to 11s.

SUNDERLAND, September 2.—The supply of grain at market this day was small; but, notwithstanding that, last week's prices could not be obtained by from 3s. to 3s. per quarter. One or two samples of new wheat were offered for sale; but not being in good condition, nothing extra was obtained. The weather being hot and fine, large quantities of grain are cut, and farmers are busily engaged with cutting and stacking their produce.

HAY AND STRAW.

SMITHFIELD, September 4.—Meadow hay, £3 5s. to £4 14s.; clover ditto, £3 15s. to £6; straw, £1 14s. to £1 17s. per load. There was a steady market.

WHITECHAPEL, September 4.—Meadow hay, £2 16s. to £4 15s.; clover ditto, £3 10s. to £6; straw, £1 14s. to £1 18s. per load. The market was firm.

PORTLAND, September 4.—Meadow hay, £3 to £4 10s.; clover ditto, £4 to £5 15s.; straw, £1 14s. to £1 18s. per load. Market depressed. New meadow hay, £3 10s. to £4 5s.; and new clover, £4 to £5 5s.

HOPS.

BOROUGH, September 4.—The accounts are about the same this morning, and the duty is doing from £60,000 to £65,000. Market firm.—Daily News.

FOREIGN.

PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS.—A letter from New York says: "Recent advices from Central America announce the visitation of the locusts, a species of flying locusts, throughout the States. This has resulted in as total a destruction of the crop of this season as occurred to that, by a similar calamity, of the last. The consequence of this has been the threatened starvation of the inhabitants of many of the States. The district of St. Barbara has been particularly the scene of great suffering. This, however, has been in a great measure relieved by the assistance of the Honduras Railway Company, who had caused to be sent out from New Orleans a cargo of corn to be gratuitously distributed among the inhabitants."

BANKRUPTS.

FRIDAY.—John D. Humphreys, Caledonian-road, engineer.—Edwin Maw, Seacombe, Chester, iron-founder.—Thomas Goodworth Jackson, Gool, Gool.—Frederick Langman, Wolverhampton, druggist.—William John Normanville, Queen's-road, Regent's Park, commission agent.—Robert Brooks, Blackburn, draper.—Christopher Alderson, Lower Tottenham, Middlesex, grocer.—John Sandison (and not Davidson, as before advertised), Huddersfield, wine and spirit merchant.

TUESDAY.—William Phillips, Minorities, brush maker.—John Abraham Rippon, Blithsgate-street-within, and Louth Cottages, Wellington-road, Camberwell, cigar manufacturer.—James Wittering, Finedon, Northamptonshire, builder and publican.—Francis Burrow, Redruth, Cornwall, tailor.—Thomas Crogan, late of Hitchin-street, Houndsditch, now of Queen-street, Stepney, licensed victualler.—John Haydon, Barnstable, draper.—George John Jenvey, Barnstable, bookseller.—Thomas Lickley, Thirsk, corn merchant.—James Stork Skipper, Liverpool, corn merchant.—John Wilcox, Manchester, coal merchant.—John and Robert Fittes, Newcastle upon-Tyne, and Gateshead, tea dealers.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."

OUR SAILOR KING.

IN our last two numbers we pointed out some of the glaring inconsistencies of the handicapping for the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire. This was done with no captious spirit. Having the best interests of the turf in view, we were anxious that, amid the large array of nominations, the "contents" should far exceed the dissentients. But, when the weights appeared, we were convinced that the contrary would be the case. The result proves our prediction correct. Out of an entry of one hundred and fifty-three for the Cesarewitch, but fifty-four send in their adhesion, while no less than ninety-nine, or nearly two-thirds of the whole number, and some of the best horses, too, among the lot, refuse to take part in the affair on the terms imposed. Much of the interest on the race is thus destroyed at the very outset. Rataplan, like a doughty champion, is not terrified at the overwhelming 9st 7lb, but stands proudly alone, with no other animal within a stone of him. To the other top-weighted four-year-olds, Rattle, Typee, and Balrownie, he defiantly proffers 18lb and 16lb advantage. Andover and Virago, as we anticipated, could not have been enamoured with the prospect of 8st 13lb; and, as silence did not, in this instance, give consent, the names of those famous steeds have been withdrawn from the list. One only of the three foreigners, and who rejoices in the appellation of Scherz, stands the hazard of the 15 sovs forfeit, or the larger stake of twenty-five for a start. A large majority of those represented by us as being favourably in, are to be found among the acquiescent fifty-four. The colt bearing the mysterious title of D. O. figures prominently in the betting just now, and appears likely to increase in favour; but the race will fail to cause excitement, and cannot, we believe, prove profitable to any of the leading speculators.

The Cambridgeshire certainly contains more of the elements of success, but even here the acceptances are little more than a bare moiety of the number entered; seventy-three out of one hundred and fifty-one having paid forfeit. We drew attention, last week, to the position of The Early Bird with regard to his immediate antagonists in the late Derby, and all of them, with the sole exception of Dervish, decline to encounter him at the Houghton Meeting on such unfavourable terms. From the list of twenty horses we gave, we find that but three are unwilling to entertain the intension of taking share in the contest. Alembic is certainly afforded the opportunity of making up for past disappointments, and the names of Orinoco, Monie Moses, and Miss Bolton, may yet be heard of in the betting.

Doncaster is still continuing its gay carnival while we write, but the results of most of the principal races have darted along the electric wires, and are already known in many a remote spot. The St. Leger is no longer a mystery, but, as our neighbours and allies on the other side of the channel would say, an accomplished fact. Incredible as it must sound to those who are distant from the scene of action, Knight of St. George, in defiance of previous running, and in opposition to the opinion of some of the cleverest men on the turf, has been declared the winner. Nowhere in and the turn into the straight, Dervish began to fall in his lead, and Acrobat immediately took up the running. When about a distance from home, Iran and the Knight of St. George, who had gradually gained ground, singled themselves out, and after a fine set-to, the Knight, amidst tremendous cheers, achieved the victory by a head; the second beating the third by a length and a half; Seythian was fourth, about two lengths behind Arthur Wellesley; Acrobat was fifth; Bolardo, who broke down, was sixth; and the Trapper seventh. Hesse Cassel was last. Acrobat also broke down.

Her Majesty's Plate of 100 gs. Three-yr-olds, 7st; four, 8st 5lb; five, 8st 12lb; six and aged, 9st 2lb. Cup Course.
Mr. Morris's Kingston, by Vaulson, 5 yrs. Basham 1
Mr. Jones's Révéille, 3 yrs. Charlton 2
Mr. Newland's El Dorado, 3 yrs. Chilton 3
Betting—2 to 1 on Kingston, 3 to 1 agst El Dorado. Won by twenty lengths, nearly the same distance between the second and third.

The Municipal Stakes of 200 svs each, h ft. For two-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 4lb. The owner of the second horse to save his stake. Red House In. 7 svs.
Lord Derby's De Clare, by Trenchstone. Templeman 1
Mr. Howard's Gretna, by Surplice. Wells 2
Lord Eglinton's Dirk Hatterick, by Van Tromp. Marlow 3
Sir C. Monck's Vandal, by Van Tromp. Marlow 4
Betting—2 to 1 on Dirk Hatterick, 3 to 1 agst De Clare, 4 to 1 agst Gretna. Dirk Hatterick, with Vandal second, and De Clare third, made the running to within the distance, where De Clare took the lead, which he maintained to the end, winning easily by two lengths; the second beating the third by a head, and a head only between the third and fourth.

The Corporation Plate of 100 svs in specie, added to a Handicap Stakes of 10 svs each, 5 ft. For all ages. Penalties for certain winners. The owner of the second horse to receive £15 out of the stakes. T.Y.C. 4 svs.

Mr. J. M. Stanley's Mishap, 3 yrs, 6st 12lb. Ashmall 6
Mr. Johnson's Monie Moss, 3 yrs, 6st 10lb. Palmer 7
Betting—2 to 1 agst Eva, 5 to 2 agst Deformed, 6 to 1 agst Typee, and 7 to 1 agst Catherine Parr. Won by two lengths; a head between second and third; bad fourth.

Glorious weather, good sport, and an immense attendance of company. The tout ensemble of the scene was remarkably interesting and exciting. The result of the race for the St. Leger was a capital coup for the holders.

WEST AUSTRALIAN.—We learn from good authority that this horse has broken down.

NORTH UNION COURSING CLUB.—The members of this club will meet at Antrim, on Wednesday, the 11th October next, when the vase and cup will be run for. The Puppy Stakes will also be run for on the occasion. The president is the Viscount Massarene and Ferrard, and the judge is Mr. Owen.

SHOOTING

DEER SHOOTING EXTRAORDINARY.—A feat which, if equalled, perhaps has not been excelled in the sporting world, was performed by Mr. Begg (sportsman to Mrs. Power, of Gurteen), on the 31st ultimo. He went out for the purpose of shooting a buck, and having sent some men into a plantation to beat about, he lay down in the brushwood at the end. In a few minutes two fine deer came bounding out, and after running about 150 yards they leaped on a ditch and turned round to take a view of their disturbers. Mr. Begg instantly levelled his rifle, and kept it to his shoulder until one of the deer brought his head in a line with the neck of the other, bang went the rifle, and down went the two deer, both shot dead with a single ball, one through the eye, the other through the neck. They being brought to Gurteen-lodge, he proceeded to draw a second cover, when, perceiving the antlers of a buck above the underwood, he calculated where the head ought to be, fired, and the ball pierced the head of a noble animal between the antler and the ear. Of this we have been informed by an eye-witness, and in whose credibility we place the utmost confidence.—Tipperary Free Press.

THE SHOOTING SEASON about Winchester is not likely, we hear, to be so satisfactory to sportsmen as was anticipated. Birds are, in many localities, extremely scarce, and the hot and dry weather renders it difficult to obtain sport where the birds are more plentiful. It must be indeed a keen sportsman who can brave the heat and drudgery of a prolonged march through the stubble-fields in a temperature such as that of the past week.—Hampshire Advertiser.

THE MOORS.—A very fine specimen of the Capercaillie or "Cock of the Wood" (which may now be seen at Mr. Williams, 155, Oxford-street), was shot in the woods of Ballechin Dunkeld, Scotland, by Mr. K. Fowell, on the 7th inst. This splendid bird weighed eleven pounds and a half, and in perfect plumage. Grouse on these moors are very plentiful. Return of three days, 216 brace to two guns.

SPORTING MISCELLANY.

TALLY-HO! VOICKS!
KEEP silence, good folks, now, I pray you'll attend;
I'm no common singer, you'll find in the end.
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
I'm a hunting physician, and cure every ill,
Disorder and pain, without bolus or pill.
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
Come on, ye old codgers, whose nerves are unstrung,
Only follow the hounds, and you'll hunt yourselves young.
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
'Twill cure the short cough, and the rheumatic pain—
Only follow the hounds, and you're all young again.
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
Ye lovers who foolishly sip and sigh,
And droop at the frown of a blue or black eye.
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
Brush up to them quickly and try them again,
For ladies love sportsmen, and sportsmen love them.
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
If chance you are plagued with a termagant wife,
Who instead of the pride is the curse of your life,
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
When Madam her "small talk" begins to "let go,"
Then pull on your boots, and away—Tally-ho!
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
When Death, that old pirate, shall after you stride,
Then mount your best hunter and ride for your life.
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!
Ne'er mind his grim looks while your hunter can "go"—
For you'll never be caught while you cry "Tally-ho! Tally-ho!"
Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho! Tally-ho!

THE DEVON AND SOMERSET STAG-HOUNDS will meet on Monday, the 18th of September, at Poole Town, Luxborough, at half-past ten o'clock, and on Thursday, the 21st, at Leoworthy Post, Bratton, at half-past eleven o'clock.

ST. LEGER STATISTICS.—The St. Leger race on Wednesday next will be the 79th contest for that celebrated prize, which was instituted in 1776, four seasons before the Derby was established at Epsom. In the three-quarters of a century which have elapsed since then, a dead heat has occurred only twice, the first being in 1839, between Charles XII. and Euclid, and the second in 1850, between Voltigeur and Rushmore. In 1789, when a colt of the Duke of Hamilton's came in first, the winner was disqualified on account of his rider having "jostled" in the race, and it was given to Lord Fitzwilliam's Pewet. The Leger has been won twenty-three times by noblemen, Lord Hamilton being the most frequent recipient of the "blue riband" in the olden time, and Lord Eglington in latter days, the former having carried off the prize four times, and the latter three. Four has been the lowest number of starters for this race, and thirty the highest, when it was won by Mennon, in 1825. Four times the start has been limited to 5; six times to 7; ten times to 8; five times to 9; seven times to 10; six times to 11; four times to 12; three to 13; four times to 14; three to 15; once to 16 (Paulina's year); three to 17; twice to 18; twice to 19; once to 20 (Rockingham's year); once to 21 (Reverell achieving the victory in the shortest time on record); twice to 23; three to 24; once to 26; twice to 27; once to 28; and once to 30. Five horses—Champion, Surplice, the Flying Dutchman, Voltigeur, and West Australian—have won both Derby and Leger; and five horses—Mameluke, Priam, Coronation, Cotherstone, and Cossack—which had won the Epsom prize, failed to carry off the Leger, each getting the second place. Ion gained secondary honours in both races in 1838. The Surrey seconds have twice only borne off the Leger laurels, viz., Lancelot and Sir Tatton Sykes. The Doncaster prize has never been obtained by a first or second filly for the Oaks, with the exception of the Queen of Trumps, which won both Oaks and Leger in 1835. Nine of the Leger winners have descended from previous winners of this event; five others from Derby winners. The present is the largest number of entries for the Leger, being ten more than the number in 1846, when it was 149.

A NOVEL REMEDY FOR SWEARING.—The California Christian Advocate, commenting upon the great temptation to the sin of profanity in that country, says:—"An intelligent lady of our acquaintance, whose little boy was beginning this strange talk, anxious to express to her child her horror of profanity, hit upon the novel process of washing out his mouth with soap-suds whenever he swore. It was an effectual cure. The boy understood his mother's sense of the corruption of an oath, and the taste of suds, which together produced the desired result."

Arrow of 102 tons? and why was not Julia's crew of Osprey, the latter being only half the Julia's tonnage? Surely if it was so confidently predicted that the schooner yacht Alarm would beat the cutters, by reason of her greater tonnage, it must, or ought to, have been as positively anticipated that the Julia, as the largest cutter in the race, would lead the Arrow to the finish; but she did not. When she has taken the pride out of the Arrow, as the fastest cutter of the squadron, the crew of the handsome Julia shall not be complained of for "crowing," or any other boisterous rejoicing.—Yours, well set up, BOSTON, 30th August, 1854.

HERNE BAY REGATTA.

The dinner took place at the Pier Hotel, the chair being taken by Capt. Bowden, R.N., supported by Com. Robinson, M.Y.C., T. Bartlett, Esq., G. Burge, Esq., &c. A large party partook of the sumptuous repast provided on this occasion by the liberal hosts, and the decorations of the room, consisting of bunting of every hue, added greatly to the gaiety of the scene. The cloth being removed, and the usual loyal toasts given, the worthy chairman, with a neat speech, presented Thomas Bartlett, Esq., the magnificent Herne Bay cup, won by the Little Mnsquite, and which was duly replied to by that gentleman in a spirited manner.—The Chairman next proposed the health of Commodore Robinson, of the Medway Yacht Club; in returning thanks for which, the Commodore expressed his approbation at the manner in which the day's sport had been conducted, and which reflected the highest credit on Captain Bowden (who he was proud to say had joined the Medway Yacht Club), and that if fixed on an earlier day next season (say the beginning of July), he doubted not but that a large fleet could be mustered from the Thames, London, Medway, Harwich, and other clubs. With respect to the Medway as he had this day seen more of the facilities of Herne Bay as a yachting station than he had hitherto been aware of, viz., of being able to provide a sailing course of twenty miles, it was his intention next season to propose it as one of the stations of the club, one of the cruising grounds being from the Nore Light to the Fere-land. True, at times, it would be much exposed, but then shelter could be found in Margate or Ramsgate harbours, Whitstable in the Medway, or Thames. There was a time when all the matches of the Royal Thames Club started from Greenwich, but now we find boats of four tons belonging to the Prince of Wales and London Model Clubs competing for prizes off the Chapman Head, and he hoped to see the day that they would extend their trips to the salt water, and be studying the hitherto-deserted Herne Bay. (Cheers.) The "Army and Navy," and "G. Burge, Esq.," were drunk and responded to in a most enthusiastic manner. Harmony followed, and the company separated at a late hour, highly gratified with the day's proceedings.

THE ANGLESEY YACHT CLUB.

The second meeting of this new club took place on Tuesday last, at the Club House, Pier Hotel, Chelsea, Commodore Chubb in the chair. The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed. He then produced the list of original members elected on the foundation, and they amounted in number to about fifty. Several other names were announced, and the meeting adjourned to the 10th October next, when the first ballot for new members will take place. The number of yachts already entered, of the match tonnage, amounts to seven. Amongst the names of original members are several gentlemen well known to be devoted to the interest of yacht-sailing.

SHALDON REGATTA, DEVONSHIRE.

All the fashionable towns on the coast have had their regatta, but it is not because Shaldon is the last that it is therefore the least interesting. With high-water in its favour, Shaldon can boast of having one of the most beautiful harbours in the West of England for displaying to advantage the manly exercise of rowing. Accordingly, when its regatta took place on Thursday, last week, there were thousands of visitors. The weather was fortunately delightfully fine; and to add to the hilarity of the occasion, an excellent brass band was in attendance.

The First Prize of £2 for four-oared boats was won by the Wasp. S. Clark beating the celebrated Sylph, The Minnie, and the Sancy Lass.

The Second Prize of £1 for two-oared boats was won by the Sisters, W. Wakeham, beating the Blue Bell, the Constant, and the Zealons.

The Third Prize of £1. 5s. for four-oared boats, to be rowed by women, was the great race of the day. At four o'clock twelve ladies—varying in age from twenty-four to seventy-four—entered the committee-room to draw lots for boats and colours, when Martha Turner, aged seventy-four, Sarah Bowden, fifty-one, Prudence Shaply, sixty, and Eliza Elworthy, forty-one, chose the white rackets and the boat called the Wasp; and Miss Weeks, Miss Sutton, Mrs. Voysey, and Mrs. Lee, chose the red colours, and the boat Sylph, of Teignmouth; and Mrs. Rice, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Lee, and Miss Sarah Knight, of sweet sixty-four, chose the true blue colours of Briton, and rowed in the Sancy Lass. It would be impossible to describe the excitement at this time. The spacious bow-windows of the large room at the Crown and Anchor were thrown open, and the operation of clothing and colouring fairly got through, the old veteran Turner being the first ready, the three boats were got to the starting line and at the word "fire," away they went in gallant style. The reds led the way for the first half-mile, but age proved stronger in this case than youth, for the gallant old whites drew ahead of the lot and won cleverly by three lengths. The day's amusements were wound up by snudry rural sports, and by a display of fire-works.

Cowes, Saturday, Sept. 9.—Lord Colville and party, on board his lordship's yacht the Sultana yawl, arrived here to-day, from Boulogne, where his lordship and friends were present at the brilliant festivities which took place on the occasion of Prince Albert's visit to the Emperor Louis Napoleon at the French camp.

REEFING TOISAILS FROM THE DECK.—(Extract from the Journal du Havre of September 2nd.)—The English journals have for some time brought before their readers an invention by a naval officer, who has discovered the means of taking in the reefs of the topsail, without the sailors being obliged to mount the yards. We must confess that until now we had considered this invention as one of those ingenious arrangements which succeeded to a certain point, but are not destined to go beyond theory. Henceforth we are able to form a very different opinion, for we can announce that tomorrow, during the regatta, and opposite the roads, a pretty little English brigantine, fitted by the inventor himself, will prove, no longer theoretically, but in the most practical manner, the application of his invention. We will add that already several captains, upon the invitation of Mr. Cunningham, have examined this new system, and have not hesitated to give him their entire approval.

ATHLONE REGATTA, Wednesday, Sept. 7.—No yacht sailing for want of wind. The rowing was very good. The Unda (University Rowing Club) won, beating the Messrs. Smyth.

BIRDS AND SHIPS.—A bird is a model of a ship constructed by the hand of God, in which the conditions of swiftness, manageability, and lightness are absolutely and necessarily the same as in vessels built by the hand of man. There are not in the world two things which resemble each other more strongly, both mechanically and physically speaking, than the carcass and framework of a bird and a ship. The breast-bone so exactly resembles a keel, that the English language has retained the name. The wings are the oars, the tail the rudder. That original observer, Hubert, the Genevese, who has carefully noticed the flight of birds of prey, has even made the use of the metaphor thus suggested to establish a characteristic distinction between rowers and sailors. The rowers are the falcons, who have the first or second wing-feather the longest, and who are able, by means of this powerful oar, to dart right into the wind's eye. The mere sailors are the eagles, the vultures, and the buzzards, whose more rounded wings resemble sails. The rowing bird is to the sailing bird what the steamer, that laughs at adverse winds, is to the schooner, which cannot advance against them.—Dickens's Household Words.

REGATTA AT HAVRE.—The regatta at Havre on Sunday was favoured by the most delightful weather. The first prize, of 800f., given by Prince Jerome for decked sailing boats, was won by the Montalembert, which was the only one that started. For the gigs, the first prize, consisting of Sèvres porcelain given by the Emperor, was won by the Duc de Frobenois, and the second by the Juive. The first prize for rowing boats was carried off by Parisian canotiers.—Galignani.

YACHTING AT HAVRE.—Two pleasure-boats of the London Yacht Club, the Belvedere, belonging to Mr. H. Chilton, and the Amazon to Mr. A. Young, arrived at Havre during the regatta on Sunday, in order to take part in the sailing match, but from their length and tonnage they could not be permitted to run. M. Graudin, the director of the regatta, expressed to the owners of the English yachts his regret that the regulations of the races compelled him to refuse their admission, but said if they would sail against each other, the town of Havre would be happy to present the winner with a bracelet of French workmanship as a souvenir of their visit. This was readily agreed to, and the yachts started, and the prize, consisting of a gold bracelet ornamented with turquoises, was won by Mr. Young, who had on board a lady, who became the owner of the bracelet, and by whom it was much admired. The owners of the yachts were much gratified by the reception given them, and promised that a fleet of yachts should be present at the next regatta.—Galignani.

ROYAL HARWICH YACHT CLUB.—It will be seen by Tuesday's Gazette, that the commodore of this club, Sir C. H. Ibbetson, Bart., is appointed Captain in the 5th West York Regiment of Militia.

LENSUD, BALTIC.—The yacht Heroine, arrived here on the 31st ult.

MARGATE.—Our regatta committee, having secured J. Taddy Friend, Esq., of Northdown, for their patron, have made such good headway as to enable them to issue a good programme of prizes to be contended for, in which our trim-built service-luggers will contend for prizes against others from the coast. There will be matches for smaller crafts, together with rowing matches to test the sinews and skill of our hardy boatmen. We hope that the public will, by liberal subscriptions, enable the committee to make satisfactory arrangements for the 21st instant.—South-Eastern Gazette.

BOMARSUND, Aug. 22.—The Esmeralda yacht is up here still, and I believe Mr. Brierley, as also Mr. Dolby, are both up here sketching. The squadron here consists of Bulldog, Edinburgh, Leopard, Ajax, Blenheim, Hogue, Driver, Gladiator, Odin, Valorous, Arrogant, Gorgon, Locust. Vulture goes to-morrow to Dantzic. Ajax and Penelope busy at Bomarsund getting her guns up. Gloriana schooner-yacht arrived here on Sunday night, seventeen days from Portsmouth.

LOUGH CORRIE REGATTA.

LOUGH, MONDAY, Aug. 14.—This annual gathering, for which extensive preparations had been made, received an unexpected check on Friday night, in the sudden death of the Rev. Rutledge Lambert, whose son had won the cup last year, and had been to Cork for the purpose of purchasing a boat to sail in competition with a newly-built cutter, The Pet, prepared specially by Mr. Lynch for this race. Notwithstanding this sudden gloom, large numbers of the peasantry assembled to witness the sports, which commenced by the starting of The Pet, Snake, and Kate, for the Challenge Cup. At starting the Snake took the lead, and maintained her position well until near Lemoufield, when the heavier tonnage and lofty canvas of The Pet in a strong breeze began to tell. Here she took the lead and maintained it well until reaching home, which she did, being in advance of the other two, and won. When reduced to her level of time she found herself the winner by some fifteen minutes. The Snake, a good second, closely followed by the Kate. Owing to this being the first trial of The Pet, much interest was naturally excited. The next race, for four-oared boats, came off immediately after. Four boats started; and, after a well-contested race, was cleverly won by Miss Finnis. Then came off a match between the lake trading luggers. Seven started, and excited much interest. The laurels of the race were cleverly won by two Galway boats, Cloonan, of Wood-quay, being first, and Daven second. Other rowing races, with a punt chase, followed; after which, in the most orderly manner, the peasantry returned to their homes. A display of fireworks took place in the evening at Asford House.

AUG. 15.—At half past three o'clock the sports commenced with the same boats, wind, water, and men, with the same result in the race for the cup, save and except that the second and third boats changed places. Miss Finnis's boat not having started, and the third boat having given up at an early period in the race, a capital run ensued between the other two boats. A two-oared boat-race followed, and was cleverly won by the Banshee, winner of the race in the same class the day before. The concluding race was one of boats rowed by women, which afforded very considerable amusement, and which, if we may dare to use the phrase, was much enhanced by the upset of a boat containing upwards of twenty peasant girls, who, although well soured in the waters of the Lough, were fortunately rescued without any other damage than the inconvenience arising from their involuntary ducking.—[The River Corrib Regatta came off on Monday, the 11th instant.—Ed.]

ATHLONE REGATTA—1854.

This regatta took place near Carberry Island, on the 6th, 7th, and 8th of September, under the patronage of the Marquis of Westmeath and Lord Castlemaine. The following is the programme:—

FIRST DAY.

Sailing Match.—A Silver Challenge Cup (to be won three years in succession), value 25 sovs, for bond fide gentlemen's yachts, the property of subscribers of £1 to the regatta fund, or members of a yacht club. A time race—unfinished. Next day, Mary Alice beat Avenger and Aurora.

Rowing Match.—A Purse of Sovereigns, not less than £15, for four-oared boats, to be rowed by gentlemen; a tie race if four boats enter. Unda beat Shannon.

Rowing Match.—A Prize of £3 for two-oared boats not exceeding twenty-five feet keel; to carry a steerer. Won by the Nortons.

Sailing Match.—A Handicap for a Silver Challenge Cup (to be won two years in succession), value 20 sovs, for bond fide gentlemen's yachts, as on first day. A time race. Won by Dolphin, beating Avenger, Juan, Mary, and Wasp.

The yachts for the race each day were to assemble off Carberry Island at ten o'clock. Punt chases and other amusements were advertised, at the discretion of the stewards.—Hon. R. Handcock; P. Grehan, Esq.; S. Hodson, Esq.; J. W. Maunsell, Esq.; John Ennis, Esq.; A. W. Smythe, Esq.; and William Lewis, Esq. Secretary, P. Grehan, Esq., Mount Plunkett.

LOUGH ERNE REGATTA—1854.

The above regatta took place on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 29th and 30th of August, and Friday, the 1st of September. The stewards were—The High Sheriff of the county Fermanagh, the Earl of Enniskillen, Henry D'Arcy, Henry Loftus, and Paul Dane, Esqrs. We subjoin the bill of fare:—

FIRST DAY.

A Prize of the value of £60, for all yachts exceeding twelve tons. Half a minute per ton time to be given. The course and rules the same as for all former cups. To be won three times by the same person. £20 to be given annually to the winner of the race. Three to enter. Bamba won.

A Salver for yachts not exceeding twenty-five feet from outside of stem to outside of stern-post aloft. Halcyon won.

SECOND DAY.

A Prize of the value of £25, for all yachts not exceeding twelve tons. Same rules as in the £60 prize. £20 to be given annually to the winner of the race. Banshee won.

THIRD DAY.

A Handicap race for all yachts. To carry any canvas they please, provided they declare to the secretary of the club, before the 30th August, what sails they propose carrying. Entrance £1. 45 added by the club. Eagle won. £5 will be given to be competed for by luggers boats. Mary won.

The members were requested to meet at Rosslare, on Monday the 25th of August, to appoint judges and make other arrangements. All yachts were entered before six o'clock on the day previous, with the secretary, Henry D'Arcy, Esq.

CARRICK-ON-SHANNON REGATTA.

The above town presented, on Tuesday, the 15th ult., the largest assemblage of persons of every class which had been congregated in that place within the last thirty years. Many gentlemen of high respectability and standing in society, accompanied by several of the fair daughters of the surrounding counties (Sligo, Roscommon, Cavan, &c.) adding very considerably to the number and materially to the beauty which Leitrim on this occasion presented. The visitors, as well as the inhabitants of Carrick, should feel indebted to the proprietor of the soil, who so kindly aided the Regatta Committee by his munificent donation and other assistance to enable them to carry out their views. The unexpected and unavoidable absence of that gentleman, although generally regretted, was, however, not so severely felt as at first apprehended, for his place was taken and well sustained by Monsieur Victor L. de l'Herault, who employed a steamer for the purpose of affording the ladies and gentlemen present, and particularly those who came a distance, every opportunity of witnessing the sailing, and at the same time to glide over the enchanting waters of the noble Shannon.

THE FIRST RACE.

The regatta commenced precisely at one o'clock, when the following four-oared boats appeared, the men in each being dressed as follows:—

H. Byrne's boat	Green.
C. Moraghan's	Maroon.
B. Moraghan's	Blue.
W. Kelly's	Red.
Capt. Sadler's	White.

The race was well contested while proceeding in the direction of the late Captain Gross's garden, where they were to turn; but on their return the two former led the latter three considerably in the rear. The contention then was between Byrne's and Moraghan's boats, but ultimately Byrne's boat first gained the winning post by nearly a length.

For the second heat three boats started, namely H. Byrne's, C. Moraghan's and B. Moraghan's.—The race excited much interest, but terminated in the arrival of Byrne's boat.

THE SECOND RACE.

For this race the same three boats started, and the contest concluded in the victory of Mr. Byrne.

In the second heat the second and third boats were withdrawn, consequently Mr. Byrne had a "walk-over."

A PUNT RACE was intended, but as no coas were entered there was of course no race. There were, however, some private pulling matches which caused much amusement.

It was also intended to have a turf-boat match for £1, but as only one entered it could not go on.

HOLYWOOD (CO. DOWN) REGATTA.

THURSDAY, August, 17.

This regatta, which is the second for the season that has taken place in the Belfast Lough, came off yesterday at Cultra, under very auspicious circumstances.—The day was remarkably fine, and the sport throughout excellent. Robert Batt, Esq., commodore of the Royal Western Yacht Club of Ireland, acted as commodore on the occasion. About twelve o'clock the Lough off Cultra, presented an animated appearance. Sail boats and row boats flitted about in countless numbers, bedecked with all the flags and finery which the tastes of their respective owners led them to select. The commodore's boat, in particular, looked well, she being literally covered with variegated bunting, combining all the colours of the rainbow. On the shore, at Cultra, the scene was no less animated during the day. Hundreds of persons, young and old, lined the shore and thronged the ditches and fields in the neighbourhood, a great many of whom had come from Belfast. There was also a baul on shore, stationed in a suitable place, and during the day delighted the spectators with their excellent music. The first race was a sailing match for a silver cup, value twenty-five sovereigns. For this race there were five entries, viz., the Cormorant, belonging to Mr. J. Charley; Sprite, belonging to Mr. J. G. McGee; Breeze, belonging to Mr. Alex. McCoull; Fairy, belonging to Mr. McCollough; and Vestris, belonging to Mr. T. S. Petty. At ten minutes past one o'clock, a gun was fired from the commodore's boat, and the boats abovementioned started for the race. Vestris led the way, closely followed by the Cormorant and Sprite, with Breeze next, and Fairy last. The course was from the commodore's yacht, round a red buoy, north of the light-house; thence round the Carrick buoy; thence round the commodore's yacht at Cultra, keeping on the starboard. The yachts were obliged to go twice round the course above described. The Cormorant passed the commodore's yacht, first round, at forty minutes past three; Sprite, at nineteen minutes past four; Vestris, at thirty-five minutes past four; Breeze, at fifty minutes past four; and Fairy some time after. In going the first round, the boats were partially becalmed; but on the second round a light breeze sprang up, which was of great advantage to the competing boats. Before, however, they went far, the wind again fell; and, during the remainder of the race, there was scarcely a curl upon the water. After a tolerably good race, the first two boats came into the commodore's yacht in the following order:—

	h. m.
Cormorant	6 24
Sprite	6 48

The other yachts were left far behind.

The second race was a sailing match also, for a prize of ten sovereigns. It was open to all pleasure-boats not exceeding five tons. The following boats were started for the race:—The Eagle, belonging to Mr. Chernside; Jenny, belonging to Mr. Thompson; Cloud, belonging to Mr. Kennedy; Anna, belonging to Mr. Edgar; Bloomer, belonging to Mr. McCutcheon; and Lightning belonging to Mr. Ballagh. At the starting, which took place at a quarter past two o'clock, the Cloud took the lead, closely followed by Lightning and Anna. The course was the same as in the first race, but it was only once round. After a beautiful race, the boats came in to the commodore's yacht in the following order:—

	h. m.
Jenny	4 51
Anna	4 52
Cloud	4 53
Lightning	0 00
Bloomer	0 00
Eagle	0 00

The result of this well-contested race shows that the Bangor boats were again superior to the Holywood boats; the Jenny and Anna, belonging to the former place, and the Cloud, Lightning, Bloomer, and Eagle, to the latter. During the period occupied by the sail-boat races, a number of other races took place between yaws, gigs, and punts respectively, and small prizes were given in each case. A race of punts, rowed by women, also came off, and, as might be expected, it created a considerable deal of excitement and merriment. The Belfast women came off victorious. The race for four-oared yaws was a most exciting one. Unfortunately, two of the boats were fouled and thrown out of the race, by a lubberly lugger running athwart them just at the start; but the two that got off rowed most manfully, and, at the finish, were so close that the spectators on the shore could not distinguish which had won, but the commodore gave his decision in favour of the Swallow, the Irish Girl second; the other two boats were the Water Witch and the Wouder. The boat from Killinichy, without a name, did not put in an appearance. The third sailing match was not started, owing to the want of wind. We understand it is postponed until next week, and that a cup has been subscribed for by the beaten yachts. The day's proceedings terminated between seven and eight o'clock.

YANKEE YACHTING. SOUTHERN YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

PASS CHRISTIAN, July 17, 1854.

The nineteenth regatta of the Southern Yacht Club has just closed, and the prizes are being awarded to the victors. I have only time to give you a very brief sketch with the result. There were eight entries for the race:—

1st Class—Sylph, entered by J. G. Robinson	Mystery, entered by Louis Lafontaine
2nd Class—Venture, entered by S. Storey	Singapore, entered by H. Harebush
3rd Class—Elephant, entered by C. Braisted	White Squal, entered by J. Mahoney
Spray, entered by W. Ryan

The boats got off at ten minutes before one o'clock, well together, with the exception of Mystery, a very large boat in her class, which was delayed a few seconds in hauling in her heavy anchor. The stake-boats were so placed that the race should be a triangular one; the starting point being in front of the wharf at this place, the second in the direction of Cat Island, and the third eastwardly from the starting point, each boat being two and a half miles apart, and the contesting boats having to pass twice around the whole course, a distance in all of fifteen miles. The Mystery was the first to round the far stake-boat, closely followed by the Ripple and the Sylph; the Venture and the Elephant passing together a moment after; then the White Squal, the Spray, and the Singapore. These positions were closely maintained throughout the first round, the only variation being that the Sylph had taken the second position in front of the Ripple, and the Venture had worked ahead of the little Elephant.

In rounding the home stake-boat, the Mystery unfortunately mistook her directions and turned the wrong way, allowing at least one minute, if not two, to be lost before she had regained her course. The issue of the race was no longer doubtful by the time the fleet turned the first stake-boat in the second round, Colonel Robinson's Sylph turning it first. From this point the race lost most of its interest in consequence of the gradual dying away of the wind. Through the last mile or two the boats literally crawled along, with hardly enough breeze to overcome the ebbing tide. As will be seen by the table below, the Sylph came in ahead 6 minutes 40 seconds; the Mystery second, beating the Venture only 23 seconds; fourth the Ripple, 5 minutes 7 seconds behind the Venture. Of the third class boats, the Elephant came in 1 minute and one second ahead of the White Squal, and 3 minutes 57 seconds ahead of the Spray. The Singapore, most unfortunate in having no breeze, brought up the rear, 6 minutes 24 seconds behind the Spray.

Of course this is independent of the time allowed to the different boats for difference in measurement, but this allowance will not affect the prizes. These last are beautiful pieces of silver; that for the Victor of the first class, a waiter with half a dozen goblets; for the second, an elegant fruit stand; and for the third a massive card basket. They are to be presented this evening, by Colonel Christy of your city. The presentation scene will doubtless be one of interest and merriment.

The hotel here is very well filled by a gay and fashionable company. Montgomery's old friends cling to him closely, and he makes new ones every day. The hotel itself was never kept better, and never more deserving of encouragement and favour.

The following is the official time-table of the regatta, showing when each boat passed the first and second stake-boats and completed the first round, and also the time of the final coming in.

	1st Boat.	2nd Boat.	1st Round.	Arr. In
	h. m. s.	h. m. s.	h. m. s.	h. m. s.
1st Class—Sylph	1 54 10	2 25 10	2 51 30	6 10 40

In great haste, your friend,

THE REGATTA AT YALE COLLEGE.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., July 22, 1854.

Among the numerous exercises concomitant to the commencement at Yale College, none are more popular than the annual regatta by the students who compose the "Yale Navy." This occurred this forenoon in the broad harbour of New Haven, and was witnessed by hundreds of eager spectators, who thronged Atwater-street and the adjacent residences and wharves. The many sail-boats and decorated skiffs which filled the bay imparted to the scene an animated and merry appearance. The day itself was well suited to the occasion, as the hot rays of the sun were intercepted by hazy clouds.

Ten boats compose the "Yale Navy," of which four entered for the race. These were the Atlanta, which is thirty feet long, belongs to the Juniors, and has N. Willis Buntstead, of Boston, as captain; the Nautilus, built by James, of New York, is forty feet long, belongs to the Freshmen, and has W. Boyd Wilson, of Philadelphia, as captain; the Rowena and the Transit, both built by Darling, of New York—the former thirty-five feet long—belongs to the Freshmen, George Tucker, of Bermuda Island, being captain; and the latter the property of the Engineer Department, is forty feet long, and has Adrian Terry, of N. H., as captain.

The goal was placed a mile and a half out into the bay, and it was required to run around that and back again to the original position.

At the appointed hour, nine o'clock, these boats, with their crews in handsome uniform, rowed to the place of starting. As the signal was given the champions shot like arrows towards the goal. The excitement of the multitude was intense. As they came within a half-mile of the goal they were for a time lost to view, and then, as they again came in sight, it was discovered that the Nautilus had distanced its rivals, and was rapidly approaching its journey's end, while its nearest opponent, the Transit, was some fifty feet behind. Again was the multitude wrapt in breathless silence; but as the Nautilus crossed the boundary a hearty "three-times-three-and-three-more" rung along the shore from the large concourse on behalf of the small-bodied Freshmen who had come off so gloriously. The race occupied fourteen minutes.

When the different crews had sufficiently recovered from fatigue, the drum beat again to summon them to the "Drill Match." This was a review before the Commodore of the Navy and the Awarding Committee, and consisted of various nautical evolutions designed to test the skill and discipline of the parties. The prize was awarded to the Transit.

At last, when all was over, the scholastic mariners repaired to the Pavilion Hotel, where the prizes were awarded. A beautifully-carved back-board to the Nautilus, and a silver-capped boat-hook to the Transit. An appropriate presentation speech was made by W. H. L. Barnes, of the class of '55.—New York Tribune.

* * We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others, forwarding their Assignments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience.

CHRISTCHURCH, LAMBETH, AND SOUTHWARK REGATTA.

This third annual regatta for a cent and badge, two freedoms of the Waterman's Company, and a pair of silver oars, presented by Mr. E. Graves, took place on Monday, and collected a vast assemblage of spectators. The competitors were apprentices who had served five years and upwards of their time upon the river, between London and Putney-bridges; and the above prizes were distributed according to the prowess developed by the young rowers, who certainly exerted themselves most manfully. All had done their best to get into proper condition, and F. Weedon was the favourite. It may be remembered that this youth rowed a dead heat with T. Pocock, at the Thames Regatta, and exhibited style and courage of the most unequivocal description—rowing until he absolutely fainted in his boat. The race was in three heats, with eight competitors.

FIRST HEAT.
F. Weedon, Chelsea	1
F. Hill, Queanibet	2
W. Lloyd, Carl Church	0
J. Jones, Westminster	0

The distance varied in each heat. In this (the first) the men started from London-bridge, up round Waterloo-bridge, down round Southwark-bridge, and back to Blackfriars-bridge. The race was smartly contested for some distance, when Weedon, with a fair lead, began to row within himself, and came in first by sixty or seventy yards.

SECOND HEAT.
W. Joyce, Lambeth	1
F. Barnes, Christchurch	2
J. Taylor, Lambeth	0
W. Giff, Putney	0

In this heat they started from Blackfriars-bridge, up round Gosling's-roads, down round Southwark-bridge, and up to Blackfriars to finish. The first-named three were all together for some distance, and Taylor, hampered by a boat in his course, having fallen astern, the other two finished in advance.

FINAL HEAT.
F. Weedon	Crimson 1
Hill	Green 2
Joyce	Dark blue 0

This heat was contested much higher up the river, starting from Vauxhall-bridge, down to Hungerford Suspension-bridge, and up to Mr. A. Wentzell's, the Ship, Lambeth, to finish. After two rapid starts, which were, for some inexplicable reason, called "false ones," the men scrambled away very irregularly, Pink being closely followed by Green and Crimson. The latter soon overhauled the second-named, and at Mallett's roads went in front. He retained it after this, although close-pressed for some distance, and upon the upper turn was three or four lengths ahead, ultimately winning with tolerable ease.

WINDERMERE WRESTLING AND REGATTA.

These sports took place at the Ferry Hotel. Both days were fine. On the first day there was a numerous gathering, and all were decently attired. There was such a uniformity of good behaviour, that all distinctions of rank were done away with; for, says a correspondent, we saw the Lord Mayor of London give a poor working-man a cigar. The sports commenced with some rowing matches, and followed with wrestling.

FIRST DAY.

Four-oared Boat Race.

Cloriana	Heywood, Crossinwhite, Nelson, Robinson	1
Talkin	Sprent, Thompson, Gibson, Satterthwaite	2

Skiff Race.

Heatherbell	William Robinson.
Won by many lengths, beating four others.

Light-Weight Wrestling.

Stood.	FOURTH ROUND.	Fell.
John Hewitson		William Hubert.
Noble Edwards		John Jackson.
Joseph Hullah		Michael Bramton.
Thomas Ellis, odd man.

FIFTH ROUND.

Stood.	Fell.
Thomas Ellis	Noble Edwards.
John Hewitson	Joseph Hullah.

In the final fall Ellis threw Hewitson twice in succession, and received £1; Hewitson, £2. Those who fell in the fifth round got £1 each; those in the fourth round, 10s. each; and those in the third round, 5s. 6d. each.

SECOND DAY.

The morning again all sunshine, and the company more numerous and respectable than on the former day. The sports again commenced with boat-racing.

Four-oared Race.

Windermere	Sprent, Thompson, Gibson, Satterthwaite	1
Moonbeam	Heywood, Crossinwhite, Robinson, Huddleston	2

Skiff Race.

Prince	Thomas Chapman	1
Velocity	William Robinson	2
Lab	George Heywood	3

Heavy-Weight Wrestling.

Stood.	FOURTH ROUND.	Fell.
Adam Walker.....		Robert Jackson.
Thomas Longs.....		Isaac Woodcut.
William Edwards.....		Thomas Goldthard.
Robert Berran.....		George Holmes.

SIXTH ROUND.

Stood.	Fell.
Thomas Longs	Adam Walker.
William Edwards	Robert Berran.

In the final falls, Longs vanquished Berran, and gained the first prize, £5; Berran, £2; those who fell in the fifth round, 15s.; those in the fourth round, 7s. 6d.; and those in the third round received 5s. each. The sports concluded with twenty-four picked men, and we give the result from the—

Stood,	THIRD ROUND,	Fell.
Thomas Todd	..	Robert Barren
William Miller	..	Robert Faguet
Thomas Ellis	..	Isaac Woodcut
Stood,	FOURTH ROUND,	Fell.

FOURTH ROUND.

Stood.	Fell.
Thomas Ellis	Thomas Todd.
William Miller, odd man.

In the final falls Miller capsize Ellis without an effort, and carried off the chief prize, £5; Ellis, £1; and the fourth next, 5s. each.

REGATTA AT GREEN BAY, WISCONSIN.—The enterprising young men of Green Bay have been enjoying an exciting and well-contested sailing match on the Fox River, between the Bay and Depore. The Daily Wisconsin informs us that six sail-boats entered for the prize, a silver cup valued at $25. The sailing time consumed three hours, when the Bay Fly came in about a quarter of a mile ahead. The winning boat was sailed by E. B. Wheelock, G. O. Haywood, Dr. C. E. Crane, and William Thompson. They were presented with a finely-wrought silk flag, by Mr. Beaumont.—American Paper.

A Country Solicitor—The important alteration in the law of debtor and creditor will take place on the 24th October, next month. By the Common Law Procedure Act (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125) it is provided that a creditor who has obtained a judgment in any of the superior courts may apply to the court for a judgment in any of the inferior courts. The judgment should be orally examined as to any and what debts are owing to him before a master of the court, or such other person as the court or judge shall appoint, and the court or judge may make such rule or order for the examination of such judgment debtor, and for the production of any books or documents, and the examination shall be conducted in the same manner as in the case of an oral examination of an opposite party before a master. A judge may order an attachment of the debts, which order of attachment is to bind the debts. The third party owing the money is called the garnishee, and proceedings may be adopted to levy the amount due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor. A judge may allow the judgment creditor to sue, and the garnishee is to be discharged as against the judgment debtor to the amount paid or levied, although such proceedings may be set aside or the judgment reversed.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THE expedition to the Crimea had actually sailed when the latest news left Turkey. Long ere this the greatest achievement of the war must have commenced, and, it may be, has been accomplished. Every day increases the anxiety with which intelligence is expected.

There seems no doubt that the Baltic campaign is ended for the season, and its termination is, in several quarters, considered as premature. It is thought that the capture of Bomarsund, after a brief bombardment, had rendered it clear that the vaunted fortifications of the Russians were not proof against the iron storm which could be hurled from our floating batteries, and that something more important might be attempted in the yet considerable period before ice sets in. Sir Charles Napier's return, after making neither the visit to St. Petersburg nor the alternative one which he is currently reported to have promised, will excite some remark. But the tidings from the Crimea, which may announce that Russia's key to the Mediterranean has fallen into the hands of the allies, and that her whole Black Sea fleet has been burned or taken, will probably cause the Baltic to be forgotten in England. In Russia the result will be different; and it is not difficult to foresee that the imperial scribes, while admitting and undervaluing our successes in the south, will point exultingly to the north, and urge that the finest fleet that ever left England's shores has returned to them, having effected nothing. It will be added that our boasted blockade has done little towards the injury of Russian commerce, the neutral attitude of Prussia having enabled the Russian merchants to transmit their goods through that country.

Count Coronini, the Austrian General, entered the capital of Wallachia on the 6th inst., and the defenders of the Ministry argue that the advance upon Sebastopol has been undertaken at the earliest moment at which it could be prudent—namely, as soon as England and France were certain that Austria really intended to act fairly by them. Our business is to record, not to refute, and therefore we shall abstain from entering into any examination of this proposition. Others may possibly observe, that if the attack was to be delayed until the entry of Austria made it probable that she was inclined to protect herself (the movement really comes to little more), the official announcement that the expedition was to sail five or six weeks ago was insincere. And more vigorous disputants may be disposed to ask whether England and France were justified in wasting all these months, while the Austrian Cabinet refused to speak out; and whether a more peremptory requisition might not have saved the lives of thousands, who have been dying while diplomatists chattered. And we will add—neither asserting nor denying our belief in the truth of the statement—that it is widely current that the attack upon the Crimea has been brought about by the representations of the Emperor of France, who is alleged to have declared that if the English forces would not proceed to the assault, he should feel it his duty to order it to be made by those of France alone. If this be true, Louis Napoleon has put forth an additional claim to the especial favour with which an enemy of Russia must be regarded by the Premier of England.

The Prince Consort left Boulogne at night, amid fireworks, salutes, and less noisy, but more cordial, demonstrations, and returned to Osborne. The sojourn of the Royal Family in Scotland will be brief this year. The Emperor of France continues to watch over his Boulogne camp, but will shortly make a visit to the Empress for the gallant purpose of escorting her Majesty, from her watering-place seclusion, to Compiègne. It is considered possible that the great Industrial Exhibition, to be opened in Paris in May, will afford Queen Victoria an opportunity of visiting the Emperor and Empress in their capital; and very sanguine people rumour, that the Sydenham Versailles, when the fountains are ready, may afford a similar opportunity to Louis Napoleon and his Consort to return the call.

The fearful epidemic which has raged among us is decreasing, but the Registrar General's return for last week is sadly significant. He observes that the population of London exceeds 2,362,236, and that in the week ending Saturday last, 3,413 persons died, or 2,165 more than have, on an average, died in the corresponding week of former years. But, he adds, in the week ending September 8, 1849, when cholera raged, 3,183 persons died, so that, allowing for the increase of population, the rate of mortality is lower than during the time of the former affliction. Of the number of deaths just mentioned, 2,050 have occurred through cholera. The official's anticipations are hopeful, but he advises that not for a moment should zeal slacken. Provincial returns do not enable us to speak with much certainty as to the course of the disease; but in Scotland, we are happy to learn that its area and intensity have diminished.

There is little domestic news of interest. The abundant harvest has been got in with every advantage of glorious weather, but as yet it has not produced a corresponding cheapness of food; and in some provincial localities the impatience of the working classes—who have not profited by mechanics' institutions, the Waverley Novels, and lectures on poetry, sufficiently to understand that smashing bakers' windows will not bring down the price of bread—have caused disturbances which reflection and the presence of the military have abated. The officers of the 46th, as might be expected, have reaped the benefit of the continuous attacks of certain portions of the press, and the rabble of Windsor deem themselves justified in insulting the military upon all occasions. It seemed somewhat thin-skinned, however, in a couple of the officers to cause the arrest of a little boy for an act of impertinence, and a sharp attorney might make a job out of the affair—we write as fair sportsmen, who like to see the capacities of every animal exerted according to its nature. The subscriptions for the Perry defence and testimonial continue to be received;—the application of the money for the former purpose is not difficult, but the second object involves a more delicate question, as it is hard to say what particular act of Mr. Perry's life is exactly suitable for representation.

REDOUT KALEH, BLACK SEA.

in frosted-silver, unless it be his graceful reception of the regimental order, adverted to in the earlier part of the evidence. The musical festivals occupy many of our provincial friends, and the inauguration of St. George's Hall at Liverpool is looked to with great interest.

The Church has its troubles as the layman hath, and these are of them. Archdeacon Wilberforce resigns his preferments, being convinced that the Church of England's doctrine of the Queen's supremacy is contrary to the truth, and holding views on the Transubstantiation question which are certainly not those of Anglican divines. The Bishop of Oxford, the Archdeacon's brother, is reported to favour his relative's views, and a clergyman of his diocese, the Rev. Mr. Brock, has called upon his lordship for explanation. The Bishop says that there are points in his "dear brother's book" (on the Eucharist) to which he objects; but, with the art of a practised disputant, he carries the war into the enemy's country, and accuses Mr. Brock of trying to scandalise his ecclesiastical brethren. As his diocesan, he asks him to go on his knees, and ask himself whether he is not guilty of this sin. Mr. Brock, undaunted, states that he has made the inquiry recommended, and has been answered in the negative; so he returns to the attack, and likens Dr. Wilberforce to Dr. Philpotts. We shall hear more of this affair, and of the Archdeacon of Taunton, whose views are even more advanced than those of ex-Archdeacon Wilberforce.

Queen Christina is safe in Portugal, and has already begun to protest against the course which has been adopted towards her. Prussia has issued a circular, expressing her hope that Austria will not be led into any act of hostility against Russia, as there is no casus belli. The only other foreign news of interest is to be found in various statements of the political condition of the United States. There a body called the Know-Nothings (from their declaration that they will know nothing except the interests of the Union, as understood by them), are agitating against foreigners, and especially against the Roman-Catholic Irish, some of whom, under the management of their priests, are rendered about as great a nuisance to society as they were before their transportation. The avowed policy of the Know-Nothings—who are variously represented as strong and as weak, as an institution and as an accident—is, however, founded on false political philosophy, and will fail as a remedy for the mischief it would correct.

THE EMPEROR AND PRINCE ALBERT AT BOULOGNE.

THE little town of Marquise, which was selected as the base of the military operations arranged by the Emperor of the French as a parting compliment to Prince Albert, is situated on a rising ground some nine miles from Boulogne, on the road to Calais. We started from the Hotel Bedford, at five o'clock, and soon burst into a fine country, teeming with fertility and verdure, and diversified by every variety of hill and dale, meadow and corn-field. The start looked fair, but we were soon brought up by a rush of piqueurs, who came to clear the way, and inform all whom it might concern that the Emperor and his illustrious guest were coming. So we drew up in the road-side, and soon had the pleasure of seeing the imperial carriage fly past at the top speed of four splendid bays. In it sat the Emperor, with Prince Albert on his right hand, and on the opposite seat the Duke of Newcastle and Marshal Vaillant. Several carriages and four followed, containing the members, English and French, of the little court at the Hotel Brighton, and then a char-à-banc full freighted with the naval officers of the British squadron. A squadron of Guides galloped behind, and then our position, getting his lean horses into a sort of distracted gallop, brought us to the ground at a speed which could hardly have been expected under the circumstances. A curl of grey smoke rising over the nearest hill, and the sound of artillery, indicated that the imperial party had reached the ground, and that the petite guerre would soon commence. The ground selected was not a mere extended plain, upon which holiday manœuvres might be gone through with ease and safety; but, on the contrary, presented a most rough and irregular surface, offering to the opposing generals all the difficulties that might be supposed to occur in a real battle-field, and calculated to bring out the agility, efficiency, and discipline of every arm of the service. There were narrow rutty roads over which the artillery had to be dragged at a gallop; precipitous slopes, which tried the sure-footedness of the cavalry horses, and the skill of their riders in the manège; heavy ploughed fields to exercise the Chasseurs de Vincennes in their famous pas gymnastique; and deep ravines in which infantry might take shelter from the artillery, and from which they might subsequently be driven by dashing cavalry charges, or the worrying fire of the Tirailleurs. The Emperor and Prince Albert, both of whom wore the cordon of the Legion of Honour, alighted from their carriage at about seven o'clock, when the latter immediately mounted his horse; but in a moment, recollecting that the Emperor was still on foot, again dismounted and waited until his Majesty was in the saddle. Amongst the gay cavalcade by which the two principal figures were surrounded, were the Duc d'Albe, the Emperor's beaufrère, Lord Seaton, his Excellency Suleiman Pasha, Lords Ranelagh, Colville, Chelsea, and a Prussian general officer, with whom Prince Albert conversed frequently; the Duke of Newcastle, in the uniform of the Notts Yeomanry Cavalry; General Grey, and a host of others, English and French, not particularly remarkable for anything but their uniforms.

With respect to the number of troops present there was the greatest discrepancy in the estimates. However, General Grey informed me that the actual number present was 22,000. The pervading intention of the day's evolutions was, that the Emperor, commanding at and covering Boulogne, should be attacked by a hostile army under General Schramm, and coming from Calais. When the operations were about to commence, Prince Albert expressed a wish to go over to the enemy and see the evolutions from that side, and the Emperor with prompt courtesy at once complied with his Royal Highness's wishes. An aide-de-camp was ordered to escort the Prince, and by an odd coincidence Edgar Ney, the son of the Marshal of sad celebrity, was selected for the duty. During nearly the whole of the evolutions the Emperor, who rode his favourite English chestnut, was alone, riding considerably in advance of his staff, and beckoning occasionally to an aide-de-camp or an orderly, as a message was about to be despatched. His Imperial Majesty's mode of conducting proceedings formed a singular contrast with that of his generals, and indeed of every French officer, down to the lowest grade. With him everything was cool, quiet, and systematic; and whether his horse galloped, walked, or stood still, the rider still preserved his immovable position, and never spoke when by pointing his finger he could indicate what he wished to be done. With the officers, on the contrary, everything indicated an almost frantic amount of excitement. They galloped along like so many whirlwinds, shouted their orders as if they were Arabs of the Daira, and maintained a chronic state of crisis during the whole of the day. This, however, is digression. The enemy were now advancing, and fire-firing was heard all along their line. The Emperor now threw out a cloud of Tirailleurs, who occupied every hedge-row, tree, and bush, now jumping like squirrels, now falling flat on their faces to avoid the enemy's fire, now turning on their backs and delivering their own over their toes. They were, of course, soon driven in as the enemy advanced; but the Emperor was ready with his artillery, the evolutions of which were extremely beautiful and rapid. Each gun was drawn by six horses, and each battery contained six guns. At a signal from the Emperor a battery detached itself from the main pack, and the manner in which the cumbersome guns and gun-carriages were whisked along narrow roads, over ploughed fields, and through standing corn, elicited universal commendation. Having taken up their position on a gentle eminence, inconveniently near to some Englishmen (who, having had to scamp about like Spahis for an hour before, had quietly seated themselves on the grass), they commenced firing, a gun at a time, with astounding rapidity, and the effect of their practice was soon visible in the wavering ranks of the enemy. The Emperor's main line now advanced, and the engagement became general. Contrary to the Napoleonic system of the last war, there were no columns of infantry, but on both sides the advance was made in line, in addition to which another approach to the Duke's tactique was observed in making the advance only two deep instead of three, thus getting a front one half-greater in extent than by the old system. The Guides, who had stood all the morning on a grassy knoll—the admiration of everyone for their splendid uniforms and fine appearance—now got the signal to advance and support the infantry. In their progress to their scene of action, which was in the hollow, they had to descend an exceedingly precipitous slope, and nothing could be more remarkable than the admirable manner in which this most difficult feat of horsemanship was performed by several hundred men. It looked more like some splendid procession at Astley's or Franconi's than an actual movement in the field. I expected every moment to see some poor fellow go, horse and all, headforemost to the bottom; but happily both horses and riders were quite up to their work, and landed safe on level ground. From this time smoke and noise began to be all we could appreciate of the actual battle. The enemy, being driven into a wood, made another stand, and were again dislodged. The battle had now turned, and the whole of the imperial army was advancing at all points. Four regiments of heavy dragoons were ordered to charge the retiring enemy, and this afforded to General Schramm an opportunity for trying the efficiency of the hollow square, another manœuvre borrowed from the Duke, but appropriated by the French under the name of the Carré St. Arnaud. The marshal's system is to support it with artillery at the angles, and in this form General Schramm adopted it as a dernier ressort. But nothing could withstand the impetuosity of the dragoons, who charged magnificently, and carried everything before them. The retreat of the enemy became a rout, and the victorious Emperor, who had in the meantime been re-joined by Prince Albert, repaired to a pleasant pavilion on the slope of a hill to enjoy at once his barrels and his luncheon. His Majesty and the Prince might here be seen walking up and down together in a familiar manner, discussing the exciting events of the day. While thus engaged the trumpet sounded for all the troops, friends and foes, to return to their quarters; and it became perceptible that in order to give Prince Albert an opportunity of seeing the whole of the troops, the tent had been so placed as that each regiment must pass close by on the way to its quarters. By this delicate attention the day's evolutions were made to close with a most attractive pageant. The bayonets of the infantry glistened in immense masses of light as each dense column turned over the brow of the hill. Splendid cavalcades of dragoons and lancers continuously rode past, the artillery lumbered silently along, and every now and then some regimental band struck up a lively air, to which the eternal fanfare of the trumpets formed a sort of running accompaniment. Everyone said this finale was the finest sight of the whole.

CHOLERA: ITS ORIGIN TRACED TO OLD FLOUR.

A GENTLEMAN connected with the fraternity of millers, whose name, for obvious reasons, we refrain from mentioning, has attended before Alderman Farcrother, at Guildhall and made the following communication relative to the epidemic which is at present spreading its devastating influence over the metropolis. He stated that in 1832 he purchased a large quantity of old foreign flour in bond, and while tasting it for the purpose of separating the fresher from the staler, both he and his men were seized with sickness and excessive salivation, accompanied with disordered bowels. He tried some of the same old flour in his own family, and the consequence was that three of his children were seized with violent purgings and sickness, as in the case of cholera, which disease soon after made its appearance in London. After attentively watching its progress, he was convinced it arose from the consumption of old bread-stuffs, and he accordingly determined not to supply any old flour to his customers. The result proved that not one of them had the cholera, even in its most incipient stage, although exposed to the same disadvantages in other respects as those around them, who were daily falling victims to this evil malady. He wrote to Sir Robert Peel, who was then Prime Minister, and his letter was referred to the Board of Health, who granted him an interview, but as he was not a medical man they merely listened to him, and there the matter ended. On one occasion he became aware that a quantity of stale wheat was about being shipped from London to Leeds, and he foretold that if that corn was allowed to reach its destination the cholera would follow in its wake. Within fifteen days after the cholera broke out in Leeds with great virulence. He said that in all the Russian wars against Turkey and Poland the cholera had always accompanied the armies of either country when traversing navigable rivers; and in the war of independence in Poland, when news arrived that Warsaw was short of provisions and had surrendered, he prognosticated that the cholera would visit that part, because he knew that Warsaw would have to draw upon the same old stores that had previously given to the Russians that disease. The visitation did come, attended with the most calamitous results. He did not complain of five or seven years-old wheat. He alluded to that which was received in the above countries in lieu of money for taxes, and which was stored in warehouses for

METROPOLIS.

ATTEMPT OF A MOTHER TO MURDER HER CHILDREN BY DROWNING.

On Tuesday Anne Parker, a married woman, was placed at the bar, before Mr. Long, at Marylebone, charged with having attempted to drown her children, Henry Parker, aged six years, and Thomas Parker, aged four years, by throwing them into the Regent's canal, Regent's-park. The prisoner, who was of short stature, and whose right eye was blackened and swollen, as if from the effect of some severe blow, was accompanied by her offspring, who stood on either side of her. It was evident to all in court, from their manner, that they had been well brought up, while they exhibited the most sincere affection to their unfortunate parent, which was plainly reciprocal on her part. The nature of the charge having been stated to the magistrate, Police-constable White, D 125, said, that about a quarter past six o'clock on the previous evening he was on duty at the north side of the Regent's-park, when his attention was drawn towards the Regent's canal by hearing some exclamations of distress, which appeared to proceed from the voices of children. He proceeded towards the spot, when, upon reaching the slope that inclines from the park to the bank on the side of the canal, he observed the prisoner, who had one of her children in her arms, looking about. He at the same time observed another child in the water. He hastened to her, and reached her before she effected her purpose, which, from her confession afterwards, was to throw the child into the canal. He pushed her on one side and jumped into the water to rescue the one which was there, and at a few feet from the bank. This was the younger one of the two. He got it ashore just as its head was sinking below the surface of the water. Had he not arrived at the moment he did, he had no doubt but that the child would have been drowned, as the water was in that part about seven feet in depth. After the child was brought out, he observed a small basket, which led him to suppose that a younger child might have been thrown in by the prisoner. He made a search, but while doing so, ascertained that there was no other child there. He told her that she must go with him to the station-house. She offered some resistance, and said, that if he had not made his appearance at the time he did, it was her intention to have drowned the child she had in her arms, and then to have thrown herself into the canal. When they got to the top of the bank she tried to release herself from him, and partially succeeded, to run down the bank. He had much difficulty in taking her to the station-house, where, while the charge was being taken, she again said that she intended to do for the two children.

Mr. Long: To do for them?—Witness: Yes, sir; for them, she said, and herself. She was very violent, and it took three policemen to place her in the cell.

Mr. Long: Did she say where she came from?—Witness: She said that she came from Essex.

Mr. Long: Did she say from what part of Essex?—Witness: Yes, from Plaistow.

Mr. Long: Did she say where her husband was?—Witness: She stated that her husband had deserted her, and that he had done so several times.

Mr. Long: Was there any other remark made by her?—Witness: Yes, your worship; on her way to the police-court that morning she observed that had he (the witness) not have been at the canal she would have finished herself and her two children.

Mr. Long: Did she tell you the name of the youngest child?—Witness: Yes; that it was Thomas Parker. She had 3s. in silver, and 7d. in copper, in her pocket. There was also a pawnbroker's ticket of a jetticoat, pledged on the 17th of August last.

The prisoner stated that it was trouble which had led her to attempt to destroy her children; that on Saturday last her husband knocked her about and tried to strangle her.

Mr. Long: Have you anything more to say?—Prisoner: Yes, sir. My husband left me six months ago, and ten days ago as well. He said he would kill me, as last night, if I was at home. He cut my head and ear with a stick.

Mr. Long: Is that all?—Prisoner: I have nothing further to say.

Mr. Long, seeing Mr. Tubbs, relieving officer of the parish of St. Marylebone, in court, observed that he supposed the parish would take care of the children, and would endeavour to find the father.

Mr. Tubbs said that the children should be at once admitted, and that he would endeavour to find the father.

The prisoner was then fully committed to take her trial at the ensuing Central Criminal Court.

The prisoner, on parting from her children, kissed them affectionately. She remarked to them that they soon would be separated, when they would never see her any more. She urged them to say their prayers, and told them to inform their father what had been her instruction to them.

HEALTH OF LONDON.—(From the Registrar-General's Return).—The population of London exceeds 2,362,236; and in the week ending Saturday last 3,413 persons died, or 2,165 more than have on an average died in the corresponding week of former years. But in the week ending September 8th 1849, when cholera raged, 3,183 persons died; so, allowing for increase of population, the rate of mortality for the week is lower than the rate of 1848. 2,050 persons, namely, 954 males, 1,096 females, 614 children under fifteen years of age; 1,128 men and women of 15 and under 60, and 287 old people, have died of cholera; 276 persons have died of diarrhoea. The deaths from cholera in the last nine weeks have been 5,26, 153, 399, 644, 729, 847, 1,287, 2,050; and in the aggregate 6,120 persons have lost their lives by the disease. The sun has had great power, but clouds and fogs have intervened; no rain has fallen; the wind has been dry and languid, the electricity positive, but the temperature of the air and of the Thames is declining. The decline of the temperature, the analogy of the two epidemics of 1832 and 1849, as well as the remedial measures that are now brought into operation, justify us in anticipating that the epidemic will, ere long, gradually subside.

SUICIDE CAUSED BY FEAR OF WRITS.—Mr. G. S. Brent, deputy-coroner for Middlesex, has just held an inquest at the Turk's Head Tavern, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square, touching the death of Mr. William Nittle, aged fifty-four, a gentleman residing at 13, Charlotte-street, who committed suicide in his bedroom by cutting his throat with a razor. The deceased was a native of Liskeard, in Cornwall, and had formerly been in very affluent circumstances, but had become connected with mining speculations, which had turned out unfortunately, and which had involved him in considerable pecuniary difficulties for some time past. Mrs. Stimpson, the landlady of the house, stated that the deceased had lodged with her about two months, and was at times very cheerful. For some time past there had been two men waiting about the house to serve him with writs, and that fact preyed heavily upon his mind. On Friday morning Mrs. Stimpson went up as usual to serve him with shaving-water, and upon opening the door she obtained no answer to her inquiries, when she saw the floor covered with blood. She instantly raised an alarm, when medical assistance was immediately procured; but, on examination of the body by the surgeon, life was found to be entirely gone. The jury, after hearing some further evidence, returned a verdict of suicide during a state of temporary insanity.

Our Opera-Glass.

DRURY-LANE.—On Monday night this house was re-opened for a short operatic season, and a numerous audience celebrated the event. Mr. Wallace's favourite opera of "Maritana" was the work selected, and it was supported by a company derived from various sources. Madame Rindersdorff was the prima donna; Mr. Elliot Galer represented Don Cesar; a gentleman named Dusek impersonated the King; and Don José was played by Mr. Corrie. The audience seemed highly gratified, if any reliance is to be placed on applause and bouquets, but the only part that was filled with real effectiveness was that of Maritana. Madame Rindersdorff shone above the rest, like an artist in a company of respectable amateurs; but we can hardly suppose that this style of performance will in the least conduce towards the establishment of a permanent English opera. As a musical freak to stop up a gap in the year, it may do very well.

ADELPHI.—On Monday evening this popular theatre will be re-opened for the winter season. During the short recess—little better than a month—the interior of the theatre has been entirely cleaned and re-decorated, and presents now a most novel and beautiful appearance, from the light and elegant nature of the ornaments employed for its embellishment. In addition, the comforts of the audience have not been overlooked, for the different seats in the boxes and elsewhere have been re-covered and supplied with spring cushions. A new act-drop has also been painted, and altogether our old friend will come out with quite a new face. The same talented actors and actresses as formed the corps dramatique last season are to be found in the list of engagements for the ensuing campaign; and added to them is the name of Mr. Morris Burnett, a gentleman who has earned considerable reputation both as an actor and an author. Mr. Barnett, it appears, has determined to avail himself of several tempting offers to visit the United States; and, previous to his setting out, he has been engaged by the indefatigable lessee of the Adelphi to give twelve farewell performances, the first of which will take place on Monday evening, the character selected being that of Monsieur Jacques, in Mr. Barnett's own touching little drama of the same name. The other pieces chosen for the evening's entertainments are Mr. Webster's drama, "The Discarded Son," and the burlesque of "Norma."

MRS. WARNER.—The performances on Friday, the 15th inst., at Sadler's-wells Theatre, have been long advertised for the benefit of this deserving actress, whom a painful and incurable malady has long prevented from exercising her profession. Miss Charlotte Chisham and Mr. Buckstone were early in the week announced to appear on the occasion.

CHATHAM THEATRE.—Our theatre was opened on Monday evening for a short season by Mr. Edwin Blanchard, and the entertainments attracted a very respectable audience. Judging from a first visit, it appears to be a well-selected company. In the course of the evening the following scene took place, which was not announced in the bills:—In the after-piece, in a "terrific combat" which was taking place, Mr. Blanchard suddenly paused, and advancing to the footlights, addressed the audience to the following effect: "Ladies and gentlemen, I am here for the purpose of offering you some amusement, and not to be insulted by anybody. (Cheers.) Those persons (pointing to some young officers in the boxes) have been continually interrupting the performances ever since they entered the house. (Turn 'em out, turn 'em out.) If they are not pleased with them, let them go to the box-entrance, and their money shall be returned. (Bravo.) If they do not retire of their own accord, or if they continue their interruptions, they will be made to go out. (Cheers, and cries from the galleries, "It's some of the 46th. Go back to Windsor," &c. &c.) This spirited and well-timed address had its due effect, and quiet and order prevailed throughout the remainder of the evening.—Maidstone Journal.

ORIENTAL AND TURKISH MUSEUM, HYDE-PARK CORNER.—Passing by the Wellington Statue, and walking towards Sloane-street, the Turkish Museum is seen immediately on the left, with its roof surmounted by the crescent and star. As from the road the full size of the building is not discoverable, we may mention that the exhibition-hall is 220 feet long, by 40 in width, and therefore admirably adapted for the interesting purpose to which it is at present applied. The figures, all of which are the size of life, were made by Mr. James Boggi, from original sketches in Constantinople, in which capital the costumes in which they are here habited were also prepared. Notwithstanding the number in the room, no two faces are alike, and an expression is given to each countenance far more natural than in any wax-work we have hitherto inspected. A very readable catalogue can be procured at the doors for a shilling, illustrated, and filling seventy pages, replete with much curious information about the Turks, and their habits and customs. We may, here recommend the visitor to walk round the room against, and not with, the sun; for, true to Orientalism, the letters and numbers of the different compartments run from right to left, and not, as in England, from left to right. If this advice be followed, the first place to be seen will be the bath-house, or hamam, close to the entrance, and on the visitor's right, where a divarji, or mason, is seen mending the tiles, and near him, to avert the evil eye, is a bunch of garlic, mingled with coloured beads, together with an ayyl, or quotation from the Koran. A reference to the sixth and tenth pages of the catalogue will explain a score of the mysteries of the hamam, without which assistance the visitor might not understand the terms tubuk, kufes, valum, tass, tabbi, fujiay, zaef, mar-pitch, &c. &c. Next to the bath-house is a barber's, and beyond this a marriage group, with the white-headed Armenian patriarch officiating, and the bride in a golden veil. A group of Osmanlis "at feeding-time" comes next, where four gentlemen, despising all knives and forks, are eating with their fingers as Adam and Eve did. But we must here refrain from any detailed account of this unrivalled exhibition, simply adding, for the information of our lady readers (as we have touched upon meals), that the following is the

THE COURT.

The Queen and the Prince Consort, together with their illustrious Court, quitted Osborne early in the week, and, after passing a day in town, set out en route for Balmoral, by the Great Northern Railway, where her Majesty is expected to arrive this day.

On Monday, at Osborne, Baron de Gersdorf delivered a letter, announcing the death of the late King of Saxony, and returned the insignia of the Order of the Garter worn by his late sovereign.

Don Antonio Gonzales had an audience of the Queen, on Tuesday, at Osborne, and was presented by the Earl of Clarendon, to deliver his credentials as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the Queen of Spain.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

Lord Brougham is expected to take his departure for his chateau in the south of France early in the ensuing month.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Brevintburne are entertaining a distinguished company at Black Mount Forest-house.

His Excellency Don Antonio Gonzales, the newly-appointed Spanish Minister, has arrived at 44, Portland-place, whither the residence of the Legation has been removed from Mansfield-street.

Viscount and Viscountess Villiers have arrived in England, from the Continent, and have joined the party assembled at Sir Robert Peel's, at Drayton-manoor.

Lord Frederick and Lady Augusta Gordon Hallyburton and the Misses Erskine have arrived at Aboyne-castle, on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Huntly.

Lord Stanley (of Alderley) returns to London the week after next, from a tour of visits in the North, to resume his duties at the Board of Trade.

Lord and Lady John Russell and their youthful family are still staying with the Earl of Minto, at Minto-house, near Hawick, where a select family circle is assembled.

The Earl Granville is expected to arrive in London next week from Carlsbad.

The Marquis of Lansdowne leaves Bowood shortly on a tour of visits.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston are residing in comparative retirement at Broadlands.

We regret to record the demise of Lady Adelaide Webber, which took place a few days since at Dublin. The deceased lady was youngest daughter of the late Earl of Kingston, by Lady Helena Moore, only daughter of Stephen, first Earl of Mountcashell. Her ladyship married, in August, 1834, Mr. C. Tankerville Webber.

Lord and Lady Harry Vane are expected in England the week after next, from a tour in Germany.

Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence has left the Ambassador's Court, St. James's, on a tour of visits.

ENTERTAINMENT TO LORD JOHN RUSSELL.—Lord John Russell having consented to preside at the approaching inauguration of the newly elected British Athenæum, it has been determined to invite his lordship to a grand corporate entertainment.

order in which a Turkish dinner is served up: Soup, kebab, vegetables, and meat, pastry, fish, entremet, mohalliy, entremet, macaroni, jelly, entremet, fowls, sweet dish, pelus, and sherbet; and the bread must be always broken, not cut.

WORCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.—The festival of the three choirs was brought to a close by a grand full-dress ball at the Guildhall, which was attended by about 300 of the élite of the county and the surrounding district. Amongst the fashionables present at the ball and during the festival week, were—the Bishop of Worcester and Mrs. Pepsy, the Dean of Worcester and Mrs. Peel, Lord Ward, Lord Sandys, Earl Beauchamp, Lady Georgiana Lygon, Viscount Elhuly, and Hon. Mr. Lygon, Lady Jane Peel, Mr. Lawrence Peel, Rev. Herbert and Mrs. Peel, Rev. Alfred Peel, Lord and Lady Henley, Lady Borough, Lady Henrietta Fernor, Lady Clifton, Archdeacon Sandford and Mrs. Sandford, Earl and Countess Bradford, Earl and Countess Talbot, Lady Victoria and Lady Susanna Talbot, the Dowager Countess Somers, Lady Flower, Lord Leigh, Lord Sandon, Lady Emily Foley, Lord Ammel, Sir Lionel Darell and Lady Darell, Sir E. H. Lechmere and Mr. Lechmere, and Misses Lechmere, Lady Louisa and Miss Fortescue, Sir T. E. Widdington and Lady Widdington, Sir J. Pakington, M. P., Lady Pakington, Mr. Pakington, Sir O. P. Wakeman, Lady Maria Coventry, Hon. W. and Mrs. Coventry, Colonel Clive, Ladies Barbara and Mary Clive, Hon. and Rev. W. W. C. Talbot and Mrs. Talbot, Mr. Laslett, M. P., Mr. Ricardo, M. P., Mr. Foley, M. P., Mr. Lowe, M. P., Hon. and Rev. Mr. Gifford, Lady Valentin, &c. &c. The results of the festival, in a pecuniary point of view, have been most gratifying, the receipts at the doors of the cathedral, for the benefit of the charity for the relief of the widows and orphans of clergy of the dioceses of Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester, having been as follows:—

First day—Tuesday	£255
Second day—Wednesday	323
Third day—Thursday	184
Fourth day—Friday	212

Total

This has never been exceeded at either of the three cathedral cities but on two occasions. A shocking instance of sudden death occurred at the Worcester festival on the Tuesday. Miss Denning, sister of the Rev. P. Denning, of that city, had with several friends entered the Concert-room on Tuesday evening, but scarcely had they taken their seats, when the young lady complained of giddiness, screamed out, and fell; she was immediately taken to her brother's house, which is near the Concert-room, but notwithstanding prompt medical assistance, death took place in about an hour and a half after the seizure. It appears that Miss Denning had attended the morning performances at the cathedral, and had become somewhat excited by the music and the solemnity of the services. She had been subject to slight palpitation of the heart, but it is believed that the cause of death was apoplexy.—Further donations are expected, which will still further swell the receipts for the charity, and so large has been the attendance of company, that it is confidently expected the receipts for tickets will fully discharge the liabilities, and that even if there is not a surplus for the charity, the stewards will not be called upon to make good a deficiency, as on former occasions. The authorities have been much scandalised, and have expressed great annoyance at a statement, made in some of the papers, that "There have been a great many robberies. The loss of watches, chains, jewels, &c., are constantly proclaimed by town crier," &c. This statement is entirely untrue. The police superintendent of the city declares that not a single pair's-worth of property in any shape has been stolen during the festival, and not one robbery has been reported to the police. The next meeting of the three choirs will be held at Hereford, and the opening of railway communication to that town will, no doubt, tend greatly to promote the success of that meeting.

NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL.—For the first time at a Norwich festival the performances commenced on Tuesday morning instead of the evening, and the experiment was more successful than had been anticipated. The holy of the hall was well filled, and presented a very gay appearance. The numbers were: Patrons, 85; reserved seats, 212; unreserved, 90; sets of tickets, 57; total, 444. So much more will be added to the receipts, as there was no extra expense. The performances commenced with Rossini's "Stabat Mater," which was completely successful, the solos being sung by Mr. Sims Reeves, Mme. Weiss, Miss Dolly, Mme. Bosio, Signori Belletti, Gardoni, and Labache. The finale chorus was somewhat marred by the trombones; and no doubt the conductor would have thought so if he had heard them in the hall. After the "Stabat Mater" the national anthem was played and sung by the band and performers, with an effect never before heard in the city. The anthem should have been sung at the commencement, but owing to a misunderstanding, Madame Clara Novello was absent at the time. Tickets were taken for the whole hall on Wednesday and Friday mornings, when the "Creation" and the "Messiah" were performed.

REW GARDENS.—Autumn having commenced, the foliage of the trees and plants in this pleasant resort are assuming an almost endless variety of colour and hue. The new and old arborettas are, indeed, surpassingly beautiful, and forcibly remind all visitors of the excessive beauty and splendour of the North American forests during the brief interval of the Indian summer of that country. As an additional attraction, the following remarkable plants (among others equally rare) are now flowering profusely in the Tropical A quarium, recently erected for them at a cost of 3,000 guineas:—1. The Blue Egyptian Lily, or daughter of the Nile. 2. The Red Nelumbium Speciosum of the Ganges, or sacred bean of India. 3. The Nymphaea Lotus, or White English water-lily; and 4. The magnificent Victoria Regia, of the great South American rivers. The Magnolia Grandiflora, or tree-lily, is now also in blossom; and the Virginian Creeper is nearly a mass of the richest crimson, softened and relieved by tints of the most delicate green. A finer and more healthy plant of the Victoria Regia is flowering in the stove or green-house No. 6. The palace pleasure-grounds and park close, according to present arrangements, on the 30th inst.

BRISTOL.—NARROW ESCAPE AT THE CLIFTON ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—The last gala of the season took place on Monday evening. The entertainments were announced to conclude with Signora Pauline Violante's "terrific ascent on a rope 50 feet high and 300 feet long, amidst a brilliant display of fireworks." Accordingly, about nine o'clock Madame Violante commenced the ascent, but it was soon very perceptible that the rope was not tight enough to be safe. She, however, after one or two attempts, reached almost the middle of the rope, but at that point it oscillated so violently that, finding her balance gone, she threw away her pole, fell across the rope, and luckily succeeded in grasping it with her hands, and hung in mid-air amidst the screams of the assembled thousands, joined to her own piercing screams for help. For ten or fifteen minutes she thus clung helplessly by her hands and feet, incapable of dragging herself forward or backward, so as to reach an upright supporter, until at length a very long ladder having been placed upright against the rope, she was rescued from her perilous position, and led away in a fainting condition. Such follies will never be abandoned until one or more lives have been sacrificed.

DUBLIN, Sept. 12.—The first of a series of Italian operas was performed last night in the Theatre Royal. The company embraces the following distinguished artists, viz., Mdlles. Sophia Crivelli, Marai, and Albini; Madame Albini; and Tamberlik, Tagliafico, Fortini, Polonini, Luchesi, &c. The opera produced last night was "Norma." The house was well filled with a brilliant audience, and the speculation promises to be a highly successful one.

DEATH OF MRS. FITZWILLIAM.—We regret to state that this popular actress expired at six o'clock on Monday evening. Mrs. Fitzwilliam, as we learn, had been indisposed for about a week past with diarrhoea; but, as the attack presented symptoms of immediate urgency, she unfortunately neglected to take sufficient precautionary measures, and pursued her professional engagements as usual. She even played on Saturday night with her usual vivacity. Early on Monday morning the disorder assumed a serious character, and, in spite of every effort to save her, Mrs. Fitzwilliam sank under the attack at the end of about twelve hours. With reference to the great loss the theatre has sustained, it will scarcely be necessary to dwell on Mrs. Fitzwilliam's merits as an actress, as they are universally known and appreciated; but a short sketch of her theatrical career may at the present moment be interesting. She was the daughter of Mr. Robert Copeland, manager of the Doy and other Kentish theatres, and was born in 1803. At the early age of two years, Miss Fanny Copeland may be said to have commenced her theatrical life as one of the children in the play of "The Stranger." When five years old she played in "Tom Thumb," singing all the music; and, at the age of twelve, she presided at the then fashionable promenade concerts at Margate. After devoting three years to her musical studies, she returned to the stage, and appeared at the Haymarket Theatre, in the character of Lucy, in "The Review." She afterwards played at the Surrey, under the management of Tom Diddin, who brought her forward in a variety of characters, particularly Elfe Deans, in his adaptation of the "Heart of Mid-Lothian," which established her success, and induced Mr. Elliston to engage her for Drury-lane. In December, 1822, she married Mr. Fitzwilliam the popular Irish actor, and for several years performed at the various metropolitan theatres—her singing and acting always rendering her a great attraction. She twice visited America, where she was an immense favourite. For several years she has performed principally at the Adelphi and Haymarket Theatres, and appeared at the latter for the last time on Saturday. It is stated that Mrs. Fitzwilliam had been labouring for some days from premonitory symptoms of cholera, but they did not assume a serious character until Monday morning—her death ensuing after twelve hours' suffering. Her son, Edward Fitzwilliam, is known as a rising young composer; and her daughter, Miss K. Fitzwilliam, as a pleasing and expressive singer.

A ROVING ELEPHANT.—On Wednesday night the elephant, accompanying the menagerie of Mr. Batty, which had been exhibiting in this town, after the performance was safely lodged in a stable, near the George Hotel. The keeper, on going to feed the animal in the morning, found, to his great astonishment, that his charge had absconded. Riders were sent about in every direction to find the missing brute, but they returned without any success. In the forenoon he was discovered lying fast asleep in the wine-cellar of the hotel, having, it seems, opened the door of his lodging in the night, in a roving disposition, and quietly walked up a long flight of steps to the George, and afterwards descended to the cellar. Several bottles were broken, and the contents drank by the elephant, till he was satisfied he had enough. When found, he looked the picture of contentment. This does not show that all animals are disciples of Father Mathew.—North Wales Chronicle.

THE BELLE VUE GARDENS' GREAT BRASS BAND CONTEST.—It is estimated, says the Manchester Courier, that from 19,000 to 20,000 persons were gathered together in Belle Vue Gardens on Monday afternoon and evening, on the occasion of a contest by fourteen brass bands for prizes given for the best performances. In the fourteen bands there were 191 performers. The bands were—

Name of band.	No. of performers.	Name of leader.
1. Victoria, Bailey, near Leeds	13	John Farrar.
2. Dewsbury, near Leeds	14	John Peel.
3. Accrington	13	Thomas Bradley.
4. Foxhill Bank, near Accrington	14	Henry Hargreaves.
5. Bury	14	James Blyden.
6. Selly, near Huddersfield	11	George Bradshaw.
7. Milburn, Leeds	17	Richard Milburn.
8. Barnsley	13	George Wray.
9. Railway Foundry, Leeds	13	Richard Smith.
10. Heckmondwike, near Leeds	12	George Brook.
11. Mossley Temperance Sax-horn	14	William Taylor.
12. Batley, near Leeds	16	David Collock.
13. Whitworth, near Rochdale	14	Joseph Law.
14. Mossley Brass Band	14	William Sel.

The gentlemen who acted as judges were Mr. Oakden, of Sankey, near Warrington, formerly bandmaster 1st Royal Dragoons; Mr. Oakden, jun., also late bandmaster of the same regiment; Mr. Charles Wright, bandmaster of the Cheshire Yeomanry; Mr. Brossing, bandmaster of the 3rd Light Dragoons; and Mr. Ellwood, master of the Earl of Ellesmere's band. The total value of the prizes was £54; about £44 given in money, and a brass instrument, a contrabass or bombardon—given by Mr. Highnam, musical instrument maker, Victoria-bridge. Each band was required to perform one piece of music of their own selection, and then commenced again with other tunes, each, of course, playing their own selection. The tunes first played were the following—the figures refer to each band by number, as given above:—

1. Cavatina	"Anna Bolena," Donizetti.
2. Cavatina	"Fiducia de la Regimiento,"
3. Selection	"L'air de la Reine-mère,"
4. Overture	"Il Barbiere di Siviglia,"
5. Selection	"Luceria Borgia," Donizetti.
6. Overture	"Prince Albert,"
7. Cavatina	"La Sonambula," Bellini.
8. Selection	"Fra peccato a me,"
9. Selection	"Nabuccodonosor," Verdi.
10. Duetto and Chorus	"Never too mad down," Handel.
11. Overture	"La Cenerentola," Rossini.
12. Cavatina	Donizetti.
13. Selection	"Amia," Verdi.
14. Selection	"Nabuccodonosor," Verdi.

Afterwards a second programme was gone through, and the judges having intimated that the principal prizes must fall to the lot of Nos. 2, 3, and 9, those bands were called on to play again, in order that their relative merits might be distinguished. They rested their several claims on the playing of the following:—

2. Cavatina	"Luceria Borgia," Donizetti.
3. Selection and Chorus	"Fiducia," Italy.
9. Selection	"Nabuccodonosor," Verdi.

While the judges were making their award, the whole of the bands played the National Anthem. The prizes were then awarded in the following order:—

First prize, £20, Railway Foundry Brass Band, Leeds.
Second " £10, Dewsbury Brass Band.
Third " £5, Accrington Brass Band.
Fourth " £4, Foxhill Bank Brass Band.
Fifth " £3, Milburn (Leeds) Brass Band.
Sixth " £1, Bury Brass Band.

The Leeds Railway Foundry Band (consisting chiefly of young mechanics in that establishment) then assembled the orchestra, and played "See the Conquering Hero Comes," after which, Mr. Joseph Highnam, assisted their leader (Mr. Smith) with the contrabass instrument already referred to; the assembled multitude testifying their satisfaction of the justice of the award by numerous rounds of applause.

At St. Peter's where they are beginning to make collections, give concerts, &c., in favour of persons who have been ruined by the war.

THEATRE FRON IN PARIS.—A civil war of no mean proportions is at this moment raging between the French journalists and the managers of the Grand Opera. On the opening night all the representatives of the public press, without exception, were turned away from the doors, and informed that the free-press admissions were altogether suppressed. A day or two afterwards the editors of several journals were sent for by the Director of Public Safety, who told them that the refusal to admit the press on the first night was owing to a regrettable mistake, that the Minister of State had resolved to put the free-press of the Imperial theatres on a new footing, but had not had time to communicate his final decision to the manager of the Opera. It was intimated that in future only one ticket would be given to each journal instead of two or three, as has been customary; and there is a report that, instead of the boxes and stalls, which have heretofore been secured for the leading journals on the first night of a new piece, simple tickets of admission will be given—the bearers being left to take their chance of finding a place. The journalists are by no means satisfied with the Government explanation of the affront put upon them on the opening night of the Opera, and they resent the proposed curtailment of their ancient privileges. They are indisposed to accept as a favour, grudgingly granted, what they have looked upon as a courtesy sufficiently recompensed by gratis advertisements and critical notices. The journals have accordingly preserved a complete silence as to everything produced there since the dispute began.

RIOT AT BARNUM'S EXHIBITION. A terrible row, says the New York Observer, took place at Lynchburg, last week, between the showmen of Barnum's mammoth exhibition and the citizens of Lynchburg, resulting from the great number of extra charges made, notwithstanding the published notice that the whole was to be seen for 50 cents. It was reported that five persons—two of the citizens and three of the showmen—were very seriously, if not fatally, injured, and many others slightly. The affair wound up by the entire demolition of the ticket-office, and the destruction of its contents, together with a little incidental damage to the show fixtures. The scene is represented to have been fearful; men, women, and children, were assembled under the huge tent, and the greatest consternation prevailed. Unable to leave the tent, being in some cases deserted by their protectors, and in all afraid of being shot or knocked down in the melee, the alarm of the ladies was excessive.

GRIM AND MAHO IN THE STATES.—The great singers have arrived out, and are domiciled at the St. Nicholas Hotel, New York, where (according to the New York Daily Times) "the citizens of this free and enlightened republic will when they please, as they please, and stay any length of time they please." The American papers are full of gossip and nonsense about both the visitors, one enthusiastic scribe even giving a minute analysis of the furniture and fittings of their bedroom. It seems that Mr. Hackett has engaged them for five months, at $85,000. Mr. Hackett paying all expenses, tavern-bills, carriage-hire, servants, &c.: $40,000 are deposited with the Barings as security. The artists are to be paid after every third performance, and if Mr. Hackett does not come to the precise time—if he is in arrears a day—the engagement can be instantly avoided, and they have the right to return at once and to receive the $40,000 deposited with the Barings as the penalty of forfeiture. Shylock himself could have framed no severer bond.

PROVINCIAL.

CAUTION TO BAKERS.—At the recent petty sessions held at Stony Stratford, Mrs. Otter, baker, of Little Brick-hill, was, at the instance of Superintendent Whalcott, fined £1 for having delivered bread from a cart without being provided with scales.

THE CHOLERA AT OXFORD.—This mysterious disease has again made its appearance at Oxford; it has been chiefly amongst the poorer classes, who inhabit the least cleanly parts of the city, and were especially upon those parts which lie in close proximity to foul and fetid streams. In these neighbourhoods the number of awfully sudden deaths has been considerable. In another part of the city, also, the disease has had its victims. In Market street a distressing case occurred at the beginning of last week, which, after a few hours, proved fatal to Mr. Saunders, fishmonger. Another distressing case occurred in St. Aldate's street, near the Town-hall, at the same time. A gentleman named Roberts, an architect of Norwich, who was on a visit to Mr. Seckham, and was assisting in measuring and valuing the buildings at the New Park Town Estate, was carried off with awful suddenness. He, on Sunday, in apparently sound state of health, went out into the country, and on his return, partook of a glass of brandy-and-water and a cigar, and retired to rest. About five o'clock in the morning he was seized with premonitory symptoms, speedily grew worse, and at night was a corpse. Another similar distressing case was that of Mr. Haskins, master and medical attendant of Cutler Booter's Almshouses, St. Clement's. This gentleman was attacked with the fearful malady, and, although he had the very best medical advice the city could produce, fell a victim to its virulence after a few hours' illness. Mr. Woolton, hunker and brewer, in the same parish, was attacked most seriously, but in this case the great exertions of the medical gentlemen proved successful, and we are happy to hear that Mr. Woolton has quite recovered. We understand that the treatment in this case was sulphuric fumigation of the body when the disease was at the worst. The number of cases that proved fatal, as reported to us, amount to twenty-one. Although there are still many cases of cholera, yet the medical gentlemen think the worst has passed. The Board of Guardians are doing everything in their power to allay the contagion. A spacious marquee, and other buildings, have been erected on Pepper-hill, near Port Meadow, as a place of refuge for the wives and children of those who may be seized with cholera, where they are well fed and properly attended to, while their places of abode are undergoing a thorough purification. Since receiving the above, we have heard of the death of the wife of Mr. George Jacob, poor-rate collector, of Pembroke-street. Diarrhoea prevails throughout the city to an alarming extent, and the utmost measures have been taken to allay the early symptoms. The medical gentlemen, by dispensing of medicine to the poorer classes, &c. The medical gentlemen, Oxford deserve the greatest praise for their unremitting exertions. Some of them having had hardly any repose for nights in succession, such being the demand for their attendance.

A GIRL KILLED BY HER FATHER.—An inquest, held at Preston, on Monday night, resulted in the committal of Owen McCulloch, tailor, for the manslaughter of his daughter, a child aged ten years. It appears that he went home about ten o'clock on Saturday night, when, provoked because a man had fetched away a ferret during his absence, McCulloch rose, with a stick in his hand, to strike his daughter, who sat on a chair nursing an infant. The mother stepped between them and received a blow on the eye. She says she did not see whether her husband struck deceased or not. In the affray, however, both the child and the chair she sat on fell. When taken up, the child was found to be insensible, and death ensued immediately. Mr. Hall, surgeon, who made a post-mortem examination of the body, deposed to finding several bruises on the internal surface of the scalp. He was of opinion the cause of death had been pressure upon the brain occasioned by an effusion of blood. The effusion might have been produced by a blow on the top of the head. Mr. Gibbons, superintendent of police, stated that when McCulloch was taken before the magistrates, he said, "I struck her and she fell over the stool." Subsequently, he said, "I had my hand in my pocket and something pricked my fingers; I plucked it out, and I don't know whether it hit her or not." The jury returned a verdict of "Manslaughter," and the prisoner (who absconded early on Sunday morning, but surrendered himself on Monday) was committed for trial.

CHEAP BREAD.—On Tuesday last, Mr. Gardiner, one of the principal bakers of Banbury, brought 500 loaves of bread to the town of Buckingham, which were all sold in the Market-place within forty minutes, at 6d. and 5d. the 4lb. loaf; he promised to come again on Saturday with a larger supply, but expressed himself ready to retire when bread was sold at a fair and reasonable price. A great competition has been going on at Waddesdon among the bakers, and consequently bread is very much reduced in price. A good loaf is selling there at 4½d. The village has been all alive on the question, and the blessings of a cheap loaf seem to be duly appreciated. On Thursday a band of music and procession were parading the village, which was in a state of excitement.—Bucks Advertiser.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF THE GOVERNOR OF COVENTRY PRISON.—On Monday last an inquest was held at the Leicester Tavern, Coventry, before W. H. Seymour, Esq., to inquire into the cause of the death of James Stanley, aged 36, late Governor of Coventry prison. From the evidence, it appeared the deceased was in his usual robust health on the night of Sunday last at half-past eight o'clock, when he entered the above tavern, drank a glass of ale, and hurried out of the house and proceeded towards the Stoney Stanton-road bridge, which crosses the Coventry Canal. A man named Thomas Smith said he saw the body of Mr. Stanley in the Coventry Canal, about eight o'clock in the morning, near the fourth bridge from Coventry. He sent for Colman, a sergeant of police, and he assisted in taking the body from the water. The last-named person said he found a gold watch and chain on the deceased; the hands stood at a quarter to ten. There were also in his pockets an ivory tablet, with some building measurements upon it, a pair of gloves, a kerchief, three shirt-studs, and sevenpence in copper. J. Overton, surgeon, said, he examined the deceased between eight and nine o'clock this morning, and he found no marks of violence upon him. Witness was perfectly satisfied that there was no appearance of strangling. It might be suicide, or it might be accident. The fact of the hat being found on the towing-path, as proved by the witness Fawcett, would infer the intention of his committing suicide. The Coroner said, there could be no doubt but death was caused from drowning, but there was no evidence to prove how it occurred. Verdict—"Found drowned." The deceased joined the rural police in 1840, as a private. He afterwards rose to a sergeant, and received the appointment of Inspector of Police for the Rugby division of the hundred of Knightlow, in which capacity he distinguished himself by detecting several bands of horse-stealers, burglars, and many other old offenders. In 1849 he was elected Governor of Coventry prison, and succeeded Mr. Carter. His abilities were now turned towards a complete reformation in the discipline of the prison. He classified the prisoners, and introduced the making of door-mats, rugs, and matting, whereby several hundred pounds have been saved by the county. His general management drew forth frequent comments in his praise from the visiting magistrates, and his loss will be severely felt by a large circle of acquaintances. Nothing, as yet, has been discovered to lead to the belief that he has betrayed any confidence reposed in him. Rumour, with her thousand tongues, is spreading all manner of conjectures as to the cause of his untimely end; but those who knew him best affirm that his affairs were not embarrassed, and are at a loss to account for his death.

SCOTLAND.

FORFAR.—In consequence of the death of Lieut-Col. Lauderdale Maule, M.P., a writ for the election of a new member for Forfar will be issued on the 20th inst.

LARGE HERRING.—George S. Sutherland, fisherman, Lybster, on Saturday caught a very large herring, of the extraordinary circumference of ten and a half inches at the thickest part.—John of Great Journal.

A WORD TO THE BUTCHER.—The baker is not the only man who is indisposed to follow the markets when there is a fall. The butchers, we are afraid, forget when the price of beasts is reduced. We find that, in Smithfield, butchers' meat has begun to fall as compared with prices a month ago. If we contrast the tariff at the beginning of August and September, the reduction will be clearly perceived:—

	August.	September.
Beef.....	3s. 4d. to 6s. 4d.	3s. 0d. to 4s. 10d.
Mutton	4s. 2d. — 5s. 2d.	4s. 0d. — 5s. 0d.
Lamb.....	4s. 6d. — 5s. 8d.	4s. 4d. — 5s. 4d.

It is high time the price of butchers' meat was giving way; for, although the traffic in beasts now established between Scotland and London tends to withdraw the supplies, and the high wages enjoyed by so many of our operatives lead to a greater consumption than usual, and the two circumstances united tend to raise the price of the commodity, it is still at a price unnaturally high.—Glasgow Commonwealth.

IRELAND.

THE Cork Examiner mentions an extensive failure connected with the corn and flour trade in the south of Ireland, namely, that of Mr. William Power, of the Woodville Mills, Passage road, Cork. The liabilities were at first variously stated as being from £20,000 to £60,000; but it is as present generally believed by those who are in a position to form an opinion on the subject, that the amount is about £14,500, and that the stock on hand, with the sale of the mill and other assets, will realise a dividend of about 15s. in the pound. There was a meeting of the creditors on Friday the 15th inst.

HOSPITAL SHIP.—The receiving ship, which has arrived in Cork Harbour, for the use of emigrants attacked by infectious diseases, is the old 36-gun frigate Leconstant. She is anchored off Hamblowine Island, and her arrival has excited a great deal of interest in the locality.

THE FOLLOWING CURIOUS ADVERTISEMENT has just appeared in the Limerick Chronicle:—"An extensive landed proprietor on the banks of the Shannon will make a wager of £500 that he has the handsomest wife, the handsomest nine children, and the handsomest estates, in Ireland. Application to be made to J. F. E. G. Eyre's Hotel, Glins, county Limerick. August 30."

Police Intelligence.

BOW-STREET.

ALLEN'S CASINO.—Samuel Allen, a Jew, was charged with obtaining goods, to the value of nearly £1,000, from various tradesmen, by false pretences. At least a score of prosecutors were in attendance to give evidence against the prisoner. It appeared that Allen, having become the tenant of a house in Bow-street, adjoining the police-station, represented that he was about to open it as a casino. Builders and decorators were employed to adapt the premises accordingly, and orders were given, chiefly to foreigners, to supply the rooms with mirrors, chandeliers, massive furniture, marble tablets, figures, sculpture, &c. By stating that he had obtained a license to open the premises as a house of entertainment and dancing saloon, and by advancing a few pounds in one or two cases, he succeeded in getting the goods into his possession; but he had no sooner accomplished this object than his efforts were directed to the disposal of the same goods in various quarters, for whatever amount he could obtain upon them. In one or two instances his attempts to get an offer had not been successful. For example, when his house had been completely stocked with contributions from the warehouses of Messrs. Trisconia, 451, New Oxford-street (to the extent of £280); from Mr. Julian, carver and gilder, of Whitehall-street; from Messrs. Rippon and Hurton, &c., the prisoner waited upon Mr. Giver, upholsterer, 169, High Holborn, and invited him to make an offer for the entire stock, which, however, was declined. The property, however, was speedily disposed of to somebody, although the police had not been able to trace it at present, except that some of it had been seen in the neighbourhood of White-chapel, where it was transferred to another van. The apprehension of the prisoner was owing to a singular accident. Police-constable 27 N, who had been endeavouring to trace the property, was returning through the Lower-road, Islington, on Saturday afternoon, when his eye happened to alight upon the prisoner and his wife, who were taking refreshments outside of a tavern. Of course, he was taken into custody at once. Several witnesses having deposed to the above facts, application was made for a remand.—Mr. Lawrence Levy, the prisoner's solicitor, complained that his client had been locked up since Saturday upon no legal charge. It was a mere affair of debt and credit, and if people thought fit to trust his client with their eyes open, they must abide the consequences.—Mr. Jardine said the question was, whether the goods were supplied upon the faith of Allen's representation that he had got a license to open the house, which was not the fact. It appeared that a great many tradesmen had attended, and wished to be heard, and if a case of this kind could be clearly shown, the prisoner must be committed for trial. At any rate, it was but just that there should be further inquiry. His worship then remanded the prisoner till Saturday, the 16th inst., intimating that he would accept bail, if proper securities could be produced.—The prisoner was committed in default.

CLERKENWELL.

Eliza Wright, a portly, well-dressed woman, wife of Mr. Jesse Wright, master butcher, of 35, Yardley-street, Clerkenwell, was placed in the dock, charged with having wilfully and maliciously set fire to his dwelling-house, &c.—Mr. Thomas Wakeling attempted to conduct the case for the prosecution, in opening which he said that the prosecutor and the prisoner had disagreed for some time past, in consequence of her drunken and profligate habits. On more than one occasion he had to prosecute her at this court, in consequence of her violent conduct, and she was banded over to keep the peace towards him; but he subsequently received her back again, under a promise of amendment. She became worse. On the previous night, at half-past ten o'clock, his client met the prisoner on the second-floor stairs, when she attacked him, and swore that she would set fire to the house, and roast him and all those who were in it. He took little or no notice of this, and the prisoner went down stairs to the kitchen. A strong smell of fire and smoke arose, and the prisoner, in a state of excitement and fright, called out "Fire!" and exclaimed, "I have set fire to the house." His client proceeded to the kitchen, which he discovered to be all in a blaze. The prisoner had placed a sack of shavings near the wainscoting, which she had ignited. They had great difficulty in extinguishing the flames. The prisoner ran out of the house, but she was soon afterwards apprehended by Hodge, 197 G, who locked her up in the station-house.—Mr. Wright, having been sworn, confirmed the statement made by his advocate.—Mr. Tyrwhitt said that the prisoner could not be legally charged with felony in setting fire to the house of her husband, although morally she might be guilty of a great offence.—Mr. Wakeling was aware of the difficulty, and he would leave the case entirely in the hands of the Bench. His client, however, had just and reasonable grounds to entertain fear, in consequence of the prisoner's threats and violent conduct towards him, and he sought protection through the medium of responsible bail.—Mr. Tyrwhitt, addressing the prisoner, said she might think herself very fortunate in not having destroyed the house and lives of her husband and the whole of the persons in the house by fire. He severely lectured her on her wicked conduct, and ordered her to find bail—two sureties in £50 each, and herself in £100—to keep the peace.—She was conveyed to prison, in default of bail.

SOUTHWARK.

MURDER.—Jane Harrington, the wife of a carpenter's labourer, residing at No. 5, Hartow-street, Mint-street, near St. George's Church, was brought before Mr. Combe for final examination, charged with wilfully causing the death of her male infant, aged seventeen days, by administering to it a quantity of laudanum.—Some additional evidence was given, and the prisoner was committed for trial.

BETTING-HOUSE CASE.—John Robins was summoned, as the alleged keeper and owner of a coffee-house, in Blackfriars-road, for unlawfully keeping a betting-house, and John Palmer was summoned for assisting and conducting the same business, contrary to the statute.—It appeared from the evidence of Henry Richards, an informer, that he went into the coffee-house, and purchased a ticket for the Brighton Stakes, for which he paid 1s. On the day of drawing he again went to the coffee-house, when Robins told him he had not members enough, and he gave him a ticket for the Ebor Handicap. On the 23rd of August the drawing took place. Robins placed the numbers in the box, and Palmer called out the names of the horses. A Mr. Nicholls, a baker, was there at the same time, and laid a bet about the racing with Palmer.—It was submitted, on behalf of Robins, that there was no proof of his being the keeper of the coffee-house, and therefore the summons, as against him, ought to be discharged.—Mr. Combe admitted the validity of the objection, and dismissed the summons against him.—It was then submitted, on behalf of Palmer, by Mr. Clarkson, that Palmer knew nothing of Robins, but went accidentally into the house, and met Mr. Nicholls, with whom he laid a bet in a friendly way.—After a good deal of evidence on both sides, Mr. Combe decided that there was no evidence to implicate Palmer under the Betting Act.—The summons was, therefore, dismissed.

HAMMERSMITH.

DARING BURGLARY AND ROBBERY.—A NEW WAY OF BREAKING INTO HOUSES.—A short, thick-set young man, who gave the name of William Ward, and described himself as a bricklayer, living in Portland-town, was brought before Mr. Paynter, charged with burglariously entering the house of Mr. Richard Smith, a gentleman residing at No. 31, Hereford-square, Brompton-road, and stealing therefrom a £5 bank of England note, thirteen sovereigns, a gold watch, and several other articles.—Police-constable Daniel Larter, No. 214, T division, deposed that about twenty minutes to three o'clock that morning he was on duty in Hereford-square, when his attention was suddenly attracted to a rustling noise at the back of the houses. He listened for some time, but could not hear anything, and he remained watching the premises for upwards of half an hour, when his patience was rewarded by seeing the prisoner climb up the wall at the back of Mr. Smith's garden. The prisoner, upon seeing witness, who called to him to know what he was doing there, attempted to make off, without giving any answer to his question, and, after a short chase, witness succeeded in apprehending him in a hedge adjoining a market-gardener's grounds. He took the prisoner round, and handed him over to a constable of the R division, while he went and examined the prosecutor's premises, which he found had been entered by the closet window. Witness discovered in the closet a pair of boots belonging to the prisoner, who had left his own behind, and had put on a pair of Mr. Smith's. The prisoner handed to the B constable thirteen sovereigns, a £5 bank of England note, some silver and coins, which he had taken from a sideboard in the drawing-room. It was locked, and the prisoner had broken it open, and also a tin box, in which the money had been placed, and which was afterwards found in the passage, with some plate. The prisoner also gave him a gold watch, with some watch-chains and seals, which he had taken from the premises.—The prosecutor said the prisoner admitted to him that he got through the closet window, which had no fastening. It was a very small place, and witness was quite surprised that he ever was able to get through the aperture. He had always thought it too small for any person to pass through, and had, therefore, supposed that fastenings were not necessary. The prisoner also said to him that if he could not have entered by the closet window, he would have soon found other means to have got in.—Mr. Paynter inquired if any house-breaking implements had been found upon the prisoner?—Inspector Leigh said there had not, with the exception of a piece of rope, which the constable found upon the prisoner's person. They had latterly discovered that burglars had found a new way of breaking into houses that had iron bars to the windows, without making any noise, or disturbing the occupants. It was done simply with a piece of rope, similar to the piece found upon the prisoner, and a stout piece of wood. The rope was twisted round two of the bars, and the piece of wood was placed between. By constantly twisting the wood the rope became tight, and the operator was able to make the bars meet, and leave a sufficient aperture on both sides for a person to get through; and, in some instances, they were able to shift the bars from their places without making any noise whatever. He had no doubt it was the prisoner's intention to adopt that plan, if he could not get in any other way, for the constable found in the back garden a short, thick piece of stick, which would have answered the purpose in every way.—Mr. Paynter then remanded the prisoner, as it was stated that there was a second case against him.

Foreign Intelligence.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday, Sept. 14.

The late Royal Visit—The Emperor—Visit to Windsor—The Royal Family and Napoleon—The Royal Expedition—Cholera—New Openings in the East—Madame Stoltz and the Minister—The New Books of the Day.

EVERYTHING went off admirably at the late visit of Prince Albert to Boulogne, who must have returned highly gratified with his reception from all classes. From the monarch to the lowest of the populace, all seemed earnestly bent to do him honour; and, if there be truth in the countenance of princes, the honoured visitor appeared really to feel and appreciate the demonstrations of regard and respect of which he was the object. There is now no doubt, I have reason to believe, of the fact mentioned last week, that his Majesty accompanied by the Empress, will, before long, pay a visit to Queen Victoria at Windsor. That their Majesties will be received favourably by the public generally there can be no doubt, but the intimacy and ties of blood which bind her Majesty to the ex-royal family of France must render the duties of the royal hostess, though they will no doubt be gracefully and courteously paid, both a delicate and painful task. How much more at ease would the Emperor himself have felt just now had he avoided that one stain—that "damned spot" on his escutcheon, the lawless seizure of the Orleans property? "Thus," as the greatest of poets says—

Even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips.

The interest of all other subjects just now is, however, regarded as nothing in comparison with that attached to the great expedition against the Crimea. The feeling with which it is watched from hence is indescribable. No one is willing to think it possible that such preparations, and, above all, such soldiers, can be defeated. Still there are events which never can be contemplated without a certain degree of anxiety and doubt until the field is fought and won; and it cannot be concealed that, as yet, the Eastern expedition has resulted only in disappointment, and its return without having made even an attempt against the enemy, would have filled both France and England with disgust. The return of the French troops from the Baltic, having only achieved the brilliant, but really insignificant destruction of the fortress of Bomarsund, has already caused much discontent in France, and is said greatly to have annoyed the Emperor, who at first looked upon that affair as only a prelude to far more glorious conquests in the same quarter. Hence the marshal's baton to General St. Hilliers—a reward ridiculously disproportion-tioned to the trifling nature of the operation. The friends of Russia in Paris are delighted with this result. What would they have been had a similar backward movement taken place from the East?—and, on dit, that was at one time seriously proposed!

We continue pretty free from cholera in Paris, though cases occur daily. In the provinces, unfortunately, it still continues its dreadful ravages, having been very fatal both in the south and in the east.

A new field is said to have been suddenly opened, not only for emigration, but for the tourist, which, though in another way, does not yield in beauty of scenery to the fairest landscapes of Italy, while, in richness of produce, its capabilities, with cultivation, would render the greater part of Europe perfectly independent of supplies either from America or Russia. Letters are now in Paris from the east which describe the scenery, and even the climate, of the provinces as the most lovely that can be conceived; and even, notwithstanding the cholera, the most salubrious in the world. Providence has made it a Paradise, and a Paradise it remains, in broken luxuriousness and beauty, even in spite of the wanton desolation and destruction, created by man, everywhere visible. In different parts you encounter leagues upon leagues of the most beautiful country in the world, abounding with wood and plain, hill and valley, all teeming with vegetation, not only without an owner but without an inhabitant. Valleys, abandoned by their former population, are met with, but all in a state of ruins. Their gurgles overrun with weeds, and the fields in their vicinity lying waste and uncultivated, convey a terrible picture of the Turkish Government, and the misery and wretchedness of the unhappy people. One of the scientific commission sent out by the French Government, has, it appears, sent home an admirably-drawn tableau of the situation of the country, with its rich resources and the advantages it possesses, if they were brought to light and rendered available by a reformed system of administration. The introduction of European civilisation, with its attendant ameliorations, would at this moment be easily effected. The rapport concludes with the remarkable avowal, that agricultural science and capital, in an incredibly short space of time, would transform the present countless acres of wilderness in the Turkish provinces into the most luxuriant corn-fields in the world, while the magic variety of its landscapes and softness of the climate, when precautions are taken against the heat, form one garden of beauty. If these accounts be realised even partially, the Eastern expedition will have carried with it blessings and advantages never contemplated by those who carried it into effect.

It appears that M^{me}. Stoltz, who you will recollect lately returned to the Grand Opera after some years' absence, and who was the very reverse of satisfied at finding that the proceedings of M. le Ministre towards the journals had rendered them all silent on her performance at her début, resolved to wait upon the great man and have an explanation. A very warm scene is said to have taken place, in the course of which the lady, with far more candour than politess, acquainted son Excellence with her opinion of his pretensions as a judge of music and qualifications as the manager of a theatre. In a word, the angry Prima Donna told him more home truths in five minutes than he has heard from any other quarter ever since he came into office. The question is still in abeyance; and the opera, instead of rising under the new system of official patronage, seems to descend in public favour every day. Rachel has come back to the Français; and though she had the vile taste to select "Marie Stuart," miserably translated from Schiller's poor tragedy (as I think) by M. Lebrun, played the virago scene with Elizabeth, and the scene of her execution with so much pathos and tenderness, as to obtain a complete triumph. Her parting with her servants particularly, though far from well written, was played by Rachel with a touching reality, which scarcely left a dry eye in the theatre. Nothing worth noting in the other theatres, none of which are paying their expenses.

A curious book, now in the press, is expected shortly to appear—no less than the memoirs of one of Robespierre's sisters. The title is to be "M^{lle}. de Robespierre," and some letters and papers are promised of the terrible revolutionist. The edrress is a well-known literary character, La Comtesse D'Asi. We have been so overrun with these "Memoirs" lately, that the very name produces a panic among the literary world. Besides Dr. Veron's "Memoirs," the main object of which seems to be to hold out the author to the admiration of the public, we have had those of M^{lle}. Celeste Mogador, one of the nymphs of Mobile—now on the retired list. These latter were of so scandalous a character that the police were obliged to interfere after three volumes had issued from the press, and prohibited the publication of the remainder. Another work just published is "Les Maitresses Parisiennes," the subject of which is quite as edifying as its title. So much for the light literature of the day. Lamartine's "Lectures pour Tous," which is, of course, more serious, has a certain success, but the prestige of his name as an author is decidedly on the wane. He is now engaged on a history of Turkey, which is to be published in the Constitutionnel. A work by Thiers, on the history of art and literature in Italy, is also announced as one of the novelties of the coming season. Nothing else worth recording, touching what is called here la haute littérature.

Independent of their move against Sunday trading, the clerical party in France are just now remarkably active, scattering all over the country districts an immense number of tracts, intended to stimulate the religious feelings of the population, which have been dormant for a long time past. The titles of some of these sacred compositions are worth transcribing, as Le Pistolet de la Foi (the Pistol of Faith); Le Poignard du Sacré Cœur (the Dagger of the Sacred Heart); Le Tambour de la Contrition (the Drum of Repentance), &c. It does not appear, however, that as yet the sound of the ecclesiastical drum has reclaimed many sinners from the error of their ways.

MURDER OF AN ENGLISH CONSUL AND HIS WIFE.

ATHENS, Sept. 1.—Great sensation has been caused here on receipt of intelligence from Negropont, that Mr. Henry Leves and his wife have both been murdered in their house in the village of Castanotiza, of which village and a considerable extent of land he was the proprietor. All that is known here at present is, that the crime was perpetrated on Sunday, the 25th ultimo; that a forcible entry of the house was effected; that Mr. Leves attempted resistance and wounded one of the assassins, but was overpowered, and that after the double murder a quantity of silver plate was carried off. Mr. Leves was about thirty years of age, son of a former chaplain to the British mission at Athens, and married about eighteen months since a young lady whose family reside at Manchester, who a few months since gave birth to a child, respecting the fate of which nothing is stated. It appears that Mr. Leves held the appointment of British consular agent, or vice-consul, in Negropont.

Mr. Wyse, British minister at Athens, on receiving official intelligence of this shocking affair, instantly took steps towards instituting the most searching inquiry, with the view, if possible, of discovering the murderers and bringing them to justice. Immediate orders were sent to the Piræus, to the commander of her Majesty's war-steamer Medina, to get up her steam and proceed to Negropont; and Mr. Merlin, British vice-consul at Athens, and Mr. Locock, attaché to the British mission, were directed to proceed in the Medina with the Greek authorities, to make the most rigid investigations on the spot. They left the Piræus yesterday, and the result of their inquiries will be most anxiously looked for here.

The Rev. Dr. Hill, chaplain to the British mission, voluntarily accompanied the expedition, as he had been intimately acquainted with the deceased, and thought he might be of use in protecting the infant, should it have escaped the fate of its parents. Mr. Henry Leves's mother is at present in Athens, and is much commiserated under the misfortune she has sustained. This foul crime is merely an additional proof of the utter personal insecurity that exists in Greece. Surely if the present Government cannot, or will not, afford efficient protection to life and property, it is time that means were adopted by England and France to bring about such a change as would effectually do away with this lamentable state of things, and also cause Greece to become a flourishing country.

WE LEARN FROM FRANCE that Prince Albert, before his departure, left 1,000*l.* to be distributed among the poor of Boulogne. By direction of his Royal Highness, General the Hon. C. Grey also wrote to M. Carnegie de Baliharai, chairman of the British Free Schools in that town, enclosing 500*l.* from the Prince. It is said that the Emperor has purchased the Brighton Hotel, which has been his Majesty's residence since his arrival, for the sum of £16,000. The purchase is supposed to indicate the Emperor's intention of frequently visiting Boulogne, where he is extremely popular.

ADVICES FROM LISBON announce that the Queen Maria Christina and her husband, accompanied by General Garroga, landed at the arsenal at four o'clock on the morning of the 9th instant, and proceeded immediately in the royal carriages to the Spanish Embassy, where a guard of honour was immediately stationed.

DESPATCHES FROM THE DANUBE announce that at eleven o'clock on the morning of the 6th the Austrian troops entered Bucharest. Omar Pasha received them at the head of a Turkish division and a detachment of the Wallachian militia, outside the gate of Padu Mogoschoy, where the Catholic and Greek clergy, the members of the Administration, some of the Boyards, and a dense crowd of citizens, were assembled. Count Coronini, the commander of the Austrian corps of occupation, and the Turkish Sirdar, rode at the head of the troops.

THE MAIL FROM NEW YORK, dated September 2, reports that the captain of a British schooner arrived at Baltimore, states, that on the voyage from that port to Nassau he fell in with a suspicious-looking schooner, which steered for him, but, night coming on, she was lost sight of. The captain of an American vessel made a similar report. A schooner filled with men made for him, but a large ship heaving in sight, she sheered off. Is this a Russian privateer?

ACCORDING TO MEXICO LETTERS of the 22nd ult., Santa Anna had issued a decree enabling the religious orders to avail themselves of the civil tribunals, to enforce upon the monks and clergy an adherence to their vows.

NEWSPAPERS AT VARNÄ.—Lord Raglan bears an excellent name amongst the men, as he appears to be ever mindful of their wants and comforts. Send me out a newspaper whenever you can. You would split your sides to see how the news is devoured: the last paper you sent me I cut up into pages and lent them to as many squads, each of which appointed a reader; and when the squads had done with their portion, it was exchanged for another, until all were gratified."—Private letter.

COLONIAL.

CANADA.—We learn that, pending the action of the British and Colonial Legislatures on the reciprocity treaty, the river St. Lawrence will be free to American vessels to navigate. The Canadian Assembly was to meet at Quebec on the 5th September for the despatch of business, and the reciprocity treaty would have to be assented to in Canada and the other provinces before it can come into operation. As remarked by General Cass, this treaty "terminates all existing differences between the United States and Great Britain, and leads to the hope that the only contests between them will be a generous rivalry in all that constitutes the true progress of nations."

AUSTRALIANA.

The departures from the port of London for the Australian colonies during the past week have comprised ten vessels—three to Sydney, with an aggregate burden of 1,809 tons; two to Port Phillip, with an aggregate burden of 1,199 tons; two to Adelaide, with an aggregate burden of 1,298 tons; one to Hobart Town, of 358 tons; one to Lunenburg, of 292 tons; and one to Port Fairy, of 258 tons. Their total capacity was, consequently, 5,514 tons. The rates of freight exhibit no great alteration, but in some cases they are rather firmer.

GOLD FIELDS.

THE subjoined is from the Agua Fria Gold Company:—"The Agua Fria Gold Mining Company have advices to the 30th of July of the remittance, 453*l.* ounces of gold. Of this 56*l.* ounces was the result of two days' stamping at Gubhill, but the mill could only be worked occasionally, in consequence of the scarcity of clear water. A horse-wheel, however, had been erected to drain the mine until the engine was put up; and Mr. Attwood expected thus to obtain a supply of water, and work the richer part of the Gold-hill vein. The accounts from Agua Fria are very satisfactory. One of the mines recently tested and turned out rich, 19 tons 17 cwt. 2 grs. having been stamped, yielded 52 oz. 13 dwts. 7 grs. The cost of hauling the rock to the mill was about $2 per ton, and Captain Williams estimated that the vein could be worked, when laid open by a level and shaft, at 23*l.* per ton.

Bits and Spurs.

LUCKY DAYS.—In the "Rhymes and Proverbs," gathered together by "M.A.D.," we find these lines on wedding-days:—

"Monday for health,
Tuesday for wealth,
Wednesday the best day of all,
Thursday for crosses,
Friday for losses,
And Saturday no luck at all."

UMBRELLA.—"Jack, did you carry that umbrella home that I borrowed yesterday?" "No, father, you have often told me for to lay up something for a rainy day, and as I thought it would rain before long, I laid the umbrella up."

CHEAP LIGHT.—With respect to the electric light, the problem appears to be solved at Paris. We mentioned a short time since that it was in use to illuminate the works of the Napoleon Docks, which were carried on by night as well as by day; and the apparatus was so complete, that for four months the light has been steadily burning. Economy is not its least recommendation, for the cost per night has not been more than 38 francs, which, as 800 men were employed, gives 4*l.* centimes—less than a halfpenny per man.—Chambers's Journal.

PEAS AND POTATOES.—In a recent sitting of the Agricultural Society of Saint-Marcellin, Isère, a curious fact was related. A farmer stuck a pea in a potato, and planted them together in March last. The pea produced a stalk which was covered with peascods, and the potato gave eleven healthy roots. The farmer is of opinion that by this system it is possible, not only to obtain a two-fold crop, but to prevent the malady in potatoes.

A MERMALD.—The following story has been published at Berlin under quasi-official sanction:—"On the 15th the wife of a painter in Old Schönbach-street brought into the world a most wonderful creature. This was a child born only a few weeks before the regular time, which had the regular human form down to the loins, and thence downwards that of a fish, but without scales. Its fingers were webbed, but otherwise perfectly well formed. It died half an hour after birth, in the presence of the midwife, Dr. Hoffmann."

CURIOUS OFFER OF MARRIAGE.—It is a very common thing to see advertisements for marriage in the French journals, and some of them are very curious; but I have never seen anything so rich as a printed card which was yesterday left at the different hotels, reading-rooms, and other places of public resort. I give you a textual copy:—"Kun du Lang-champs, 35, à Paris (Seine). Un jeune homme de 30 ans, certain de gagner 15 à 20 millions en 8 ans, désire trouver en mariage une Demoiselle au vin Veuve de 38 ans au plus. Il donne deux ans, si l'on veut, pour qu'on puisse bien le connaître; mais il est certain qu'un tant d'un mois, la Demoiselle voudra se marier à toute force. Miso à prix. 30,000 francs (deux francs). The mise à prix is a magnificent climax. This extraordinary youth of 30, who is sure in eight years to make a fortune of 15 to 20 millions of francs—not millions, for that would be too small an amount, unless himself, not a fixed sum of 30,000 francs to any maid or widow, but names an upset price, as for the sale of a house, above which the competitors may bid. He evidently expects a much larger amount of purchase-money from the amount he gives of himself. He is willing, he says, to allow a trial of two years, in order that he may be thoroughly known and appreciated; but he is sure that at the end of a month the lady will marry him à toute force."

LOBSTERS IN A MORAL POINT OF VIEW.—Morally I look upon lobsters as occupying a very low grade in the scale of animals. They are a kind of marine Muscovite, bristling with rage against every one; fierce, hard, horny, and pugnacious; always tearing and rending something, and losing their limbs with as much indifference as if they belonged to some salt-water Czar. Then, they not only get into rows themselves, but are often the cause (brandy and water combining) of other people getting into rows. If you wish for evidence of their pugnacity, look at their claws. One of them is always a great deal smaller than the other. Observe the left claw with which the lobster (like a human being sparring) wards off the blows aimed at him! Examine the right or striking claw; that which now garnishes the dexter limb is not the real original cheliferon, but a supplementary pair of pincers, thrown off long ago in some midnight submarine brawl. In case of emergency your thorough-bred lobster parts with a claw with as little concern as a man tearing the tail of his coat in a hedge when a mad bull is after him. The late Sir Isaac Coffin, who used to tell a great number of odd stories, was once witness, he said, to a terrific combat between two armies of lobsters, in the harbour of Halifax, in Nova Scotia. They fought, he declared, with so much fury that the sea-shore was strewn with their claws. Sir Isaac was the admiral on the station, and over afterwards, when he saw a lobster, he pointed to the disparity between the claws, in corroboration of his story.—Dickens's "Household Words."

THE HOLIDAY QUESTION.—I am a very hard-working man, and I know what overwork is, and I know, also, the good of moderate work. I was lazy till sixteen; then I had five years' moderate work; when I came of age I was all the better for not having been overworked before I came to my strength. For nearly thirty years I have worked about as hard as any man in London, scarcely ever taking a holiday; but I find that it will not do to go on so. I am obliged to make a holiday now—to cut down my 311 days to less than 300. And if 311 days' work would be too much for me, who was not overworked when young, it must be far too much for those who had, as too many of our working men have had, some of their pith taken out of them while they were growing. But many will say, "We cannot afford to give up thirteen working days; what shall we do for wages?" This is all nonsense: if every man, woman, and child kept thirteen holidays a year, we should all be as well off as now. You say, "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work." Try another cry, and say, "A fair year's wage for a fair year's work." If we all kept the thirteen holidays we should get the same wages in the year as we do now. We could do more in 300, with thirteen holidays to give us a spring every now and then, than we can do in the 313 days without the spring. Nothing is so bad for a horse as all collar-work. I have tooled a four-horse stage-coach in a hilly country in my younger days, and I well recollect how we went up a hill when we had just had a bit of down-hill, with a hand-gallop along the little bottom between the two. "That is just what we want on our journey through this world—a steady trot through 300 days, with a springing hand-gallop on thirteen days every here and there, and a quiet rest at the end of every one of the fifty-two stages."—Correspondent of the Builder.

TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite retaining power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN LEVER and PA-TENT FLY-LEVER, fitting with accuracy and ease, and ensuring that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a single truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Double truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Post-office orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS.—The material
of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly ELASTIC and COMPRESSIBLE, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, VARICOSE VEINS, SPRAINS, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like ordinary stockings. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each. Postage, 6d.

F. JOYCE'S

ANTI-CORROSIVE PERCUSSION CAPS.

THE Nobility, Gentry, and Sporting World at large, are respectfully informed that these well-tried Detonators, warranted in every respect, which have now stood the test of many years' experience, both at home and abroad, may be had as usual of Messrs. J. Blanch and Sons, 29, Gracechurch-street; J. C. Beckwith, 38, Skinner-street; Parker, Field, and Sons, 233, High Holborn; J. C. Kelly, 502, New Oxford-street; B. Cogswell, 251, Strand; W. Moore and Grey, 43, street; and of most respectable Gun-makers and Dealers in Gunpowder throughout the United Kingdom.

To prevent accident and disappointment to purchasers, from the use of spurious imitations, they are requested to observe the Name and Address of F. JOYCE, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE MANUFACTURER, on each Sealed Packet, without which they are not genuine. This precaution is rendered necessary by some unprincipled individuals having imitated the Labels and Wrappers.

WATER
POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Banchurch, Isle of Wight.
The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-6 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded off by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar channels throughout the entire length."
—Knox's report.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha
Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial) March 10, 1852.
"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many landlairs and other persons have lately exclaimed it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

A NEW DISCOVERY IN TEETH.

MR. HOWARD, SURGEON-DENTIST,
52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely
New Description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth, as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication.
Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, FLEET-STREET.—At home
from 11 till 5.

DEAFNESS and NOISES in the HEAD.—Certain Method of Self-cure.

Extraordinary Discovery.—Instant Relief.—Just Published, sent free by post on receipt of seven postage stamps, A STOP to EMPIRICISM, and Extraordinary Fees. Sufferers extremely deaf can permanently cure themselves, without pain or use of any instrument, by means of this book. Thousands have been restored to perfect hearing, and for ever rescued from the snare of the numerous dangerous pretenders of the present day. It is published by Dr. F. R. HOGHTON, Member of the London
Royal College of Surgeons, May 2nd, 1845, I. A.C., April 30th, 1846, at the Institution for the Cure of Deafness, 9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall, London, where all letters are to be addressed. Consultations Free, from Eleven till Four daily.

DEAFNESS.—Dr. MANFRED'S IM- PORTANT DISCOVERY.—The New Treat- ment for instantly restoring Hearing without op- eration, use of instruments, blistering, leeching, physicking, probing, syringing, or the usual absurd treatment. One consultation is sufficient; a perma- nent cure is guaranteed to any sufferer of forty or fifty years' duration.

This truly wonderful discovery is known and practised only by Dr. H. Manfred, who has made diseases of the ear his entire study both in hospital and private practice. The new treatment is applied by him daily on numbers of applicants with perfect success in every case, enabling persons to hear conversation with ease and delight, and almost instantly removing those noises in the head and ears. Thousands of letters from persons cured, any of which may be seen. Dr. Manfred, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, Consulting Surgeon in Diseases of the Ear only, will receive patients daily, from ten until five, free of any charge, except in those cases where restoration of hearing is positively certain. Dr. Manfred, M.R.C.S., 72, Regent-street, London.

NOTICE! (Entrance, first door in Air-street.)—
Just published, free by post for eight stamps, a Method for Self Cure, for country patients only.

RUPTURES EFFECTUALLY CURED WITHOUT A TRUSS.—All suf- ferers from this alarming complaint are earnestly invited to consult or write to Dr. LESLIE, as he guarantees them relief in every case. His remedy has been successful in curing thousands of persons during the last eleven years, and is applicable to every kind of Single and Double Rupture, however bad or long-standing, in male or female of any age, causing no equipment or inconvenience in its use whatever. Sent post free to any part of the world, with full instructions for use, on receipt of 7s. 6d. in postage stamps, cash, or post-office order, payable at the General Post-office, to Dr. LESLIE, BRIERLEY LKSLIE, 37A, Manchester-street, Gray's Inn-road, London.—At home daily (except Sunday) from eleven till three o'clock. A Pamphlet of Testimonials sent post free on receipt of one postage stamp.

THE ALL-HEALING REMEDY!!! HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—

An extraordinary and rapid Cure of Erys-sipelas in the leg, after medical aid had failed.
Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yates, of the Post-office, Aldwick-road, near Bognor, Sussex, dated January 12th, 1853.
TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.
Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. I did so without delay, and am happy to say the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in this neighbourhood similarly affected, who derived equal benefit.
I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful servant,
(Signed) ELIZABETH YATES.

C. L. has constantly on sale Cabs and Driving Phaetons, Stanhopes and single Horse-dolls, Pony Carrriages, and Park Phaetons. He also solicits attention to his Newpat Engine and other Chais, either with pumps or wheelwork sides, and to his Bagot Cart, in panel or wheelwork, easy of access, and possessing all the advantages of the Malvern
Cart, but less expensive.

He has also a large stock of Croydon Basket Carrriages, cheap and elegant, and in every variety of shape, either for sale or building to order, with or without heads, to suit either the Shetland Pony or the Horse.

C. L. would also invite an inspection of his registered Phaeton in basket-work, suitable either for one or a pair of ponies or horses.

Carrriages of all kinds let on hire for long or short engagements.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.

THIS highly fertilizing MANURE, which is sent Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the manure than Guano or any other nature at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of returning its fertilizing power longer than other manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Swanley-bridge, Fulham, at 2 1/2 per ton, and in quantities less than half a ton, at 5s. per cwt., for ready money only;
and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Terminal of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 26, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seedsmen. Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION, 1851.—A landscape, newly-invented, very small powerful wrist-watch pocket glass, the size of a walnut, by which a person can be seen and known one-and-a-half miles distant. They answer every purpose on the race-course, at the opera-houses, country scenery, and ships are clearly seen at twelve to fourteen miles. They are invaluable for shooting, deer-stalking, yachting, to sportsmen, gentlemen, gamekeepers, and tourists. Opera and Race-course Perspective Glasses, with wonderful powers; an object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant. Newly-invented Spectacles. The most aged defective sight is brought to its youthful, natural, and original state. Invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme Deafness—39, Allenmarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

THE FIELD SUPPLEMENT

VOL. IV.—No. 90.]

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE FIELD OF WAR.

THE BLACK SEA.

THE EXPEDITIONARY FORCES OFF SEBASTOPOL.

VIENNA, Wednesday. The combined fleets, which had left Varna on the 3rd, had appeared off Sebastopol on the 5th. A perfect cloud of transports, troop-ships, and steamers of all sizes, covered the sea in the vicinity of Balaklava.

Another despatch of the same date is as follows:—

VIENNA, Wednesday morning.

No accident happened during the embarkation of the expedition to the Crimea, and on the 3rd the greater part of the fleet had weighed anchor.

Sebastopol was generally supposed to be the destined point of attack.

The whole army was in the highest spirits.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

DESTRUCTION OF THE FORTIFICATIONS OF ALAND.

LEDSEUND, Sept. 5.—The fortresses that stood upon the Aland islands are amongst the things that were. Mines were sprung beneath them on the 30th and 31st August, and 2nd September. The fort of Tzee, after it had fallen into the hands of the French, was shelled from the Russian main-work. It took fire, and blew up on the morning of the 15th ult. Prasto was fired on the 30th: its destruction was complete. Three explosions took place in quick succession; on the third the entire fort seemed to open out, and then went upwards amidst a thick volume of smoke. All the heavy granite which formed the outer casing of its walls slipped over the tongue of land upon which it was built into the sea, leaving a heap of bricks and rubble on its site. Nottick was destroyed on the following day. The first explosion was like a clap of the loudest thunder, followed by four or five successive discharges not unlike a salute from heavy guns. Its walls visibly started on the first report, and these shot upwards, enveloped in a cloud of the heaviest and densest smoke, which floated heavily away over the ruins of Prasto. Stones and splinters came down in a shower upon the surrounding rocks, and when the curtain of smoke had withdrawn itself from over the debris, two shaken portions of the circular tower were still standing, like solitary sentinels, over the fallen fort, and served only to render the picture of ruin more striking and impressive. The main work, or semicircular fort, was destroyed on Saturday evening. It was riven asunder by several grand explosions. The whole appearance of the place from the ships now present a melancholy picture of desolation, and has lost all its distinguishing marks. The forts, so lately models of strength and beauty, are effaced from the landscape. The village, which formed so conspicuous an object, has disappeared by fire, and the beautiful trees, so lately umbrageous, but now scorched and shorn, stand like dismal spectres casting off flashes of soot before every breeze. Some of the guns have been shipped on board English vessels. In a lottery for seven brass guns, the French got four, John Bull drew three and a forge. All the shot has been thrown into the sea. The immense stores of Bomarsund have been thrown open to the country people, who flock from all quarters with every excuse for a cart that can be got to carry away the meal, barley, oats, &c. They are allowed to take as much as they please, and, though hundreds have availed themselves of the opportunity, there is still enough and to spare for hundreds more. This is a very reasonable gift to the poor wretches, many of whom but for it must have starved during the winter.

The fortifications at Bomarsund were indebted for their erection to a plan formed by the present Emperor when Grand Duke. He proposed to himself to place an impregnable fortress, so as to command the narrowest strait in the Aland archipelago that admits of navigation at all by vessels of any size. Bomarsund signifies a bolt or bar. It was not till after the works were completed, according to the original plan, that their faultiness was discovered, inasmuch as they were easily assailable from the land side, and commanded by the neighbouring heights. At the time of the capture by the Allies an additional barrack was found in process of erection; the formation of two other fortifications was laid, as well as for a fourth tower, the walls of which were already run up to about three feet above the level of the ground. The extreme assiduity with which the work at these buildings had been carried on up to the last moment was evidenced by the mason having left his chisel, and the bricklayer his trowel and mallet, behind, at the place they had been working; the footsteps of the labourers were still fresh on the surface of the ground: the keystone of a bomb-proof granite vault was found half sunk into its bed, and in one pile of bricks a poor bricklayer's labourer had left his wallet, with a lump of black bread and his schmapps bottle in it. The fate of the Russian garrison appears to have been as unpalatable to the Western forces as their habitations in the fortress were found disgustingly loathsome from the violation of many of the most ordinary rules of health and decency.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

NYBORG, September 12.—The French ships Donaumerth, Saint Louis, Tilsit, Assyrieenne, Audromaque, Cleopatra, Laborieux, with transports, have passed through the Belt with the Baltic troops. We are told that 1,600 have died of cholera. (Another account says 750, including a colonel and three other officers.—Ed.)

The announcement of the arrival of the Baltic squadron at Brest and Cherbourg has caused the greatest excitement in those ports, where preparations are in progress for their reception.

We read in the Phare de la Manche,—"Next month we shall witness in our harbour a great naval spectacle. The entire squadron of Admiral Paraveal Deschênes, composed of forty-five men-of-war, returning from the Baltic to winter in the ports of France, will cast anchor at Cherbourg, in company with ten English steamers and sailing-vessels, having on board the expeditionary corps under the orders of Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers, who are to be disembarked at this port, with all their matériel. We shall then behold an immense fleet of fifty-five vessels, carrying 36,000 men, entering our harbour by the same tide. This news is official. The administration of the Marine has just received orders to have ready by the first week in October rations for that number of men. This grand military display will be rendered still more attractive, if we be rightly informed, by the presence of the Emperor, who is expected to review the expeditionary corps, whose valour, by the taking of Bomarsund, has greatly added to our military renown. The arrival of his Majesty at Cherbourg is very probable, but it is not in our power as yet to confirm this pleasing intelligence, which we hope will prove correct. At all events, we are assured that the Minister of Marine will review the squadron. After a short stay in our port the fleet will separate; one division will continue at Cherbourg, and the other will winter at Brest. With respect to the troops, we cannot say whether they will remain in our garrison until the next campaign, or, what, is more probable, be quartered in the different towns of the interior, leaving at Cherbourg all the matériel of the artillery, and the camp equipage."

A Berlin letter of the 10th, in the Post Ampt Gazette of Frankfurt, says:—"Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers, who has just arrived here from Dantzic, received at that city the Marshal's baton, from the hands of an aide-de-camp to the Emperor. M. Maustier, the French Ambassador, has paid a long visit to the Marshal, who is accompanied by Gen. Niel, Colonel St. Loyal and de Rochehouet, Intendant Petit, and Captain Melin, aide-de-camp."

SAILING OF TROOPS.

The hired steam transport Vifredo, Costello commander, is ordered to be docked at Portsmouth before taking in her detachments for the East, having been aground on the Owers.

The detachments from the 92nd Highlanders are under orders to move from the Tower, as also those of the 85th, 38th, 23rd, and other regiments, to strengthen the garrison at Windsor, on the departure of the 46th Foot for the East.

In addition to the troops that the hired steam transport Vifredo will take out to the Black Sea, she will also take out 2,800 barrels of beef and pork, several tons of bread and biscuit, and 300 dozen of port wine for the use of the sick troops at Varna. It is reported that a portion of the 46th regiment will embark in the Vifredo.

The Maugerton, hired transport, No. 17, has arrived at Portsmouth to embark stores, &c., for the Black Sea.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

An order was received on Saturday night by Colonel Ellis, C.B., Commandant of the Woolwich division of Royal Marines, to have in readiness a detachment consisting of sixty-one non-commissioned officers and men of the division to proceed immediately to Sheerness for embarkation in the Algiers, 91, screw steamship, Captain Charles Talbot, for a passage to Turkey, to fill up the casualties and death-vacancies in the Black Sea. The order was promptly attended to, and yesterday forenoon the non-commissioned officers and men marched from their barracks, headed by their band, to the dockyard-station of the North Kent Railway. On entering the carriages, the band played "Rule Britannia," and the detachment left the station for Sheerness amid the cheers of a great number of strangers, which were warmly responded to by cheers and waving of flags of the detachment.

The Algiers will embark at the same time a detachment of the Chatham division of Royal Marines, and call at Plymouth on her way to the Mediterranean and Black Sea, to embark detachments from these divisions of Royal Marines, and the entire number of Marines embarked in her for the service of the ships and steamers on that station will be upwards of 200 non-commissioned officers and men.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

WOMEN IN CAMPS.—In a letter from a private soldier, published in the Salisbury Journal, the writer says: "Only twenty-four women came out with us, and they are nearly all ill. It is pitiable to look at the condition to which campaigning has brought our poor British females. How they live, and what they live on, is a mystery to me. It is a shame that, after a passage was given to them out here, no further provision was made for their support. They have no tents to lie in only what they make themselves out of calico, or anything they can get, and they are a burden to themselves and their husbands. In a great many instances the poor creatures are hated and scouted by the soldiers. I pity them, and often feel happy that I am out here by myself."

MARKET IN THE CAMP AT TCHOURUK-SU.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

The Wallachians continue to show every favourable disposition towards the Turkish cause. An address has been made to Omar Pasha, and signed by a great number of the influential inhabitants (nearly 400), requesting Omar Pasha to obtain the permission of the Sultan for the Wallachian troops to join the Turkish army, and be led by him against the Russians.

It is related that the Emperor of Russia, in an autograph letter to the King of Prussia, has proposed an interview.

On the day that the Austrian Baron Hess received the order to send troops across the frontier into Wallachia, he was at the chateau of Count Alfred Potocki, to whom he gave a paper, on which was the following:—"In this castle, on this day, the order was given to the Imperial Royal Austrian troops to enter Great and Little Wallachia from Transylvania. More than 120 years have elapsed since the Austrians were in Wallachia.—Lancul, August 17th, the eve of his Majesty's birthday, 1854. "Hess, V. Z. M."

Lady Errol, Mrs. H. Duberly, and Mrs. Gresswell, are the only three English ladies who follow the fortunes of the campaign. These ladies have no "lodgings in the town," but live under canvas, and share with cheerfulness and resolution, the bad food, hardships, and fatigues of an expedition carried on in a country destitute of every comfort and almost every necessary. On the march they ride with the troops, and endure, as well as they, the burning sun and heavy rain. There are several ladies residing in a good hotel at Therapia, on the Bosphorus.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

Prince Michael Gortschakoff has sent information to the Russian Embassy at Vienna, that his principal force will have quitted Moldavia by the 20th of September, and the remainder of the troops by the beginning of October, "unless hostile operations should render a fresh concentration necessary." In Odessa, Reni, Ismail, Galatz, and Brailow, all the requisites for extinguishing fires have been taken, by order of General Liders, and either burned or thrown into the water.

A strong impression prevails at Brailow and Galatz that the Russians will set fire to the two towns before they leave. At Kalmarsh, on the Buik or Byk, which is at no great distance from Kichindoff, in Bessarabia, a vast quantity of powder has been accumulated, and on the 30th of August the place was set on fire on all four sides by Polish soldiers. Some Cossack patrols caught the men in the very act, "and they were immediately tied to horses' tails and so quartered alive."

Notwithstanding the difficulty of the Turkish tongue, a private of the 7th, named O'Flaherty, has made such good use of his time, since he has been at Varua, that he understands both Greek and Turkish, and was passed the other day as third-class interpreter, Sir George Brown having sent out his interpreter at the man's request to examine him, when he was found perfectly competent for the post.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

Accounts from Erzerum, dated the 17th ult., state that the Russians have abandoned Bayazid, which has been again occupied by the Turks. An English courier, who arrived from Tabriz at Erzerum, on the 17th, had announced that the road was entirely free between those two cities. A caravan, consisting of 1,500 horses, was accordingly preparing to leave Erzerum for Persia. The battle of Kuruk-deré has, no doubt, induced the Russian troops in possession of Bayazid to fall back on the army of Gumri, for the losses suffered by the Russians at Kuruk-deré must have been very serious, if, as Russian deserters have declared at Kurs, they had from 10,000 to 11,000 men, out of 22,000 or 23,000, put hors de combat.

A letter from Beyrout, of the 19th ult., states that Emir Beshir Ahmet, the candidate proposed by the great Powers for the post of Christian Patriarch of Lebanon, had been confirmed by the Sublime Porte, and the Muehir had immediately given him the investiture. This appointment had been favourably received by the population of the mountains.

Naval.

An order has been issued at Sheerness regulating the time of persons visiting the Royal Albert and dockyard, in order to meet the arrival of passengers by the steam-packets from London via the Thames and Medway. They are in future to assemble at the yard-gate, at 9.30 a.m., and at 2 p.m., when they will be escorted through the yard (with permission to visit the Royal Albert), by the police. Every facility is given to visitors by arrangements made by the Captain-Superintendent. The number of visitors daily is immense. On Monday, the fires were lighted up on board the Royal Albert to prove the boilers and joints. The fires were kept back by order of Mr. Rumble, the chief engineer, until the arrival of Mr. Hartrie, the representative of Messrs. John Penn and Son. At 10 a.m. the engines were started, and when fully up to their speed made fifty-one revolutions per minute, the load on the safety-valve being 20lb. on the square inch. The engines were worked four hours and a-half, giving the greatest satisfaction to all present. There was not the least symptom of hot bearings, and everything worked with the greatest ease. The boilers gave an abundant supply of steam. There was an excellent draught in the fire-places. The engine-room and stoke-hole were unusually cool, the engine-room not exceeding eighty degrees, and the stoke-hole not more than 100 degrees. From Monday's trial at moorings, it seems probable that high speed will be hereafter obtained, as the engines made fifty-one revolutions on an average. Screw vessels generally make about three-fourths of their revolutions at moorings, consequently there is but little doubt these engines will make sixty revolutions on her trial, and with the present pitch of screw, with a liberal allowance for slip, this stupendous mass of wood and metals will be propelled through the water (with a nominal power of 500 horse) at the rate of 10½ knots per hour.

DEATH OF A CHARACTER.—An aged man, named Bilhard, lately died in the Union workhouse, Leicester, in his seventy-first year. He was one of the mite-eaters of the Nore, and was sentenced to execution. The rope was about his neck, and he was on the point of being swung off, when he was reprieved. From that hour to the time of his death—whether it was from a nervous feeling or from fancy cannot be determined—he never wore a neckerchief about his neck. Cravats had for him, probably, disagreeable reminiscences.—Nottingham Review.

THE ENEMY AT SEA!—Russian papers mention that on July 22nd (not stated whether O. S. or N. S.) six ships of the line, towed by six steam-frigates, put out to sea from Cronstadt harbour, and after a cruise of five days returned to Cronstadt. On July 30th the fifth battalion of the reserve flotilla of row-boats arrived at Cronstadt with the gunboats from St. Petersburg. Despatches received in the capital mention a hostile squadron off Revel, August 21st. On the 18th and 19th of August a cannonade was heard at Solisbury in N.W. direction. From same place (20th) an enemy's liner in sight, fast on a sand-bank. From Helsingfors and Swenborg (22nd) cruisers of the enemy exchanged shots with Russian steamers without further results.

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

The private correspondence from the East of the Moniteur de la Flotte gives a very satisfactory account of the sanitary state of the French squadron:—"Public report (it says) had greatly exaggerated the number of deaths, causing thereby general apprehension, which, thank God! the result has not justified. One fact worthy of remark was, that after the worst symptoms of the disease had disappeared, we had only to regret the loss of one officer; and, what is still more wonderful, several vessels escaped altogether, especially the Charlemagne and Napoleon, which constantly kept at sea. Next to these, the most favoured were the Ville de Marseille, Jena, and Henri Quatre. There were twenty-one deaths on board the Suffren. The epidemic first broke out on board the Primauget, on her arrival from Gallipoli, where the cholera was raging in all its fury. The Turkish population showed the greatest care and attention to our crews under those trying circumstances. The Alger had to land all the sick and place them under canvas to avoid contagion, but they only remained there one day, as the Turks came forward to offer their houses, where they met with every possible attention."

MOVEMENTS OF SHIPS OF WAR, Aug. 15.—At Rio de Janeiro: French squadron—Andromède, 50; Galathée, 30; Chasseur, 14; Caténat, 6. At Lisbon, Sept. 8: The French steamer Newton.

STEAMERS.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 9.—The British and North-American mail steamer Arabia, Jenkins commander, took her departure hence for New York with 171 passengers and a full cargo. This afternoon the Italian operative corps, who have been performing in the Theatre Royal, left Liverpool (via Holyhead) for Dublin, where they commence a fortnight's engagement on Monday. This afternoon was launched from the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Vernon and Son a new iron screw-steamer, the Loire, being the pioneer vessel of a new line of steamers from this port to Nantes. She is 573 tons burthen, 175 feet long, 26 feet wide, 14 feet depth of hold, and her engines are of 70-horse power.

LONDON.—The Austrian steam-frigate Elizabeth, which has been fitted out for service in the East India Dock, was hauled out into the river on Monday, to the buoys off Blackwall, where she will wait for a few days to be manned by a crew brought over by the Austrian screw-frigate now lying off Greenwich.

LIDSUND, BALTIC, Sept. 5.—A small Russian steamer, to the surprise of all, made her way through the islands, and appeared off Bomarsund in time to see the main fort blown up on the evening of the 2nd inst. She carried a flag of truce, but this I consider a piece of expediency on her part. Her real object, without doubt, was to see what had been done to the fortresses, &c. She stated that she left Helsingfors with the view of embarking the wives and families of the Russian prisoners, and not having met an English man-of-war in her passage through the Gulf of Finland, she concluded the blockade was raised, and she pushed on for Bomarsund! The admiral was going to detain her; but, although her conduct was doubtful, he subsequently allowed her to return. It blew furiously last night. Four French ships dragged their anchors; one got foul of the Duke, and carried away the dolphin-strike.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

CHINA.—An able seaman belonging to the Sybilie, in a letter dated Batavia, July 8, and received at Plymouth last week, says, "The Winchester has taken a Russian frigate and two corvettes in the north of China."

DEAL.—RUSSIAN PRISONERS.—The barracks both at Deal and Walmer have been selected for the confinement of Russian prisoners of war. The depôts of the 10th and 44th regiments of Foot, therefore, vacated their old quarters on Wednesday last, and marched to Dover Castle.

SHEERNESS.—DEVONSHIRE AND BENBOW PRISON-SHIRLS.—An increase in the number of the Pensioner Guards for the Devonshire has been ordered. The paymaster and the surgeon of this ship have now nearly 1,400 men under their charge. Several cases of cholera have broken out among the prisoners since being put on board, some of which have proved fatal. An assistant-surgeon has been sent on board the Benbow. It is reported there are to be at least two surgeons on board each ship, so as to give a relief to each other, as the present gentlemen are occupied day and night in attending on the sick.

SALE OF PRIZES.—On Monday, the High Marshal of the Court of Admiralty gave public notice on the Royal Exchange that, within twenty days from that date, the ship Rapid, seized in the port of Hull by her Majesty's officers of Customs, under simulated papers, and of which Hansen was late the master, would be condemned as a Crown droid, the same being the property of the Queen's enemies. On the same day the Russian prizes John and Industrie were sold by public auction at Hull by the Admiralty broker. They realised very good prices. The Russian vessel Carolina, Ehlers late master, 285 tons burthen, built at Riga in 1832, prize to her Majesty's ships Amphion and Archer, was sold by auction on Wednesday, at Yarmouth, by the Admiralty broker, realising a considerable sum.

On Monday, advices were received that another Russian prize, the Anna Maria, had passed Elsinore (of which place we to-day give an illustration), for England, in charge of Prizemaster Bathurst. The Themis, also a prize to her Majesty's cruisers in the Baltic, has passed Elsinore for the port of London.

The St. Vincent, 102, in Portsmouth harbour, is being cleared out and fumigated after having cholera on board. The beds, &c., used by troops and Russian prisoners, are being examined, and will be cleansed or burnt on an island in Portsmouth harbour.

Her Majesty's ship Hannibal, Captain Grey, passed Falmouth on Sunday with Russian prisoners from Bomarsund, bound for Brest.

The eight Russian vessels that were taken at Liban in the middle of May, are still lying dismantled in Menel harbour; and it seems very doubtful whether the hulls will ever be found worthy the expense of a new rigging.

SHEERNESS, Wednesday.—The Finnish soldiers were yesterday separated from the Russian soldiers, and also the Russian Jews from the Finnish Jews, each being placed in separate messes, by order of Lieutenant-Commander Everest, who took the greatest interest in meeting the wishes of Lieutenant Hook, of the Finnish Artillery, who went on board yesterday for the purpose of distributing pay to the soldiers, due up to the time of the capture of Bomarsund. A question of some importance arose yesterday among the gentlemen cadets, prisoners, most of whom are sons of gentlemen, under training in the ranks to serve as sub-lieutenants; it was, whether they were entitled to their parole, and to receive their subsistence-money the same as the lieutenants. There are in all sixteen of them, and they express great sorrow that at present they have no privilege beyond the common soldier—the service instructions making no provision under a sub-lieutenant. This rank they claim, as they were entitled to all the privileges of sub-lieutenants in their own service. An especial application will be made to the authorities on their behalf on this subject immediately. Non-commissioned officers have kindly been granted a day parole, occasionally, for their health, and the officers in charge wish to give all reasonable indulgences. There are women among them on board the Benbow. The husband of one (a common soldier) was killed at the taking of Bomarsund; the husband of the other (a common soldier also) died on his passage home in the St. Vincent. The former woman is near her confinement, and is in very delicate health. A cabin is appropriated for her by Lieutenant-Commander Everest, and every attention shown her that her situation requires. Fresh cases of cholera are daily making their appearance on board both ships. The following are the names of the gentlemen cadets:—Carl Scanberg, Alexander Ekman, Carl Ranan, Frans Wahlberg, Gustaf Lindsbrom, Carl Tarnroth, Gustaf Freij, Carl Forsagard, Wilhelm Gronholm, Pavel Petraff, Alexy Sveroff Mattoy off Fejedoroff, on board the Devonshire, and cadets Ferfebrum, Aissepegrin, Sandberg, Bjarrbom, and Wansin, on board the Benbow. These gentlemen, seventeen in number, have appealed to their senior officer at Sheerness—Major Grabin, of the Finnish Grenadier Company—to interest himself on their behalf to obtain their parole and subsistence.

The Russian prizes Mazeta and Fortuna, taken by her Majesty's steamers Amphion and Archer, are now being worked home from Menel, in charge of prize crews, in order that they may be legally condemned by the Court of Admiralty and sold for the benefit of their captors.

H.M.S. Hannibal, Commodore the Hon. F. W. Grey, arrived at Sheerness on Tuesday, at 2.30 p.m., from Brest; she arrived at Brest, from the Downs, on the night of the 7th; she was subjected to a strict quarantine of five days. The prisoners were transhipped into transports and conveyed to Rochefort. The following officers were brought home from Bomarsund by her—viz., Colonel Turnheim, Lieutenant Colonel Kraushold, Captain Knosring, Captain Bark, Captain Fomin, Lieutenant Chatelein, Lieutenant Brofelt, Lieutenant Volkoff, Lieutenant Borisoff, and Johan Arnold; the latter-named gentleman was a Polish officer, prisoner to the Russians in the fort at Bomarsund, and released by the admiral's orders on arrival in France. There were also 283 rank and file, ten women, and three children. Nineteen deaths among the Russian soldiers took place on the passage home. There have also been nineteen deaths among the ship's company. Dr. Crawford, the surgeon, and the assistant-surgeon, appear to have suffered considerably from constant fatigue in attending on the sick and dying men, as the Russian surgeons at the forts at Bomarsund made their early exit from the forts and escaped being taken as prisoners.

Military.

THE CENT GARDE.—By the majority of English, the body-guard of the Emperor are considered to be somewhat too showy and theatrical in appearance; and, habituated as the English are to a more severe style of clothing for the army, it is not a matter of surprise that such an opinion should have been formed. In spite, however, of the very elaborate manner in which this crack corps is got up, and the somewhat violent contrast of colour, there is much in their uniform and general appearance which is exceedingly fine and imposing. The body consists of 100 men. They are carefully selected from among the non-commissioned officers of the other regiments in the service, not merely on account of their height and personal appearance, but for their steadiness, intelligence, and good conduct. Appointed to the Cent Garde, the men who are so fortunate as to be selected rank the same as lieutenants in the army, and receive the salutes due to other officers of the army. The commandant of the corps takes rank as colonel, and the next officer below him that of lieutenant-colonel in the army. The undress uniform of the men is a light blue frock-coat reaching down to the knees, with gold aiguillettes, crimson trousers with gold or lace stripes, a black leather belt and sword, and cocked hat. Most of the men are of fine figure; few, if any, under six feet in height, and their dress is faultless in its fit. When mounted, the men wear a light blue tunic with crimson facings, a cuirass, and bright silvery-looking helmet, profusely decorated with gold, and carrying a kind of double red and white feather. The epaulettes are gold, and fringe gold mixed with crimson silk, the effect of which is remarkably fine. The breeches are white leather, and the boots similar to those of the Horse Guards. The saddle-cloth is crimson, richly embroidered in gold. The horses, like the men, are a very select body, and are groomed by the servants of the men. As a crack body for parade, they are unequalled in appearance in any country, but they do not possess a sufficiently military air to inspire either awe or confidence; they merely excite feelings of admiration, while the execrable manner in which some of them ride produces a painful sensation of fear lest the plunging of their horses should cause them to soil their finery and their trappings by an unpleasant roll in the dusty roads.

VARNAS.—“Whatever impatience good folks at home may feel at ‘nothing being done,’ I can assure you since an expedition has been positively determined upon, the energy, tact, and endurance of the naval and engineer departments have been marvellous. On the south side of the bay three wharfs have been run out—one for cavalry, one for infantry, and one for artillery, with their respective applications printed, or rather painted, on regular English finger-posts at the ends of them. They have had the carpenters, joiners, and caulkers, from almost every ship in the fleet; hauled boats up to repair, built rafts, and landing stages; and the other day, for trial, got an artillery heavy gun out of a ship, transported it on shore, and fired the first shot in seven minutes, gun regularly mounted and all.”

WINDSOR.—The 46th will be relieved at Windsor by the 18th (Royal Irish), under the command of Colonel Reynolds. The strength of the 18th has been so much reduced by foreign service that detachments from other regiments will have to be added, in order to take the usual garrison duties. A district paymaster has been appointed.—Captain Dalgetty.

Promuary and Militia.

YORK.—The Yorkshire Hussars, Colonel Earl de Grey, come out for seven days' training at York on the 21st inst. They will be reviewed on the 27th inst., at York, by the district commanding officer.

WELLS.—The troop of East Somerset Cavalry will assemble on Saturday week.

WALKING 100 MILES IN 22 HOURS, FOR £25.—Mr. Thompson, of the Monmouthshire Militia, has just completed walking 100 miles in 21 hours, an hour before the time specified. Cardiff Guardian.

BATH.—The Second Somerset Militia will assemble in this city on the 26th, about 600 strong, and, after a few days' preparation, proceed to Cork.

Medical.

CHOLERA.—(To the Editor.) Sir,—I beg leave respectfully to acquaint you that I have witnessed, with great satisfaction, the happy effects of Dr. George Johnson's purgative system in several cases of Asiatic cholera at the King's College Hospital, and that the practice entirely accords with the views I have long entertained of this devastating malady, both as to its cause, symptoms, and treatment. These views were detailed in full in a letter which I addressed in 1849 to the learned President of the Royal College of Physicians, in reply to a circular sent to all the members requesting their opinion on the subject of cholera. I have the honour to be, &c., B. F. OUTRAM, C.B., F.R.S., and Inspector of Hospitals, R.N.

ROYAL NAVY.—The following appointments have been made:—Surgeons: James Carmichael, M.D. (1835), to the Bellerophon, 78, on the Mediterranean station, and serving in the Black Sea; Thomas S. Wells (1848) to the Furios, paddle-wheel steam-frigate, on the Mediterranean and Black Sea station; John Stewart (b) (1841) to the Britannia, 120, flagship, on the Mediterranean and Black Sea station; Edward H. Derriman, M.D. (1846), borne on the books of the Fiscard flagship, at Woolwich, for service in the Royal Naval Coast Volunteers, to the Britannia; James Walsh, M.D. (1844), borne on the books of the Fiscard flagship, for service in the Royal Naval Coast Volunteers, to the Britannia.

MADRID, Sept. 5.—On the faith of a letter from Barcelona, a Madrid paper to-day gives details of the cholera in that city during the month of August, which, if correct, show its ravages to have been terrible. The letter gives the deaths on each successive day, excluding the 23rd and 31st, concerning which the writer had not obtained data. In the twenty-nine days 3,826 persons had died. Considering that from one-half to two-thirds of the population had fled from the pest-ridden city and its environs, this number is exceedingly large. The Journal des Pyrénées-Orientales says:—“The dread of the cholera in some parts of Spain has amounted to absolute folly. In Catalonia several communes formed a sanitary cordon to keep away all communication from outside—a useless precaution, and exceedingly injurious to the interests of the populations. At Montblanc, a woman taken ill was buried, it is believed, before she was really dead. The town of Sitges declared itself independent, placed armed sentinels all round the approaches to the place, and refused to admit any strangers or carts from the country districts. At Masponjola, in the district of Reus, a woman having died, the alcade had the door and lower windows of the house bricked up, without allowing her two daughters to come out, food being conveyed to them by a hole left in one window. This act of barbarism would be incredible were it not attested by a petition sent to the superior authorities by one or two of the more respectable inhabitants, who were shocked at such an act of cruelty.”

CHLOROFORM DISARMED.—Dr. Robert de Lambelle, a Parisian M.D., announces that a shock of electricity, given to a patient dying from the effects of chloroform, immediately counteracts its influence, and restores the sufferer to life.

University and Clerical.

CATHEDRAL RESTORATIONS.—In the report of the commissioners on the cathedral and collegiate churches, it is stated that, at Canterbury, the north-west, or Lanfranc's tower, has been rebuilt, at a cost of £25,000, and a gradual restoration of the whole fabric, exterior and interior, has been in progress from 1823 to the present time. The whole amount expended in thirty years is stated at nearly £100,000, the whole arising from caputal funds.

VACANCIES.—The rectory of Farnley, with the rectory of Almodington annexed, Sussex, has become vacant, by the preferment of the Rev. Henry Browne, M.A. The benefice, which is worth £500 a year, is in the gift of the Bishop of Chichester for two turns, and the Duke of Norfolk for one turn. By Mr. Browne's preferment, the incumbency of St. Bartholomew's Church, Chichester, also becomes vacant. It is worth £100 a year, and is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Chichester Cathedral.

TORNADO AT LOUISVILLE.—A terrible tornado passed over the city of Louisville about twelve o'clock on the 27th ult. The Fourth Presbyterian Church was blown down during the service; twenty-five of the congregation were killed instantly, and a large number wounded. Numerous other buildings were unroofed and blown down.—New York Inquirer.

THE BALTIC, August 30.—At 6 a.m. Admiral Chads went up to Bomarsund in the Edinburgh, to try range of long gun, as also see the forts blown up, which have been undermined by the sappers in sections, and at nine o'clock the Commander-in-Chief went up in H.M.S. Odin. It will be a magnificent sight, as trains are laid from one extreme of the fort to the other; everything of value has been taken away, but the most valuable article was concealed behind the altar by the Russian priest; it was a silver shrine set with diamonds and rubies. He would not let any one know where it was, but when he told General Baraguay d'Hilliers he wanted it for another chapel, he got permission to take it away. When it was shown to the general, he valued it at five thousand pounds, being a very ancient church ornament.

A GLANCE AT CRICKET.

(To the Editor of THE FIELD.)

Sir,—As there are many who call themselves cricketers, and do not know the history of that scientific and manly game, I think you will spare me space to give a little of its history. The name of cricket is derived from the Saxon word cricket, signifying, in the English, stick. We do not find much mention of this game till about the year 1701. The game of cricket has not always been as it is at the present, for the great club of England, the Marylebone, every year makes a change in the rules; so that if old Fenwick were to come back again, he would find that he must learn the rules, as there would be many and great alterations since his day. Lillywhite (who is now dead) had lately introduced a new style of bowling, called round-hand, which makes the game look quite different. The shape of the bat has also been altered, and people do not use such heavy ones now. It is very rare that we hear of a man scoring 100, like they did in William Ward's time, although, in the match of the United v. Fifteen of Kent, Dean there scored ninety-nine. William Ward's name, I dare say, is known by all who are in the habit of frequenting Lord's Cricket-ground, he making the long score of 278, which I think he would find hard to obtain off the round-hand. But still, persons who lived in the time of this Ward and Lord F. Beauclerk will tell you that the play was altogether better; then there were no Box or Nicholson to short stop, and no such batters as Dean and Lillywhite. The bowling of late has been very fast, but twisting, slow balls, seem now to gain the day. Who got more wickets than E. Drake, Esq., who is well known to the cricketing world? but the bowling of Wroth, in his swift round-hand, does not tell nearly so much as Drake's, although some people like the former's style best.

Cricket appears to be exclusively an English game, enjoyed equally by the poor and the rich. What village in England is there in which there are not some cricketers to be found? Nearly all our first-rate hands used to come from villages: old Fenwick was born in a village near Uxbridge, called Gerrard's-cross. One grand and pleasing thing is to see the ball thrown up in the air when a man is out, to denote the triumph felt, and the challenge; how he was out, and how it happened, goes running round the ground, as the man thinks, and, in fact, knows precisely, how he ought to have played; but still his wicket fell. I have lately seen an article in Bentley's Miscellany, an extract from which I think might here be appropriately inserted:—

Buckinghamshire used to be a celebrated county for good cricketers, and can boast of Beddian, the two Walkers, Robinson, and Harris, with many others. Nottinghamshire, where I have lately been staying, is now, perhaps, what Buckinghamshire formerly was, the nursery of good players. Clarke, who is, I believe, still living, had few equals in his day, and he had besides many contemporaries nearly equal to him. Kent and Suffolk can also boast of many good players. At a village match in the latter the following scene occurred:—

It was during one of the pauses of the game that an old man was perceived walking slowly towards the ground. He was grey, round-shouldered, weather-beaten, and shabbily dressed, with his hands behind his back. It was, however, easy to see that he was a cricketer, and he was soon recognised by one of the players to be old Fenwick, once a very celebrated one. On being accosted, he said he was going round the country to teach any clubs that might want his assistance, and, hearing of the match, he had stopped to see the play. When it was over, he was asked to give a few balls. Now, for the first time, the club perceived how ignorant they were of the art of bowling. Wicket after wicket went down, and it was evident that the players had not only to learn but to unlearn. The effect of this judicious measure was soon visible, but acquired only at the expense of lacerated fingers and bruised legs. The whole style of the play was altered; no more slashing play—no more long swipes over the common—no hitting across wicket. All was now steady, scientific, and accurate; a reason, and a good one, was assigned for every movement, and, by the end of the season, the members of the club, if not all good players, were at last put in the right method, and secure of improvement. Old Fenwick is now no more. He was nearly blind before he died, and incapable of muscular exertion; but he loved to wander about the beautiful common, the scene of his former glory.

Fenwick was born and brought up at Gerrard's-cross, near Uxbridge, and at the age of nineteen had become the first cricketer in Buckinghamshire. He was contemporary with Beddian, Harris, the two Walkers, Robinson, and others, and Sir Horace Mann was at that time the enthusiastic patron of the art. Having mentioned Harris, it may be remarked that such was his skill in bowling, that, while crippled with the gout, he was allowed a chair. Among the great performances of Fenwick was his having, when alone and unassisted, beat on Mitcham Common, at single wicket, the three greatest cricketers of their day. As a proof, also, of the strength and self-denial of this veteran, it may be mentioned that, at the age of 75, he walked ninety miles in three days, carrying an umbrella, bundle of clothes, and three cricket bats, and spent in that time but three shillings. When he arrived at the end of his journey, all that he complained of was that the bats had bruised his side. When he died, his hands should have been preserved, like Galileo's at Florence, as trophies of his suffering and his glories. Broken, distorted, mutilated, half-paralysed, they resembled the hoof of a rhinoceros almost as much as a human hand; but what bats have they not performed? It ought to be mentioned that Fenwick raised himself to such eminence by his skill, that he was enabled once to keep his three hunters—that he was the bosom friend of Oldacre, the illustrious huntsman of the Berkeley park—that he lived with Lord Winchelsea and the Tuftons, but that he found in the house of a friendly village apothecary that hospitable shelter and security for his old age which none of his former noble and titled patrons would deign to bestow.

But it is time now to look in at Lord's Cricket-ground during the matches between the Eton, Harrow, and Winchester schools. The reader may imagine the writer of this seated on one of the benches in front of the stand, surrounded by old cricketers, amateurs, and a host of boys belonging to the schools in question, who take a lively interest in the success of their various schoolfellows. This is evinced by the vociferous shouts and clapping of hands when a good strike has been made, or a dangerous ball scientifically stopped; and then the cheers when the board is put up showing a good score from the last player. I delight in witnessing this scene, and the fine manly bearing and gentleman-like appearance of the young aspirants for fame in the senate and the bar, the army and navy, diplomacy or the church. What a promise do they seem to afford of doing credit to their schools, and of upholding the glory of the country. Nor are the carriages without their interest, for in them may be seen the mothers and sisters of some of the players, watching the performance of their sons and brothers with no small degree of satisfaction and delight. The masters and tutors, also, of the several schools take no small interest in the game, and, as they walk about, are occasionally copped by their scholars and pupils. Such is a scene that may be witnessed in Lord's Cricket-ground soon after the commencement of the summer holidays, and it is a scene well worth going to.

But let us now go to the upper playing fields at Eton. There, seated on a circular bench, under one of the noble elms at that place, we see the two Etons in full play, while some two or three hundred boys are looking on, not quite silently, however, for every now and then a cheer is heard for a good batter or bowler. And what a cricket-keeper as I remember there a few years ago; there was but little occasion for a long-stop, for no sooner had the ball passed the cricket, however swift it might have been bowled, if it came but tolerably straight it was sure to be in his hand. He was a short every boy, but I have never seen his equal either before or since. And then Harding's celebrated swipe, he sent the ball from theicket in the upper playing fields over the elms on the Poet's Walk. Old Etonians know the spot.

In whatever part of the world Englishmen congregate, there this favourite game is sure to be played. In the hot plains of India, in the softer clime of Italy, in France and Germany, matches are made. Even during the progress of our army through Spain, both officers and soldiers named themselves with cricket. It is altogether exclusively an English game, for we never yet heard that any foreigner has been seen to enter into the merits of it, or to partake in the sport. That it keeps the young men in our villages out of mischief, and out of the ale-houses, cannot be doubted, besides contributing to their health and muscular exertions. It forms, also, a link between landlord and tenant, and between the squire and the clergyman of the parish, and their poorer neighbours, thus helping to cement kinder feelings, and to produce a friendly intercourse which cannot fail to be useful both to one and the other. I know a gentleman of fortune, in the north of England, who has a test or two pitched in one of the fields, invites his tenants to make up a match of cricket, plays with and regales them, and leases the ground in the evening with the good wishes and blessings of his more humble neighbours. His popularity amongst them is very great, and with this friendly intercourse is being carried on, all dissension and discontent are far removed from his door. We wish that this practice were very generally adopted, for it cannot fail of being productive of beneficial results.

Since this first appeared we have had more men show their faces out of Bucks, although they do not appear in the great matches. At any rate our county can boast of bowlers, and I am greatly surprised Bucks does not play another county, for their success would be sure. Even the town of Aylesbury once played South Oxfordshire, and their best bowler was gone, and were only beaten by twelve runs. For instance, who will dispute that Fletcher and Drake are two of the best bowlers in England; then comes Jones, who is a splendid round-hand bowler, and under too, howling all day without a single wicket.

P. Hale, Esq., and H. Wheeler, are good latters, and I am sure that if a challenge was sent to Bucks now, or a person sent to pick eleven, they would find that although Beddian, the two Walkers, Robinson, and Harris, were gone, their successors were good; but Bucks never will live up, because we have no nobility. I must draw to a close, thanking you for the space you have allowed me, and am, Sir, yours, Aylesbury, Sept. 1851. CUCHIN.

AQUATICS.

HERNE BAY REGATTA.

The regatta at this watering-place took place on Monday, the 11th inst., and was attended by the fashionables of the country and neighbourhood. The prizes were, The Herne Bay Cup, value thirty guineas, for yachts not exceeding twenty tons; The Canterbury Cup, value twenty guineas, for yachts not exceeding ten tons; and A Purse of Sovereigns, for the Whitstable fishing-boats not exceeding seventeen tons; with several prizes for rowing-boats. Time allowed, one minute a ton. For the first cup, the following entries took place: Secret, 16 tons, Capt. Gardener; Julia, 7 tons, Dr. Bain; Little Musquito, 7 tons, Thomas Bartlett, Esq. The course was twice round three mark-boats moored outside the head of the pier, in about seven fathoms water; a distance, on the whole, of twenty-four miles. At 1 p.m. the gun fired to take stations, and at the next gun the yachts started. Musquito took the lead and kept it throughout, winning by eleven minutes; Julia second; Secret gave up after the first round. This is the fifth prize won by the Musquito this season; in fact, this small and handsome craft has never been beaten. She was purchased by her present owner at Southampton, and was only built the latter part of last year by Mr. Daniel Hatcher, the successful builder of the Sea Nymph and Vampire. Mr. Hatcher is laying down a new 35-ton yacht for Mr. Bartlett, on a new model, with hollow lines, combining speed and accommodation, as well as shining at the character of a thorough sea-going craft. The Musquito is only twenty-three feet long, and eight feet nine inches beam, and she invariably beats yachts of eight to ten feet more in length. The Canterbury Cup was not sailed for. The other usual amusements took place, and in the evening a dinner was served up at the Royal Pier Hotel (see page) in a manner that did great credit. The health of Mr. Burge, the "founder of Herne Bay," was proposed and drunk with enthusiasm, which he duly acknowledged. Fire-works brought the day's amusements to a brilliant termination; and now all eyes are turned towards Chatham, where the Medway Yacht Club Regatta is the next event of importance.

HASTINGS ANNUAL REGATTA.

This annual regatta, says the Dover Chronicle of September 16, which was open to all ports from and between Ramsgate and Portsmouth, took place on Monday last. The first match, between first-class sailing-boats, for which seven boats entered, resulted as follows:—

Lion, Hastings		W. Dumstod	1
Queen, St. Leonards		A. Taylor	2
Cosair, Hastings		C. Appleyard, Esq.	3

The Second Race—the principal race of the day—between first-class four-oared galleys, was contested by six boats. They made a very good start, the galleys getting away together, and rounded the eastern buoys in very close order, the Arrow and Topsy being slightly in advance of the other four; and on passing the committee vessel the two first named were neck-and-neck, and it was evident that a race of great interest would be the result. The boats had now a straight piece of rowing of a mile to the western buoys, which were rounded as follows: the Arrow and Topsy together, the Anne being third, and the others close up in the pull. To the winning-post the boats had a little head sea, and had proceeded a very little way before the Topsy showed her "nose" clear of the Arrow, and gradually drew from her old opponent, and finished a good dozen lengths in advance. The struggle for the third place was good, the Anne beating the Surprise by half-a-length; the Flora and Lelia pulled well together, finishing almost level. The following, therefore, was the order in which they came in:—

Topsy, Hastings		T. Culmer	1
Arrow, Ramsgate		E. Goldsmith	2
Anne, Brighton		A. T. Mills	3
Surprise, Hastings		T. Pickerton, Jun.	4
Lelia, Hastings		T. Vidler	5
Flora, Hastings		E. Picknell, Jun.	6

The Third Race, between river skiffs, was won easily by the Phantom (St. Leonards); Flirt (Hastings), being second; and Paddington (Hastings), third; beating four others.

The Fourth Race, between amateur four-oared galleys, was a good race. The boats came in in the following order:—

Anne, Brighton		A. T. Mills	1
Lelia, Hastings		C. Chandler	2
Surprise, Hastings		C. Breeds	3
Arrow, Hastings		W. Picknell, Jun.	4
Flora, Hastings		E. Picknell, Jun.	5
La Lucie, Sandgate		A. Whiting	6

The Fifth Race, between first-class pair-oared pleasure skiffs, was also a good race, and terminated in the following order:—

Nautilus, Ramsgate		D. Goldsmith	1
J. de Tait, Hastings		G. Womad	2
Sylph, Hastings		H. Carpenter	3
Wave, Hastings		J. Buckley	4

Five other smaller matches followed; and the days sport terminated.

ROYAL MERSEY YACHT CLUB.

On Wednesday last the yachts about the station belonging to this club formed fleet under the orders of the Rear-Commodore, who had to officiate on the occasion. The day was beautifully fine, a warm atmosphere, with a fine whole-sail breeze from the S.W. There were about eight yachts present, and some of a large tonnage, which joined company and proceeded to sail out of the port shortly after 9 a.m. On arriving out at sea, they continued on their course until, the flood-tide making strong, they were compelled to return. There was some fine beating to windward on the return, some of the schooners looking particularly fine on arriving in the river under full canvas. Each of the owners of the vessels had a party of friends on board, and all expressed themselves pleased with the enjoyment and hospitality which they received.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON INTELLIGENCE.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.

(By Electric Telegraph.)

FRIDAY.

Her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the royal children arrived at St. Margaret's station, Edinburgh, last evening at half-past six. They reached Holyrood in fifteen minutes. Several thousand spectators were assembled in the Queen's Park.

ABERDEEN, Friday Night.

The Queen left Edinburgh at nine o'clock this morning; arrived at Aberdeen at 2.10; proceeded by the Deeside Railway to Banochry, where her Majesty had luncheon, and then drove over to Balmoral. The weather was very fine.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

PARIS, Saturday.

THE BOURSE.—Three per Cent. Rentes closed yesterday for account, 74.40; ditto, for money, 73.85; Four-and-a-Half per Cents., for money, 97.25 ex div.; ditto for account, 97.70 ex div. Bank shares, 2,940. The Three per Cents. have closed a shade better.

An Imperial decree calls into active service 60,000 men, the remainder of the contingent of 1853.

The Monitor publishes the following despatch:—"Therapia, Sept. 7.—The French and the Turks left Varna on the 5th. The English fleet was to join them at the Isle of Serpents. The weather is fine."

The Isle of Serpents—called, in Turkish, Yilan Adasi; in Greek, Fidenisi; in Russian, Zmelniof Ostrow—is a small rocky island, situated at a short distance from the coast of Bessarabia, opposite the mouths of the Danube. It is about a mile and a half in circumference. A lighthouse has been erected upon it. According to the accounts of Wallachian deserters, who arrived at Bucharest on the 2nd inst., the army of Prince Gortschakoff was in a state of the greatest demoralisation. The Russian troops, continually harassed and beaten by the Turks, over whom they were promised an easy victory at the opening of the campaign, have lost all confidence.

JASSY, Sept. 8.

The Russians are quitting Moldavia with all possible speed. It is said that the Turks have entered Fokschani.

Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers has arrived at Boulogne.

A newly-invented rocket, said to produce most wonderful effects, is now being tried by a military commission, and siege guns, carrying a distance of upwards of five miles, destined to batter the granite walls of Cronstadt, are being cast in the Imperial foundry of Ruelle. They are all to be ready for next March.

MADRID, Sept. 9.

The Three per Cents. were done at 34.

RUSSIAN RETREAT IN ASIA.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

TRIESTE, Friday.

The steamer from Constantinople, brings word of a sudden movement of the Russian corps, under Prince Behutof on the frontier of Georgia. The Ottoman Minister ordered the advance of eight regiments of cavalry, desiring to draw on an engagement. The Turks approached nearer and nearer to the Russian camp, until they discovered that it had been abandoned as if in great haste. The Turks found in the enemy's camp ten spiked guns, and ammunition, and a large number of waggons, besides mules, on the ground. It is ascertained that the enemy has retreated to the shelter of the walls of Gumri. The reason of this strange proceeding is supposed to be the presence of Schamyl with a large force near Tiflis.

THE EXPEDITION TO THE CRIMEA, AND VICTORY OVER THE RUSSIANS IN ASIA.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 7.

The storm which had raged for some days in the Black Sea had ceased. On the 4th all the troops had embarked. The whole fleet consists of 600 sail. On the 4th the first division of the fleet sailed in the direction of Sebastopol. The strength of the army is 90,000 men. On the 4th Marshal St. Arnaud sailed on board the Charlemagne.

SCHAMYL has gained a great victory over the Russians at Teflis. The Russians lost many men, seven guns, 3,000 tents, and all their baggage, with many horses and waggons. All the provisions and ammunition of the Russians fell into the hands of the victors.

THE RUSSIANS, under Prince Bebutoff, are retreating in forced marches from Kutais and Kars to Teflis.

On the 25th of August the Turkish Minister retired from Teheran to Erzeroum. There is a complete rupture between the Porte and Persia.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

TRIESTE, Sept. 14.

The steamer Austria arrived here from Alexandria to-day, at half-past 2 a.m., with advices from Calcutta to the 3rd August, Madras 11th August, Shanghai 15th July, Amoy 19th July, Canton 20th July, Hong Kong 22nd July, and Bombay 1st August. Trade in India was favourable. Canton was still threatened with an attack by the rebels, and great confusion reigned there. Trade in China was very dull. Exchange at Canton, 5s. 0½d.; Shanghai, 6s. 5d.

The Nizam's cavalry have offered their services to act against Russia. They have been declined by the English Government.

DESTRUCTION OF RUSSIAN GUNBOATS IN THE BALTIC.

(By International Telegraph via the Hayes.)

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 13.

Our papers state that an allied force has landed at Ulricasborg, near Swenborg (Helsingfors), erected batteries, and destroyed a large division of Russian gunboats, which the enemy thought were safe in that harbour. The town was set on fire.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 9.

The formation of the reserve is definitively settled. An imperial ukase orders a levy of ten men in every 1,000 in the west of the empire.

ARREST OF MAZZINI.

The Journal de Genève of the 9th contains the following:—"A letter from Berne of the 7th informs us that Mazzini has been arrested at Basle. He was coming from Berne, where he had spent some days in the house of a patrician, to whom he described himself as an Italian Count, greatly attached to Austria, and driven into Switzerland by the fear of the cholera. According to our correspondent, the police has discovered his residence, and was preparing to apprehend him, when he absconded, and left for Basle, under a false name. The Government gave notice to the authorities of his arrival, and he was arrested on alighting from the diligence."

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR,—"St. George and Victory" was once the loud battle-cry of many a belted knight. It may now be heard with nasal twang from the chuckling throats of those who are ever quick to scent a "good thing," and which, when found, they know how to turn to the rarest profit. The Selling is over, and Knight of St. George declared the victor; but the settling is not over, and, what is more, the odium attached to some parties connected with the race is not of the past. On Thursday last I wrote, "Let him hut start, and my voice must be for ACROBAT, with Ivan or Midsummer for second, while The Trapper and the crack dispute the honours for third place." This was no selection of the horses according to the position they held in the betting, for the two great favourites were at once discarded. The next day I added in time for your second edition—"Boiardo is firm, maintaining his high position, and keeping his rivals at a respectful distance in the betting, however he may deal with them in the race. Acrobat still droops in the shade, while, strange to say, Dervish is actually looking up. The Seller may be well termed a mystery. A feverish interest is thereby created, and which will not cease till the leading horses have long passed the Red House, on their way to the envied goal, on Wednesday next. But I cannot alter my opinion that, with fair play, Acrobat is able to beat any of his opponents." I had reason to make fair play a stipulation, because it was openly avowed by some, who professed to have their information from the best of quarters, that laying against Acrobat was, in the elegant phraseology of the ring, "peppering a dead 'un." No one will impugn the right of an owner to try and win with whatever animal he pleases, but, I presume, it will also be admitted that no gentleman will start a horse with the intention of its being beaten. Failing to achieve success with the selected one, in favour of whom a declaration is usually made, the other is supposed to be brought to the rescue, and to do the utmost for the honour of his colours. I cannot believe that Lord Derby could be a party to the strange proceeding of Wednesday; but his trainer must assuredly feel that, in public estimation, he has, this time, made something more than a mistake. If any one should require an apt bit of alliteration, here it is—Doncaster Discreditible Doings.

I have just heard that there has been a "scene" on the course to-day, but as the particulars have not reached me, I refrain from comment. Explanations, however, must now be given, and let us hope, for the honour of the turf, that they may prove satisfactory.

We have the promise of no end of racing next week, PONTEFRAC getting to work first, on Monday. I have but time to allude to one or two of the principal events.

GREAT WEST RIDING HANDICAP. Two miles.—Dr. O'Toole, at 6st 5lb, ought to be able to accomplish this affair; if not, I must look to W. J. Anson's stable, and trust to Jetty Treffz or Little Fawn.

PARK HILL STAKES.—I see nothing that I like better than Amy.

STAND PLATE.—Deformed or Bourgeois should be somewhere near the mark.

PONTEFRAC HANDICAP. Mile and a half.—Maid of the Tees.

Nearer home, BEDFORD engages our attention on Wednesday and Thursday.

TWO-YEAR-OLD STAKES. Half a mile.—Were Rifleman on the ground, he might scare away all opposition. But I am inclined to fancy Rambling Katie.

BEDFORDSHIRE STAKES.—An entry of twenty-eight, but as the forfeits have yet to be declared, I shall content myself by saying that I like the appearance of Perfidious, Miss Bolton, and the Jennala filly.

LEICESTER also takes Wednesday and Thursday for its festival.

LEICESTERSHIRE HANDICAP. Mile and half.—Lurley, if she goes, ought to be near winning.

TWO-YEAR-OLD STAKES.—Mrs. Rigby or Polo Star. THE SCURRY HANDICAP.—Game Chicken.

MANCHESTER AUTUMN will occupy Thursday and Friday.

WILTON HANDICAP.—This, the principal item of the meeting, has thirty-one subs., but the acceptances have not yet reached me. Game Lad, King of Trumps, and Itch, appear to me have none the worst of the weights, and may possibly figure in the race.

CHESTERFIELD HANDICAP for two-year-olds. One mile.—Despite the weight, I am inclined to go for Cossey.

THE NORTHERN METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.—There is an entry of twenty-nine for this mile-and-a-quarter spin, with a contingent penalty of 1lb. for the winner of the Wilton Handicap. Guicowar, Maid of Team Valley, and Lancashire Lass, appear to me likely to be well up at the finish.

On the other races I can offer no opinion, as the weights have yet to be published. Yours,

Friday, 15th Sept., 1854. TOBY PEERS.

Mr. Dawson's The Jealous One, 3 yrs, 8st 12lb, Bates.
Mr. J. Osborne's Sweet Agnes, 3 yrs, 8st 9lb, Bearpark.

Betting—5 to 4 on Orinoco, and 4 to 1 agst Snowdon Dunhill, 5 to 1 agst Vindex, and 7 to 1 agst any other. Snowdon Dunhill and Vindex jumped off in front, but after running about 50 yards, the lead was taken by Orinoco, who maintained it to the end, winning cleverly by half a length. Three lengths between second and third. Snowdon Dunhill was fourth, Kiteflyer fifth, Vindex and Jealous One, close together, sixth and seventh. Sweet Agnes lost start, and was last throughout.

The Eglinton Stakes of 10 sovs each, 5 ft, with 100 added. Two-yr-olds, 6st 10lb; three, 8st 12lb. Various penalties and allowances. The owner of the second horse to receive £20 out of the stakes. T.Y.C. 43 subs.

Mr. Rudston Read's The Mosquito, 2 yrs, 6st 7lb, Ashmall.
Mr. J. Osborne's Yorkshire Grey, 2 yrs, 6st 10lb, Carroll.
Mr. Johnstone's Hoddam, 2 yrs, 6st 10lb, Aldcroft.
Capt. Harcourt's Ellermirre, 2 yrs, 6st 7lb, Bates.

Betting—5 to 4 on Andover, 4 to 1 agst The Chicken, 6 to 1 agst Mosquito, 10 to 1, each, agst Ellermirre, Dervish, and Hoddam. Mosquito made play to the distance, where Andover obtained a slight lead; at the Stand, The Chicken came out, Rylstone and Dervish joining Andover; The Chicken, however, maintained the lead the remainder of the distance, and won easily by two lengths; the second beating the third by a head; a length between third and fourth.

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each, with 50 added. For two-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb. Certain winners extra. The owner of the second horse to receive £20 out of the stakes. T.Y.C. 39 subs.

Mr. T. A. Turner's Capucine, 7st 3lb, Chillum.
Mr. Cotton's Knight of the Village, 7st 2lb, Wells.
Mr. McKim's Gimcrack, 6st 12lb, Aldcroft.
Captain Lane's Atasia (late Blue Eyes), 6st 11lb, Garry.

Harbort weighed for Mr. Stephenson's filly by Launcelot, out of Billingham's dam, and the number was put up, but, at the last moment nearly, it was taken down. Under the new rule, a penalty of £10 was thereby incurred.

Betting—2 to 1 agst Amy, 3 to 1 agst Capucine, 6 to 1 each agst Wheatcar and Knight of the Village, 7 to 1 each agst Alston and Hanover. A very fine race in which the two placed, ended in favour of Amy by a short head. Capucine, Lord Chesterfield's filly Gimcrack, and Cindeia, were well up.

Derby.
10 to 1 agst Greenish Esuriens (t) | 15 to 1 agst St. Hubert (t)
20 to 1 agst The Cruiser (t)

The principal bets laid were 1050 to 100, and 1000 to 100 agst Greenish Esuriens; 2000 to 100, 500 to 30, 1000 to 60, and 1500 to 100 agst St. Hubert; 600 to 30 agst The Cruiser.

Early in the morning some smart showers fell, with a most refreshing effect, and throughout the day the atmosphere was cool and pleasant. At eleven o'clock business was resumed at the Rooms, but most of the accounts in the St. Leger stand over to be settled at Tattersall's on Monday. The Knight of St. George did good suit and service to "the ring." The racing commenced at two o'clock, and terminated soon after five. Most of the sport again excited a very lively interest. The course was numerously attended.

THE CUP.—West Australian, Grand Inquisitor, El Dorado, Dervish, Boiardo, Arthur Wellesley, and Midsummer, are scratched.

FRIDAY.
Match, 500 sovs, 200 ft. 8st 7lb each. Red House in.
Lord Derby's filly Melbourne, out of Meane, ... Templeman 1
Lord Glasgow's br f by Phrynnus the First, out of Miss Whip, ... Flatman 2
Betting—7 to 2 on Miss Whip filly, who started with the lead; but, after the first 100 yards, was passed by her rival, who made play the remainder of the distance, and won in a canter by six lengths.

Sweepstakes of 200 sovs each, h ft. For three-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb. The owner of the second horse to save his stake. St. Leger Course. 8 subs.

Lord Chesterfield's Queen, 8st 7lb, ... Flatman 4
Lord Eglinton's Bianca, 8st 7lb, ... Marlow 5
Mr. J. M. Stanley's Rosaline, 8st 7lb, ... Charlton 6

Betting—2 to 1 agst Orinoco, 3 to 1 agst Jetty Treffz, 7 to 2 agst Honeyuckle, and 4 to 1 agst Rosaline.
Rosaline went off with the lead, but was soon passed by Jetty Treffz, who carried on the running with Rosaline second, Bianca third, Honeyuckle fourth; the other two bringing up the rear. At the Red House, Bianca took second place, and soon afterwards Rosaline dropped into the rear. No further change of moment occurred until they reached the distance, when Honeyuckle went up and joined Jetty Treffz, who was at last defeated very easily by a length and a half, three lengths separating the second from the third. Rosaline pulled up and walked in.

The Tour Plate (Handicap) of 70 sovs. For three-yr-olds and upwards. Entrance 3 sovs, to go to the second horse. One mile and a quarter. 116 subs.

Betting—2 to 1 agst Hobby Horse, 3 to 2 agst The Relver, 7 to 1 agst King of Trumps, 8 to 1 agst Commore, 10 to 1 agst any other. Won very cleverly by a length and a half; a head between second and third, and a neck only between third and fourth. The others were widely scattered. Fordham weighed for Mishap, and the number was put up, but it was soon afterwards withdrawn. Whangana's number was also put up, but before the horses were called to the post he bolted over the rails, and Sabir, his jockey, was thrown, and much bruised.

Doncaster Stakes of 10 sovs each, with 100 added. For three-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb. Certain penalties. The owner of the second horse to receive £50 out of the stakes. Last mile and a half. 116 subs.
Lord Derby's Acrobat, by Iturrid, 8st 12lb (incl. 4lb extra), ... Templeman 1

DESPATCHES FROM THE CAMP, NEAR VARNA.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

Light Cavalry Brigade, Camp at "Yeni-Bazaar" ("New Market") 20th August, 1854.

The policy which has directed the partial inactivity of our forces now engaged in this campaign, may be, and we trust is, very wise and very good, but it has had a decided pernicious effect upon the troops themselves, and to them is inexplicable and irksome. Upwards of three months have now elapsed since the expedition first appeared at the scene of action, and as regiment after regiment debarked upon the alien soil, firm and sound, both morally and physically, as their native planks, just abandoned, each heart then beating in unison, every bosom then filled with the same all-absorbing emulation to meet the foe and prove themselves no unworthy sons of their ancestors, and with yet another strong incentive to fire their martial enthusiasm, since they were to fight side by side with the chosen bands of France, their national rivals, but now cordial allies—troops which each Briton has from infancy known, and been familiar with, as connected with every warlike deed or tale of military glory. Never were British troops in a higher or better state of efficiency to take the field; and yet here we have been kept in inglorious idleness for upwards of three months, roasting in camp by day under a broiling sun, and exposed to the chilling pestiferous dews by night, and that, too, almost in sight of the enemy, without the excitement of a battle, or even a skirmish, to chase away the gloomy clouds of ennui. About the end of June we were for a short time regaled with the joyful anticipation of something stirring, in consequence of a portion of the Light Cavalry Brigade, under Major-General Lord Cardigan, having been rather hurriedly ordered to advance on the Danube. It was thought, and sincerely hoped, the object of this movement was to hover about and harass the rear of the Russian army, then retreating from the siege of Silistria, until rejoined by stronger reinforcements; but this hope was not destined to be realised. His Lordship's object was only to make an extensive reconnaissance of the enemy's movements and retreat, which he most successfully effected, having on the 2nd July, in the vicinity of Rustchuk, approached so close to a Russian division, under the command of General Luders, that the two forces were distinctly seen by each other, the river only intervening between. A Turkish officer, hearing a flag of truce, was dispatched immediately from Lord Cardigan to the enemy's lines—the purport of his errand has not transpired. General Luders having ascertained, on inquiry from him, that the troops on the opposite bank were English, was observed to scan them most attentively through his glass, but no hostile demonstration occurred on either side. After seventeen days' harassing marching, and as many nights bivouacked in the open air, without tents or other camp equipments, his Lordship rejoined the remainder of his brigade at Devna. Towards the end of July, to make our lines, already miserable enough, still more so, cholera made its appearance among the troops, bringing in its train fever, diarrhoea, and dysentery. Forthwith the different encampments were ordered to move forward and take up fresh positions, hoping that change of atmosphere and locality might contribute to allay the violence of this fearful scourge. The Light Cavalry Brigade, followed two days' march behind by the Heavy Brigade, encamping at Kotluhi, Jassyteppe, and Yoryngo, at length selected the elevated highlands of Yeni-Bazaar as likely to be the most salubrious situation for their encampment, and at this place have remained stationary since arriving on the 1st inst. Experience has justified this selection, as the brigade at Yeni-Bazaar is the most favoured at present from the fatal ravages of the pestilence. Among the infantry divisions the mortality is fearful; some regiments have already been decimated, and each day seems to add fresh strength and virulence to the inroads of this awful unseen enemy. The Heavy Cavalry Brigade suffered much; in one regiment alone, the 5th Dragoon Guards, about 300 strong, thirty-two cases of cholera and fever had terminated fatally between the 1st and 16th inst. This regiment was, during that time, encamped at Kotluhi, but on the 18th marched back for Varna. Among the most favoured regiments of the Light Cavalry, the mortality is lamentably great. Since the 1st of the month the average number of sick per day in the hospitals belonging to the four regiments composing the brigade, has been 176 men per day. Of this number there have been deaths, in the 8th Hussars, eleven; 11th Hussars, four; 13th Light Dragoons, four; and 17th Lancers, fifteen; in all, thirty-four cases of death; also three women have died. They, poor creatures, suffer much privation, and many of them are left widows by this visitation.

Since the outbreak of the cholera, half a gill of rum per man has been ordered to be issued to the troops from the Commissariat stores, which is certainly a great boon to the soldier. This order was dated 30th July, and it was the 9th August when the first issue was given to the Light Cavalry Brigade, owing to the tardiness of the Commissary department in sending up the much longed for supply. Since the issue of this, though very small, allowance of spirits, there has been a very perceptible decrease in the daily number of sick; and if the full regulated ration of one gill per man was given, there cannot be a doubt that it would be still more conducive to the health of the men; and in no case is it possible that such indulgence could, as Sir George Brown fears, be the cause of intoxication in the army. On the 30th July, the full ration of spirits, of one gill per man, was, in the general orders, promulgated by Lord Raglan, sanctioned to be issued; but, on the following day, 31st July, that order was cancelled, and the half-gill substituted for the full ration. This curtailment of their grog the soldiers themselves ascribe to the interference of General Brown, whether deservedly or not, God knows; but he is said to have been in quite a panic lest every man in his division should be in a continual state of inebriation from drinking daily—what? one gill of rum diluted in water before issue to the consistency of what sailors contemptuously term three-water grog. Certain it is, Sir George Brown is very unpopular on this campaign, while the Duke of Cambridge is universally beloved, and almost idolised by the whole army. With respect to the grog, it will be seen, on reference to the Mutiny Act, that a soldier on foreign service forfeits his penny a day (beer money), but that also he is liable to receive daily a ration of spirits in kind, in lieu thereof, provided the officer commanding-in-chief deems such necessary to the health and comfort of the troops. In an inhospitable, barbarous country like this, much worse than any other where British troops have ever before campaigned—a country which affords nothing and can produce nothing fit for British soldiers to drink, except an unwholesome bad wine, which of itself, if drunk, is very likely to bring on the cholera—in a country, moreover, where there is such a dearth of water, that it is with the greatest difficulty sufficient can be obtained for the wants of our cavalry-horses, and sometimes not found until dividing the brigades into regiments, they are scattered over a great extent of country, and then are obliged, by troops and sections, to draw it up twenty or thirty feet, from wells which are only to be seen about the wretched villages of the country. In such a country, and at such a time, when the health and efficiency of the troops so much depends upon their good spirits, it surely would not have been out of time or place, to have granted the soldiers their full regulated ration, as has been done on former campaigns, instead of giving them cause of murmur and discontent, by the present curtailed allowance. Our present state of apathetic idleness is far more intolerable and trying to the troops than all the accumulated hardships of a state of active warfare. Disease stalking among us with fatal strides—each tent has lost an inmate, each man a comrade, each day, sometimes each hour—adds another to the list of our dead companions, and not knowing whose turn may be the next. In such an unenviable state of disheartening suspense, with what joyful thankfulness would an order to meet the enemy be received! The general feeling now among our troops is unqualified discontent, it runs thus: we came out here expecting and prepared to maintain the honour of the British arms, instead of which we have for upwards of three months, until the summer months have nearly gone past, been kept altogether inactive, and at the same time exposed to all the hardships of active warfare, without the chance of any of its needs of glory. A fearful epidemic is raging among us, making sad havoc with our numbers, each day our comrades are dropping down one by one by our side; if we are to die, why not allow us to die under the walls of Sebastopol, or any other place, only let us have the consolation of dying as British soldiers ought and were wont to die, fighting gloriously for our Queen and country, and not thus cut off, like rotten sheep, one by one, in anguish and misery.

General Canvon, an English officer in the service of the Porte, visited the camp at Yeni-Bazaar this morning. He reports that the Russian army has crossed the Pruth, and expresses it as his opinion that the fighting is over in this quarter for the season. It is rumoured that the cavalry are about being sent in to winter-quarters at Constantinople and Adrianople.

Freemasonry and Masonic Intelligence.

ROYAL ARCH MASONRY.—COLCHESTER CHAPTER.—On Thursday evening, the 11th inst., the Companions of the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, No. 59, with a number of brethren of the Angel Lodge, dined together at the George Hotel, as a complimentary acknowledgment of the exertions of Companion Forbes in behalf of the Chapter, and of the craft generally. The banquet was well served, and gave entire satisfaction to the guests. First Principal J. Pattison was in the chair, supported by Companions Haddock and Slaney, and Brother Ellison, W.M. of the Angel Lodge, filled the vice-chair. There were also present—Companions John Mann, S. D. Forbes, G. Chaplin, Williams, Dorling, and Townsend (Ipswich), J. Partridge, Howe, and Shave; Brothers J. S. Norman, W. Browne, G. T. Butcher (Ipswich), G. D. Croxden, H. May, T. Hall, Saunders, Palmer, Averill, Prior, Root, Moore, Flynn, &c. A number of masonic and local toasts were drank, including the Mayor and Magistrates, with the health of Companion Mann; the President and Vice-Presidents; the supporting Companions; Companion Forbes, with thanks for his zeal and exertions; Brother Dorling and the Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk; the visiting brethren, &c.; and the banquet was enlivened with some excellent songs by Brothers Palmer, Dorling, Prior, &c.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—A Tractarian weekly journal, delighted, doubtless, to have a fling at the excellent Bishop of Winchester, has the following in its Summary of News last week:—"We regret to see the Bishop of Winchester united with the Provincial Grand Master and the Provincial Chaplain of the Freemasons in offering up prayers at the laying of the foundation-stone of St Thomas's Church, at Newport, in the Isle of Wight. We are amazed and grieved to see a Christian Bishop countenancing the mummeries of a Society which comprehends Jews, Turks, infidels, and heretics among its members." The narrow-minded prejudices of the writer, who shrinks with horror from having anything in common with a Jew, a Turk, or any one of different religious opinions from himself (we deny the charge of admitting infidels, as helief in a God is absolutely necessary for initiation), need no comment. A Society, whose works of benevolence are so widely spread, without regard to differences of creed or politics, will moreover, we think, survive its ceremonies being called "mummeries" by one who never has understood their hidden practical meaning, and only sees things through a medium of prejudice and Pharisaical self-conceit.

POULTRY.

SOUTH HANTS EXHIBITION OF POULTRY.

The second show of this exhibition took place on Wednesday and Thursday week, under the patronage of the Right Hon. Lady M. Macdonald, the Hon. Lady Butler, Lady Henthorne, the Dowager Lady Carnarvon, Lady Harcourt, Mrs. Chamberlayne, Mrs. Compton, Mrs. Gen. Robbins, Mrs. T. W. Fleming, Mrs. Macaughton, Mrs. Holloway, Mrs. Mills, &c. The Judges were Messrs. E. Hewett and James Bailey, and Mr. John D. Barford executed the duty of secretary. On the Antelope-ground an immense canvas pavilion was erected, and four lines of pens, of two tier each, well fitted up and supplied with water and food, extended the whole length of the building. The number of poultry pens was 295 (and two dead birds exhibited), and of pigeons ninety-eight. The entire show was pronounced by Mr. Bailey, one of the judges, to be much more numerous in fine sorts than last year at the Victoria-rooms, and superior to any show he had hitherto visited. The first day's admission was high, 2s. 6d., but a very considerable number were present, nevertheless, and a large number of equities, including all those of the lady patronesses. The show, as will be seen from the list of prizes, comprised every genus of the fancy poultry and pigeon tribe, but our camel species—the Shanghaes—have gone down in price as they have risen in height. The extravagant sums marked in the catalogue were nominal, in order to avoid selling them. The genuine English breeds now far eclipse the Cochins. The Hamburgs were the finest of the line. Mrs. Chamberlayne's (Cranbury-park) had some fine buff Cochins, but only marked at £2. 2s., when three years since they would have been eagerly bought at £10. While upon Cochins we may mention a singular instance of the economy of nature in a pair of Cochins, shown by Mr. Caleb Harfoot, of Bishopstoke, destitute of feathers from hatching, looking like animated skinned rabbits walking on their hind legs. The Hon. Lady Butler, of Harefield, had two fine specimens of Guinea fowl, bred by her ladyship, but not for sale. Mr. Ilggs, of Hill-lane, and Mr. Mew, of Newport, had some choice and very scarce birds—but so we might say of all the winners of prizes.

Amongst the names of contributors, that of the Right Hon. Lady M. Macdonald, of Woolmer Lodge, Liphook, Hants, was frequent, and the Spanish chickens of her ladyship's breeding were some of the finest ever witnessed. In fact, so great was the competition for the purchase of the winner of the first prize for that class, the property of her ladyship, that although the catalogue stated the price to be ten guineas, yet it was disposed of at the increased sum of thirty guineas.

The following is the award of prizes:—

AGRICULTURE.

MANCHESTER AND LIVERPOOL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The following is an extract from the list of prizes awarded:—Implements and other articles.—Reaping machines, tried 30th August, 1854: To the exhibitor of the reaping machine, which on trial shall be considered the best, £7; Mr. Thomas Plant, Elworth Hall, near Sunning, second best, £3; Mr. David Harkes, Mere, near Knutsford. For the machine-made wire fencing of various kinds, £2; B. Greening and Co., Manchester. For improved chaff machine, £2; for corn-crusher (No. 1), £2; for an improved apparatus for steaming roots, &c., £2; for oil-vale mill, £1; also special silver medal, for superior workmanship and excellency of design displayed in their machines, Richmond and Chandler, Salford, Manchester. For collection of ploughs, £1, and set of iron harrows, £1, David Harkes, Mere, near Knutsford. Barley-churn, 10s., Williamson Brothers, Stainton Mills, near Kendal. For general collection, £2, Wm. Pearson and Co., Leeds. For iron gates, £1, W. H. Peake, Liverpool. For morticing and tenoning machine, £3, Wm. Coolton, York. For newly improved washing, wringing, and mangling machine, £1; improved registered cheese-press, commended, Messrs. Richmond and Chandler, Salford, Manchester. For general collection, £1, R. Fordshaw and Co., Liverpool. For 4-horse power thrashing machine, £2, John Whitehead, Preston. For collection of implements, £2, Wm. Harkes, Lostock Graham, near Knutsford. For two implements for washing potatoes, £1, Thomas W. Salton, Marston, near Northwich. For fire-brick oven, £1, the Furnivall Iron Company, Warrley, Leeds. For wire-work, medal, John Rylands, Manchester. For collection of implements, £1, Wm. Wood, machinist, Knutsford. The Manchester Courier of Saturday, Sept. 9, devotes five columns to the recent proceedings of this Society. Pressure on our space prevents our here following the example in the New Field.

NEW WHEAT.—We have received from Mr. F. Joyce, of 57, Upper Thames-street, a specimen of a new sort of wheat, grown by Mr. Harradine, of Nevedigsworth, Hunts. The specimen in the produce of a single grain; and a single ear will produce a bushel, in one season, weighing fifty-two pounds. This description of wheat, we believe, new in this country; and interesting from the enormous yield it gives. Mr. Harradine has a quantity of it, obtained by several years' cultivation, and from a single ear. We may have more to say on this head next week.

THE HARVEST IN BECKS.—"Sir, The wheat harvest is principally over, but still there are a great many beans; ten days will finish it. The crops are good, but good judges seem to think—and with a degree of truth—that there is not any more wheat in this county than there was last year, an old wheat rick being very rare. Yours, &c., C. C. C. C."

GUANO ISLANDS.—A letter has been received at the Admiralty from Commander De Horsey, of her Majesty's ship Devastation, dated August 1, 1854, reporting that he found three vessels under American colours at the uninhabited island of Avva, in lat. 15 deg. 40 min. 40 sec. north, and long. 63 deg. 36 min. west, and one day's sale from St. Croix, shipping guano, of which he reports there is about 200,000 tons on the island, and but slightly inferior to the Peruvian.

BOARD OF TRADE, WHITEHALL.—(From the London Gazette of Thursday, Sept. 12).—The Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade have received from her Majesty's minister at Stockholm the copy of a Swedish royal proclamation, announcing that so long as the British coasting trade is open to Swedish vessels, the like privilege will be granted to British vessels in Sweden.

FAIR TO BE HELD IN SEPTEMBER.—(From the Farmers' Almanac).—Somersetshire: Blackwell, 21; Bruton, 17; Backland Salt Mary, 21, 22; St. Decuman's, 17; Glastonbury, 19; Mells, 29; Monlaving, 27; Sanford, 19; Staford, 28; Stovey, 18; Wivellicombe, 25; Wotton Courtney, 19. Gloucestershire: Gloucester, 28; Moreton-in-the-Marsh, 19; Painswick, 19; Thornbury, 18; Wotton-under-Edge, 25. Dorsetshire: Bournemouth, 19; Dorchester, 25, 26; Sheraton, 25; Woolbury-hill, 18. Devonshire: Barnstaple, 20; Brest, 24; Chagford, 28; Cornwood, 25; Crediton, 23; Denbury, 21; Hartlands, 27; Sidmouth, 18; Teignmouth, 26; Tiverton, 29; Witheridge, 27. Wiltshire: Calne, 29; Cricklade, 21; Dilton Marsh, 24; Kingsdown, 18; North Bradley, 30; Purton, 22; Swindon, 24. Worcestershire: Evesham, 21; Feckenham, 30; Redditch, 18; Shipston, 26; Tenbury, 26; Upton-on-Savern, 27; Worcester, 19. Herefordshire: Dorstone, 27; Kingston, 19; Longtowne, 21. Monmouthshire: Abergynwy, 25; Caerleon, 21; Risca, 26.

THE ANNUAL SHOW AND MEETING OF THE DRESDEN FARMERS' CLUB will be held at Frosham, on Thursday, the 31st inst.

EXPORT OF CATTLE TO ENGLAND FROM DENMARK.—A letter from Tonnungen, in Denmark, states that the export of cattle to England has become so considerably, that the production of the country is not equal to the demand, and several graziers have recently made purchases of lean cattle from Sweden, to fatten for the English market. The last steamer which left for Lowestoft had on board an ox, which weighed 1,321 lb., which is the largest Danish ox ever seen. It was exhibited for some time at Copenhagen previous to its departure. Galignani.

TRIAL OF CHASSER'S HILL'S REAPING MACHINE AT WHITBY.—This machine, which has obtained so many prizes in various parts of the country, was sent down to Whitby, to be exhibited in its working state before the Whitby District Agricultural Society. On Wednesday it was set to cut a very fine field of wheat, containing about ten acres, on the Bannil Flatt Farm, situate in the township of Newholme-cum-Dunsley, and about a mile from Whitby, the property of John Chapman, Esq., and in the occupation of Mr. Thomas Ward, the chairman of the above society. The day was splendid, and as well as a large concourse of the farmers of the district, there was a numerous company of the gentry of the town and neighbourhood, and of the visitors to this now fashionable and salubrious watering-place, amongst whom we noticed Sir William Milner and other distinguished personages, to witness the performance. It commenced about eleven o'clock. The workmanship was the admiration of all. The machine made a fine clear stubble, and laid the corn in swath as straight as an arrow. The field was 390 yards in length, and rather inclined. The machine cut downwards with the greatest ease in four minutes and a half, and in four minutes and three-quarters upwards. About three o'clock in the afternoon there was a detached part of about one acre and twenty perches mowed, and although the horses were much fagged, having, with the workmen, worked the whole time without change, and both unpurged, they cut it, in first-rate style, in seven minutes within an hour. The general opinion was, the machine would cut an acre and a quarter in an hour without distressing either horses or men; or, by having four horses, and changing them every two hours, any acre and a half per hour. Towards the latter part of the day, when the men had got into practice, and the crowd of people dispersed, the work was still more beautifully regular, giving universal satisfaction. The machine was immediately purchased by Mr. Ward, the spirited occupier of the farm. John Huggill, Esq., the secretary of the society, was, as usual, at his post, and secured the greatest regularity and order. Refreshments were to be had in the field, and the day was one of pleasurable interest to all present.

COMMERCE.

STAMP ACTS.—A deputation of bankers, consisting of Messrs. Masterman, Roberts, Glyn, Prescott, Bevan, and Sir J. Lubbock, waited upon the Chancellor of the Exchequer on Monday, upon some points connected with the Stamp Acts. Their chief object was to ascertain if the retrospective and consequently objectionable operation of the measure which comes into force on the 11th of next month, by which all foreign bills are to be subjected to a stamp, could be modified so as to apply only to those dated on or after that day, instead of to all that fall due; but it was stated that, while there would have been every disposition to accede to the request as far as regards the question of revenue, the clauses in the act are considered too explicit to admit of desired construction. With respect to an inquiry whether bankers may continue to give acknowledgments without receipt stamps for money paid in or remitted by their customers, and also to receive advice from their agents of similar payments, the answer was that they will still be free to do so.

RUSSIAN TRADE.—Advices from St. Petersburg to the 2nd of September bring a fresh statement of the exports of tallow this year as compared with last, whence it appears that the amount sent away up to the present time is estimated to have been 35,229 casks, against 32,808 to the same period of 1853. Taking an average of ten years, the exports of 1854 actually exhibit an excess; and, as the English consumer has paid by the augmentation in price the chief expenses of the transit overland, which has given increased profits to the Russians and Prussians engaged in it, there seems little question that the loss occasioned by the blockade, as far as this branch of commerce is concerned, has principally fallen upon ourselves. On the other hand, the damage inflicted upon the Russians by the check to their import trade, and their consequent deprivation of the most essential articles, both for their manufactures and their sustenance, such as cotton, wool, salt, metal, oil, sugar, &c., must have been severe.

THE TEA TRADE. September 11.—The deliveries in London made up for the week are 619,541 lb., being an increase over those of the previous week.

Markets.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—Consols for money, which left off on Saturday at the improved quotation of 95½ to 96, opened this morning at 95½ to 96, and, after showing great firmness throughout the day, closed at 95½ for money, and 95½ to 96 for the 17th of October. After regular hours some transactions took place at a shade below these prices. In Exchequer Bills there has been a fresh rise, and they are now quoted, together with India Bonds, at 6s. to 6s. premium. Exchequer Bonds were in demand at 95½ to 96.

TUESDAY.—Consols for money, which left off on Monday evening at the improved quotation of 95½, opened at 95½ to 96; and the final prices were 95½ to 96 for money, and 95½ to 96 for the 17th of October. India Bonds and Exchequer Bills continued firm, and were last quoted 6s. to 6s. premium.

WEDNESDAY.—Consols for money, which left off on Tuesday at 95½ to 96, were first quoted 95½ to 96, and receded at one time during the progress of the settlement, which took place to-day, to 95½ to 96. Before the termination of business the feeling became more favourable, and the final quotations were 95½ to 96 for money, and 95½ to 96 for the 17th of October. India Bonds and Exchequer Bills remain firm at 6s. to 6s. premium. Exchequer Bonds were quoted at 95½ to 96.

THURSDAY.—Consols for money opened at the last price of Wednesday—namely, 95½ to 96, but declined to 95½ to 96, from which there was no reaction. For the 17th of October the final quotation was 95½ to 96. There was no foreign news to affect the market, except the reported probability of a new French loan of £16,000,000, while, on the other hand, the arrival of nearly all the overdue Australian gold ships was calculated to impart confidence. Exchequer Bonds are slightly lower, the price being 95½ to 96.

FRIDAY.—Consols for money opened at 95½ to 96, and left off at the same price; while for the account they began at 95½ to 96, and closed at 95½, the news of the defeat of the Russians at Telis, in Georgia, by Schamyl, having produced a favourable effect, which would have been more decided but for an accompanying statement that diplomatic relations have been broken off between Persia and Turkey. After regular hours, however, the upward movement continued, and transactions for the account took place at 95½. India Bonds and Exchequer Bills remain steady, at 6s. to 6s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds are quoted 95½ to 96.

SATURDAY.—Consols opened at 95½ to 96; at noon went 95½ to 96.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY, September 11.—The supply of beasts was rather smaller to-day than on Monday last, however it was still large, and the demand only moderate; consequently prices were not better. Several inferior qualities remain unsold. There was a considerable increase in the number of sheep, but a large proportion were inferior, consequently quotations were not much lower for the choicest. Lambs and calves were selling about the same as on Friday. From Germany and Holland there were 2,679 beasts; 6,740 sheep; 135 calves; and 150 pigs. Spain, 200 sheep. Scotland, 23 beasts; and 2,700 from the northern and midland counties.

Per stone of 8 lbs. s. d. s. d. Best Scots, Herefords, &c. 4 6—4 8 Best Long Wools 4 4—4 8 Second quality Beasts 3 4—3 10 Do. do. FRIDAY, September 15.—The number of beasts is not large, but fully adequate to the demand. Owing to the warm weather and dull trade at the local markets, there is great difficulty in effecting a clearance at rather reduced rates. Trade is very dull for sheep, and several remain unsold notwithstanding a disposition to take lower prices. Good lambs are saleable at late rates. Calves are lower. From Germany and Holland there are 216 beasts, 2,090 sheep, and 265 calves; 400 beasts from the Northern and Midland; and 90 milch cows from the home counties.

Per stone of 8 lbs. s. d. s. d. Best Scots, Herefords, &c. 4 6—4 8 Best Dns. & Half-breds, &c. 4 8—5 0 Best Long Wools 4 4—4 8 Do. do. Shorn 0 0—0 0 Second quality Beasts 3 4—3 10 Do. do. COUNTRY CATTLE.

DERBY, September 13.—There was a better supply of fat beasts to-day, but the demand was flat. The pens were well filled with sheep and lambs, most of which were in excellent condition. Fat pigs, about the average. Better supply of fat calves. Beef made 6d. to 6½d.; mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; lamb, 7d.; veal, 6½d. to 7d. per lb.; pigs, 9s. 3d. to 9s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 6s. 6d. per stone, commencing August 21; hides, young, 8s. and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 8s. 3½d.; old cows, all weights, 3d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10lb. and under, 4d.; above 10lb. and under 16, 4½d.; above 16, 3½d.; all cut calf skins 3d. less.

LIVERPOOL, September 11.—A larger number of sheep and cattle was brought forward at this morning's market than last week, which met a slow sale at the following quotations: Breck, 5½d. to 6½d.; mutton, 6d. to 7d.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY, September 11.—Our market was tolerably well supplied with new English wheat from Essex and Kent, but the foreign offers from Livonia and Cambridgeshire were not numerous. The demand for this morning was active, and the stands were speedily cleared at an advance of 3s. to 4s. per quarter upon the rates of Monday last. The trade in foreign wheat and flour was not brisk, at a like improvement on the former, and 2s. per sack and 1s. per barrel on the latter article. The quantity of wheat exported to near continental ports last week was 5,110 quarters, and the demand continues. The town millers reduced the top price of flour 2s. per sack. Grinding barley inquired for, and is dearer. Other descriptions firm. Oats must be noted 2s. higher for Russian, and 1s. per quarter for other qualities. Beans and peas were the turn dealer.

FRIDAY, September 15.—The quantity of English wheat on sale this morning was trifling in the extreme, and factors experienced no difficulty in obtaining an advance of 2s. per quarter upon Monday's rates. The finer descriptions of foreign, whether white or red, were saleable at a like improvement. Barrel and foreign sack flour must be noted fully 1s. dearer. Some thousands of sack of town-made flour were reported to have been sold for shipment to Paris, where prices continue to advance. Oats were in short supply, and again improved in value 1s. per quarter. Barley, beans, and peas were each held with increased confidence, and the turn in price was against the buyer. London averages: Wheat, 6s. 1d.; barley, 2s. 9s.; oats, 2s. 7d.; rye, 3s. 8s.; beans, 4s. 6s.; peas, 3s. 7d.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

CROFTON, September 9.—Wheat, white, 50s. to 62s.; ditto, red, 40s. to 50s.; barley, maling, 30s.; ditto, grinding, 25s. to 28s.; oats, 22s. to 28s.; rye, 36s. to 40s.; peas, 33s. to 36s.; beans, 40s. to 46s.

DARTFORD, September 9.—Wheat, white, old, 56s. to 66s.; ditto, red, 52s. to 62s.; white ditto, new, 56s. to 64s.; red ditto, 42s. to 50s.; harrow beans, 42s. to 46s.; mazzagan ditto, 31s. to 38s.; maple peas, 36s. to 40s.; barley, grinding, 1, 25s. to 32s.; oats, feed, 21s. to 26s.

IRSWICK, September 12.—We continue to be very scantily supplied with wheat, and at present the farmers appear reluctant to put their crop into the market. The trade was brisk, and all qualities realised an advance upon last week's rates of 4s. to 6s. per quarter; and at this advance a clearance was made. Only a few samples of barley on sale, and the weather is so hot the malsters are unable to commence steeping; yet prices inclined upwards, and were fully 1s. and 2s. per quarter higher than last week. We quote prices to the growers: Wheat, red, 50s. to 51s.; ditto, white, 56s. to 60s.; barley, 21s. to 30s.; beans, 38s. to 42s.; peas, 34s. to 36s. Averages for the week ending September 9th, 1854: Wheat, 1,198 quarters, at 52s. 1d.; barley, 17 quarters, at 29s.; oats, 12 quarters, at 28s. 6d.; peas, 14 quarters, at 36s.

HOFS.

BONNICH, September 11.—The market very firm. Duty, £55,000 to £60,000. Mould very bad in Mid Kent.—Daily News.

FRIDAY, September 15.—Messrs. Paltenden and Smith report that the demand for yearlings continues good. About 70 pockets of the new growth have arrived at market, for which from £18 to £20 per cwt. is asked, but no sales as yet effected. Duty £55,000.

FOREIGN.

BRUSSELS, September 10.—The high price of bread and the low price of wheat is an anomaly apparently not confined to the United Kingdom. Serious disturbances, originating in the firmness of the bakers to maintain prices, occurred in Brussels in the early part of the week. On Wednesday evening appearances were so threatening that the first legion of the Civic Guard was called out, and remained under arms during the night. Immense crowds congregated, and the police had great difficulty in preserving order. Many of the shops belonging to the most obnoxious of the craft were much damaged, the fronts, &c., being smashed with paving-stones and other heavy missiles.

THE DANUBE.—In consequence of a decree which prohibited the export of corn from the Principalities of the Danube, remonstrances were made by some Austrian merchants who had made purchases of corn and hired boats for its transport, and these remonstrances were supported by the Austrian consul-general with Omar Pasha at Bucharest. Omar Pasha declared that considerations connected with the supply of the troops had led to the prohibition in question; but that, in order to give facilities for the export of the corn of last year, it should be permitted for one month for barley, two months and a half for wheat, and six months for maize.

BANKRUPTS.

TUESDAY.—Henry Wigg and Burton Smith, Gresham-street West, City, commission agents—Benjamin Parker, Albany-street, Camberwell, builder—Ann Maria Edwards and Thomas Cooper, Birmingham, ironmongers—George Sampson, Lincoln, draper.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."

OUR SAILOR KING.

THE late Doncaster Meeting is likely to be as memorable as any of its predecessors. With a large amount of racing, and most valuable prizes, if anything was found to cause disappointment or dissatisfaction, it certainly did not proceed from those entrusted with the management. Favoured by the most delightful weather, there was every prospect that the sport at the great northern gathering, so happily begun, would have been brought to a brilliant conclusion. But it was to be otherwise. The unexpected result of the St. Leger had occasioned an irritation of feeling, which, though subdued for a time, found a sudden vent at the termination of the running for the Doncaster Stakes on the following Friday. We allude to the violent demonstration made against John Scott. That this well-known trainer should be reviled and assailed on the scene of so many of his former triumphs is a serious incident in turf history. Englishmen are supposed to be apathetic. Be that as it may, excitement is nowhere seen in such force as on a race-course. Let there be a close contest for any great event, and shouts are vociferated, hats thrown in the air, with a heartiness that proves the warm interest they take in the sport. At other times, though but rarely, when they conclude that they have been deceived, or deprived of a fair run, they hesitate not to give utterance to their disappointment. But all attempts at personal violence, or even the approach of it, cannot be too severely stigmatised. What might have been deemed a rough expression of honest feeling, is at once converted into a disgraceful outrage. The affair, it must be presumed, arose from the easy victory of Acrobat in the Doncaster Stakes, after the sorry figure he made in the St. Leger. That it was a sudden ebullition is as fair to infer, as the object of attack being fortunate enough to have such powerful pugilistic aid at hand was unpremeditated. Taking it in any light, however, we fear that it will furnish the enemies of the turf with a weapon they will not fail to handle on the first promising occasion. The grave question now arises, was there any just cause for all this? Was the Leger truly run? The answer can be no other than a matter of opinion, and necessarily distorted by prejudice, unless a searching investigation at once take place. In the meantime, men will say that, harring an accident, Arthur Wellesley and Seythian cannot beat Acrobat, and that Ivan is better, with Job Marson on his back, than young Ashmall with two stone dead weight. They also declare that large sums were betted against the son of Ithurel, and the layers stood the chance out, devoid of fear, and never thought of hedging. The best public performer, it must be admitted, held by no means the relative position in the market. Whence this disfavour towards Acrobat? He had been beaten in a trial by Bolardo was the accredited report. Well, that, at least, is capable of proof. But Lord Derby started no less than three horses for the race, and omitted the usual declaration with which he intended to win. It must, therefore, be concluded that each went to do his best; but on the failure of the favourite, and Dervish dead-beaten, was Aerbat pushed? This, too, may be proved. Some are found hardy enough to assert there was no break-down with Boiardo, but that he was fairly pumped out. The certificate of a veterinary surgeon would at once set that rumour at rest. But an ominous calm has followed the storm; and, for the honour of all parties concerned, we would fain have it broken. Instances of flagrant conduct, with respect to racing, are occasionally brought to light, and, on exposure, the delinquents receive severe and merited punishment. The true lovers of the turf must naturally cling to men of high character. The more exalted the rank of the individual, the more will he, in this country, be looked up to for example. And he should, like Cesar's wife, be above suspicion. Evelyn assured that Lord Derby has been deceived, we trust that he will insist on an investigation that will place the burthen on the proper shoulders, and at once refute the damaging assertions that are made with no "bated breath."

The excitement on which we have been remarking rendered the race for the Cup a nullity, though Virgo's appearance had already cast it into insignificance; no horse but the never-tiring Kingston, out of a large entry, being found bold enough to oppose the victorious strides of Mr. Howard's celebrated mare. On the previous day the winner of the Derby succumbed to heavy weight, and the fleetness of the young Chickn over the T.Y.C., for the Eglinton Stakes. On the same day the disappointed friends in the Park-hill. Both she and Rosaline cut up wretchedly. It was an easy gallop for Honeyuckle, while Jetty Trifx cleverly snatched the £100 second money from Sister of Mercy. Andover had all his work to do to beat the handsome little chestnut Hopsolar, for the Don Stakes. The Nursery and Scurry Stakes concluded a meeting which, but for the unlucky drawback on which we have been constrained to dilate, must have been pronounced as excellent.

The attention of the turfite has been pretty well occupied during the week, commencing with Pontefract on Monday; but as the following day also saw the gatherings at Bedford and Leicester, he must have been puzzled to make his selection. At the first place, Lancashire Lass won the West Riding Handicap, while both Dr. O'Toole and Pros, those money-losing steeds, evinced, if any proof were needed, that there is ample scope for improvement in their running, and which neither will probably effect till a future season. Bourgeois and Deformed were winners; the latter, probably, doing no good for herself with a prospective view to the Cambridgeshire, but, perhaps, indicating that there is something better in the stable.

Bedford afforded an opportunity to the Jennala filly to make up for a series of defeats by carrying off the chief race of the meeting, the Bedfordshire Stakes. Gossip made the best use of a capital start, and wrested the laurels and gains of the Two-Year-Old Stakes from the favourite, Rambling Katie; and Michaelmas Maid claimed the Scurry Handicap. At Leicester Adelaide modelled her pace, and proved the unexpected winner of the Leicestershire Handicap. Jack Sheppard gave farther evidence that he is one of the most dangerous youngsters at large. The Scurry Handicap was here placed to the credit of Butterfly.

The Manchester Autumn Meeting commenced business this day, and with every likelihood of success. The principal item, the Wilton Handicap, has been won by an outsider, a young lady hitherto unknown to fame, light Miss Allen; and, indeed, throughout the week, the fillies have been carrying almost everything before them.

The muster of races thickens as we go on, for, in addition to the Newmarket First October, where there is a new feature in the shape of a Handicap Plate, given by the Eastern Counties Railway Company for a spin over the T.Y.C., and which may furnish an insight to the chances of some of the competitors for the forthcoming Cambridgeshire, the note of preparation is sounded for meetings next week at Pain's-lane, Chesterfield, Whitehaven, Walsall, Northallerton, Monmouth, and Perth.

Lord Glasgow, who is never happy without a match-a-foot, has "gaged his Phyalis colt, at 5st 7lb, against Dervish, at 8st 9lb, over the T.M.M. course at Newmarket, for 300 sovs, h ft, to come off on the first day of the Houghton Meeting.

THE STUD OF NAPOLEON THE THIRD.—The Emperor's splendid stud of horses excited the admiration of Prince Albert's suite, and is not unworthy of notice in connexion with the Emperor's well-directed efforts to improve the breed of horses in France. The cavalry horses of the French army are mostly bred in Normandy, except the horses of the light cavalry, which come from Turbess, near the Pyrenees, and which have a mixture of Arab blood. With many excellent qualities of endurance, the horses of the French cavalry are capable of great improvement in point of blood and bone, and Napoleon's attention is increasingly directed to this object. Large purchases of English horses are frequently made by his agents, and, seeing the prices which are given for good steeds, and the rivalry which exists between the buyers for the French and German Governments to secure the best animals, some astonishment is expressed that English farmers do not more generally avail themselves of the facilities they possess for rearing first-rate horses for so certain and so good a market. Besides the harnes of the Emperor, he has a stud and breeding establishment at St. Cloud, at which colts of extraordinary value are reared from a mixture of English and Arab blood. The imperial stables at Boulogne, which are in close proximity to the Hotel Brighton, the Emperor's residence, are an extremely convenient and well-arranged, and covering nearly half an acre of ground. They contain thirty-six English saddle-horses for the use of the Emperor, his suite, and visitors; thirty-six carriage-horses for the Emperor's calèches, char-a-bancs, and other vehicles, and thirty post-horses. The Emperor's chargers, reserved for his exclusive use at reviews and in the field, are six in number. They are all English, as are, indeed, the greater part of the saddle and carriage-horses, and as their former names are retained, and every stall has the horse's name painted over the animal's head, the English visitor might forget that he was in a foreign country, and imagine that he was walking through the stables of some English nobleman. The Emperor's favourite steed of the moment is a horse called Phillips, after Mr. Phillips of Kew, a noble and spirited animal, and is usually ridden by the Emperor when he reviews the troops, as were he distinguishes himself for his beautiful action and by his habit of bawling and prancing when he approaches the colours of a regiment. As the Emperor at the same moment raises his hat, the horse and the rider appear to salute the colours together, to the great delight of the troops.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

THE ST. LEGER SETTLING.

The business of settling was resumed to-day, but the attendance of members was remarkably scanty, and money was evidently very "tight."

Amongst the written announcements that were posted over the mantelpiece, there was one strikingly significant; it was to the effect that an "attempt" would be made to settle the accounts of some five or six gentlemen whose names were appended to the notice.

Many balances stand over; but, as no important defalcations have occurred, hopes are entertained that, after a little breathing time, all halahtivs will be fully discharged.

The result of the race for the St. Leger was alike unfavourable to the public and to "gentlemen sportsmen," whose confidence in Scott's had increased in proportion as the hour of starting drew near. Of course, a large majority of bookmakers have balances on the right side, but there are very few who may be termed great winners. The principal are Mr. Davies, who saved the Knight of St. George to do battle for him against the favourites; Mr. Morris, the owner of the Knight; Mr. Warrington, Mr. T. Bell, and two or three others connected with the stable.

The betting which took place towards the close of the afternoon requires little comment. The chief outlay was on Muscovite for the Cesarewitch Stakes. The odds quoted were taken in the aggregate to £300. The other horses named below were backed for only small sums. Closing Prices:—

Cesarewitch Stakes.		Cambridgeshire Stakes.
12 to 1 agst Muscovite (t)	25 to 1 agst Star of Surrey (t)	15 to 1 agst The Early Bird (t)	20 to 1 agst Monie Moses (t)

	10 to 1 — Oulton (t)

THURSDAY.

Owing to the meetings at Leicester and Manchester, the Room was very thinly attended.

The Cesarewitch.

500 to 25 and 200 to 10 agst Muscovite.

The Derby.

500 to 15 agst The Nailer.

In the City quotations respecting the Cesarewitch, Balrownie was put at 30 to 1 (t and off.)

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

On Saturday the settling upon the Doncaster event commenced, and has since progressed in a very satisfactory manner, and large amounts have changed hands. Book-makers in a general way are winners. Speculation at present is confined to the two great events to be decided at Newmarket, viz., the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire Stakes. The handicap for the former event has, ever since its appearance, been pronounced bad, and the ungainly acceptance has, to a great extent, proved it to be so, although out of the few it seems difficult to find the "Pec," 100 to 8 being now offered on the field. Calanus has been backed for a good deal of money, £2,000 to £100 being taken in one bet. The Star of Surrey is very shy. 500 to 30 was taken once about The Early Bird for the Cambridgeshire Stakes, and 100 to 3, to win about £3,000, about Monie Moses. Orinoco has many friends. The following are the latest quotations:—

Cesarewitch Stakes.		Cambridgeshire Stakes.
100 to 8 agst Balrownie (t and off)	25 to 1 agst Poodle (t)	500 to 30 agst Early Bird (t)	30 to 1 agst Rulerist (t)
100 to 8 — Muscovite (off)	25 to 1 — Kidnapper (t)	20 to 1 — Calanus (t and off)	100 to 3 — Monie Moses (t)
15 to 1 — Calanus (t and off)	100 to 3 — Burlington (t)	20 to 1 — Indian Warrior (t)	100 to 3 — Ptolemy (t)
20 to 1 — D. O. (t)	100 to 3 — Amunin (t t)

TAKING OF SEBASTOPOLIS.—20 to 1 has been laid, to lose about £1,000, that Sebastopol is not taken in this month, and even bets that it is not taken in this month or next. 20 to 1 has been laid that a fire from land is made at Sebastopol in the present month.

LEICESTER RACES.—WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20.

IRISH TURFIANA.

THE programme of the Curragh October Meeting has just been published, by which we perceive that nineteen events, including three Royal Plates, the Paget, Sligo, Cesarewitch, Kirwan, and National Produce Stakes, are set forth for decision. The last named will be worth over £400. 172 horses are weighted for the three classes of the Trainers' stakes. The Corinthian Race, which usually winds up the Curragh meetings, is omitted from the programme this year, probably on account of its not having filled on the two last occasions.

THE BALLINAROE RACES are fixed for the 26th and 27th insts., under the stewardship of G. G. O. Higgins, Esq., M.P.; G. H. Moore, Esq., M.P.; Captain Gough, 7th Dragoons; G. Martin, Esq., and Thos. Edwood, Esq. Mr. Higgins, the county member, has, in the handsomest manner, presented a Gold Cup, to be raced for over hurdles. There are to be three races each day.

THE weekly meetings of the Committee of Management of the Irish Metropolitan Steeple Chases are, as usual, held each Tuesday evening. Subscriptions are fast pouring in from the nobility, gentry, and trading classes; so that there will be no dearth of the "sinews of war" at Conny Castle, on Monday and Tuesday, the 9th and 10th of October. We are glad to perceive that the Marquises of Waterford and Conyngham, the Earl of Clonmell, and Captain the Hon. J. W. H. Hutchinson, have undertaken to act as stewards—names sufficient to lend to the meeting a degree of importance never exceeded at any similar gathering in the sister kingdom. The Citizens' Gold Challenge Cup will, when finished, be a beautiful specimen of native workmanship. It is manufactured from gold found in Irish mines, and is wrought by Irish hands. We had almost forgotten to mention that the programme will be augmented by four Corinthian Races, got up by the military; so that, with five events each day, as good a two days' sport as could be desired is in store for the citizens of Dublin on the above dates.

THE inhabitants of Balla (Co. Mayo), had a quiet little gathering on the 8th inst. There were two events decided: the first, a sweepstakes of 1 sov. each, 10 sovs. added, won by Mr. Rutledge's Fanny; and the second a sweepstakes of 1 sov. each, 5 sovs. added, by Mr. T. Nally's Miracle.

THE Palmerstown (Co. Dublin) barriers will commence hunting on the 29th of the present month, on which day they will meet at Castlebaggot. Mr. Wm. Lynch has again undertaken the mastership.

THE members of the Limerick Coursing Club will meet for the first time this season at Derryceale, on the 17th and 18th insts. Their second meeting will take place at Clorane, on the 22nd and 23rd of October; and their third at Glenstal Castle, on the 19th and 20th of December.

SPORTING MISCELLANY.

THE DEVON AND SOMERSET STAG-HOUNDS will meet on Tuesday, Sept. 26th, at Harford; on Tuesday, the 28th, and on Saturday, the 30th, at Dulverton, each day at half-past nine o'clock.

CAPTURE OF AN OTTER NEAR ABINGDON.—One of those rare occurrences in the neighbourhood of Oxford, the capture of an otter, has just been effected by a keen old sportsman named Benjamin Lee, residing at the old turnpike-gatehouse, on the Chatham-road. The animal was taken by means of a rabbit-trap, set at the bottom of the shallow part of an unfrequented stream (belonging to J. S. Phillips, Esq., the worthy owner of the South Oxfordshire Hounds), running along the bottom of the Mill-hill, Culham. The captive has been placed in the farm of that gentleman, and is doing well. It will, however, be some little time before it recovers from a wound inflicted in the leg, where it was caught. We understand this is the fourth of the species which has been caught in this locality, one of which now forms an object of interest in the stuffed collection at the Abingdon Literary Institute. Another afforded considerable sport to the hunting fraternity a few years since, and, doubtless, will be remembered by some of our readers; and a third is now the property of a gentleman at Watlington.

THE Emperor and Empress will, it is said, on the return of the latter from Biarritz, reside for some days at the palace of Compiègne. Great preparations are already being made for the reception of their Majesties; and the hunting establishment has been sent to Compiègne.

SHOOTING

THE MOORS AND FORESTS.—The notes from the moors are becoming more scanty. The fact is, the birds are so very strong that he is a fortunate sportsman indeed who can manage to make a fair day's bag in double the usual time. The sport is, accordingly, very harassing. This is the general tenor of the reports from the moors in this quarter. In Ross

AN EIGHT-TON YACHT FROM THE BALTIC.

LOWESTOFT, Wednesday, Sept. 20.—The Pet, eight tons, R.T.Y.C., belonging to the Rev. R. E. Hughes, arrived this morning on her return from Bomarsund. She came by the Cattegat and the Skaw, and during the late adverse gales in the North Sea was frequently reduced to double-reefed trysail and storm-jib, but she has accomplished her voyage with speed and safety.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

MONTHLY MEETING, ANNUAL DINNER, AND CLOSING TRIP.
On Monday evening last the usual monthly meeting of this club was held at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace. In the unavoidable absence of the commodore on the continent, the vice-commodore being also away, Mr. Eagle, the treasurer of the club, presided, and Mr. Lane, of the Plantom, filled the vice-chair. Mr. Haseltine officiated for the secretary. Mr. Gregory, who has not yet returned from the Channel Islands. The minutes of the August meeting having been first read by Mr. Haseltine, and confirmed by the members present, the ANNUAL DINNER of the club was fixed for Thursday, November the 23rd, and the following were appointed stewards, whose numbers will be increased, but who are already prepared to receive the names of gentlemen desirous of attending the annual banquet.—Messrs. Crookford, Downe, Farmer, Fradgley, W. Goodson, Duff Gordon, Halfhide, Mouk, Phillips, Stephen Young, Mr. Under-Sheriff Crosley, and some others. The full list will soon appear in THE FIELD. On the suggestion of Mr. Crookford and Mr. Haseltine, Mr. Kennedy was appointed agent to the Royal London Yacht Club at Antwerp; and then Mr. Crookford gave notice of motion that "when, in future, an appointment is made to measure yachts previous to a race, they shall remain a tide for that purpose, or be disqualified." There is no doubt this resolution will be carried; and its necessity is traceable to the fact that, in connection with the very last match, when four o'clock was named as the time for measurement, the Guat was present, but another yacht or two had about that hour left, and, consequently, had to be measured at another time. From the conversation that arose in regard to this notice of motion, it appears that, after throwing open two prizes to all yacht clubs, the members have first some cause to, and do, complain of the small entry for the race of Saturday, the 16th, and then the measurers, especially, feel it as an annoyance that, when they attended at Greenwich, they could not complete their duty without the inconvenience of a second visit. The CLOSING TRIP was now fixed for Saturday, the 7th of October, to start from Blackwall-pier at four in the afternoon, and to proceed in company to Erith, in the wake of the Avalon. The owner of the Pearl, and other members, at once promised that their vessels should be present to do honour to "the ancient custom" of proceeding in company to dine at the Crown at Erith, and the Avalon was courteously reported ready (as last year) to accommodate some five-and-twenty members with a passage. The Pearl and other craft also arranged for a goodly company, so that this closing trip bids fair to attract an unusually large muster. Many names were set down on Monday, so as to secure places at the Crown dinner. We hear the schooner Regat Novice will, by the date fixed, have returned from Dublin, so that several yachts may be expected round from Harwich to support their vice-commodore, who is also a member of the London. The business of the meeting was concluded by the election of several members and the proposition of candidates for the October hallot (the third Monday in the month). Several of the members adjourned to the Adelphi Theatre, now re-opened, and looking gay enough under tasteful re-decoration, while others remained at the Caledonian, tempted by some excellent "singings and potables."

MEDWAY YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

This interesting event took place on the river Medway on Monday, and attracted a vast assemblage of the residents of Rochester and Chatham, besides the attendance of yachtsmen and their friends. The regatta was held under the auspices of the Medway Yacht Club (whose commodore, Mr. J. G. Robinson, presented several prizes), aided by Mr. T. Bartlett, late vice-commodore of the Royal London Yacht Club, and a few other gentlemen. The breeze was fresh, and a band enlivened the fair promenaders on the Sun Pier.

Sailing Match for a Silver Goblet, the gift of Mr. J. G. Robinson.

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Kitten	10	T. Harvey.
Fawn	10	F. Biddle.
Sea Nymph	10	R. Solly.

Simultaneously with these were started the subjoined, for a second Silver Cup, also the gift of Mr. J. G. Robinson.

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Little Mosquito	7	T. Bartlett.
Julia	7	Dr. Bain.
Ottilia	8	R. Leach.
Guat	4	R. Hewett.
Bantam	4	A. Jackson.

This was one of the best starts effected this season. The canvas rose as if by magic; and, for the first mile or so, a blanket (as they say) might have covered the fleet. In Gillingham Reach, Kitten, Fawn, and Nymph kept close together, as did all the second class except Bantam. Ottilia lost her topmast. Without any material alteration in their position in the run down, they rounded the mark at Sheerness as under, the steamer bringing up off H.M.S. Devonshire and Benbow full of Russian prisoners, who seemed much to enjoy the race:—

	H. M. S.
1. Kitten	1 21 0
2. Fawn	1 23 30
3. Sea Nymph	1 25 0
4. Julia	1 28 30
5. Little Mosquito	1 30 0
6. Guat	1 30 15
7. Ottilia	1 30 30
8. Bantam	Not timed.

It may be observed here that the celebrated little Guat could have been better placed but for an accident. One of the crew took a slippery hitch to the mainsheet, and a puff coming, away went the sheet, and the sails could not again be set properly, in consequence of the bonding of some of her iron work. The beating back with topmasts struck, and, in some instances, two reefs down, made a fine finish to a well-contested match. The goal (the Vixen) was thus rounded:—

	H. M. S.
1. Kitten	4 21 0
2. Fawn	4 21 30
3. Little Mosquito	4 30 30
4. Sea Nymph	4 38 0
5. Julia	4 44 0
6. Ottilia	4 58 0
7. Guat	5 13 0
8. Bantam	5 30 0

Mr. Harvey's Kitten, R.H.Y.C., and Mr. Bartlett's Mosquito, won the cups.

The steamer Princess Royal accompanied the match, and bore the commodore's pendant. The river in the vicinity of the town-pier was exceedingly gay, and every available spot, towards the close of the racing, was crowded with spectators. The Czarina, schooner, T. Baily, Esq.; Vixen, yawl, Commodore Robinson; and Pearl, cutter, J. Cooper, Esq., were gaily dressed with flags, and made the scene one of considerable gaiety. There were various prizes also offered for competition amongst fishing and rowing boats. The rowing matches which took place while the yachts were away afforded much sport, especially that between the four-oared gigs belonging to Mr. Bayley's schooner Czarina and Mr. Robinson's The Vixen. The course was round H. M. ship Poitiers, in Chatham Reach. The Vixen's crew were declared the winners by about half a length. The sports being concluded, the company adjourned to the Sun Hotel, where the worthy host, Mr. Winch, with his usual attention, had prepared a first-class dinner. The chair was filled by Commodore Robinson, supported by Messrs. Bartlett, Bain, Biddle, Harry, Solly, Bouc, Hewett, Partridge, &c. The cloth being removed, and the usual loyal toasts given, the commodore presented the successful candidates with the prizes. The remaining toasts—"The Commodore of the Medway Yacht Club," "Army and Navy," "Messrs. Bartlett and Bain," "The Press," and "The Visitors," were next given and responded to, and the proceedings were enlivened by an excellent band, which played at intervals on the balcony. The greatest harmony and good fellowship prevailed, and the company separated at a late hour, after mutual promises to support the Medway Regatta of 1855.

ATHLONE REGATTA—1854.

A correspondent favours us with the following clipping from the Westmeath Independent, which contains a few items not contained in our report, at page 870. The account just received is as follows:—Our annual regatta came off on the Wednesday and Thursday mentioned, the delightful weather attracting a large number of visitors, and covering the placid waters of Lough Ree with every species of craft, from the tiny cockle-boat to the commodore's clipper-yacht. The shore, too, was decked out with the usual number of tents, well stored with every good thing to refresh and gladden the heart. Owing to some unaccountable cause, there were but three entries for the Silver Challenge Cup, and for the rowing matches scarcely enough for a contest. For the rowing-match between four-oared boats for a purse of £10, there were but two entries—the Messrs. Smyth, of Bartlett Castle, and the members of the University Club. Upon the race, we understand, some very heavy bets were made, and which was cleverly won by the University men by several boats' lengths.

FIRST DAY.

First Race.—A prize of £3 for two-oared boats not exceeding twenty-five feet keel. Second boat 4s., if four start. Won by P. and J. Naghten.

Second Race.—Turf cots actually used in bringing turf to Athlone. Four rowers and one coxswain. Prize, £2. Won by Pat Cunniff.

Third Race for 23 sovs. For four-oared boats to be rowed by gentlemen. A tie race if four boats enter.

There were but two entries for this race, Messrs. Smyth and Mannsall, of Portlick Castle, and Messrs. Mills, Keogh, Duff, and Keogh, of the University Club. The latter won several lengths.

SECOND DAY.

First Race.—Sailing Match. For a Silver Challenge Cup, value £25, and a piece of plate, value £5. Second yacht to receive a piece of plate, value £3, provided five start.

For this race but three yachts started, and it was won by the Alles	Mr. P. Graham.

Aurora, second	Mr. J. Hinds.
Aveiger, third	Captain Sanders.

Second Race.—Fishing-boats, four feet beam, fifteen feet keel. Two rowers. Prize, £1. Won by P. and J. Naghten.

Third.—Cut Race. Tie race for Turf cots. Prize, £2. Won by Patrick Hughes.

Fourth.—Punt chase. Won by Patrick Quigley.

These comprised the sports. Owing to the dead calm which prevailed on the first day (Wednesday), the sailing matches were postponed to Thursday, when Mr. Graham's Alles won the Challenge Cup. The other sailing matches were again postponed to yesterday (Friday), and have not yet been decided.

CLEW BAY REGATTA.

BERTHA, Monday 4th, September.

Stewards: J. C. Garvey, Esq.; R. Rockwood, Esq.; William Lovingson, Jun., Esq.; Neal Davis, Esq.; J. F. Burke Esq.; James Pickerton, Jun., Esq. Umpire: Captain McDonald, R.N. Treasurer: D. F. Blake, Esq. Secretary: T. H. Burke, Esq.

Clew Bay, the most beautiful of the bays of the west, was recently the scene of a successful, though hastily got-up, regatta. During the then week it occurred to the gentlemen who managed the regatta to get up subscriptions, and this was done in a day, the inhabitants of Westport and the neighbouring towns coming forward as soon as called on. The Marquis of Sligo and Lord John Browne subscribed liberally, but, owing to the death of Miss Baillie, sister to Mr. Baillie, M.P., which took place at Westport-house, their lordships were unable to attend. To accommodate the gentlemen in the bathing-lodges along the coast, who generally leave home on the 1st of September, the regatta was fixed for Monday, the 4th.

At an early hour the approaches to the promontory of Bertra were crowded by carriages, carts, and vehicles of every description, while the number of boats, with their gay flags, the white canvas tents on the land, the presence of over 5,000 spectators, and Crough Patrick, half covered with white fleecy clouds, in the background, reminded one strongly of one of Kendrick's beautiful paintings. At one o'clock the first race came off.

SAILING MATCH.

First Prize, 5 sovs.; for boats of from 6 to 12 tons; a time race, forty seconds per ton. Entrance, 5s. Second boat, £2.

Four boats entered—the Terror, Speedwell, St. Joseph, and Success. They started with a light breeze, and, being in sight the entire time, much interest was excited. At four o'clock they reached the starting yacht, the Success leading, the Speedwell one minute later, and the Terror a few seconds after. The St. Joseph was distanced.

SECOND RACE.

3 sovs.; for boats from 1 to 6 tons; a time race, fifty seconds per ton. Entrance, 3s. Second boat, £1 10s.

The Mary Anne, Shamrock, and Wave started—the Shamrock winning by more than a mile.

ROWING MATCH.

First Prize, 4 sovs.; for four-oared-boats not exceeding twenty-two feet in the keel. Entrance, 1s. Second boat, £2.

The Anne and the Speed started. This was a pretty race, but, the boats having passed the wrong side of the buoy, the umpire declared them disqualified to the prize.

Second Prize, 3 sovs.; for boats not exceeding sixteen feet in the keel. Entrance, 3s. Second boat, £1. To start at half-past one o'clock.

For this race the St. Patrick, from Biffin Island, the Mary, and the Fly entered. The course was entirely within view, and the contest was a wicked one. The pulling was beautiful, but the Biffin men, who almost live at sea, were successful. The boat appeared to fly along the water.

Third Prize, 2 sovs.; for four-oared boats not exceeding sixteen feet in the keel. To be rowed by women. No entrance fees.

Only two boats entered for this race—the Mary and the Fly. It was the race of the day. Four young girls, from eighteen to twenty years of age, in each boat, whose attire is best described as "full dress," they were so perfectly unremembered, started at four o'clock. The pulling of the crew of the Mary excited universal admiration, it so resembled the rowing of men-of-war's men. The hundreds of sailors present made the volkin ring with cheers. The race was watched to the close with much interest, and, after a sharp contest, the Mary came in the winner.

The day's sport ended with a hack race. Sceldom has such a day's sport been witnessed in the west; every eye went determined to enjoy the glorious weather and to be pleased, and every one came home satisfied. It is intended next season to get up a regatta on a large scale.

PORTAFERRY REGATTA.

On Thursday, the 7th instant, one of those exciting holiday pastimes came off in this quiet little town, which surprised and delighted the inhabitants. The morning was bright and sunny, and a gentle breeze promised excellent sport. As it was known that a considerable number of boats was entered for each race, a large amount of interest was manifested by the several parties and their friends. Shortly before eleven o'clock a band of music, which was engaged for the occasion, and which contributed largely to the day's amusement, made its appearance and commenced playing, and at once attracted a large crowd of eager expectants. Immediately it proceeded to its appointed station, whence might be seen the different competitors, decked out in their holiday trim, eager to commence the nautical contest.

The first race was a sailing match, open to all boats under twenty-four feet keel, and at eleven o'clock, at the appointed signal, the following boats started off, the Ellen leading the way, and returned as follows:—

Waterville	Hackney	1
Ellen	Mullin	2
Wave	Smyth	3
Mary Jane	McConvery	4
Margaret	Stewart	5

The Margaret came considerably in advance of the others, but, taking the inboard side of the commodore's yacht, was disqualified. Immediately after the first race was started, a sailing-match for the Portaferry and Strangford ferry boats was despatched, coming in as follows:—

Cogswater	Giblin	1
Jenny Lind	Looby	2
Commodore	Jefferys	3

In the third race, open to all boats of sixteen-feet keel and under, those started, and came in as follows:—

Kate	Wallace	1
Erin	Casscut	2
Margaret and Ellen	Mullin	3
Catharine	McConnell	4
Eme	McMullan	5
Celerity	Gilchrist	6
Jenny Lind	Deidun	7

The fourth race, a rowing match, open to all four-oared boats under twenty-three feet keel. The following boats started:—

Samuel Ballie 1
Stranger Morrow 2

The fifth race, a rowing match, open to all four-oared boats of eighteen feet keel, and under, when there started and came in as follows:—

Pink Stewart 1
Jaur Gallagher 2

The sixth race, a rowing match, open to all two-oared boats of sixteen feet keel and under:—

Number Plumber 1
Green Bay Fray 2
Eliza Jeffreys 3

Extra race, open to the fishermen of the Lough:—

Allen Murray 1
Mary Anne Gallagher 2
David Wilson 3

The races were succeeded with pole climbing, &c., which afforded much amusement, to which succeeded fire-works, fire-balloons, rockets, &c., &c., under the able management of Mr. John Wallace, secretary to the regatta.

SAILING MATCH AT GREYPOINT.

The sailing qualities of the two crack boats of the Belfast Lough were again tested on Monday, a match having been made between the Anna and the Jenny, of Bangor, to decide which had the claim to superiority. The course was from Greypoint, round a flag-boat in Ballyhedine Bay, thence round Carrickfergus buoy, and winning round a flag-boat inside Greypoint. At half-past twelve o'clock the signal for starting was given, when the Jenny got off with the lead, but in a few minutes was passed by her rival, the Anna, who increased her distance every stretch, rounding the winning boat twelve minutes before her competitor, and coming in as follows:—

The Anna 4 hours, 20 minutes.
The Jenny " " 11 "

Both boats were beautifully handled throughout the race, and reflect, by their sailing qualities, much credit on their builder, Mr. Matthew Shanks.

THE LILLEY CLUB.—Many of the leading members having laid up their yachts for the season, or determined not again, in 1884, to quit the waters of the Thames, the rooms of this club are now well filled every Wednesday evening, from eight till twelve o'clock. A good many candidates are on the list for ballot, and among the other good signs of the prosperity of the club are the donations to the library, among the most recent of which are—"The Life and Voyages of Columbus," Captain Wilnot's "Code of Signals," Captain Wiehelo's MSS., "Hunt's Yachting Magazine," "A Yacht Voyage to Iceland," "Rules of the Thames, Liverpool, Welsh, Cork, Western (England), and London Model Yacht Clubs," "The Yachtsman's Annual," "Instructions relating to H. M. Service at Sea," "Barker's Mariners' Compass," "Turkish Vocabulary," "Section of a First-rate," &c. &c. Arrangements are in progress for having the club-room open daily, for members only. There will be a ballot on Wednesday next.

MR. FARLEY, THE MODEL-YACHT BUILDER. We regret to have to record that this well-known model-builder is very dangerously ill at his house in Fleet-street, opposite St. Dunstan's Church. When a man is thus stricken down, there are always a few vultures ready to pounce upon him; and some such are now harassing his family for very trifles, which, when he regains his health, his own energies would soon discharge. In the meantime, for "suld lang syne," yachtsmen are invited to take tickets in a raffle for a beautiful model, which has been suddenly returned upon Mr. Farley's hands, and the sale of which will "square the yards."

* * * It shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others, forwarding their appointments of matches or notices of meetings to come, at their early convenience.

MATCHES APPOINTED.

- September 25.—Wentzall's Annual Regatta at Lambeth.
September 26.—The Nelsons Club will row their second pair-oared match, at Mortlake, for silver challenge cups.
September 25.—C. Chibbs and J. Allen, to row from the Half-way House to Blackwall Stairs, for £25 a side.
September 26.—T. Seale and J. Newbold against R. Ware and John Pindar, row a pair-oared match from Hammersmith to Battersea, for £5 a side.
September 27.—Mortlake Regatta. Tradesmen's prize, a pair of silver oars and a silver pinner; mechanics will row for money prizes.
September 27.—G. Green, of Putney, and T. Coombs, of Millbank, to row from Putney Pier to the ship at Mortlake, for £10 a side.
September 30.—Mr. J. B. McNeil and Mr. R. Reid of Glasgow, to row two and a half or three miles, for £50 a side.
October 2.—McCarthy and Sheen, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £10 a side.
October 4.—T. Pocock and F. Styles, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £25 a side.
October 9.—R. Wharf and J. Synnott, to row from Old Barge House, Woolwich, to Limehouse Hole, for £25 a side.
October 19.—G. Robbins, at Little Bridge, and R. Savage, of Horsley-down, to row from Putney to Mortlake for £25 a side.
October 23.—W. Maury, of Putney, and J. Rolfs, of Christchurch, to row from The Pier at Putney to the ship at Mortlake, for 20 guineas a side.
October 25.—G. Robbins and R. Savage (below-bridge men), to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £25 a side.
November 20.—T. Cole (the Champion of the Thames) and J. Messenger, of Teddington, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £200 a side.

LOCHLOMOND REGATTA.

TWO MEN DROWNED.

This regatta was advertised to come off on Friday. In the morning large numbers of people availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the numerous excursion trains and steamers to witness the interesting contest. Promptly at twelve o'clock the yachts appeared alongside of the starting yacht, on board of which were the acting commodore, Alex. Smollet, Esq., M.P., and Joseph Turnbull, Esq., who acted as judge; but, in consequence of the strong breeze that prevailed, their race (the first on the list) did not take place. The other races were as follows:—

A Match by 27-feet four-oared gigs.

Wanderer (Dunbarton) 1
Nil Desperandum (Leven) 2

This race was performed in eleven minutes, the second boat being only three boats' lengths behind.

A Match by 23-feet four-oared jolly-boats.

Dumbarton Youth (Dunbarton) 1
Rever (Arrochar) 2
I will if I can (Gourock) 3

Won by three boats' lengths.

A Match by 23-feet four-oared gigs.

Little Wander (Dunbarton) 1
Leinnox Lass (Leven) 2

Won by three lengths.

A Sculling Match.

Four Brothers (Cardross) 1
Elizabeth (Cantrass) 2

The competitors were father and son, named Rae, the son being the winner by scarcely a boat's length.

A Match by 22-feet four-oared gigs. The match started, completed by the Mischief, Nymph, and Sylph, all of Leven, and proceeded with great déjà to a little below Snollet Point. There one of the men, on board of the Sylph, missed his stroke, the boat proceeding at a rapid rate, and his oar in the back stroke caught the water and upset the gig. The rowers in the competing gigs immediately halted, and threw their oars adrift, in the hope that the sinking men would reach them. This anticipation was realised in the case of two of the crew of the Sylph, but we regret to state that two of the crew, named Kinloch and Walker, sank to rise no more. McIntyre, the coxswain, was, with the utmost difficulty, rescued from the water, and gradually recovered under medical treatment. It is scarcely necessary to say that, on the announcement of this melancholy event at the commodore's barge, the flag was immediately lowered, and the regatta was brought to a sudden conclusion about two o'clock, six of the intended matches being left unconcluded. For several hours afterwards every effort was made to recover the bodies of the two unfortunate men, but these were unattended with success.—Glasgow Herald.

THE NELSON CLUB.—On Monday next, the 25th instant, this club will row their second pair-oared match, at Mortlake, in boats, for silver challenge cups, with presentation and other prizes. The boats will start from the Parsonage, and round a buoy moored off Barker's rails, returning by the Surrey shore round a buoy moored off the Parsonage, and finish at Godfrey's. First heat at two: H. Porter and J. Curling, white; D. Cairn and T. Raper, orange; A. Hamm and N. Swanson, pink. Second heat at three: H. Harris and T. Cavanagh, red; J. Cairn and J. Roberts, green. The last boat in the first heat will row in the second, and the two first boats in each heat will row in the final heat at five, against the present holders of the cups, J. Rorke and W. Branscombe, blue.

PISCATORIAL PROLUSIONS.

BY THE HAMPSHIRE FLY-FISHER.

It must not be forgotten that, in addition to the more active agencies to which I have already referred, fish, like the rest of animated creation, are subject to a variety of diseases. The extremes of heat and cold alike exercise a destructive influence on them, particularly in shallow waters. Occasionally an epidemic mortality prevails among them. Internal and external parasitic animals not only torment, but sometimes prove destructive to them. There is no one hut at the beginning of the spring, after having hooked what is evidently a heavy fish, has found, to his great disappointment, on landing his prey after a feeble resistance, a long, lanky, stark, big-headed brute, the lower jaw probably curved upwards (as we see in a kipper salmon), and covered with a number of insects with heads like cloves. This is the Lernæa Trutta, or trout-lice. It is described by Blake thus: "The lerneæ, fish-louse, or fish-biter tribe, are molluscous blood-worms, with a naked body, often oblong and cylindrical, having three or four tentacula with which they fix themselves to the skin and other parts of fishes. It may be perhaps a question whether these are so much the cause as the consequence of disease. Those who are curious on the subject, will do well to refer to that never sufficiently to be commended compendium of scientific sporting, the 'Encyclopædia of Rural Sporting.' Among other causes of the destruction of the finny tribes, he enumerates two other classes of insects, the Tania and Pascistæ. He has also not omitted to mention the infection of the eyes, recently referred to by our own correspondent, and which is variously attributed to the effect of hybernation, or passing the wintry season in mud; or, as Blacan is inclined to think, to an occasional decortication or shedding of the scales, which, in fish, we know to be deciduous. For my own part, I am inclined to think that the effect of long-standing mud in ponds must be very injurious, and that the only remedy which can be really efficacious is the thorough cleansing of the various deposits and aquatic plants, many of which are highly poisonous, and laying down a good bottom of chalk or gravel. I need not add that drains from bog lands, to say nothing of the offscouring of gas, paper-mills, and many other manufactures, are so many active poisons, which not only destroy the fish themselves, but also render their flesh perfectly useless for food. I have sometimes thought, too, that diseases in fish are infectious. I remember some three or four years back, in a particular part of the river Itchen, catching several fish, all of these presenting the same unmistakable appearances of disease, which I at first attributed to backward condition, and I threw one or two back. A very experienced fisherman, however, who was in company with me, advised me to kill the rest, as he said (and his opinion was backed by that of the keeper) that they would only serve to spread the disease if they were thrown back. That advice I followed, and the fish are now as healthy in that part of the water as anywhere else. I ought to add, that their haunts were under the banks of a boggy meadow, which had been recently drained, and close at the mouth of the drain. The land has now become very much sweetened, and is good sound pasture; this probably was in some degree account for it. Be it as it may, whenever, after the month of May, I find fish in such unseemable state, and which cannot be attributed to mere backwardness of condition, I always kill them and throw them away. I was told, too, that some years back a disease appeared among the grayling in the river

Itchen, of which hundreds died. The fish rose at the top of the water, as if poisoned by cocculus indicus. I am happy to say that this has not recurred, and it was probably attributable to some cause which has now passed away. I have now, I believe, glanced at the principal natural causes of the destruction of fish and the remedies which suggest themselves: to keep the spawning-grounds as quiet as possible; to keep down the coarse fish, not even sparing the grayling itself; to keep the rivers as reasonably may be from weeds; and to prevent their being polluted, as far as can be, from any noxious foreign substance. And here let me remind all fish preservers that they must be almost invariably, in a good measure, at the mercy of others. A hushel or two of lime, a pound or two of cocculus indicus or nuc. vomica, is easily procured, and it may be thrown into the stream at times, and in a manner to defy detection. It was an act, indeed, of such cold-blooded atrocity as none but a ruffian would be guilty of; and yet we know to what lengths a jealous hatred may go. I have often said that fair anglers are the best keepers, and consequently the liberal proprietor will have his waters best watched. But if the rights of property are too severely insisted on—if men will, in a spirit of sordid cupidity or insolent exclusiveness, debar every one, no matter how fair or honourable a sportsman, from the enjoyment of an innocent amusement, which so far from involving sacrifice on their part, would be beneficial to the very purpose they pretend to be anxious to promote—one would hardly grieve so far as they are concerned, if they were punished by the destruction of the object of their selfish jealousy—if their rivers were barren and their streams tenantless. Unfortunately I have known instances where the detected poacher has vented his malignity on kind and generous men, who have restricted none but unlawful practices and wilful trespassers on their waters. In such a case one's indignation is raised to the highest pitch, and the greatest regret we experience is that such a scoundrel has evaded justice. As I said before, the consideration may not be unimportant to some. It will not indeed weigh with the generous and the good; but all mankind are not alike, and the selfish mind will best appreciate those motives of action which have an immediate operation on his own interests. But this part of the subject is too important to be treated of thus cursorily. For the present, let me stick to my subject—the legitimate preservation and encouragement of our fisheries.

ILLEGAL NETTING IN THE RIVER THAMES.—Before the bench at Wandsworth, on the 7th Sept., James Gibson, James Holder, and John Gibbs, all of Hammersmith, fishermen, were charged with obstructing the water-bailiffs, Ruff and Howard, in the execution of their duty on the river Thames, on the 3rd instant. The case being clearly proved, they were fined £1 each and costs. Before the Lord Mayor, on the 13th instant, George Pearce and Henry Pearce, both of Strand-on-the-Green, fishermen, were charged by Water-bailiff Howard with working an illegal net in the river at Richmond, on the 11th, and obstructing the officer in the execution of his duty. Fined 10s. each. Committed for fourteen days each, the fines not being paid. Before a full bench of magistrates, at Hampton, on the 8th Sept., Henry Purdie the elder, and Thomas Purdie, both of Shepperton, fishermen, were charged, upon the information of Thomas Rosewell, assistant water-bailiff, with using a poking net, and attempting to take fish in the Lower Preserve, at Shepperton (set apart by the Lord Mayor for the preservation of the spawn and fry of fish in the river Thames), on the 6th instant. The case was fully proved, and they were convicted and fined 10s. each and costs.

ANGLING EXTRAORDINARY.—A few days ago a party of anglers were amusing themselves with the rod by the river-side in Chelmsford, and having thrown a barbed bait on the ground behind them, they found soon after, on turning round, that they had hooked a very "strange fish"—nothing less than a fine Cochinchina fowl belonging to Mrs. Myers. It appears that the unsophisticated foreigner, ignorant of the wiles and deceptions of English anglers, espied the tempting bait, and regarding it as one of the unconsidered trifles that were lawful perquisites, seized upon and swallowed it with as much zest as one of its countrymen would a mouthful of worm broth, or bird's-nest soup. The sad mistake was soon discovered by fisherman and fowl. The puffer appeared in great danger of being dishied; but as there was a reluctance to consign it to the spit, the patient was carried to the veterinary surgery of Mr. S. Baker, where that gentleman's son, Mr. Conrad Baker, after calling in the aid of chloroform to stop its cackling, skillfully opened the crop and extracted the murderous hook. Two days after the fowl was strutting hale and healthy amongst its fellows.—Chelmsford Chronicle.

A LARGE BASS.—Mr. James Adams, the keeper of the fish-market on the western side of Island Bridge, Saco, lately caught a bass which weighed sixty pounds, as we learn from the Biddeford (Maine) Union.

IRELAND.—The salmon fishery is more productive this season in the West of Ireland than it has been within the memory of the oldest persons. In the Ballyshannon fishery alone upwards of a hundred tons of fish had been taken at the close of July, which, at an average price of 8d. per pound, would have realised about £6,000.

RACKETS.

PRESENTATION OF TESTIMONIALS TO MR. T. MORRIS AND MR. MATTHEW PITTMAN AT THE BELVIDERE COURT.

Whatever improvements may have been introduced into education and social habits, certainly in the education of the physical we are greatly inferior to our ancestors. Pestalozzi was the only man who, in modern times, took a rational view of education in its relation to mind and body, making the development of the powers of the latter a means of strengthening the faculties of the former. Catechisms and lesson-books have become the summum bonum—the alpha and the omega—of the training of youth. The system is to cultivate the intellect, or, perhaps, more properly speaking, the memory, to the highest point; and to let the body, like a neglected foundling, be dragged up any how it can. The one is carefully tended as a hot-house plant, the other is left to grow wild, like a weed by the roadside, liable to be trodden down by the foot of every passer-by. An intellectual asceticism, making the closet everything and the field nothing, has come into fashion, which in reality is as destructive of the mental powers it seeks to foster, as is that religious asceticism which so universally prevailed in hy-gone ages, prohibiting the exercise of reason as a mortal sin, and imposing upon its devotees a blind faith in dogmas manufactured by other minds. Excessive devotion to study, terminating in premature death—instances, in fact, of mental and bodily suicide—instead of being held up as warnings to deter others from a like violation of the laws of nature, are set before the minds of youth as noble examples, worthy of all imitation. A new calendar and order of saints have been created in our day, not deriving their repute from bodily flagellations and mortification of the flesh, but whose title to canonization is founded upon the severity of the tasking of the powers of the mind, but yet producing in effect the same bodily torments and fleshly mortifications as the self-inflicted penances of monks and Hindoos. Bibliomania is as injurious to the individual, and consequently to society, as any other monomania. It is with individuals as with society—there never can be health where the one part of the body politic is elevated to the pampered privileges of a St. James's, and the other degraded to the level of a St. Giles's. Intellectual cultivation is, beyond all question, man's highest earthly good. The less the mental powers are developed, the more the man assimilates to the brute; but equilibrium must be preserved between mind and body, and even-handed justice dealt out to both. Excessive study, even of the highest and purest subjects, demonstrates the truth of the proverb, that "the corruption of the best thing is always the worst kind of corruption." "Be not studious overmuch," would be as necessary a precept from an apostle to Christians in the nineteenth century, as was the precept, "Be not righteous overmuch," to the Christians in the first century. Our danger lies far more from [the former than the latter. Longfellow thus beautifully lays down the law regulating the connection of mind and body—a law which should govern our conventional usages:—"If the mind, which rules the body, even forgets itself so far as to trample upon its slave, the slave is never generous enough to forgive the injury, but will rise and smite its oppressor. Thus has many a monarch-mind been dethroned."

There is great despotism in our conventional laws, with reference to athletic exercises, field sports, and pastimes. In America conventional despotism takes a positive form. If a man wishes to avoid becoming a social outcast, he must do one of two things—become a communicant of a church, or join a fire-engine company; and as the duties of the first are the least onerous of the two, it is generally preferred. In England social tyranny assumes a negative shape. It is decidedly respectable to go to church, but it is not a sine qua non of respectability. Our conventionalities are almost exclusively of the nature of the second table of the Decalogue—"Thou shalt not" do this, that, and the other. Under this interdict the puritanical place field sports, open-air games, and pastimes. If a man wishes rationally to indulge in them, he must do so by stealth, or run the risk of being branded as a vulgar idler, or even of having his prospects in life injured by a false charge of neglect of business. The re-election of Richard Andrews to the Mayoralty of Southampton was strongly opposed, upon the ground that the worthy coachmaker was guilty of the horrid crime of playing at skittles. His fellow-townsmen, however, had the good sense to ignore the indictment, and re-elect the skittle player. In consequence of the ban thus placed upon athletic games, many of the finest amateur racket-players have been deprived of that meed of praise which is justly their due, in order to avoid injury to their professional reputation from an infraction of these arbitrary conventionalities. This explains the reason why the reporter of racket matches is continually obliged to use the vague phraseology, "An Amateur," "An Amateur of great talent," "A distinguished Amateur," &c., not one of them conveying to the minds of the public the slightest idea as to who the individual is who has signalled himself. However repugnant this may be to the player's own feelings, and however strong his consciousness may be that the pursuit in which he is engaged is not only innocent, but laudable, still he is compelled to submit to wear the mask. A man of fortune may set this conventional despotism at defiance, but a young professional man, whose brains are his only patrimony, cannot afford to do so. It does not comport with the dignity of a barrister, for example, that he should be anything more than a mere lawyer. The only exercise he may take must be equestrian. He has the privilege of riding to and from court in an ambulatory pace, with the regular up-and-down motion of a post-hoy; but racket and ball are beneath the dignity of wig and gown, although none need athletic exercises so much as those engaged in sedentary occupations.

The community are, however, beginning to emancipate themselves from these effeminate restrictions. They will not much longer endure the silken—but, nevertheless, iron—rule of the drawing-room. When such a reform of our constitutional usages is effected, the professors of athletic exercises will have the honour which is due to them. The man who induces in others the habit of taking athletic exercises, promotive of bodily health, and, at the same time, affords pleasure to multitudes by the exhibition of his own skill and activity, will then be regarded, as he is, as a public benefactor. Such men are Mr. Thomas Morris and Mr. Matthew Pittman, to whom handsome testimonials were presented by their friends and admirers, at the Belvidere Court, on Monday week. For upwards of thirty years these gentlemen have been the admiration of the racket world. During a great portion of that time they have been associated in play. For a long period they were considered as the joint champions of England, no other players being able to wrest the palm from them. Increase of years, however, brought with it decrease of physical powers; and they were compelled to yield the palm to more juvenile aspirants. They have arrived at the autumn of life, but yet with scarce any sign of the sear and yellow leaf. Although Mr. Morris is fifty-two, and Mr. Pittman fifty-three years of age, there are few players who can cope with them, and fewer still who can beat them.

The testimonial was not, however, presented to these gentlemen solely as racket-players, who have maintained a high degree of celebrity for upwards of thirty years, but also as a mark of respect for their private characters as gentlemen. Their snavity of manners has rendered them personally popular.

Mr. Morris, as a racket-player, may be said to have been his own father—that is to say, he entered the racket world without any family antecedents. His public career has gained for him, however, a testimonial which he may well be proud to hand down to his family as a heir-loom. Mr. Pittman is an extraordinary instance of hereditary genius. His father, Mr. Thomas Pittman—now living, and in his eighty-sixth year—has attained great eminence in his day. The three sons all became first-rate proficient in the game. John, the youngest, was for many years the champion of England, until beaten by Lamb, in a celebrated match at the Belvidere for £100 aside. Thomas, the eldest, and Matthew, the second son, were considered only inferior to John, the champion.

With Matthew the passion for bat and ball appears to have been almost intuitive; his memory will not carry him back far enough to enable him to state when he first became a player.

The testimonials consist of two large and magnificent silver tankards, of elegant design and superior workmanship, bearing appropriate inscriptions. Their intrinsic worth is, however, no doubt greatly inferior in the estimation of the recipients to their extrinsic value, as the gifts of hundreds of gentlemen, whom they may regard not only as their public admirers, but their warm personal friends. Previous to the presentation a grand display of rackets took place in the court, the players being Messrs. Erwood, Sowden, Morris, Pittman, the London amateur, Bull, Catlyn, and the junior of the two winners of the silver cups at the Belvidere this season. At the conclusion of the play a numerous and highly respectable company sat down to an entertainment in the large room of the hotel. The chair was occupied by Thomas Smith, Esq., the original proposer of the testimonial, and one of the oldest patrons of rackets, supported by some of the most distinguished players in the kingdom.

The Chairman, having disposed of the loyal toasts; in an appropriate speech, in which he detailed the origin of the testimonial, and the motives of respect and admiration which had prompted the hundreds of subscribers to the performance of the act, presented the tankards to Mr. Morris and Mr. Pittman—the healths of these gentlemen having been drunk with loud applause.

Mr. Morris returned thanks in a brief but feeling speech, in the course of which he said that a testimonial like that, coming from such a large and highly respectable body of subscribers, all of whom he might number amongst his friends, was in his estimation a full reward for his public services, an incentive to perseverance in the same course which had won for him their approbation; and he trusted that his children, to whom he hoped to transmit the testimonial as an heir-loom, would be incited thereby to the pursuit of a like honourable course of conduct.

Mr. Pittman returned thanks in a similar strain.

The Vice-Chairman then proposed the healths of Thomas Smith and Henry William Johnson, Esqs., and the Committee, which was drunk enthusiastically, and responded to by the former two gentlemen.

The health of the junior winner of the Belvidere cups, in conjunction with the Belvidere amateurs, the Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Sowden, Bull, and the professional players, having been severally drunk and responded to, the proceedings terminated.

THE CALVERTS v. HODGSONS.

On Thursday, the 14th instant, a match was played between the tenants and friends of Edmund Calvert, Esq., of Hunsbury, Ware, and those of the adjoining estate of John Hodgson, Esq., Gilston Park, Eastwick. Although the weather was most unpropitious, it appeared in no way to damp the ardour of all present, and the playing on both sides was excellent. The game having terminated at an early hour, the remainder of the day was passed in rustic sports and old English games. A sumptuous luncheon was provided, which, we need scarcely say, added considerably to the comfort and hilarity of the day.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

HOUR by hour the national excitement deepens, and tidings from the Crimea are looked for with an intense anxiety that proclaims how well aware is England of the solemn character of the deed that is about to be done—or, it may be, that is being accomplished as we write. For, not only has the Crimea expedition sailed, but nearly sixty thousand men have actually been landed at Eupatoria. The vessels went off for the reserve, and the troops—stated to consist of 25,000 English, the same number of French, and 8,000 Turks—immediately commenced their march upon Sebastopol. It is most probable that long ere this they have met with the enemy; and, though we doubt not that the issue of the conflict has been that which was due to the gallantry of brave men fighting for the right, we must not forget that the price of the most easily gained battle must be paid in lives. What bloodshed the wretched ambition of the Russian tyrant has yet caused in our ranks—and for every drop spilt he is responsible at the judgment—has yet to be told; but, with the first news of triumph, sorrow and sorrow will fall upon many a household. The nation smiles at pecuniary sacrifice in such a cause, and, flinging its purse to the Executive, cheers on its soldiers and sailors to the strife. But it is now about to learn what war means.

Eupatoria is some considerable distance from Sebastopol; but the point of landing appears to have had many recommendations. There are about one hundred miles between it and the object of attack; but there is an excellent road, first to Simpheropol and then to the fortress whose name is now on every lip. This road was probably deemed essential for the transport of the heavy artillery; it is also well supplied with that grand necessary, water. Of the wisdom of the choice which selected this place of debarkation, there can be no doubt. The instructions also, which were presented to every officer, in order to guide him in landing his men, are admirably calculated to ensure precision, and as much security as is compatible with such an operation. The scene must have been a noble one. The ships were to be moored with a broadside to the shore, and from the seaward side the boats were to be dropped, so as to afford the men all protection up to the last moment; then, at a signal, the whole long line of boats, reaching from two to three miles, were to make for the land, the soldiers with unloaded guns and with knapsacks on their knees—a wise precaution, for in the event of a boat upsetting, the weight of the knapsack, if fastened to the owner, would secure his destruction. The boats were to keep at twenty yards distance, and to proceed at the same pace, so that the landing might be simultaneous. The operation would, of course, have been performed, if necessary, under the covering fire from the ships; but this was needless, no resistance having been offered. Immediately on landing, the soldiers, whose allotted places were well understood, would form, and there would stand a gallant army ready to rush upon the foe. The directions remind one of the splendid landing in Egypt, at the very beginning of the century, when the English were opposed by a far different enemy, their present ally, who permitted no such easy invasion. As our boats approached the African shore, in March, 1801, a terrific fire was opened upon them, and under this many a brave fellow fell to rise no more. But at last the keels touched land; the men sprang to shore—formed, and, without waiting to load, dashed up the sand-hills, and won the day with the bayonet. We are fortunate in having those by our side who were then against us—fortunate also that their example has not been imitated by our new foes.

Whether Sir Charles Napier be actually returning or not is still matter of doubt. If he comes home, having left Cronstadt unassailed, the country will have reason to be dissatisfied; but we do not believe that the fault will be with him. The opposition organs distinctly state that the command of this Baltic expedition was in the first place offered to Lord Dundonald—better known and honoured by the name of Cochrane—and that he agreed to accept it only on condition that he was allowed to carry on the war "in earnest"—in other words, that he was to use his own discretion. This Lord Aberdeen is said to have refused. We neither endorse nor reject the story, but it will meet with considerable acceptance should Sir Charles return under circumstances which permit the nation to believe that he was restrained from doing his worst. There can be no doubt that the blockade has, thanks to Prussia, been rendered no blockade at all. While speaking of the war, we should add, that communications from Russia represent the Emperor's army as much discouraged by the fall of Bomarsund, which could not be concealed from the people, or even manipulated into a victory for the Czar, and that the Russians look to Prussia for assistance, with a hope which does not seem destined to be realised. The position of Austria is a singular one: she is at peace with Russia, yet is making military moves in concert with Powers that are at war with that country. A crisis which will force her from her anomalous attitude can hardly be far distant. And apropos of Austria, Mazzini has not been taken, and has published a letter defying the Swiss Government to capture him, and bitterly reproaching it for acting as the police of Austria.

The cholera, we rejoice to say, is rapidly and decidedly diminishing in the metropolis. It has, however, by no means left us; and we may add, that it is earnestly to be desired that when the cholera deaths are no longer recorded, the good work of cleansing and draining will not cease with the salutary terror which is at present doing so much good.

A form of thanksgiving has been ordered to be prepared in consequence of the abundant harvest. Those who understand the question of demand and supply, and comprehend that a cheap loaf is not the instantaneous and necessary consequence of plenty of corn, but who foresee the invaluable general results of such a harvest as ours, have already tendered their homage of gratitude to the Giver of all good things. But those who are less informed may not see the exact call for thanksgiving when their position has not apparently been amended; and, if an archbishop could stoop to such a matter, a few words of political economy, on the same leaf as the theology, might be found instrumental in promoting the gratitude of the many.

We regret to have to record a diabolical attempt to cause wholesale slaughter on an Irish railway. An excursion had been made upon the Londonderry and Enniskillen line by a large body of Orangemen; and, in anticipation of their return, some miscreants had placed masses of rock upon the rails. Happily, the scoundrels had done too much, and stopped, instead of overthrowing, the train. One poor fellow was killed; but the excursionists, of whom there were 800, including the Earl of Enniskillen, Sir R. Bateson, and other Irish notorieties, escaped. It is to be hoped that the wretches who made this hideous attempt at murder will be detected; and that whether private spite, or religious animosity, prompted the deed, its perpetrators will suffer the law's last penalty—never more richly merited.

There is no other news of interest, unless the announcement that Queen Christina establishes herself as Queen Victoria's neighbour, three miles from Windsor, be so considered. The inauguration of St. George's-hall, Liverpool, has taken place, and, as a musical fete, seems to have been a failure. The beauty of the building is indisputable. The hint we gave about the boy, arrested at the instance of the two officers of the 46th for street impertinence, has been taken; and Major Maxwell and Adjutant M'Alister are summoned to the County Court, to show cause why they should not compensate the lad for false imprisonment. The attorney who is working the case is a Mr. Vowles—not, we presume, the gentleman who acted for "Rick" in the case of Jarndyce and Jarndyce. Such of our readers as are interested in racing will already have made their own comments upon the Acrobat affair, at Doncaster. The Earl of Derby's victory cost Mr. Scott a suit of clothes, and Mr. Harry Broome some hard hitting—oddl incidents of a race. Whether the "race were to the swift" or not, it seems to have been lucky for Mr. Scott that the subsequent "battle was to the strong."

LANDING OF THE BRITISH IN THE CRIMEA.

(From Wednesday's Times.)

It is assumed, that the whole fleet, consisting of sailing ships of war, steamers of war, and transports, has accomplished a passage of that portion of the Black Sea which lies between Altschik and the coast of the Crimea without accidents, and without any material departure from the order of sailing, for the place of every boat in each division of the fleet is accurately determined, and it is intended that the divisions should advance with the regularity of an army in the field. It is probable, as has been stated in some of the German papers, that the troops will chiefly be conveyed in the transports, leaving a sufficient number of line-of-battle ships to cover and defend the enormous convoy, in the event of the Russian fleet attempting to molest the expedition. But the whole naval armament will actively assist with its boats and crews in the landing. The boats will form and receive the men on board on the off-shore side of each ship, partly to lie under the shelter of the vessel in case the enemy should open his fire from the shore, and partly to leave each vessel at liberty to open her own fire on the land. This circumstance denotes that it is expected the troops will embark at a short distance from the shore, and our account states that this distance will not exceed 400 yards. The men are to enter the boats with their arms and knapsacks, but the arms not loaded, and the knapsacks not buckled on. They will have eaten a good meal before starting, and officers as well as men will carry with them three days' bread and salt meat, besides water, in their canteens. All the boats of the fleet having thus been filled with men, they will form in three grand divisions—the first consisting of all the launches and pinnaces from the sailing ships of the fleet, in which the Britannia's boats will occupy the post of honour, on the extreme right of the line; the second division will consist of the paddlebox-boats of the war steamers, towed by their own cutters, and these will occupy the extreme left; the central, or third division, will contain all the boats of the transport service, and will, consequently, be by far the most numerous. These three divisions will form one vast continuous line, keeping a distance of twenty feet between the oars of each boat. Upon the signal being given from the Agamemnon, the whole line will row stoutly and steadily towards the shore, the men in perfect stillness and silence, no boat being allowed to advance before or to fall behind the others. Such a line, from the enormous multitude of boats engaged, must extend to between two and three miles in length, irrespective of the French forces, which are not referred to in these instructions; the landing must therefore be intended to take place on a lengthened expanse of the coast. The light division of the British army and the artillery, conveyed in six of the British transports, will be the first to land, and four companies of the second battalion of the Rifle Brigade will be attached to each brigade of General Broune's division, and will form the advance. Upon these gallant fellows, therefore, will devolve the glory of first setting foot on the Crimea, and of opening their fire upon the enemy. The larger boats will all be provided with grape and small shot, and the oars will be slung so as to be dropped over the side on reaching land. Upon landing, each regiment will form in contiguous columns at a quarter distance and the batteries will in every case land with the divisions to which they are attached, as well as the proper detachment of sappers, with their tools to throw up field intrenchments, if required, with the utmost rapidity. The other divisions of the army will follow in their order, the boats returning to the ships to take them, but the cavalry will not land until specially ordered to do so. The artillery will be landed on "flats," as they are termed, consisting of pairs of boats with portable decks fitted to convey guns and horses, which only require to be put together by a party of shipwrights when the time comes for using them; these flats will then be towed in by steamers, and each of them will be attended by two pinnaces from the fleet, and, if possible, a cutter, for the purpose of assisting them, if requisite.

Those details will be dwelt upon with interest, because they give us the liveliest picture that can yet be obtained of the astonishing combined movement, which has, probably, ere this taken place. The fleet, having rallied off the Isle of Serpents on the 10th, proceeded on its voyage on the 11th, and by the 13th it may have reached its destination, provided the weather was favourable to the passage. It is one of the peculiarities of this expedition that we are still possessed of very imperfect information both as to the numbers of the Russian armies in the Crimea, the strength of their works of land defence, and the real aspect and productiveness of the country.

THE COURT.

After a journey of some 600 miles, achieved through the admirable arrangements of the Great Northern Railway Company, without any stoppage save those determined upon, her Majesty, together with her Court, arrived at Balmoral on Friday afternoon. Since their arrival, the Royal Family have frequently enjoyed the beauties of the picturesque scenery in the neighbourhood of the royal Scottish palace, availing themselves of the advantage of fine weather to take long walks and drives. The forests in the vicinity have been driven for deer, so that we may expect to hear shortly that some members of the royal party have been out stalking.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester continues at the Ranger's Lodge, in Richmond Park, and is, we rejoice to state, in the enjoyment of re-established health. The Royal Duchess takes almost daily drives in the beautiful vicinity of the park.

The Duke and Duchess of Hamilton and their youthful family, with the Grand Duchess Dowager Stephanie of Baden, are adjourning at Baden Baden. The statement that the noble duke had arrived from the Continent and gone to Bradrick Castle, Arran, is incorrect.

The Duke of Devonshire will continue at Chiswick until the close of the present month, when his grace proceeds to Brighton for the winter.

The Duke and Duchess of Norfolk, who are entertaining company at Glossop-hall, Derbyshire, intend to remain at that romantic seat until the first week in the ensuing month, when their graces are expected to proceed to Arundel Castle for the winter.

The Duchess of Cleveland and Lady Augusta Poullett have left town for Raby Castle, Durham, to meet the noble duke, who has returned from his shooting quarters on the borders of Yorkshire.

The Earl and Countess of Shaftesbury have arrived in town from Ems.

The Earl of Selkirk has arrived at Lisbon in the Coral Queen yacht, from Cowes.

The Marquis of Breadalbane has returned to his shooting quarters, Forest Lodge, Argyllshire, from Taymouth Castle, Perthshire.

The Earl and Countess of Kinnoull and family have left Rumpden House, Green-street, for Windsor, in which neighbourhood his lordship has taken a villa.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Ailesbury are entertaining a succession of visitors at Tottenham Park, near Marlborough, Wilts. The health of the noble marquis is greatly improved.

His Excellency the Marquis d'Azeglio, the Sardinian Minister, has returned to town from the Continent, after a brief absence.

His Excellency the Belgian Minister and Madame Van de Weyer and family are residing at Now Lodge, Windsor Forest, until the close of the ensuing month.

Viscountess Melbourne has gone on a visit to her ladyship's relatives in Germany.

Lord and Lady Montagu are staying at Coniston Hall, Ambleside, on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. J. Garth Marshall.

Mr. and Lady Agnes Duff are entertaining a large party at Countintyre, Bonfshire. Sir William and Lady Molesworth have been amongst the guests.

The Hon. Mrs. Frederic Walpole sailed in the Indus for Malta on Wednesday, en route to join her husband at Constantinople.

We are sorry to announce the demise of Sir George Arthur, Bart., who expired on Tuesday, at his town residence, after a lengthened illness. He is succeeded by his eldest son, Sir Frederick Arthur, Bart.

METROPOLIS.

QUARTER-DAY.—A change in the official quarter-day has been decided by the Lords of the Treasury, who, by a minute dated the 22nd of August last, have directed that "the payment of salaries which has hitherto been made for the quarters ending the 5th of January, 5th of April, 5th of July, and 10th of October in each year, should hereafter be made for the quarters ending the 30th of June, 30th of September, 31st of December, and 31st of March." This change has already taken place in the Post-office, and it is to be carried into effect in the Customs and Inland Revenue departments not later than the 31st of March next, on which day their lordships propose to alter the terminations of the quarters for the financial accounts.—Civil Service Gazette.

DISEASE OF CHOLERA.—(From the Registrar-General's Weekly Return.)—In the seven days extending from the 3rd to the 9th of September, the deaths of 3,413 persons were recorded, and 2,050 of the number were caused by cholera; which had, in partial eruptions all over London, destroyed in nine weeks, 5, 26, 133, 399, 644, 729, 817, 1,287, 2,050, or, in the aggregate, 6,120 lives. The outbreak began later than the corresponding outbreak of 1849, which, by the same date had, in 16 weeks, been fatal to 10,143 persons. Will the epidemic prove its ravages? Will it observe its own times, disregard the seasons, and exact its full tale of victims? Such were the questions that were asked with no little anxiety by those who watched over the public health during the last week; and the answer, notwithstanding the losses that are recorded, is on the whole satisfactory. The deaths from all causes have fallen from 3,413 to 2,836 in the week. The deaths from cholera, instead of 2,050, are 1,542, or 501 less than the deaths from the same cause in the preceding week. The total deaths in the present eruption have been 7,669; in the eruption of 1819, the deaths by cholera up to the same date, within one day, were 11,825. In both of the eruptions the mortality was highest on nearly the same day of September; its decline commenced in the corresponding week, and we may now sanguinely hope that it will descend as rapidly as it did in the Autumn of 1849. But no exertion should be spared to save the thousands whose lives are still threatened, and the dread lesson, before regarded so little, should never be forgotten—that men can no longer drink polluted water, breathe impure air, and neglect sanitary measures year after year, with impunity.

A VERY "HUMANE INDIVIDUAL."—James Davis, of No. 4, Long-lane, Brompton, was charged at the Westminster Police Court, on Saturday, with obtaining the sum of five shillings from George Raper, and twelve shillings from James Finch, under false and fraudulent pretences. It appeared from the evidence of George Raper, whose father is a hay-dealer at Denham, near Uxbridge, that he was coming along the Brompton-road towards Knightsbridge, a few days since, driving his horse and cart, when he met the defendant, who was walking. Defendant then came up authoritatively to him, and said that he belonged to the Humane Society, and that the horse had got a sore shoulder, and if he didn't give him five shillings he should take him to the station-house. He then went and paid for some liquor for him, and gave him five shillings. The horse had a sore shoulder, although the skin was not rubbed off. He met him that morning, and gave him into custody. James Finch, in the employ of Mr. Sage, a farmer near Uxbridge, said that he was coming along the Addison-road, Kensington, on the 18th of July, with his horse and cart, and met the prisoner, who said, "Hallo! old fellow, what have you got that cloth on the horse for?" Prisoner then examined the horse, and seeing two slight sores on the fetlock joints, he said he should get a policeman to look at the sores. Witness then took the prisoner to the Holland Arms, and gave him something to drink, when the latter said if the witness would give him a drop more of something to drink, and twelve shillings, he would not take him before a magistrate, and he might work the horse as long as he liked. —Mr. Simons, an inspector of the B. division, applied for a remand, as he had heard of similar cases, which, he had no doubt, could be brought home to the prisoner. —Mr. Broderip said he could not think how any man could be so simple as to give up his money to any person who chose to ask him for it. If he (witness) had had any sense about him, he would have told him to take him before a magistrate at once. —The prisoner, who had nothing to say, was remanded for a week.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—This theatre commenced its winter season on Monday evening, under the most auspicious circumstances. Previous to his departure for the provinces, where he has been fulfilling a round of engagements with great clat, Mr. Webster completed all his arrangements as to the re-decorating of the Adelphi. His instructions, dictated by a spirit of great liberality, have been faithfully carried out by those to whom they were given; and the present appearance of the theatre was the subject of much praise from the numerous audience assembled at the inauguration on Monday night, as well as the theme of a generally and warmly-expressed eulogium with the daily press. The performances commenced with the drama of "The Discarded Son," a description of which, and of the actors and actresses engaged in it, has already appeared in the columns of this journal. The novelty of the evening was the re-appearance, after some years, of Mr. Morris Barnett in the little drama entitled "Monsieur Jacques." Many theatrical seasons have come and gone, with their "ups and downs," since Mr. Morris Barnett made us alternately weep and laugh with his truthful delineation of the old Frenchman. The character of Monsieur Jacques is not of the ordinary stamp of Frenchmen, introduced into our dramas to raise a laugh by their whims and oddities. In the poverty-stricken haggard old man presented to us by Mr. Barnett we have a picture drawn and coloured to the life. The actor appears to have lost none of his force or expression by having garnered up his histrionic abilities for some years. As a relief to the more fearful portions of the little episode, there are certain flashes of a quaint old-fashioned merriment allowed, ever and anon, to sparkle in the actor's impersonation. Jacques is a strange mixture of grief and enthusiasm, not altogether without a certain amount of humour. On Monday night Mr. Morris Barnett met with that hearty reception which our playgoers—spite of their being sometimes decried—know so well how to accord to a trusty servant, and to one who still holds a place in "memory dear." To those who remembered this actor's first interpretation of the character, and the faux which it created, the performance was replete with pleasing associations; to those who witnessed Monsieur Jacques for the first time, it was a dramatic treat, full of mind and well-developed purpose. As we have stated on a former occasion, Mr. Barnett is engaged at this theatre for twelve firewell performances, previous to his visiting America, and we may safely recommend a visit to the little Adelphi during his brief sojourn. The performances concluded with the burlesque of "Norma."

MR. ALBERT SMITH.—The unrivalled "Ascent of Mont Blanc" reached the end of its long and prosperous season on Saturday the 16th inst., when the following speech was made by Mr. Smith:—"And now ladies and gentlemen, as it may be some little time before I have the pleasure of meeting you again, I hope you will bear with me for a few minutes longer, while I detain you, to offer, as your travelling servant, a few observations on matters connected with our journey during the three years I have had the honour of being in your service. I should not have intruded these remarks upon you, did I not feel that something beyond a mere expression of gratitude was due to you for the singular success that your support alone has enabled me to achieve. And in speaking of this success, I hope you will not think me egotistical in endeavouring, in some measure, to account for it from practical observation and experience. And I will, if you please, leave myself entirely out of the question, as regards my vocal and impersonating capabilities, and imagine that you came here simply to see some well-executed pictures of localities in which you took an interest, with such verbal explanations as might be pleasantly given, conveying a little information that might remain after the laugh had died away. For the diffusion of knowledge, instead of entertainment, was getting rather tiresome; in fact, there was great danger of instruction becoming a logic to frighten people away rather than attract them. When I first took the Egyptian-hall I found it a very dirty place indeed. The accumulated rubbish of Laplanders, Egyptian mummies, overland emigrants to California, Holy Land Bedouins, electro-biologists, and Gibleways, had something Augean in its magnitude; and the cellars below formed a perfect mausoleum of dead panoramas. I do not know how many thousands of miles of countries are lying beneath your feet. I have already explored there the whole of the Rhine, from the Alps to Rotterdam; the entire voyage from Liverpool to New York; the Dardanelles, Constantinople, and the Bosphorus; the route of the Overland Mail via Marseilles; and last week only, with the assistance of a spirited corps of six men, I took Sebastopol, and sent it off in a van to the North-Western Railway. Well, ladies and gentlemen, the hall was got into something like order, and then I determined on a little reform in the audience portion of the room, which, I believe, has had no small share in bringing about the result. In the first place, I abolished everything like fees to the attendants. Had I detected one taking anything from anybody, he would have been immediately dismissed. I consider at a place of public entertainment you are no more called upon to give anything to the person whose business it is to show you to the best available seat, than you have to the servant who gives you a chair when you call upon a friend. I then thought that offering the programmes might be an excuse for receiving fid. now and then; so, to shield you from this chance, I directed that the programmes should be about upon the seats, so that you might take them up yourselves—as many as you wished for. That this was for your advantage you will see, when I find that since the entertainment commenced nearly 300,000 persons have attended it. Had one-half of these taken bills, at 1d. each, the profits would have been £225. I next set my face entirely against the extortion—I can give it no milder name—of charging 1s. extra for a place taken beforehand. So much do I hold a contrary opinion that, before Mont Blanc commenced, I had some thoughts of making the price of places taken in advance 6d. less than those paid for at the doors, as one has a hawk cheaper by subscribing to it than by buying it at a book-seller's; because a great deal of trouble could be saved, and room more conveniently arranged for the comfort of an audience, when it was known how many were expected. The box bookkeeper was equally your servant as mine, in common with all the other attendants, paid a salary to be here for your own especial accommodation. Again, ladies and gentlemen, I endeavoured to keep the entertainment within such limits of time that amusement might not gradually flag into here; and I fixed the time of commencement at an hour possibly better suited to the habits of 1854 than of a century ago. I put a clock before you, that you might be your own timekeepers; and the few minutes of interval between the parts has been most punctually observed. And I hope you will allow me to say in addition, so anxious was I for this regularity to be observed, that during 838 representations, under every circumstance of health and spirits and business, I have never abridged the lecture of an important sentence, nor ever been half a minute behind my time. I have now closed the season, not because my friends had deserted me, but honestly for a short holiday. The pictures were getting worn out; the seats and carpets were getting worn out; and I was nearly worn out myself. I will start immediately for Chamouni, to see what fresh subjects of amusement or interest may be collected on the route, which will be entirely changed. Instead of the Paris and Strasburg line, I shall convey you to Switzerland by Amsterdam, Holland, and the Rhine, and thence by Berne to Geneva; and we shall stop, on our return, at Lyons and Paris. (Mr. Smith here read several communications, supposed to be from Mrs. Seymour, Mr. Pringle, Mr. Parker, and other characters of the entertainment.) And now, ladies and gentlemen, until the end of November, wishing you all the health and good spirits that I hope to enjoy myself, I bid you, most respectfully and gratefully, good-bye."

THEATRE ROYAL, BIRMINGHAM.—(Under the management of Mr. Simpson.)—The regular autumn season will commence on Monday next, September 25, when Madame Celeste and Mr. B. Webster, who are engaged for a few nights, will appear. So successful was Mr. Robson in exciting the admiration of playgoers, that the manager has re-engaged him for six nights more. Mr. Robson has added two other characters to his list—Mr. Gilman, in "The Happiest Day of my Life," and Mr. Touchwood, in "Hush Money"—both in his best style, as fresh and original as anything he has done. Mr. Robson has been very fairly supported by the company, especially by Miss Edwards, whose Marie de Fontenay and Mrs. Southdown Trotter, aided materially in Mr. Robson's success; Miss Laura Honey in "Hush Money" also acted with great vivacity. Mr. Robson's engagement terminates on Saturday.

BERLIN, Sept. 15.—The monster concert al fresco in the Thiergarten, on Wednesday, has brought in at least 16,000 thalers to the funds for the relief of the sufferers in Silesia. The Prince of Prussia has subscribed 1,000, various private individuals have subscribed 500 and 1,000, and one Fire and Life Assurance-office has made a donation of 10,000 thalers. The province of Silesia, however, contains 3,000,000 of inhabitants, and, though all are not ruined, there are not many who are not materially damaged by the floods.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—In spite of hard times, falling railway securities, failures, short crops, and an uncertain future, the debut of Mario and Grisi has been successful, both in the numbers attracted to the house and the reception of the artists. The place which Mr. Hackett was obliged to select for their first appearance, Castle Garden, although in some respects unequalled, surrounded as it is by water, with promenades from the galleries opening out on the bay, is too far down town for the convenience of a New York audience. Nobody confesses now to living below Washington-place, at least two miles above Castle Garden; and most of the fashionables live between there and two miles further on. It is true that the fashionables of 1854 have not quite as much money to spend as those of 1853 had; but times must be very hard indeed to keep a New-Yorker, as well as a Parisian, away from a place of amusement, if reasonably within his reach. Notwithstanding the remoteness of Castle Garden, it was crowded on Monday to excess, and the reception of the great artists must have been extremely gratifying to them. This is particularly pleasing to the more sober Americans, as Mr. Hackett's management has been of the old, gentlemanly kind, without the clappings of Barnum, and G. V. Braake's claqueurs. The opera selected for the first appearance was "Luceria" which is to be repeated through the week, and succeeded by "Norma" next week. The orchestra is highly praised. New York is now so full of foreigners, and the demand for good music in the salons is so great, that there is not much difficulty in establishing the opera on a metropolitan scale. In addition to the many and excellent theatres, we are to have this winter two Italian opera troupes with full orchestras and choruses.

PROVINCIAL.

TARQUAY RIFLE CORPS.—The monthly prize meetings of the members of the corps took place at Daddy's-Hole plain, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings last. The firing was most excellent, and clearly evinced a very great improvement in the use of the formidable rifle. The following is the prize list:—1st prize, two valuable pictures, framed and glazed, subject—"Dead Game," presented by Mr. Charles Way; won by Mr. Thomas Way. 2nd, valuable box of cigars, presented by Mr. Henry Narracot; won by Mr. Charles A. Rodway. 3rd, pocket-pistol, presented by Mr. Boss; won by Mr. Curtis Piller. 4th, 130 rounds of ammunition, presented by Mr. Daw; won by Mr. Ellis. 5th, silver pencil-case, presented by Mr. Charles A. Rodway; won by Mr. C. Way. 6th, 100 rounds of ammunition, presented by Mr. Marley; won by Mr. H. Vivian.

TOTAL DESTRUCTION OF MR. ASHBY'S MILL, AT BEDDINGTON, CROYDON.—The most extensive conflagration that has occurred in this part of the county of Surrey for many years, broke out on Tuesday morning, between the hours of twelve and one o'clock, which has resulted in the total demolition of the largest flour mill in Beddington, about three miles from this town. The premises in which the disaster originated were termed the Wellington Mills, and belonged to Mr. Bridges, of Red Lion-square, Holborn, but had for many years been in the occupancy of Mr. A. Ashby, the well-known flour merchant. The building was, at the least, from fifty to sixty feet high, of considerable length and width, and was an object of great attraction to travellers passing along the old Brighton-road, on account of the monster sails, that stood high in the air, by which the ponderous machinery in the premises was worked. From inquiries made on the spot, it appears that the mills contained a large quantity of flour, wheat, barley, oats, and, indeed, almost every description of grain. They were fitted up with several pairs of grinding-stones, two or three clearing machines, and a very extensive bolting machine, for dressing flour through wire, and another, equally as large, for dressing pulverised grain through cloth. The building, in the whole, was five stories high. Each floor at the time of the misfortune was, according to the statement of one of the millers, completely filled with goods of different sorts.

EXPLOSION AT THE POWDER MILLS AT CHILWORTH.—On Thursday morning last, at about ten o'clock, an explosion, which was distinctly heard for several miles around, took place at the Chilworth powder-mills, the property of Lord Lonsdale, leased by Samuel Sharp, Esq., of Tangleymoor. The following appear to have been the circumstances: Mr. James Upfold, foreman, who is about seventy years of age, and has been more than thirty years in the employ of the present and late manufacturers, was, at the time of the explosion, in a house adjacent to the mill, used for the purpose of a store-house, having originally been a "horse mill," to the purposes of which it has for several years ceased to be adapted. Not being aware that there was any powder dust in this place, Mr. Upfold was engaged in breaking or brushing with a chisel a quantity of black lead for the purpose of glazing the powder, when the instrument, coming into contact with a flint in one of the lumps, caused, as is supposed, a spark, which speedily communicated itself with the powder referred to, from thence to the composition and glazing houses and the lower mill, the two charges of 40lbs. each, under the stones, which are caused to operate by the water mill, instantly exploded with a very loud report. Mr. Upfold is, we regret to state, very seriously injured. In addition to being seriously burnt in the head, face, and body, by the first explosion, several of his ribs were broken by the falling of the gable-end of the barrel house, and when first perceived he was lying under it totally unable to move. From this position he was extricated by John Hedges, a workman at the mills, who observing that his clothes were still burning, placed him in a shallow part of the river, when the flames were speedily extinguished. Mr. Napper, surgeon, was at once sent for, but before his arrival Mr. Steinman, who chanced to be in the neighbourhood, visited the mills, and applied oil to the burns, and the ribs were subsequently set by Mr. Napper. The damage done is to the following extent: The composition house lured to the ground, the glazing and store houses blown down, and the roof of the lower mill blown off. With the exception of several pines shaken out of the windows of Chilverth Manor, the seat of R. A. C. Anstey, Esq., the damage sustained by the residences in the locality of the mills is inconsiderable.—South Eastern Gazette.

THE CHOLERA AT OXFORD.—This dreadful disease has, we regret to say, increased in its malignity since our last report, a great many persons of all classes having fallen victims to its virulence. The medical gentlemen have been most assiduous in their attendance on the sick, and some idea of the onerous duties they have to perform, may be inferred from the fact, that from the first break-out of the disease on the 7th of August, up to the present time, they have attended on upwards of 3,000 persons who have been seized with diarrhoea, choleraic diarrhoea, and cholera. The field of observation—where the families of those that have been attacked are removed, while their houses and yards undergo a thorough cleansing—has been rather thickly populated, no less than seventy children being there at one time. Burning beds and bedding, ordered by the medical gentlemen, has been very considerable. We understand that on Monday evening there were nineteen destroyed, besides blankets, sheets, &c. &c. Three fatal cases have, we are sorry to report, occurred in the county gaol; one was a poor fellow, whose term of imprisonment expired the day after he died. The workhouse has at present escaped, not a single case having been reported. Although many respectable people have been carried off, living in clean and healthy streets, &c., the disease has mostly been confined to courts and alleys, where filth and poverty have chiefly prevailed. The dwellings of some of the poor are of the most wretched description, and such heaps of filth have been discovered in close proximity to the houses, while badly-ventilated rooms, dirt and disease have been found inside, to such a degree, that no wonder the cholera should make its appearance in such filthy holes. The number of deaths up to last night (Monday) in the united parishes, amount to 47, while those in St. Giles's and St. Clement's are, we understand, 12. The fresh cases (yesterday) reported this morning, are, diarrhoea, 187; choleraic diarrhoea, 10; cholera, 10. The old cases remaining under treatment are as follows: diarrhoea, 170; choleraic diarrhoea, 7; cholera, 17. The Board of Guardians, with an increased staff of nurses and servants, are exerting themselves to the utmost, together with the medical gentlemen, to arrest the progress of the malady.

IRELAND.

DIABOLICAL ATTEMPT TO DESTROY EIGHT HUNDRED PERSONS.—A railway casualty, likely, but for the merciful interference of Divine Providence, to have been attended with fearful loss of life and limb, occurred on the evening of Friday, the 15th of September, on the Derry and Enniskillen Railway. A party of excursionists, composed principally of the Protestant population of Enniskillen and its neighbourhood, with the Earl of Enniskillen and some of the neighbouring gentry and clergy and ladies, proceeded in a very large train, drawn by two engines, to Derry, on a visit to the Protestants of that city. On their return home in the evening, about eight o'clock, as they approached the station at Trillick, the train at the time moving slowly, a slight shock was experienced, and the carriages suddenly brought to a stand still. On inquiring into the cause, it was found that the engines and tender were thrown off the rails into the adjacent field, and that this had been caused by several large stones, which had been, with an evident malicious intention, laid across the rails. One of the engine-drivers was found under the engine, the lower part of his body burning under the influence of the fire; all endeavours to extricate him were unavailing, and death soon terminated his sufferings. Two engine-men had their legs broken, and we are sorry to be obliged to add, that the Earl of Enniskillen, who was at the time on one of the engines, has received some severe bruises on his leg and thigh, but no further injury. His lordship was, under the care of Dr. Mahood, of Enniskillen, who was in the train, conveyed to a neighbouring farmer's house, and had his injuries attended to. After the nature of his lordship's injuries were ascertained, before he would allow anything to be done for his relief, he requested that Dr. Mahood should attend to the engine-men. We are happy to be able to state that he is progressing favourably, and has been removed to Florence Court, and that no injury of any kind has happened to the passengers in the carriages. The confusion attending the accident was for a time very great, in consequence of the darkness of the night and the ignorance of the locality on the part of the excursionists. After leaving the carriages, the passengers proceeded, some to Trillick, and some to the Ballinamallard station, whence, in the course of the night, they were taken to Enniskillen by a train. Cars and other conveyances were sent out from Enniskillen when news of the occurrence reached that town. The scene of the accident was an embankment of the railway about five hundred yards off the Trillick station, on the Derry side, and within four miles of Ballinamallard, where, in July, 1853, some disturbance took place between the Orangemen of the village and the railway navvies. Shortly after the accident happened, great fears were entertained that the boiler of one of the engines would burst in consequence of the steam not having been let off; but these fears were soon dissipated by the courage and presence of mind of Henry D'Arcy, jun., Esq., of Rosscarne, who mounted the engine, and let off the steam, which the indicator showed to be at a very dangerous degree of pressure. It appears that, under Divine Providence, the safety of the passengers may be attributed to two circumstances, namely, the slow rate of motion and the magnitude of the stones placed on the rails. It seems as if, when the engines and tender were capsized by the stones, the carriages running forward at a slow rate, were stopped by the same cause, and not overturned. Whatever be the mode, the escape was miraculous and providential. Had the travelling at the time been at the ordinary rate, or the stones much smaller, the loss of life and limb might have been immense. A large reward will be offered for the discovery of the miscreants who have thus attempted to sacrifice the lives of above 800 of the most respectable portion of the population of Enniskillen and its neighbourhood. It is reported here that the engine-driver who escaped states, that just before the accident occurred, from some cause or other, the train seemed as if it would not move forward, though both drivers were using their best exertions. So much was this experienced that the first driver called out to him to know if he was keeping back the train. Though the train was approaching Trillick station, it was not to have stopped until it came to Ballinamallard, four miles further. Suspicion has fallen on the navvies, and eleven persons have been taken up on suspicion. The engine-drivers and stokers were Protestants selected for the occasion.

CORK.—Orders have been sent to the senior officer on the Cork station for a portion of the Baltic fleet, on their return, to winter off Queenstown, Cove of Cork.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Thursday, Sept. 21.

The Emperor, on his departure for the south, gave special directions for the instant transmission of the expected intelligence from Sebastopol, which we look for every hour. The impression here is that it will not be taken this year, and that if it were, it would not terminate the war. Another campaign, and the occupation of St. Petersburg by the English and French, next summer, is confidently anticipated. We have had a great piece of scandal in that portion of the literary world of Paris, this week, connected with theatricals, which shows the extent to which the bribery system is submitted to here by artists weak enough to place their dependence on the purchased praises of the press, rather than on the legitimate influence of their talent with the public. In the present case, it is but fair to say that the lady who, as you will see, paid so highly for the panegyrics of the honorable journalist, is one whose qualifications fairly command high commendation, and, on many occasions, the warmest eulogiums a conscientious critic can reasonably bestow, though certainly not that extravagant admiration which newspaper writers, both in Paris and in London, appear to view with each other in bestowing upon opera-singers, in favour of whom their enthusiasm seems constantly soaring towards the realms of absurdity. In the following narrative, I shall neither give the name of the writer thus accused, nor of the journal compromised, and still less that of the lady who has only done what I believe is very common among Parisian artists. I presume, however, that the case is too flagrant and too disgraceful to be hushed-up or tided over as other charges of the same nature have already been, and that the name of the delinquent will be publicly exposed. With this little exordium I proceed to my narrative, which is merely a translation from a published statement of the affair. One day last week the acting proprietor of one of the leading journals was waited upon by the husband of a distinguished actress of the Grand Opera, who, having made his name known, proceeded to make the following categorical statement:—

"My wife being desirous of obtaining favourable notices of her performance from your theatrical critic, made over to that individual the sum of 8,000 francs per annum (£340). This treaty continued for some years; but some time back, in consequence of a change of circumstances, and the extreme dullness of theatrical attraction, she was obliged to make known to him that she could no longer continue the convention on such heavy terms, but was willing to continue it at a considerable reduction. These conditions were not entertained, and from that date to the present day your feuilletoniste has never deigned to notice his former protegee's existence. Not believing, Sir, that you countenance such conduct, or that you are aware of the nature of the traffic thus carried on, I have thought it but right to make you acquainted with this unworthy proceeding of a person in whom you place a certain degree of confidence."

"Are you prepared, Sir, to repeat before other witnesses what you have just stated to me?"

"Not only that, but I am perfectly ready to sign the statement after it has been taken down."

The proprietor of the journal immediately convoked a meeting of a dozen gentlemen, in whose presence the husband repeated his statement, which was so complete as to leave no room for doubt or hesitation as to its perfect truth; and after some little consultation the director proceeded at once to the residence of a gentleman of high literary reputation, acquainted him with the circumstances, and offered him the vacant post. With some hesitation on one side, and solicitation on the other, the arrangement was finally made, and M. — hastened to his late feuilletoniste to acquaint him with the change rendered necessary by the circumstances above described. All was now considered settled, and the new critic was about to assume his chair, when he learns, to his great astonishment, that his predecessor was reinstated in his critical office. This gentleman's surprise was, of course, participated in by all who had become acquainted with the facts of the case. What had taken place—what influence had been used to replace this honorable scribe in his influential position—is not yet known. The only fact disclosed yet on the subject is, that the accuser has taken his passports and quitted France.

Thus stands the first act of this singular drama; but we are promised further disclosures next week. It is not to be supposed possible that the respectable writers of the press will allow themselves to be degraded by permitting such a notorious case of corruption, or rather literary plunder, to remain unquestioned and unpunished. As for the journal, which has hitherto borne a character for honour and respectability, it will be for its directors to reconcile their present sanction of this dirty commerce with these estimable qualities. Next week, more on this ticklish subject.

Our poor theatres, which have been vegetating, rather than living, for many weeks past, are still struggling on. The Grand Opera does not improve in public favour, and will still further lose ground after the departure of Roger, who quits us next month. The Italians open on the 3rd, and will make it an awkward rival, though the troupe is not very promising, save in the persons of Mme. Bonie and a new contralto, Mme. Borghi-Manno, not yet heard here, but of whom the Italian papers speak highly. The Opera Comique has revived Herold's pretty opera, "Le Frémin Clerc," which now, very well sustained, will doubtless have a renewed success. The Odéon has re-opened with a new piece on a very old subject—no other than Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," not so well as I have seen it years and years ago at the Surrey Theatre. They should, in fact, never represent English numbers on the French stage; the mistakes are too ridiculous for credibility. It was, however, well acted in parts, particularly by Tisserant in Dr. Primrose, who, though as unlike our fine old vicar as possible, was effective, and much applauded. Among the noticeable vaudivilles at the minors, I may also name one of some merit at the Beaumarchais (near the Bastille). Its title is "Le Paradis Perdu," in which poor Milton is modernised after the last Parisian fashion. The Eden of the piece is a charming suburban villa, the seat of happiness, love, affluence, and all that make life desirable, which is invaded by the demon under the form of a fashionable seducer, who speedily spreads sorrow and desolation over the fairy scene. The idea is better than the execution, but it is decidedly successful; and its boldness has a dash of originality about it which, with the attraction of its title—for "Paradise Lost," is far better known in Paris than many Englishmen could possibly imagine—fills the little theatre to the ceiling every night.

We have been this week, like Macbeth, supping "full with horrors." In addition to the number of suicides which are now almost constantly detailed in La Gazette des Tribunaux, the whole town has been horrified by the frightful murder of poor M. Wahl, the Swiss watchmaker, who was extremely well known among the English in Paris, with whom he was much in the habit of dealing. His murderer is a kind of itinerant commission-agent, and one of the best men in the world (it is said), from his jovial manner and appearance, to be suspected of such a crime. There is no doubt of his guilt, and it is now known that on the night of the murder he had closed up the door and windows of his room, having invited his victim to spend the evening, previous to his arrival, but any cry or struggling might be heard by their neighbours. The murder appears to have been perpetrated by a single blow with an iron-shod bludgeon, inflicted on the back of the head. This formidable weapon was found in the street, on the same night, by the police. When picked up, some of the blood and hair of the unfortunate man was still adhering to the bludgeon, and there is no doubt that the crime had been carefully planned for some time in advance, as a letter from the assassin was found on the body, addressed to him at Geneva, begging of him to come to Paris as soon as possible with a large stock of gold watches, he (the writer) having a favourable occasion to dispose of a considerable number. Not the least extraordinary part of this frightful affair is, that it was committed in a lodging-house occupied by several other persons, and that nothing was heard or suspected of the bloody deed. The man who assisted him in disposing of the body is not supposed to have been present at the murder; but, being of known bad character, was applied to by the murderer for his advice and aid in getting rid of it, and received part of the booty. The old superstitious custom of confronting the prisoners with the corpse of the victim was resorted to on this occasion, but, as usual, with little success. A spectacle of this kind is much more likely to strike an innocent man with terror—always taken as a proof of guilt—than to make any impression on the wretch hardened enough to commit the crime. I shall be curious to learn if the jury who try this unredressed ruffian accompany the verdict with the words circumstances attenuantes—sincerely ever omitted in these days of pseudo-humanity.

MAZZINI.—We are authorised to state positively that the report of Mazzini's arrest at Basle is false, and that he is safe.

THE NEWS FROM THE EAST still engrosses public attention; Continental matters are for the moment disregarded. We therefore subjoin the most prominent items just received.

PERECOP.—On the 12th inst. a powder magazine exploded at Perecop. There is said to have been great loss of life on the part of the Russians; two vessels of the allies were also damaged.

ANAPA.—Since the 7th Anapa has been bombarded by the squadron under Admiral Lyons.

SEBASTOPOL.—The Fury is said to have fallen in with a Russian fleet, reconnoitering the German, or forty-eight English miles from Sebastopol, and to have escaped from it with difficulty.

THE MAIN FLEET OF THE ALLIES has sailed to Sebastopol, and on its arrival the Russian fleet, which lay outside, returned into port.

THE ENGLISH are said to have captured a Russian express steamer, with important dispatches, off Sebastopol.

AMONGST the desperate means of defence resorted to, it is said that the Russians have undermined all the ground in the vicinity of the outworks, and even at many points on the Chersonese coast, where a landing was thought likely or possible. In the expectation of great sacrifices and severe contests that must attend the attack upon Sebastopol, which is certain to make a most obstinate resistance, the commanders of the expedition have made every arrangement for the wounded, and orders have been sent to Constantinople to keep the hospitals in readiness for the reception of 10,000 men.

THERE is a rumour at Varna that the garrison of Odessa has contrived to send a very strong reinforcement to the garrison of Sebastopol. The English naval officers assert it is absurd to say so, and that if any reinforcement was sent, it must have been despatched by land round to the neck of the isthmus; but there may be many persons who insist on the truth of the story that these men were sent by sea while our fleets was at Baltchik; that they gave the blockading squadron the slip by night, and that they were conveyed in the large shallow vessels and floats used for loading ships with corn at the Danubian ports, which, keeping close in shore, managed to evade our cruises.

THE Lloyd has an interesting letter of the 1th from Varna. Only two or three steamers have remained, which will keep up the postal communication between Varna and the fleets. Just before their departure officers and men were bidden themselves with joy. The French officers embraced each other before the front, and the privates gave vent to their joy by tossing their caps into the air. The traces of the great fire are gradually disappearing. Great supplies of ammunition and provisions for the troops in the Dobrudzha are at Mangalia and Kestendje.

Prince Menschikoff has exhausted all means of defence in order to render Sebastopol impregnable, as well from the land as from the sea side. Between Sebastopol and Balaklava there are five strong detached forts, which are garrisoned by a sufficient number of troops. The road from Balaklava to Yalta is rendered impassable, and partly mined. The coast, between Sebastopol and Eupatoria, is defended at unequal distances by batteries consisting of six howitzers. There are three forts at Eupatoria, one on the north, a second on the east, and a third on the west side. That place is garrisoned by 15,000 men. The heights in front of Sebastopol, which are encircled by redoubts and trenches, are armed with eighteen batteries and defended by 20,000 men. The garrison of Sebastopol is only 10,000 strong; but, if we add to this number the crew of the fleet, the fortress is defended by 25,000 men. Prince Menschikoff issued a proclamation on the 3rd, in which he prepared the people for a resistance to the very last. The Prince first enumerates all the victories gained by the Russians in the course of this century, and then calls on his soldiers to show themselves equal to their predecessors in bravery and power of endurance. If the enemy, as a consequence of the inscrutable will of Heaven, should obtain a victory, then let the whole store of powder go with him into the air. The conclusion of the proclamation is, "Rather let us die than surrender to the enemy."

GRESSA.—The Fremden Blatt states that on the 13th all the strand batteries recently erected at Odessa were destroyed by part of the allied fleet.

CHANGES IN THE ARMY OF THE EAST.—Colonel Airey, late Brigadier-General of the 2nd brigade of the Light Division, has been appointed Quartermaster-General of the army, in the room of Lord De Ros, who has come home. Colonel Airey is to be succeeded in the command of his brigade by Major-General Colbrington, late Colonel of the Gurkha. Lieutenant-Colonel Wilbraham, 7th Regiment, has succeeded to the post of Adjutant-General to the 2nd Division, vacant by the death of Colonel Maule.

GALATZ.—The Presse states that, on the 7th inst., a Russian steamer landed a detachment of Cossacks at Galatz, who destroyed the magazines of the Danubian Steam Company, and seized the supply of coals. Philipposco, the commander of the Moldavian artillery, has been sent under escort to Russia. This measure has caused general indignation.

DAGHESTAN.—Prince Napoleon has sent Captain Manduit with 12,000 muskets to Schamyl.

KERTCH has been blockaded by Admiral Lyons since the 4th.

SHIPS, WITH TROOPS, are off the fortress of KINBURN and Island of TENDRA, near Odessa. This is doubtless with a view of intercepting any Russian reinforcements intended for the Crimea.

OPENING OF THE STATES-GENERAL OF HOLLAND.

THE HAGUE, Monday.—The States-General was opened yesterday by the King, when his Majesty delivered the following speech:—

GENTLEMEN,—I continue to receive from all foreign Powers marks of amity and friendship.

This fact, considering the present political position of Europe, is extremely satisfactory to me. The neutrality which we adopted has been strictly maintained; and, as we have scrupulously observed our obligations towards foreign States, we may, on our side, expect to see our rights respected. I have every reason to be satisfied with the army and navy, both services having distinguished themselves by great zeal and discipline in the fulfilment of their duties. The resistance to our authority which we have experienced from the Chinese in the island of Formosa, has, I am happy to say, been overcome by the valour of our troops. I trust this victory may have durable and beneficial results.

The general situation of our colonies is satisfactory, although the sanitary state of our Indian possessions has left much to be desired. The latest accounts from these colonies permit us to hope that the evil will be subdued by the prompt and efficacious measures adopted by the authorities.

The harvest in these colonies promises to be abundant, and, according to the reports received up to this time from the various provinces, the crops in our own country promise to be equally favourable.

I rejoice at the prospect of this abundance. It will contribute greatly to the reduction of the price of all alimentary substances, which I consider to be of the first importance.

We continue to improve the state of our rivers, and we are also actively engaged in amelioration of all water-ways of importance.

During the past year, the Netherlands have been brought into communication at two different points with the railroads of the neighbouring States, and there is every reason to hope that a third junction will soon be made. I pay particular attention to the development of this means of communication, which is so necessary to the trade and industry of the country.

Active measures are being taken for the augmentation of the telegraphic lines in the interior. These lines will be placed in communication with those of foreign States.

Notwithstanding the impediments caused by the present war to our commercial relations, our trade, navigation, and naval organisation, remain in as prosperous a condition as present unfavourable circumstances will permit. The financial position of the country continues to be satisfactory.

The results of the past year's accounts have not disappointed our expectations, and the accounts for the present year promise to be equally favourable.

After a careful examination of financial matters, you will be able to convince yourselves whether a diminution in the burdens of the country is practicable, in accordance with a wise policy.

The national debt should also undergo a similar investigation, with a view to its reduction.

Surrounded by the material prosperity which our native country, doubtless, possesses, the public instruction in arts and sciences should not be lost sight of. I continue to give this subject my most earnest solicitude. A project of law upon the first and second-class instruction will be laid before you in a short time.

The law relating to the superior classes of instruction will also undergo amelioration; and, finally, you will have ample opportunities of showing your zeal and interest in the different scientific institutions of our country.

Although our position is not wholly satisfactory, there are, happily, many circumstances which ought to encourage us. Let us acknowledge with gratitude the numerous blessings with which we are favoured. It depends mostly on ourselves as to how we enjoy them, and the length of their duration; and, in furtherance of this object, we must first of all entertain mutual confidence in each other, and preserve that union which will contribute to the welfare of our common country.

May God Almighty give us the necessary strength and wisdom to carry out this laudable object.

I declare the present Session of the States-General to be opened.

His Majesty returned to the palace at half-past one o'clock.

GREECE.

FURTHER DETAILS RESPECTING THE MURDER OF AN ENGLISH CONSUL.

ATHENS, Sept. 8.—On the 1st instant I mentioned the dreadful murder in Euboea of an English gentleman and lady, and also that Mr. Wyse, British minister here, had instantly taken measures to have a searching inquiry made into the affair. Mr. Merlin, the British vice-consul at Athens; Mr. Locock, attaché to the British mission; the Rev. Dr. Hill, chaplain; Major Tzonos, of the Athens gendarmerie; and M. Skalestiri, procurator of the Court of Appeal of Athens, were directed to embark on board her Majesty's war-steamer Medina, and to proceed to the spot where this tragedy had been perpetrated.

The Medina left the Piræus on the 31st of August, and the next evening arrived at Odras, the port of Xerochori, which town is about four miles from the village of Kastaniotiza, the property and residence of the late Mr. Leves. On the arrival of the commissioners, they learned that the murderers had been arrested and confessed their guilt. The infant child, only five months old, had been spared. The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leves had been buried twenty-four hours before the arrival of the commissioners, by the Greek authorities, at which ceremony, it is a positive fact, that Anagnosti Papa Efstathi, the instigator and chief perpetrator of the murders, assisted, and, according to the Greek custom, gave the corpse the last salutation, called the "kiss of peace." This person is only about twenty years of age, is the son of the Greek village priest, and himself a candidate for deacon's orders. He had been brought up from his youth by the Leves family, and frequently dined at their table, out of respect to the sacred calling of his father, although himself nothing more than a peasant. His accomplices were E. D. Souras (betrothed to his sister), D. Arvanitis, A. Tagatziki, and D. Capoglou, in all five. These wretches, on the night of the 23rd—29th August, which was dark and stormy, proceeded to the residence of Mr. Leves. Three of their number—viz., Anagnosti Papa Efstathi, Souras, and Arvanitis, climbed up to a low balcony, leaving the other two outside to guard against surprise. The bedroom window of Mr. and Mrs. Leves opened on this balcony, and was not secured by the outside shutter; the glass only was closed, and that not securely. One of them, Souras, rushed to the bed and held down Mrs. Leves, not, however, without alarming her husband, who had time to reach the door and seize one of two loaded muskets which he kept in the passage, and which he fired at Souras, but unfortunately the ball merely grazed his shoulder. Taking up the other gun, which it appears was merely loaded with very small shot, he attempted to re-enter the bedroom, but the light having been extinguished by the first discharge, it is supposed he must have slipped and fallen, discharging the gun without doing any injury to the assassins. He was then immediately overpowered, and after receiving several wounds from a knife, he was conducted into the other apartments, and was compelled to open the drawers and cupboards, the keys of which were found in his hand. Having thus obtained about $20, some silver spoons and forks, two watches, and other small articles, to the value altogether of about £20, they brought Mr. Leves back to his bedroom, and there finding that Anagnosti was recognised, they murdered them both, Souras killing Mr. Leves with a pistol, and Anagnosti shooting his wife. They then took to flight, being alarmed by the noise and firing outside, the alarm having been given to the villagers. The steward, who slept in a room in the courtyard, was too terrified to render his master any assistance beyond firing his gun from the window. The female servants took refuge with him. It is some slight consolation to know that this act was not caused by any motives of private dislike or revenge, Mr. Leves and his wife being universally respected and beloved by his villagers, who were so exasperated against the murderers that they would have torn them in pieces if they could have got at them. Two of these wretches, Souras and Arvanitis, were returned patriots, men who had escaped from the prison of Chalkida, where they had been confined for robbery; had joined the insurgents in Thessaly, and had afterwards been amnestied. Mr. Leves's house is on the side of a mountain, quite unprotected, and any of the doors and windows could be easily forced open with the hand. Mrs. Leves was a Miss Fletcher, of Manchester, a very superior and pious woman, and it is understood she brought her husband £4,000 for the purpose of improving this Euboea estate. There is no doubt but that the whole of the island of Euboea (Negropont) is in a very unsettled condition, and that if the Greek Government really wishes to put a stop to such crimes, some very energetic steps must be taken.

CHINA.

HONGKONG, July 22.—The mail of the 24th of May was received on the 8th inst. The 8th of June mail is anxiously looked for. In our last report, of the 6th inst., we mentioned that disaffection had shown itself at Fashan. We have now to report the capture of that large and important town by the insurgents, and, from its proximity to, and being the key to the trade of Canton, the news spread rapidly in the latter city, causing dismay and alarm on all sides. A perfect panic was produced among the natives, who have been removing their families and property during the last fortnight to Macao and Hongkong and other places in the interior for safety. The greatest anxiety exists for Canton, and, from the most reliable source of information we can obtain, the Government does not appear strong enough to hold out should an attempt be made upon the city, and already partial attacks have been made at the city gates. The country all round seems rising and in a state of disorganisation. Trade is at a perfect standstill, and the bankers and shroffs have closed their establishments. There are four vessels of war in front of Canton to protect the factories in case of need. Our advices from Canton of yesterday morning state that matters were very threatening, and fighting expected during the day. From Shanghai we have dates to the 15th inst. by her Majesty's steamer Barracouta, arrived yesterday. A better understanding had been established between the Imperial and rebel forces and foreigners, to prevent any future aggression on the settlement during the hostilities. Her Majesty's steamers Styx and Rattler returned from Nankin on the 7th inst., after a most unsatisfactory visit. The rebels, from all accounts, treated them with the utmost contempt, being refused entrance into Nankin, where they remained ten days, and were not allowed to have any coals, although there were large supplies on shore.

AUSTRALIANA.

MORE GOLD.—Five Australian vessels have arrived with gold—three from Port Phillip and two from Sydney, and the total quantity is 149,818 ounces, valued at £599,272. One vessel, the Briseis, in addition to 43,600 ounces of gold, has 10,000 sovereigns on freight. The other proportions are, Iudian Queen, 60,859; Nelson, 14,234; Washington Irving, 13,734; and Nile, 17,391 ounces.

COMMUNICATION BETWEEN BELFAST AND AUSTRALIA.—We have to-day to record the sailing of the first vessel which has left this port for Australia direct, the screw-steamer Ant having sailed for Melbourne on Saturday, the 9th instant, with a full cargo. The Ant is the property of Messrs. David Grainger and Son, and John Martin and Co., of this town, and is intended for the coasting trade in Port Phillip Bay.—Belfast Mercantile Journal.

THAMES.—The departures from the port of London for the Australian colonies during the past week have comprised fourteen vessels, six to Port Phillip, with an aggregate burden of 3,560 tons; four to Hobart Town, with an aggregate burden of 2,074 tons; two to Sydney, with an aggregate burden of 1,454 tons; one to Adelaide, of 836 tons; and one to Lanneaston, of 352 tons. Their total capacity was consequently 8,276 tons. The rates of freight exhibit increased firmness.

DISCOVERY.—From Adelaide, South Australia, the dates are to June 24; the only paragraph of interest worth extracting being the following from the Adelaide Times:—"The interest recently excited in England regarding the interior of New Holland, and the determination of the Government to promote another voyage of discovery, has not met much response from New South Wales or South Australia—the only Australian colonies directly interested in the unknown regions within their territories. An impulse, however, is likely to be given here from the circumstance that, within the last few weeks a party of stranger natives, six in number, strong, robust, and superior to the miserable race southward, crossed Lake Torrens at a shallow part, and reached a station on the north-west border. They were kindly received, but evidently without the least knowledge of Europeans, or of the native tribes on this side of the lake. They contrived, however, after a time, to make themselves so far understood as that among the hills they had left were plenty of kangaroos, white cockatoos, grass, water, and gum-trees. Indeed, recently white cockatoos have been observed to cross the lake from the north-west hills, visible in clear weather, from the known country. In fact, there is no reasonable doubt that in the direction indicated a rich and valuable country is to be found, and could be reached with very little difficulty. In our next we shall probably be enabled to speak more precisely on the subject."

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

The above court resumed its sittings on Monday, before the Right Hon. Thomas Stacey, Lord Mayor of the City of London; the Right Hon. J. A. S. Wortley, M.P., Recorder; Aldermen Sir G. Carroll, Sir J. Musgrove, and Kennard; Mr. Sheriff Wire, Mr. Sheriff Wallis, Mr. Under-Sheriff Anderton, &c. The first edition of the calendar contained the names of 103 prisoners.

Shortly after one of the first cases had been disposed of, the court was thrown into a state of the greatest excitement by an incident of a most extraordinary character. An elderly person, of most respectable appearance, who had been sitting on the seat under the Judges' bench, deliberately got up and walked to the counsel's table, and placing himself close to Mr. Giffard, who was the first gentleman on the seat, he said, in an earnest and solemn tone, "Do you remember Cardiff?" and at the same instant placed the muzzle of a pistol close to his cheek, and pulled the trigger. The weapon exploded with a slight report, and, from what was afterwards observed, it appeared that the bullet which it had contained had dropped from the barrel. The powder being thus scattered, the fatal intention was frustrated, and the effect of the discharge was merely to occasion a slight injury to the cheek of the learned gentleman who had been made the subject of so deadly an attack. For an instant the court was almost paralyzed, but there were speedy cries to seize the party, and Russell, one of the city detective policemen, and Rutland, who is an officer attached to the corporation, seized the prisoner. Mr. Sheriff Wallis at once directed that he should be searched, to see if he had any other deadly weapons about his person, and the prisoner with great coolness exclaimed, "Yes, I have another pistol," and added, "It is loaded," at the same time taking a pistol from his breast pocket and handing it to the officers; and upon its being examined, it was found to be loaded with ball. The escape of Mr. Giffard was most miraculous; for if this second weapon had been used instead of the other, some severe injury, if not loss of life, must necessarily have been the consequence. When he had recovered himself sufficiently he looked at his assailant, and was astonished to find that he was an utter stranger.—The prisoner, who exhibited the utmost composure, but whose appearance gave strong manifestations of insanity, was then removed to the sheriff's parlour, and Mr. Alderman Finnis and Sir J. Musgrove at once proceeded there to take the necessary depositions. The prisoner gave his name Hugh Pollard Willoughby, and said that he was the brother of Sir Henry Willoughby, and that he was a clergyman, and resided at Oxford. Upon his being searched, a gold watch and chain, £5 in gold, 12s. in silver, and four keys were found upon him. The prisoner expressed a desire to have the assistance of a gentleman of the bar; and, upon Mr. Sheriff Wire asking him the name of the gentleman whom he wished to be present, he first mentioned Mr. Clarkson, and, on being told that that gentleman had left the court, he named Mr. Bodkin, and then Mr. Ballantine. He was informed that these gentlemen had also gone away; but it turned out that Mr. Clarkson had not left the building, and he shortly afterwards entered the room, and upon his making an application to that effect, the prisoner was permitted to retire to the charge of an officer, and an opportunity was afforded him to have a private conference with the learned gentleman.—In the course of a few minutes the prisoner was brought back, and Mr. Clarkson, then addressing the presiding alderman, said, he believed there was no doubt that the prisoner had truly represented himself to be a clergyman, and that he was a man of family. He was not aware what course the magistrates might think it right to adopt under such extraordinary and exciting circumstances, but he said he would venture to suggest that the most advisable course to be taken was to have formal proof given in connexion with the charge against the prisoner, and then postpone any further inquiry to a future day.—Mr. Alderman Finnis said that he and Sir John Musgrove had considered what steps were the best to take, and they had agreed upon the course suggested by the learned counsel.—Mr. Clerk then took down briefly the depositions of the witnesses Russell and Rutland, and also the evidence of a gentleman named Hall, who was in the court at the time of the extraordinary occurrence.—Mr. Lilley, the barrister, who was sitting next to Mr. Giffard at the time the pistol was discharged, was likewise examined, and he stated that a portion of the exploded percussion-cap struck him in the face.—It should be stated that, at the commencement of the proceedings, Mr. Clarkson intimated that the assistance of an attorney would be requisite to obtain the necessary instructions, and Mr. Wortley consented to act in that capacity for the prisoner.—Mr. Clarkson, when the necessary evidence had been taken, addressed the bench, and said they would of course anticipate that, whatever might ultimately be urged as matter of defence, he should not attempt to give any answer at present. He inquired to what day the further hearing of the case would be postponed?—Alderman Finnis said, he should propose to adjourn the inquiry for a week, but, upon Mr. Clarkson stating that Saturday would be a more convenient day for him than Monday, the Bench consented to that day being fixed for the further hearing.—A warrant for the commitment of the prisoner to Newgate was then made out, and he was removed in custody.

THE CASE OF MADAME CARADORI.—On Thursday, Benjamin Sloman, a respectable-looking man, surrendered to take his trial for wilful and corrupt perjury.—Mr. Ballantine and Mr. Parry conducted the prosecution; Mr. Clarkson was counsel for the defence.—The defendant in this action had for many years filled the position of chief carpenter at Drury-lane Theatre, and the prosecution was instituted by Madame Caradori, the prima donna during the late opera season, and Signor Pavesi, who was one of the principal singers at the establishment. It will be remembered that a Mr. Jarrett hired the theatre of Mr. Smith, the lessee, for a hundred nights at the commencement of the season; but after the speculation had gone on for eighty-two nights it was found to be very unsuccessful, and Mr. Jarrett became insolvent. Madame Caradori, it would appear, was desirous of keeping faith with the public, and of continuing the theatre open; and an arrangement was made under which all the receipts were to be used first to pay the expenses of the building; then the workmen were to be paid in full; and if any surplus remained, it was to be divided among the principal artists, who were to receive one-third of their salaries. This arrangement did not answer, and Madame Caradori announced her intention not to sing after the 19th August, and on that day the theatre was closed. It appeared that on the morning of the 19th the defendant made an affidavit that Madame Caradori and Signor Pavesi owed him £29,188, and that they had told him they intended to leave the country; and upon this Madame Caradori and the Signor were taken into custody, and were not released until they paid £30 as debt and costs.—Madame Caradori and Signor Pavesi were examined, and they denied having told the defendant that they intended to leave England, or that they owed him anything. There appeared, however, to have been a deal of confusion in the arrangements after the retirement of Mr. Jarrett, and Signor Pavesi admitted that he had upon one occasion expressed an intention to go to Milan.—Mr. Clarkson, on behalf of the defendant, contended that there had been no corrupt or wilfully false statement made by the defendant, and that it was perfectly clear that the defendant had performed the duty of employing assistants, and doing all that was required in his position. He urged that the defendant might reasonably have supposed that Madame Caradori was the person who ought to have paid him; and although other persons might have been more to blame than he was, yet, under the circumstances, it was clear that he was only endeavouring to enforce what he considered to be a just claim.—The jury returned a verdict of "Not guilty."

RUGBY PETTY SESSIONS.

STRANGE ENCOUNTER WITH FOWL STEALERS.—Arthur Thomas Justice, a boatman, stood charged, on Thursday last, with stealing three fowls of the value of 6s., the property of Mr. R. Spencer, farmer, of Flecknoe. —Prosecutor deposed: On Thursday last, at one o'clock before sunrise, I was awake in consequence of hearing my fowls making a noise. I got out of bed and saw two men, one of whom was the prisoner, leaving my premises; one of them had a bag with him. I went to my son's room, and told him to get up immediately, and not stop to dress himself. He followed me down stairs. We put on our boots, and each took a gun. We had no other covering but our shirts. We gave chase across the farmyard, through the garden, and across the home close. The moon was shining, and the grass was white with frost. When we came up to the thieves, I said, "You scamps, you have been stealing my fowls." One of them said, "We have not." I said they should go back. They said they would not. My son attempted to take his man, and they had several rounds. My son appeared to have the best of it, as he was topmost when they fell. I knocked my man down, and kept him there. Presently my son cried out, saying that his man had struck him with a piece of iron several times on the head, and he must let him go, as the blood almost blinded him. I was, at that time, a-top of the prisoner, and seeing the other man run away, I reached my gun and shot at him; I aimed at his neck, and believe I hit it, as he ducked his head, and left his cap in the field; he, however, got away.—Robert Spencer, son of the prosecutor, whose head and face presented severe marks of unfair treatment, and was covered with strapping, corroborated his father's testimony; adding, that his man struck him with an iron windlass used by boatmen in raising the sluices at canal locks; that his shirt was torn from his back, and he had been badly and very weak from loss of blood. He had been to Birmingham to identify his assailant, but he would not speak a word, or he had no doubt but, from the peculiar gruff and slow tone of his voice, he could have sworn to him; he, however, believed the man he was shown was the one that he encountered.—The magistrate told the police inspector they expected him to produce the offender, who, no doubt, was a boatman, and ought to be forthcoming.—Prosecutor said the Oxford canal skirted his home close, and he had often deprecations committed by boatmen; that after the man ran away, he took hold of the prisoner and kept him till a policeman was sent for.—The fowls were produced and sworn to, and the prisoner fully committed to take his trial at the Coventry sessions.

Police Intelligence.

CITY POLICE COMMITTEE.

THE BROTHERS.—Mr. Joseph Robinson, of the Corn Exchange Hotel, Mark-lane, was summoned under the following circumstances.—Police-constable 66 stated that, at twenty minutes to one o'clock in the morning, he entered the defendant's house, and found two gentlemen drinking spirits-and-water. He asked the landlord if they were travellers, and he replied that they were lodgers; and that he had a right to keep open, and he should not close till three o'clock. He said if witness told his inspector, he would find it was all right, and he had no business in his (defendant's) house.—Police-constable 624 stated that he saw one of the gentlemen leave the hotel about half-past two o'clock.—The defendant said that the two guests were brothers-in-law, and one of them had come from Inverness, previously to going to India. They had not seen each other for some years, and he probably might never meet again.—In answer to the alderman, the police admitted that the defendant's house was very respectable and well conducted.—Alderman Cubitt said it was a pity Mr. Robinson did not give the same explanation to the police.—Mr. Robinson said that No. 66 was very abusive, and called him an "Impudent fellow."—The constable retorted the charge of insolence upon the defendant.—Alderman Cubitt said only one of the gentlemen was a lodger, and, therefore, the defendant must pay the costs.

GUILDHALL.

ASSAULT.—William Scully, a tall, athletic young fellow, was brought before Sir R. W. Carden, charged with assaulting police-constable Waller in the execution of his duty.—Sir R. W. Carden: I consider the assault fully proved. I shall commit you for one month with hard labour.—The prisoner was then removed, but in a short time the officer again brought him back, and stated that he was threatening to do for the officer when he came out of prison.—Prisoner: Have you anything else to say? I'll make you pay for this when I come out.—Sir R. W. Carden: Then, I shall require you, at the expiration of the month, to find two sureties in £10 each, and to enter into your own recognizance in £20 to keep the peace for three months, or be again committed to prison in default.—The prisoner then left the dock, muttering threats of vengeance against the officer; but in a few minutes afterwards the whole court was thrown into the utmost confusion by the door of the gaoler's room suddenly bursting open, and the officer rushing in with the prisoner clinging close to his neck, and attacking him with the ferocity of a tiger. Several officers instantly threw themselves upon the prisoner, who was soon overpowered and secured from further violence by being doubly handcuffed, in which state he was again placed at the bar.—Waller was then re-sworn, and said: I was standing in the gaoler's room, when the gaoler told me to take the prisoner down beneath the court, and I accordingly desired the prisoner to walk down stairs. He told me to go down first. I refused to do so, and insisted upon his going, upon which he drew closer to me, and raising both his hands at the same time, he struck me across the bridge of my nose. I caught hold of him, and he then tried to get my hand in his mouth, and actually grazed the skin of my hand in doing so.—Prisoner: Well, you lick me, going on in that manner.—Sir R. W. Carden: Then, do you think he would have seriously injured you if the persons who assisted you had not interfered?—Waller: I have no doubt of it, and if I had gone down stairs first, I think he would have injured me for life.—Sir R. W. Carden: The assault took place in court, and in my presence, but if you wish to ask the officer any questions you can do so now.—Prisoner: He told me to go down, and I wished him to show me the way. He said I knew it well enough, and struck me on the head with his staff, and I want to know if I am to be imposed on by that fellow because he has a spite against me. He has been at me for the last six months.—Sir R. W. Carden: We must protect our officers, and, whatever you do, you will always find the law too strong for you in the end.—Prisoner: I know that, but that is no reason why I should be hunted down like a dog by that man.—Sir R. W. Carden: I shall for the present remand you till Friday, and in the meantime consider whether I shall commit you to Newgate for trial for this second assault, or deal with it summarily.—Prisoner: You may send me to— if you like. I don't care where you send me.—Sir R. W. Carden: Take him away, officer, and see that he is kept securely handcuffed.

A BARBARIAN SHOT AT BY A CLERGYMAN.—At a later hour in the day an adjournment of this court was held at the Justice-hall, Sessions-house, Old Bailey, when the Rev. Hugh Pollard Wilton was charged, before Alderman Finnis and Sir J. Musgrave, with feloniously and maliciously shooting at and discharging a loaded pistol at Harlinge S. Giffard, Esq., barrister-at-law, with intent to murder him.—Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Wire were in attendance; and Mr. Parry, Mr. Sleigh, Mr. Cooper, and other members of the bar were present.—Mr. Clark, the clerk of the arraigns, took the depositions.—Mr. Clarkson, instructed by Mr. Wootton, conducted the defence of the prisoner, who appeared to be about fifty years of age, and exhibited not the slightest concern at the position in which he was placed.—The following was the evidence taken:—Police-sergeant Rutland, of the city force, said: I was present in the Old Court, Old Bailey, this afternoon, when I saw the prisoner fire a pistol at Mr. Giffard, who was sitting at the table usually occupied by barristers. I immediately got up to seize the prisoner, when Russell the police-constable laid hold of him. The prisoner said, "I have another pistol, which is loaded."—George Russell, of the detective force, said:—I was in court when the pistol was discharged. I immediately rushed upon the prisoner and secured him, after which I asked him if he had another pistol about him, and he said he had. I took it from his coat-pocket, and he told me it was loaded. It is a similar pistol to the one produced, and had a percussion cap on the nipple. I searched him, and found only £5 in gold, 12s. 6d. in silver, and 5½d. in copper, a portemonnaie, and a gold watch and chain.—James Tarbutt Hall said: I took the pistol from the last witness. It appears to be loaded.—Mr. Samuel Lilley said: I am a barrister, and was present in the court when the pistol was fired. I saw the prisoner present something at the head of Mr. Giffard, who was sitting next to me, and immediately afterwards heard an explosion and felt something strike me on the side of the cheek. I jumped up from my seat and saw a pistol, like the one produced, in the prisoner's hand. When he fired it he said to Mr. Giffard, "Do you remember Cardiff?" The prisoner was instantly seized. I observed that Mr. Giffard's face was blackened, apparently by the powder, and his cheek swollen, and a slight abrasure of the skin.—Mr. Clarkson said: As only sufficient evidence had been taken to justify the detention of the prisoner, he should recommend his client to offer no objection to the usual course being taken, and to reserve any observations he might have to offer for another opportunity.—Mr. Alderman Finnis asked if the bullet had been found, and by whom; as it was important to show how the pistol was loaded?—Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Wire said, the bullet as well as the pistols were all carefully searched up, and would be forthcoming at the next examination.—The city solicitor said, he was in possession of all the necessary information, as well as the names of the witnesses that would be required to prove the fact of the pistol having been loaded with ball.—The prisoner was then remanded to be brought up to this court for further examination, and was accordingly consigned to the care of the keeper of Newgate in the interim.—The prisoner displayed great calmness of demeanour throughout, and at the termination of the proceedings applied for his watch to be restored to him.—Mr. Clarkson said his property would all be delivered up to him at the proper time.—The prisoner then left the room in company with the officers of the prison, and such was his self-possession that he turned back to remind one of the officers to bring his umbrella after him.

MADAME GEORGE SAND'S "Story of her Life," which has long been anticipated as an interesting event in literature, is at length announced for publication in the feuilleton of La Presse, to be commenced on the 4th of October. It was completed several years ago, and fills altogether five volumes. The proprietors of La Presse have paid £4,000 for the copyright.

Shooting. By ROBERT BLAKEY, and Fish and Fishing in the Lone Glens of Scotland. By R. KNOX, M.D. George Routledge and Co.

These are two capital hand-books, well illustrated. The former is written with clearness and brevity, and is amply sufficient to impart to the young and aspiring sportsman such a bird's-eye view of the chief things he has to learn and attend to, as will greatly facilitate his acquisition of the whole art of shooting game of every kind. The second work is a delightful little book, written by a man whose great knowledge of the subject upon which he treats is ample guarantee for its value, and whose style of writing is as pleasing as to render a book which is invaluable to the angler a pleasant companion for the general reader.

The Amateur Gardener. By the Rev. H. BURGESS, LL. D. A. and C. Black, Edinburgh.

The substance of this work appeared in the Gardener's Chronicle, during the years 1846-9. They were papers written at the request of Dr. Lindley, and are equally interesting and instructive to a very large class of persons of both sexes, who cultivate their own garden. Mr. Burgess is an amateur, who has gathered his experience in cultivating a garden of considerable extent and variety, and conveys his information in a style totally removed from any rules and details, but amply sufficient to increase a taste for a refining and healthy employment. This volume is extremely well got up, and beautifully printed.

Moubray's Treatise on Domestic and Ornamental Poultry. Arthur Hall, Virtue, and Co.

This is the tenth edition of a very valuable work, and is well adapted to the requirements of the day. The editor, Mr. L. A. Meall, has made no attempt, by the aid of fine writing, to invest the subject with an undue interest, his sole object having been to follow in the author's steps, and to produce as useful and practical a work as possible, from which the novice and the experienced amateur may derive information and assistance in the pursuit of poultry-keeping. Every fact and statement has been fully investigated, and well he has executed his task. The book contains a great quantity of information on the breeding and treatment of poultry, is well illustrated by C. J. Winter, of Yarmouth, and the treatise on the diseases of poultry by F. R. Horner, Esq., M.D., is a valuable addition to the work.

The Crystal Palace Guide-Book.

The second edition of the General Guide-Book has just appeared, the first of 100,000 copies having run out. From the unfinished state of the Palace, the work in its original form was necessarily in many points defective, but the rapid sale shows that, upon the whole, it has answered its purpose remarkably well. A similar success for the new edition may be anticipated with great confidence, for it supplies almost every important omission, corrects the errors of its predecessor, and is not only excellently adapted for the specific purpose for which it was written, but is an interesting volume to read away from Sydenham. The contents of the first were necessarily, in a great measure, anticipatory when prepared for the press, and the present one also, in some respects, partakes of that character, but not to any objectionable extent; and one might almost fancy that Mr. Phillips was slyly pointing out where portions of the work ought to have been finished when he describes them as actually completed. Among the more important additions made to the volume in its new form may be mentioned—a clear account of the different modes of conveyance to the Palace by rail and road; a note (much required) informing visitors how they are to proceed through the building; a tariff of the charges in the refreshment department, which it is good policy thus to make public; ground plans of the interior, as a whole, of the Architectural Courts separately, of the Natural History department, of the Garden, and of the Geological Island, with the animals and their names marked; lately, complete lists of all the portraits, statues, and busts, and of the exhibitors in the different Industrial Courts and Galleries. It is quite unnecessary to point out the value of these improvements, and we have only to add that in the introduction Mr. Huxtable and Mr. Cochrane, who by an extraordinary omission were not mentioned in the first edition, are now named with due honour as the constructors of the Palace.

The Life of Admiral Viscount Exmouth. By EDWARD OSLER, Esq. (A New and Revised Edition.) G. Routledge and Co.

Among the great sea officers whose names are associated with the most glorious annals of their country, few have higher claims upon our admiration and gratitude than Admiral Lord Exmouth. This distinguished officer took a prominent part in many of those naval engagements which gave to the British flag the command of every sea; and to his personal bravery and high professional ability, in great part, may be attributed the destruction of the fortress of Algiers, which, like the Sebastopol and Cronstadt of our day, was deemed impregnable. At a period like the present, when the efficiency of the naval service is a point of the most vital importance, it is for many reasons desirable that increased publicity should be given to the lives and actions of such men as Lord Exmouth. Mr. Osler has contributed to this object by the timely issue of the present edition, which has been prepared at the desire, and with the assistance, of Lord Exmouth's family. The volume is full of interesting narratives of the late war, and contains many incidents relating to points of service, supplied or corrected by officers personally engaged. The book also contains a portrait of Lord Exmouth, from the original picture by Owen, R.A.

Mark's Reef. By J. F. COOPER. Thomas Hodson.

The Sea Lions; or, The Lost Sealers. By J. F. COOPER. Thomas Hodson.

Mr. Cooper's works have attained extraordinary popularity, not only in the country in which they were originally published, but on the Continent and in the States of America. "Mark's Reef," and the narrative of the "Lost Sealers," are certainly not equal in power to his earlier productions, but are, nevertheless, tales of deep interest, and many of the scenes described in them will bear comparison with the best specimens of the author's style.

FINE ARTS.

We advise all lovers of the arts to see the "Sleeping Venus," at Mr. Barratt's, 369, Strand, which, we think, he is perfectly justified in attributing to Titian. It is presumed to be the picture mentioned in Bryan's "Dictionary of Painters," vol. ii., p. 482: "The pictures which Titian painted in Spain, and those he sent thither, form of themselves a large and magnificent collection. The catalogue of the Escorial, and of the palace at Madrid, give but a very imperfect idea of the works of Titian in Spain. Many, and some of those the finest, of his productions have been withdrawn from public view by the scruples of bigotry, among which is the miniature picture of the 'Sleeping Venus,' which was made a present by Philip IV. to King Charles I., when Prince of Wales, on his visiting Spain, and which, after the death of that unhappy monarch, was purchased by the Spanish Ambassador, then resident in England. This admirable picture was one of the few works of art which escaped the conflagration of the Palace of the Prado, and it is reported by Palamino that when the dreadful accident was reported to the King, he earnestly demanded if 'the Titian Venus' had escaped the flames.' On being assured that it was safe, he calmly replied, 'Then every other loss may be supported.'"

F. JOYCE'S

ANTI-CORROSIVE PERCUSSION CAPS.

THE Nobility, Gentry, and Sporting World at large, are respectfully informed that these well-tried Detonators, warranted in every respect, which have now stood the test of many years' experience, both at home and abroad, may be had as usual of Messrs. J. Blanch and Son, 29, Gracechurch-street; J. C. Beckwith, 38, Skinner-street; Parker, Field, and Sons, 233, High Holborn; J. C. Reilly, 502, New Oxford-street; B. Cogswell, 224, Strand; W. Moore and Grey, 43, Bond-street; S. Nock and Co., Jermy-street; H. Tatham, 37, Charing-cross; T. Boss, 73, St. James's-street; and of most respectable Gun-makers and Dealers in Gunpowder throughout the United Kingdom. To prevent accident and disappointment to purchasers, from the use of spurious imitations, they are requested to observe the Name and Address of F. JOYCE, ORIGINAL INVENTOR AND SOLE MANUFACTURER, on each Sealed Packet, without which they are not genuine. This precaution is rendered necessary by some unprincipled individuals having imitated the Labels and Wrappers.

Tubes, Foil Covered Caps, Wire Cartridges, and Waddings of every description.

WATER POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Du K, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar chasms throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

March 10, 1852.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I am glad to state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many ladders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

FISH CULTURE by SCIENCE AND ART.—BUCCIUS, the original successful promoter of Artificial Fish Culture, has his Patent Breeding Apparatus, made of Gutta Percha, ready for Sale and Delivery, at Messrs. Thorne and Co.'s, Sole Manufacturers, No. 38, New Bond-street, London. Mr. Buccijs begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that he continues to make Surveys of rivers, streams, and ponds, on moderate terms; and give directions and instructions for restoring and re-stocking the same after his economical system. Fisheries can be re-stocked in one season, as the apparatus, although requiring but a small space, is capable of breeding out tens of thousands of salmon, trout, and other fish.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.
THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Peat Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at 4s. per ton, and, in quantities less than half a ton, at 5s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Terminal of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GILLES and Co., No. 26, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seedsmen, Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

TUESDAY'S SALE OF HORSES, CARRIAGES, &c., BY AUCTION.—Upwards of 10 HORSES each week at the GREAT CENTRAL HORSE and CARRIAGE REPOSITORY, ST. GEORGE'S-ROAD, LONDON.—The most extensive Commission Mart in London.

The Proprietor begs respectfully to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that the above Establishment is open for carrying on a legitimate Commission Business in the disposal of Horses, Carriages, &c., by Private Treaty, Daily. Also BY AUCTION, EVERY TUESDAY, commencing at Twelve o'clock precisely, according to Conditions exhibited on the Premises, which have been built regardless of expense, with latest improvements for ventilation, drainage, &c. The Accommodation and Attention are admitted to be superior to any similar Establishment in London; the situation is central—at a junction of seven leading thoroughfares to all parts of the Metropolis, and One Mile from the London Bridges.

The Proprietor assures the Public there is no dealing permitted by himself or any person connected with his repository, or misrepresentation of ownership of horses resorted to: thus the interests of both Buyers and Sellers are equally and completely protected.

Horses taken from any of the London Railway Stations without any charge to the owner.

A choice of over 100 Horses, varied Duns, consisting of Hunters, Hackers, Cabs, Harness Horses, Ponies, &c., also Cart and Van Horses, may be inspected, and trials allowed for every purpose on the Premises, prior to purchase.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so often harmful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with such ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to be forwarded) by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips, letting down to the manufacturer, Mr. Wm. Wm., 225, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a single truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Double ditto, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Post-office orders to be made payable to JAMES Wm., Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS.—The material of which they are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly ELASTIC and COMPRESSIBLE, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, VARIKOSE VEINS, SPRAINS, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each. Postage, 6d.

TO SPORTSMEN.—Her Majesty's

Royal Letters Patent, for valuable and extraordinary improvements in the most powerful and brilliant Telescopes, Camp, Opera, Harp-course, and Perspective Glasses, to know the distances of objects viewed through them—of great importance to Sportsmen, the Army, Navy, and others. Messrs. S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Abchurch-lane, Piccadilly. Observe—Opposite the York Hotel. These Telescopes possess such extraordinary powers, that some three-and-a-half inches with an extra eye-piece will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double stars. With the same Telescope can be seen a person's countenance three-and-a-half miles distant, and an object from sixteen to twenty miles. They are of larger, and all sizes, with increasing powers accordingly.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION, 1851.—A valuable, newly-invented, very small powerful water-tight pocket glass, the size of a walnut, by which a person can be seen and known one-and-a-half miles distant. They answer every purpose on the race-course, at the open-house, country scenery, and ships are clearly seen at twelve to twenty miles. They are invaluable for shooting, deer-stalking, yachting, to sportsmen, gentlemen, gamekeepers, and tourists. Opera and Harp-course Perspective Glasses, with wonderful powers; an object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant. Newly-invented Spectacles. The most useful detective sight is brought to its youthful, natural, and original state. Invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme deafness.—39, Abchurch-lane, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

HEALTH RESTORED.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—An Extraordinary Cure of Dropsy, after suffering for eighteen months.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. Briggs, Chemist, Gough, dated February 15th, 1853.

TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of Dropsy, recently effected by your valuable medicine. Captain Jackson, of this place, was afflicted with dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swollen, and water issued as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary. Notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all was of no avail, until he commenced using your Pills, by which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured, and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.

I am, Sir, your respectfully,

I am, Sir, your respectfully,

Signed G. BRIGGS.

THE FIELD SUPPLEMENT

VOL. IV.—No. 91.]

[GRATIS.]

THE FIELD OF WAR.

THE BLACK SEA.

THE EXPEDITION TO SEBASTOPOL.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

Camp Varna, 30th August, 1854.

SIR,—In my last letter, dated Yeni-bazaar, the 23rd inst., I stated the general despondency among our troops, in consequence of the state of inactivity in which we were kept, joined with the prevalence of the epidemic and its fearful ravages among us. I am now, however, happy to inform you that the former evil is entirely removed, and its influence has contributed very wonderfully to mitigate the severity of the latter. On the 25th, Captain Wetherall, Deputy-Quarter-master-General, arrived at Yeni-bazaar, bearing the welcome order for the immediate march of the brigade to Varna for embarkation for Sebastopol. Nothing could have been more opportune; and if the order had been for their immediate return to England, the troops would not have felt half the satisfaction and pleasure. It is impossible to attempt to describe the transition from gloom and despondency to pleasure and hilarity apparent on every countenance; the song and hearty laugh once more resounded from tent to tent along the lines, the convalescent became suddenly well, and even the sick felt better, through the hope that by the time we reached Varna they would be able to resume their places among their comrades. At an early hour on the 26th, the brigade marched from Yeni-bazaar, and on the 29th arrived in Varna, and tomorrow will embark for the doomed fortress. There are about 25,000 troops already afloat, waiting in Baltschik Bay for the whole to move up. The Guards, Rifles, and Horse Artillery are embarking to-day, and the light cavalry brigade tomorrow, which will complete the first contingent for this enterprise. The heavy cavalry regiments remain encamped at Varna for the present, with Sir De Lacy Evans's division of infantry and some other infantry brigades.

Within the last week cholera has very much abated, though diarrhoea is still too prevalent. The fine old regiment, the 5th Dragoon Guards, in consequence of being so disabled by cholera and sickness among the men, and glanders among the horses, has for the present been suspended as a regiment, and is now attached to the 4th Dragoon Guards, as a squadron.

My next will be, I trust, from Sebastopol, with the British and French flags floating over its walls. You will, no doubt, have heard of its fall in England before receiving this, by which time, too, it is to be feared, many hundreds of England's sons will have paid their country the last offering of duty and devotion.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE FORCES.

We are already enabled to lay before our readers the "INSTRUCTIONS" issued to our troops on leaving Varna. They are dated Sept. 3.

INSTRUCTIONS.

1. The invasion of the Crimea having been determined upon, the troops will embark in such ships as shall be provided for their conveyance, which will rendezvous at Bal-djik, and proceed with the combined fleets to their destination.

2. In an operation of so much difficulty it is essential that the arrangements made should be attentively considered and thoroughly understood by the officers who are responsible for their execution, and should be strictly carried out without any alteration or the exercise of discretion by any subordinate officer. Otherwise confusion would ensue, and the worst consequences might be apprehended.

3. When the troops are directed to land they are to enter the boats in the order in which they stand in the ranks.

4. They are to sit or stand, according as they may be desired, and when once placed are to remain perfectly still, as well as silent.

5. They are to take their knapsacks with them, but not on them, and on leaving the boats they will either put them on, or place them on the beach in the order in which they stand, according as they may be directed.

6. The blanket will, in the first instance, be left on board, folded, and labelled with the regimental number of each soldier.

7. The regiments will form in contiguous columns, at quarter distance.

8. They will not land until they have landed, and not then until they are ordered.

9. The spare ammunition (first reserve) will be disposed of as directed in the accompanying memorandum, and will be in charge of an officer of the field train department.

10. The horses provided for the service will be landed after the troops have disembarked.

11. Three days' bread and three days' salt meat, ready cooked, are to be carried both by officers and men, and the men will have their canteens filled with water.

12. The water bags will also be landed and placed with the reserve ammunition, and the horses appointed for them, if they can be taken, of which there is at present some doubt, will be got on shore as soon as possible.

13. It is necessary that officers should take on shore, in the first instance, such articles only as they can carry themselves.

14. The servants of officers are not only on all occasions of service to be present under arms with the regiments to which they belong, but they are to carry no more than any other soldier, and they are to mount all picquets and guards with their masters.

15. Mounted officers alone will be entitled to batmen.

16. The medical staff attached to the divisions and brigades will land with them.

17. The batteries will land with the divisions to which they are attached, as well as the sappers similarly situated; and the latter will bring with them a due proportion of entrenching tools.

18. The Light Division will land first. Four companies of the 2d battalion Rifle Brigade will be attached to each of its brigades, and will form the advance.

19. The First Division will follow, then the second, the third, and the fourth.

20. The cavalry will be ready to land; but will not disembark until they receive special directions to do so. They will take with them three days' corn and forage.

21. Provisions will be made by the naval authorities for the disembarkation of the due proportion of the horses of the officers of the staff, and these officers are recommended to take upon their horses three days' corn and forage.

THE ORDER OF LANDING.

When the troops are in the boats they will form on the off-shore side of the ships from which they disembark, ready to form the line abreast, on the signal being made from the Agamemnon.

The boats are to keep a space twenty feet clear of the oars of each other; care to be taken to observe the signals, that "to form" may not be mistaken for "advance." All officers of boats will distinctly understand that they are to be on the look-out for orders and signals from their respective commanding officers of their divisions, following each other, and never proceeding in execution of the signal until it be hauled down by the senior officer.

The form of advance will be in line, abreast, and the greatest care will be taken to preserve the line, that no boat advance beyond it, or fall into the rear; but all will pull in to the shore stontly and steadily, preserving the strictest silence. All boats towed to land on the port side of the boat towing them.

The divisions, as in the general regulations, will be as follows, viz. :—

First Division.—All launches and Turkish pinnaces from the sailing ships of the fleet, commencing with Britannia's boats on the extreme right, and ending with the Diomed's troop boats, on the left of the division.

Second Division.—All paddle-box boats of the war steamers towed by their own cutters, commencing with the Furios on the right of the division, and terminating with the Fury on the left.

Third Division.—All boats of the transport service, commencing with the boats of the Emperor on the right of the division, and ending with the Gertrude on the left; excepting the ships Monarchy, No. 60; Harkaway, 30; Talavera, 93; Mary Ann, 42; Calliope 42; Rehnuga, 44; which are not to send boats until they are cleared of their artillery that land with a light division; after which their boats will proceed to the ships pointed out to them.

The first division will take the right,

The third division the centre,

The second division on the left of the line.

The Emperor's boat next to Diamond's, the first boat on the right, and the Gertrude's, No. 54, the last boat on the left.

The Furios the first boat on the right, next to Gertrude's, and the Fury's the last boat on the left.

ARRANGEMENTS

To be carried out for the assembling at first rendezvous; anchoring off the enemy's territory, and disembarking the army and material.

1. The whole fleet, containing the army, to assemble at Baldjik, anchored by divisions as they are now told off, with the steamers appointed to take ships in tow to seaward of the ships to be towed.

2. The squadron of ships of war immediately attached to, and directing the expedition, to be anchored together, on the right or left, as the admiral may decide, excepting those war steamers appointed to tow transports, which are to be in their places as above.

3. That the main body of the fleet be apart from (to the right or left of) the division of transports, as the admiral shall decide, but on the opposite side to that on which are the ships immediately conducting the expedition.

4. That one steamer of war be attached to each division, for the purpose of rendering any required assistance whilst at sea, and that the Triton and Spitfire be told off to anchor as points of moorings, for the light division, and a general guide to the others.

DESTRUCTION OF FORT TSHAS, BLACK SEA.

6. That the towing steamers only of each division carry at their mizens, during the night, the number of lights, vertical, corresponding to their divisions; the light division carrying two lights horizontal.

6. That all ships of war, carrying pairs of boats for which portable decks are fitted for guns and horses, have a party of shipwrights told off to them, well instructed as to the quickest mode of putting them together, and, when ready for service, a crew of six seamen be appointed to each.

7. That all boats of the pinnace size and upwards, including flats and paddle-box boats, be provided with grapnels, or small anchors, and their cables; that all masts, sails, awnings, and superfluous gear be taken out, and that all the oars be slung, so that they may be thrown out over the side of the boat as she approaches the beach. That every boat be provided with at least four breakers of water.

8. The small steam-tugs to be in tow of larger vessels, in twos or threes, with moderate steam up in each, to prevent collision.

9. Launches and paddle-box boats to have crews; pinnaces and cutters to be full manned. The small cutters to be attached to the paddle-box boats, one to each, for towing and assisting, if requisite.

Niger's to attend Spitfire's.

Tribune's to attend Triton's.

Highflyer's to attend Cyclops's.

Two pinnaces to be told off to each large flat landing the artillery, and one to each small flat. Each launch to be attended by a cutter from the same ship, for towing and rendering any required assistance.

10. That the boats of the fleet to land infantry be classed in divisions:—launches and troop boats in one, steamer's paddle-box boats in another, boats of transport service in a third.

11. That a lieutenant be sent from each steamer of war, in charge of her paddle-box boats and cutters; a midshipman in each boat, where possible, or an intelligent petty officer; and a lieutenant in each launch, and a lieutenant in charge of pinnaces.

12. All officers to have written copies of these instructions.

13. All boats' crews to carry their day's provisions in their haversacks, and their day's spirits in a small breaker.

14. Each ship, as she is clear, to haul down her distinguishing flag, to prevent the possibility of boats returning to an empty vessel; and when artillery ships haul down their distinguishing flag, which intimates that they are clear, the artillery ships of the next division to be cleared are to haul their ensigns down from the gaff and hoist them at the mizen, in order that the steam-tugs towing artillery flats may have no difficulty in finding the vessels.

15. That all transports carrying artillery be marked with the letter A, and the number of the division to which they belong, in large characters, on both sides, amidships, in white.

That all ships carrying infantry have the number of the regiment, with the letter R, on both sides of the ship, amidships; and ships with cavalry a large C, with the number of the regiment.

16. The disembarkation of the infantry and artillery to be conducted by one officer commanding each, two commanders for boats of ships of war, and a commander to every forty-six boats of transports, with a lieutenant to each sixteen from the transport service. The boats of each commander commanding a division, as well as the senior officer, to have staffs of sufficient length to carry four of the naval boat's signal flags.

The senior captain or commanding officer to be in the cutter.

17. All boats to carry the ensigns of their division assigned, except the boats of transport service; the infantry flag in the bows, and to be provided with answering pennants.

The ships carrying the divisional staff to hoist their ensigns at the main; the ships carrying the general staff to hoist the merchant union-jack at the main.

MEDICAL MEMORANDUM.

[The following memorandum, issued from the office of the Inspector-General of Hospitals, is of peculiar interest, containing, as it does, most minute instructions for the care of wounded soldiers.]

The ambulance equipment for one division of the army, consisting of two brigades of three battalions each—the battalions being 800 strong, should consist of two large store waggons, to be under the care of a purveyor's clerk, at the head-quarters of the division. These waggons to contain a reserve supply of medicines, materials, medical comforts, tents, and bedding. Each battalion surgeon should have a pack-horse for the conveyance of his instruments, a few medical comforts for immediate use; such as a bottle of brandy, ½ lb. of tea, ½ lb. of sugar, and 4 oz. of arrowroot, a few tins of essence of beef, some medicines, and a supply of surgical materials agreeably to the printed scale laid down in the regulations. A spring wagon should also be attached to each battalion for the removal of the wounded off the field, and for the conveyance of the hospital canteens A and B, with twelve sets of bedding, ten canvas bearers, and the hospital marker, on the line of march; or, when the spring waggons are either small, or required for the conveyance of the sick and wounded, a reserved wagon might be attached to each brigade for the carriage of these articles.

Canvas bearers, with long poles and shoulder-straps, in the proportion of two to every 100 men, will also be required.

2. Before a division takes the field, the principal medical officer should satisfy himself, by personal inspection, that the equipment of surgeons of regiments is complete in every respect, and it would be a necessary precaution for him to see the pack-horses loaded in his presence, as by that means he would ascertain that no straps, buckles, or cords were wanting.

3. When an action with the enemy seems inevitable, the surgeon of each regiment will make arrangements for the removal of the wounded of his corps from the field; and it would be desirable for him to give instructions to the bandsmen and others employed in that duty how to apply a field tourniquet, how to restrain dangerous hemorrhage until the assistance of the medical officer on the field can be obtained; and for this purpose a tourniquet should be given to each party of bearers. The bearers should also each of them carry a canteen full of water.

4. While the troops are advancing, the medical officers will follow with the spring waggons and bearers, and any other conveyance that is available; but when they deploy, or form for action, all, except one medical officer per regiment, will move a short distance to the rear, out of musket-range, and will prepare for affording aid to the wounded, and performing such primary operations as may be deemed absolutely necessary. For this purpose the surgical panniers must be brought up, and instruments, ligatures, dressings, and cordials (brandy) got ready; and, above all things, an abundant supply of water provided. For the safe and easy conveyance of which, the leather bags or skins formerly recommended would be found most convenient.

Dr. Hall takes this opportunity of cautioning medical officers against the use of chloroform in the severe shock of serious gunshot wounds, as he thinks few will survive where it is used. But as public opinion, founded, perhaps, on mistaken philanthropy, he knows is against him, he can only caution medical officers, and entreat they will narrowly watch its effects, for, however barbarous it may appear, the smart of the knife is a powerful stimulant, and it is much better to hear a man howl lustily, than to see him sink silently into the grave.

5. One medical officer for each regiment, generally the junior assistant-surgeon, should follow the troops within musket-range, so as to be at hand to check any alarming hemorrhage, and to expedite the removal of the wounded off the field to the rear, and for this purpose the bearers should be placed under his orders, and the regimental spring wagon be so stationed as to be within easy reach, to convey them to where the surgeon and his assistants have established themselves. The field assistant should carry with him, in his haversack, his pocket case of instruments, with a few ligatures ready cut, two field tourniquets, some lint, and two or three bandages; and he should be accompanied by three or four men, one with a knapsack, or haversack, containing a pint bottle of brandy, or some other stimulant, twenty-four bandages, half a pound of lint, three sponges, six long and six short solid splints, two old sheets, cut into quarters before starting, for the purpose of rolling fractured limbs in, and so preventing them from sustaining further injury on the men's removal from the field. This is best accomplished by placing the old linen under the limb, and rolling the splint up in it from the outer edge, and rolling towards the limb on each side, and then securing the whole with two or three bands of tape. In this way Dr. Hall thinks medical officers will find they can temporarily secure fractured limbs better, and much more expeditiously, than in any other manner. The orderly should have in his haversack, in addition to the above articles, a piece of tape, some pins, and two or three rolls of tow. He should carry a canteen, either of wood or India-rubber, full of water, and a drinking cup. The second man should carry a canvas bearer with shoulder-straps, and, like the former, should have a canteen full of water. The third man, I think, should be armed, to protect the party against stragglers and marauders, and, like his fellows, carry a canteen full of water. The second assistant-surgeon should receive the wounded from the field, see them carefully placed in the spring wagon, and then accompany the spring wagon to where the surgeon and third assistant are stationed, ready to afford them the surgical aid they may require. For this service the second assistant-surgeon should be accompanied by two men, to assist in placing the men carefully in the wagon; these men should accompany the wagon, and assist in like manner in taking the wounded out. These men should likewise carry canteens full of water, and there should be a skin of water, as a reserve, in the wagon, with a drinking cup.

6. The site selected by the staff-surgeon of brigade for the reception of the wounded from the field, should be as sheltered as possible; and, if not easily distinguished, a flag should be put up; and if any houses be near, calculated for the reception of wounded men, they should be taken possession of at once, and an abundant supply of water, and, if possible, straw provided.

7. Should the action prove decisive, tents can be pitched for the temporary accommodation of the wounded; but should the army advance, the surgeon, and one assistant at least, should accompany their regiments, leaving one or two assistants, according to the number of wounded, to aid the divisional staff, who will pitch the reserve marquees, and make all necessary preparation for the comfort and accommodation of the wounded, by having tea, broth, or essence of beef (which is readily made into broth by adding hot water), wine, and brandy, &c., ready. Should the army unfortunately meet with a reverse, all available transport must be pressed for the removal of the wounded to the rear, and they must be sent off as speedily as possible; but neither here, nor on the field of battle, should any one be carried whose hurts are so slight as to admit of his walking. Nor should commanding officers of regiments, when wounded, be allowed to take medical officers of their own corps to the rear with them, or officers of any grade be permitted to appropriate the spring waggons for the special conveyance of themselves and their luggage; and positive orders should be given to prevent bandsmen, drummers, or pioneers, specially told off to assist the wounded, from being left in charge of officers' horses and effects.

8. Should the army have to effect a landing on an enemy's coast, with an opposing force to meet it, the men should eat a good meal before leaving the ships, and should cook whatever provisions it is deemed necessary to serve out to them before they start. Pork is better than beef for this purpose, as it warms up more readily with any vegetable the men may find on shore. The medical officers should land with the last boats of their regiments, and should carry with them their haversacks, dressings, and canvas bearers, if the landing be opposed, so as to be able to bring the wounded at once to the boats for conveyance to the ships set apart for their reception; care should be taken that each boat employed in this service contains a supply of water and a drinking horn.

9. Should a landing be effected, and any horses be disembarked, the surgeon's pack-horse and panniers should be among the first.

10. As soon after an action as possible, medical officers in charge of corps will make out, and transmit to the inspector-general of hospitals, for the information of the general commanding-in-chief, returns of casualties.

JONAS HALL, M.D.,
Inspector-General of Hospitals.

THE EMBARKATION

The subjoined letter, dated Varna, September 1, gives details of the squadron of transport-ships engaged in conveying the British portion of the expedition against the Crimea:—

"The Himalaya takes the 8th Hussars, and part of the 15th Lancers; Simla, 4th Dragoons; Jason, 13th Light Dragoons; Trent, 11th Hussars. Lord Cardigan and staff go in the Himalaya; Lord Raglan and staff in the Camdoc.

Sept. 3.—Died at 8.30 this morning on board the Himalaya, of cholera, Captain Longmore, of the 8th Hussars, after only thirty hours' illness: the day before yesterday he was in good health and spirits. He was buried on shore, being towed there in the Himalaya's mailboat, at 11 a.m., on Sunday, followed by several officers, &c. Sept. 4.—The sailing transports are moving out fast this evening, and I suppose we shall go to-night, but I am obliged to conclude to save the mail.

"Light Division.—Checkered or rendezvous flag at the fore, Commander W. Boys; divisional agent, in his absence, Lieutenant Oke, in No. 39 Transport. Steam-vessels.—The Emperor, the Victoria, and the Andes. Transports.—Nos. 60, 38, 98, 89, 42, 43, 44, 21, 78, and 50.

"First Division.—Blue triangular flag at the fore, Commander J. Rawstorne, R.N., divisional commanding agent. Steam-vessels.—The Tanning, the Kangaroo, and the Etna. Transports.—Nos. 3, 4, 7, 10, 14, 19, 23, and 47.

"Second Division.—White triangular flag at the fore, Commander E. W. Franklin, R.N.; or in his absence, Lieutenant Boyce, in No. 91 Transport. Steam-vessels.—The City of London, the Melbourne, and the Hydaspes. Transports.—Nos. 71, 90, 91, 31, 32, 88, 51, and 82.

"Third Division.—Red triangular flag at the fore, Commander W. Hoseason, R.N., commanding divisional agent. Steam-vessels.—The Tynemouth, Cambria, and Medway. Transports.—Nos. 46, 53, 55, 23, 96, 97, 28, and 6.

"Fourth Division.—Red, with white fly triangular flag at the fore, Lieutenant E. Wyld, commanding divisional agent. Steam-vessels.—The Orinoco, Colombo, Avon, and Golden Fleece. Transports.—Nos. 37, 58, 48, 56, 57, 83, 81, 20, and 9.

"Fifth Division.—Blue, with red fly triangular flag at the fore, Lieutenant, H. P. Dicken, commanding divisional agent. Steam vessels.—The Simla, Himalaya, Trent, and Jason. Transports.—Nos. 1, 34, 40, 61, 85, 2, 36, and 59.

"The Himalaya has on board the whole of the 8th Hussars, part of the 15th Lancers, Lord Cardigan and staff, 380 horses, 360 men, 30 officers, and 14 women."

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

Four companies of the 6th Regiment, in garrison at Rochefort, and a detachment of gendarmes, have taken possession of the island of Aix, where the Russian prisoners were expected. It is thought the latter will be encamped on the Plage d'Aix.

By an Imperial decree of the 5th inst. M. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte has been appointed sub-lieutenant in the 7th regiment of dragoons. M. Bonaparte is grandson of Marshal Jerome by his first wife, Mrs. Paterson, and was born in the United States.

The Constitutionnel publishes a letter from Baltschik of the 3rd. The whole of the French and Turkish fleets were then anchored in the roads, and the English fleet was expected. The correspondent writes:—"Each fleet will advance in two columns, the French to the south of the English, and the Turks in the rear. We shall arrive on the coasts in four lines, and cast anchor within 400 yards of the shore. Each line will only be separated from each other by two cables' length. The first French line will consist of fourteen ships ready for action; the second, of thirteen frigates or steamers; the third, of eight vessels; and the fourth of six, and next to the transports of the Ottoman squadron. The united fleets will reckon thirty-two sail of the line, fifteen French, twelve English, and five Turkish. The ships, frigates, and transports with troops on board, will be towed by steamers. The Vengeance and Retribution are cruising off Sebastopol. Marshal de St. Arnaud arrived on the 2nd at Baltschik from Varna in the Berthollet, and immediately repaired on board the Ville de Paris. The embarkation of the troops at Varna took place in the best possible order, and with extraordinary celerity. The aspect of the roads was truly beautiful in the evening of the 1st. It was a Friday, and a holiday kept by the Mussulmans. Their squadron was illuminated. Lights were placed at the top of every mast. The night was magnificent. The white cliffs which line the roads presented by moonlight the appearance of gigantic ramparts, and all the ships fired salutes. Everybody is happy and proud of participating in so momentous an enterprise."

We have already mentioned that the French Government had asked for 100 Sisters of Charity for the hospital service of the army in the East; fifty only could be procured, who are to be sent to the different places where their presence is most required; twenty-five have already sailed from Marseilles, and the remainder are on their way to embark for Constantinople, to replace those of the same religious order who have followed the expeditionary corps to the seat of war.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

THE WAR IN THE EAST.—The troop-ship Australian, Mason, master, arrived at Constantinople, Aug. 26, en route for Varna, having on board the 2nd and 3rd companies of the 12th battalion Royal Artillery and the greater portion of the siege-train, with Majors Irving and Young, Lieutenants Simpson, Tarn, Andrews, Mackenzie, McLachlan, and Cockerell; and Assistant Surgeon Cockerell. The Australian made a most successful passage, arriving at Malta in eleven and Constantinople in sixteen days, notwithstanding that she experienced strong head-winds during the voyage. There had been no sickness, and all on board speak in high terms of the kindness and arrangements made by Captain Mason for the general health and comfort of the troops.

By advices received, under date of Athens, August 27, it appears a transport has been reported wrecked off the Greek coast at Poros; she is supposed to be the missing transport Courier, bound from England.

We learn from Cherbourg that on Thursday evening a large English steam-frigate, having in tow a vessel of the same name, had cast anchor in the port, with a body of French troops returning from the Baltic.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

Her Majesty's ship, Algiers, in addition to a large quantity of heavy shot and shell, ammunition, &c., will take out 600 marines for service in the Black Sea fleet.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

DUBLIN.—The local garrison committee for relief of the families of soldiers gone to the war has received an order from the London central committee to discontinue relief to wives and children of such men as are not actually in the field. Hitherto, soldiers' wives of the 14th and 57th were on the weekly list.

CHATHAM.—A portion of the Casemate Barracks, at Chatham, is undergoing a cleansing, for the reception of about 300 women with their children, belonging to the troops now in Turkey. They are from Malta, which place they left by steamer. The authorities of the invalid depot, on their arrival, examine into each case, to ascertain where their friends reside, so that no time be lost in conveying them free of expense, and the money due to them paid by government. A party, consisting of 108 women and 118 children, belonging to the 68th and other regiments now at the seat of war in the East, arrived at Chatham on Saturday; and Major Smith, Barrack Master, provided them with accommodation in St. Mary's barracks, where they will remain until they can be forwarded to their respective homes. They are to be sent home by the Paymaster of Invalids at the public expense.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

WALLACHIA AND ITS GOVERNMENT.—The Wallachian Moniteur of the 6th inst. contains a letter by Prince Cantacuzene to Sadyk Pasha, commander of Bucharest, dated Aug. 19, of which the following is a copy:—

Excellency,—Upon the entrance into Bucharest of the Cossack regiment of his Majesty the Sultan, placed under the command of your Excellency, good order having been maintained in the capital, I take the liberty of praying your Excellency to accept a trifling gift on my part for the regiment, as an acknowledgment of the perfect discipline which it has manifested to this day. To the great satisfaction of the inhabitants. This slight gift consists of blue cloth for the uniform of 100 soldiers, 300 shirts, 300 pairs of linen drawers, and ten saddle-horses of the country. I hope that your Excellency will appreciate the sentiment which impels me to act in this matter of my own free-will, and pray you to give orders for the reception of these objects.

I have the honour to be, with respect,
Your Excellency's humble and obedient servant,
C. CANTACUZENE.

The Pasha, in reply, offers his grateful thanks for the welcome present, and promises to send off a report to the Generalissimo, who he doubts not will feel equal gratification at this fresh proof of devotion to the Sultan's throne.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

By a "general order" published on the 29th of August, Omar Pasha sent all the Hungarian, Austrian, Polish, and Italian fugitives serving under him as officers or non-commissioned officers to the army in Asia Minor. On the 3rd of September the exiles went from Bucharest, by way of Silistria, to Baltschik. Said Pasha (Zaikowsky, and commander of the Turkish Cossacks), will also be obliged to leave. On the 6th the last of the Cossacks left Galatz. When the Russian rear-guard quitted Wallachia, it committed no excesses whatever.

FOUR HUNDRED BASHI-BAZOUKS KILLED.—Accounts from Routschuk mention a severe encounter between the regular Ottoman troops and the Bashi-bazouks. Omar Pasha had a large body of the latter surrounded. They refused to give up their arms, and fired upon the soldiers. Artillery was brought out, and a regular engagement ensued, ending in the destruction of 400 of these marauders. The rest have been disarmed and sent home. A letter from Bucharest of the 10th states that the ex-Prince Milosch has been denounced as the head of a gang of spies, and that one of his agents has been arrested. The matter is being investigated. Notice had been given to Omar Pasha that the Austrian troops would enter Moldavia on the 16th by three points at the same time.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

The only intelligence of interest brought by the Constantinople mail of the 6th inst. is that received from Asia Minor. A letter from Trebizonde, of the 30th ult., states that on the 23rd a courier, despatched by the Semarsik Mustapha Zarif Pasha, had reached that city, with the very unexpected account of the retreat of the Russians from the plains of Kourouk-Déré towards Alexandropol and Teflis. In the night of the 16th the Mshir of Kars, on hearing that the Russians were preparing to abandon their position, ordered his regular cavalry to proceed in that direction. By day-break it arrived near the camp, charged and dispersed the rear-guard, which was the only force left behind, and captured 2,500 tents, a quantity of provisions and munitions of war, and 500 draught horses. The ordinary tartar, who arrived from Erzeroum on the 25th, brought despatches explaining the cause of this sudden retreat. It appears that on the 12th the intrepid Schamyl, at the head of 15,000 mounted Lesghies, invaded Khakhetia, took possession of eighty villages, and that detachments of his cavalry had shown themselves within eight hours of Teflis. On receiving this information, General Count Read, Civil and Military Governor of Teflis, sent orders to a portion of the Russian army corps operating near Alexandropol and Kutais to advance by forced marches upon Teflis.

Constantinople advices of the 7th enable us to give some further account of Schamyl's movements. Between the 26th of August and the first of September the Circassian chief entered the northern part of Georgia with 18,000 men, and advanced to the Kour. The centre, which he commanded in person, was at Achalgori on the 25th of August; the right wing, under the Emir Hassan Emin, was at Gori, on the Kour, at the same date; and the left wing, under Emir Chupli Emin, were at Mycht, a little to the north of Teflis. The Russians were taken completely by surprise, and retreated, after a very feeble resistance, into the mountains. Schamyl carried off a great quantity of booty, and made some prisoners of high rank. An important result of the rassia was, that the Russians were immediately obliged to relinquish all idea of conquest in Turkish Armenia. The Turkish Minister who has left Persia is said "to have received leave of absence," but at such a moment this is not probable. Ferhad Pasha (Stein) has been definitely appointed Quarter-master-General in Anatolia, instead of Kourschid Pasha (Gnyon).

TREBIZONDE, Aug. 30.—Immediately after the appearance of Schamyl at Khakhetia, some leagues from Teflis, the governor of this last-named town, General-in-Chief Count Read, had dispatched orders as well to Alexandropol as to Kutais to forward as speedily as possible all the disposable troops. This was why the Russian emissaries having spread the report in the neighbourhood of Redoubt Kale that 15,000 men were coming to destroy the works erected by the English, there was a panic everywhere, especially at Tchourouk-sou. [A view of Tchourouk-sou is given in THE FIELD of to-day.] The commander of the Wasp, who happened to be at that time in our port, wishing to ascertain what the garrison of Redoubt Kale would do in case of a surprise, and having found in it hardly forty available men, wrote a very polite letter to Selim Pasha at Tchourouk-sou, to beg of him to send at least a battalion, and to tell him that, knowing that there was not at the anchorage near the camp any Turkish steamer to transport them, he would place his own at the service of the general. Moreover, this distinguished officer did not make the slightest allusion to the reports which were circulated respecting the Russians, whom he did not even name. He merely congratulated Selim Pasha upon the victory which he said had been gained by the Turks in the neighbourhood of Kars, and of which no one in the camp had yet heard a word good or bad. This took place on Saturday, the 19th instant. Selim Pasha having dispatched an affirmative answer with his compliments to Redoubt Kale, the Wasp came on Monday, the 21st, to convey the battalion which had been promised—carried them to Redoubt Kale, and subsequently steamed on to Trebizonde, where she arrived the following Monday, the 28th, to convey about 500 Bashi-bazouks destined for the army of Tchourouk-sou. The steamer left us last night, but the commander has remained here, and proposed to go to Constantinople by the Stadium steamer of to-day. I must not omit to mention, that during these transactions, namely, on Sunday, the 20th inst., the little steamer which keeps up the communication between this place and Tchourouk-sou had brought to the camp the news of the deposition of Selim Pasha.

Naval.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

ELISINORE, Sept. 12. In consequence of the prevalence of northerly gales the roadstead here presents a most animated appearance from the collection of 300 ships of all nations windmound at the anchorage. On the 6th inst. the French frigate Vengeance ran back with hullwork stove in, having encountered a heavy sea off the Skaw. The Mary and Eliza, of Whitby, went on shore on the Grounds off Copenhagen in a gale, but was got off with little damage. The English cutter Sparrowhawk arrived from Bomarsund and Stockholm on the 8th. The French Imperial yacht La Reine Harbours, from Calais, bearing the hats of a Marshal of France, to be conveyed to General Baraguay d'Hilliers, has also arrived. During the night a gun-boat from England, the Wrangler, passed through and anchored at Copenhagen. On the 9th, the Hecla, the Driver, the Gladiator, and the Assoluto, with five troop transports, the Herefordshire, the Julia, the Columbia, and two others, arrived from Bomarsund. They bring back a portion of the French troops returning to Calais. The steamships having coaled took the transports in tow, and proceeded with them the following morning to the Skaw, whence the Hecla and Driver return here, to carry each 100 oxen to the fleet of Sir Charles Napier. The following prizes remain windmound:—The Magie, Fortuna, and Anna Maria, prizes to Her Majesty's ship Archer, in charge of Lieutenant Bathurst, Mr. Nicholletts, and Mr. Gowland, midshipmen; the Thamias and Elina, prizes to the cruiser in charge of Mr. Curtis, mate, and Mr. Dickenson. This morning a Sardinian frigate anchored from Stockholm. The harvest in the Danish islands is reported as being most abundant, and the granaries are overflowing.

SKELETONS AT SEA.—Captain Klockgether, of the Bremen ship Hindoo, while on his passage to New York, picked up a boat in which were four human skeletons. The boat was full of water, but, being of a light construction, had continued to float. A few remnants of clothing were found, but nothing to give any clue to the unfortunate.

CAPTAIN COOK'S CLOCK.—To the many attractions with which the United Service Institution abounds, one that will be highly appreciated has lately been presented by Rear-Admiral Sir Thomas Herbert, K.C.B. It is a valuable chronometer by Laurence Kendall, London, 1771, which was twice carried off by Captain Cook, on his voyages to the Pacific, and was taken out again by Lieut. Bligh, in 1787. When the Bounty's crew mutinied, it was carried by the mutineers to Pitcairn's Island. In 1808 it was sold by Adams to an American, Mr. Mayo Fletcher, who sold it in Chili. It was purchased for fifty guineas by Sir T. Herbert, from M. Colbebaugh, at Valparaiso, in 1840, and has now, owing to Sir Thomas's generosity, found its appropriate resting-place among the valuable relics deposited in this institution.—British Army Despatch.

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

The French frigates La Virginie, Zenobia, Senillante, and Poursuivante, as also the Brandon, Fulton, and Coccy, left Elsinore on the 13th of September, towing the British transports 115, 116, 117, and 122, with the French troops on board, bound to Calais.

On Monday one of the French war-steamer from the Baltic arrived off Deal with a yellow flag flying, denoting cholera on board.

HONG KONG, July 22.—Her Britannic Majesty's ship Winchester leaves to day for the north. Nothing has been seen of the Russian squadron. It was reported at Shanghai that Hankow had been re-taken by the Imperial forces, and about 1,000 insurgents killed. We have nothing particular from the coast, except that pirates are in great force both in the north and on the west coast. Indeed, they are more to be dreaded than the Russians. A lorcha was attacked between Ningpo and their river Min, and set fire to. Seven foreigners narrowly escaped, after losing all their property, and were stripped of their clothes. An expedition was fitted out from Macao to the west coast, assisted by 100 sailors from the French man-of-war Jeanne d'Arc, but, from the want of a steamer, the piratical fleet escaped. A casualty occurred by the upsetting of a French boat, and one man was drowned. Our latest dates are—England, May 24; Calcutta, June 18; Bombay, June 16; Singapore, July 2; Sydney, June 7; Manila, July 9; and Shanghai, July 15.

STEAMERS.

NEW YORK.—The mail of the 6th will carry out the news of the usual number of steamboat explosions and losses, and street rows. Among the former are the explosion of the boiler of the Timour, on the Missouri, by which six persons were killed, and fifteen or sixteen thrown overboard and drowned; and the loss, on Lake Michigan, of the Lady Elgin, fortunately without loss of life.

TURKEY.—The Danubian Steam Company have announced that the communication between Vienna and Brailow recommenced on Monday, the 18th of September.

STEAM BETWEEN LIVERPOOL AND FRANCE.—It is intended to establish a line of iron screw-steamer between the Mersey and the River Loire, in the west of France. A commencement was made on Saturday by the launch of a new iron screw-steamer, named the Loire, from the building-yard of Messrs. Thomas Vernon and Son, at the south-east end of Brunswick-dock. It is intended that she shall call at Bordeaux, Charente, and Nantes; and the object of the projectors is to avail themselves of the good understanding which now exists between this country and France in order to realise the full advantages of commercial intercourse.—Liverpool Chronicle.

THE MAILS.—SOUTHAMPTON.—The Royal mail steam-ship Atreus, Captain Woolley, sailed on Monday afternoon, taking out the mails for the West Indies, Central America, and the Pacific—eighty-three passengers, specie value £18,154, jewellery value £1,780, and a large cargo. The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Madrid, Captain Weeks, has left for Vigo, Oporto, Lisbon, Cadiz, and Gibraltar—thirty-six passengers, and specie value £16,880 sterling. The Tagus is due here about the 24th inst., with the heavy portion of the East India, China, and Mediterranean mails; and the Ludra will leave on Wednesday, with the outward mails for Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria. The United States' mail steam-ship Washington, Captain Lines, with dates from New York to the 9th inst., is expected off Cowes, on her way to Bremen, on Friday next.

A BAN LOOK-OUT IN THE BLACK SEA.—A private letter dated "Bay of Varna, Sept. 4," has been published, containing the following ugly statement:—"About four days since, a Russian steamer came off the place under false colours, lowered out a boat, which ran amid our ships, and saw all that was going on, and then returned to the steamer. The fact became known by a master of one of our steamers—a trader—having recognised in the boat, as it passed, an old Russian captain with whom he was acquainted at St. Petersburg. The affair caused great consternation. Two French steamers were immediately sent in pursuit, but, strangely enough, were soon recalled. Our general dined with the admiral yesterday, and when he returned to the transport, he said, 'There seems to be some truth about the Russian steamer and boat.' There has been no effortful blockade in the Black Sea, and there is general dissatisfaction about Dindas and his fleet. Admiral Lyons has all the management of the embarkation."

PARIS.—The French steamer Newton arrived in the Gironne on the 17th, with Queen Christina on board. The London papers inform us it is understood that Beaumont-lodge, formerly the residence of Lord Ashbrook, has been taken for the Queen, as a future residence of herself and youthful family, by her second husband, the Duke de Rivas. Several truck loads of furniture and other valuables had arrived by the South-Western Railway at Datchet, and were immediately forwarded to Beaumont-lodge, which is now being placed in thorough repair. Beaumont-lodge is delightfully situated near Gosport's hill, about three miles from Windsor-castle, and was recently sold to a London merchant, who in all probability was employed by the Spanish royal family to make the purchase. [The lodge has not been taken. R.]

CAPTURE OF PIRATES IN THE LEVANT.—Letters from Smyrna of the 30 ult., state that the captain of the Chapel French war-steamer, had arrived there with seven pirates, his prisoners, four of whom were taken during a combat on the Isle of Leroc.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

The decrees of the High Court of Admiralty have been issued for the sale forthwith of the undermentioned Russian ships, they having been declared lawful captures—viz, the Alexander, Woolsgard, late master, prize to her Majesty's ship Tribune, the Hon. S. T. Carnegie, commander; her cargo (salt) has been sold, and realised £275; also the America, Broxberg, late master, prize to the same steamer; her cargo (salt and sherry) realised £186. 10s.; and the Meuter Ekland, late master, also a prize to the Tribune; her cargo (salt) has been sold, and brought £653.

The Russian ship Carl, prize to her Majesty's steamer Avon, tender to the Albatross, has been sold by auction at Plymouth, for the benefit of her captors. She was built at Ravel in 1847, is 376 tons burden, and realised £1,925.

THE WAR PRISON AT LEWIS.—The arrangements for the reception of prisoners of war at the goal are nearly complete, and it is expected that they will arrive in the course of the week. The prison-guard, consisting of a body of penitents, with a sergeant and corporal, have already arrived. Brighton Examiner.

Mr. G. Hincheliff, a late resident in St. Petersburg, is the gentleman who has been appointed by the Admiralty as interpreter on board the prison-ship Devonshire, at Sheerness. The prisoners have the entire range from the "knight-heads" to the taffrail, and do not abuse their indulgence. They are perfectly obedient to a request made, and very respectful. They appear to appreciate the confidence placed in them, and all strive to make themselves useful about the ducks when required. Divine service was performed on board the Devonshire on Sunday; Lieutenant-commander J. B. Lloyd officiated. A number of the prisoners have been supplied with the Old and New Testaments by Mr. Joseph D. Hudson, missionary to the British and Foreign Sailors Society. The prisoners seemed fully to appreciate the service. They separated in a most orderly manner—men, women, and children. The change of food (from salt provision to fresh), with the cleanliness carried out promptly by the officers, and willingly put in practice by the prisoners, have very much improved their health.

Military.

The Committee of Ordnance in London have had their attention drawn to a new projectile. It is a shell charged with a liquid which, when released by the concussion of the ball, becomes a sheet of liquid fire, consuming all within its influence, the smoke emitted also destroying human life.

GUN COTTON.—Some very interesting experiments have recently been tried at Vienna, by the Artillery, with "exploding cotton" instead of gunpowder, and they have succeeded so completely that cotton will in future be used. New foundries have been cast, which weigh six cwt. less than those formerly used, and they answer the purpose—if exploding cotton is employed instead of gunpowder—perfectly well. The army is to be equipped with the new rifle by the spring of 1855, at the expense for alterations of only 2,500,000 florins.

BRAVERY OF A PRIVATE SOLDIER.—Intelligence has just been received at Chatham, that Private Andrew Anderson, of the 10th company of Sappers and Miners, lately stationed at Brompton barracks, who so bravely distinguished himself at the siege of Silistria, has been rewarded in the name of the Sultan by Omar Pasha, who personally presented Anderson with a splendid gold medal for his valuable services. At the siege in question he was severely wounded, but he is fast recovering, and is shortly expected at Chatham with others of his corps.

VARNA.—The embarkation of the troops has been effected with the greatest order and celerity. The flat boats that have been constructed at Constantinople were of the greatest service for embarking the horses. They will be equally useful on landing. The only accident we have to deplore was, that a little Turkish vessel upset one of the flat boats which was transporting the Zouaves. Eight soldiers met with a watery grave. The captain of the Turkish ship was arrested, and will be tried by a council of war.

Medical.

Staff-Surgeon Peter Mackey, M.D., of Limerick, is to have medical charge of one of the two large war-steampers proceeding to the Crimea, to receive the wounded as they will be brought on board. This appointment has been given in the most complimentary manner by the Inspector-General to Dr. Mackey, solely in consideration of his services while in charge of one of the hospitals at Varna, and for his zeal and attention during the prevalence of cholera.

Thirty English medical officers have proceeded to Varna during the past month to reinforce the medical staff of the British army; fifty-two more are ready for embarkation. One hundred medical men have also been sent from the hospital of Val de Grace to the French army, and twenty English medical practitioners to the Turkish army.

University and Clerical.

ETON COLLEGE.—The school re-opened on Thursday, the 21st of September, when the colleges and lower division oppidians returned. On Friday, the 22nd, the fifth form oppidians return, and the sixth form return on Saturday, the 23rd, when the whole school will have assembled.

OPEN-AIR PREACHING.—The Rector of Gateshead and his clergy have determined to adopt the practice of open-air preaching in the evening during the continuance of fine weather. The first service took place last Friday; and for the month of September the series of discourses, and the places where they will be delivered, have been duly advertised.—Newcastle Guardian.

CAEN.—The bell which the Duke of Bedford, head of the Russell family, so graciously bestowed on the Church of Rosel, in the canton de Tilly-sur-Seuilles, has been landed at Caen, and is at this moment at Mr. Barrow's, the English consul's, whence it is to be shortly transferred to Rosel. The church of this commune was built by the family of Lord John Russell, and on a recent occasion his lordship's brother and nephew (Lord Hastings Russell), when visiting the locality, left with the poor of the parish substantial proofs of their munificence.

NEW YORK.—We learn by the last mail that the celebration by the American Protestant Association of the first sitting of Congress had led to a riot at Newark. A procession, composed of about 3,000 persons, marched through the city, and at noon partook of a dinner. Nothing occurred to mar the scene until the afternoon, when, as the procession passed through one of the streets, it encountered a crowd of opponents, who saluted it with derisive shouts, and, finally, a stone was thrown which struck one of the Protestants. Just at this moment, as it is related, several shots were fired from a Roman Catholic church in the immediate vicinity. The procession broke for the church instantly, and in a short time completely sucked its interior, despoiling the altar and rendering it a complete ruin. A building whence the first attack was made was also assailed. A number of persons on both sides were badly hurt, but we do not find that any one of them was killed. Through the exertions of the officers of the procession, the body reformed and proceeded on its way. An intense excitement prevailed in Newark in consequence of this deplorable riot, and it was utterly impossible to ascertain the origin of the disturbance. The Protestant American Association is a new organisation, got up, it is said, for benevolent purposes.

RAILWAYS AND TELEGRAPHS.

FALL OF A TUNNEL UPON A PASSENGER TRAIN.—An accident of a serious and alarming character occurred on the Leeds Northern Railway on Tuesday. A train leaves Stockton-on-Tees at about 6.40, and is due in Leeds at 9.55. Not arriving at the customary hour, inquiry was made as to the cause, and it was ascertained that an accident, caused by the falling in of a portion of the tunnel at Bramhope, about seven miles from Leeds, had taken place. It seems that the train referred to is usually on Tuesdays a heavy one, as Leeds market is held on that day of the week. Yesterday it was conveying between 200 and 300 passengers through the tunnel (two miles in length) in twelve or thirteen carriages. When about half way through, the side on which the train was moving fell in and severed the train in two, burying two of the passenger carriages. The engine alone got through, and the remaining carriages, not buried, when detached, ran backwards in the direction of Arthington at a quick space, the line in that direction being rather a rapid incline. A collision was the consequence, its progress not being checked until it came in contact with a truck full of Irish reapers. The guard of the train (Porrill), who travelled in the van at the rear, was seriously injured; but the other passengers escaped without much injury. As to the buried carriages, every possible effort was put forth for their extrication, which was effected after the lapse of a considerable time. None of the passengers were found to have suffered greatly beyond alarm, with the exception of a lady, who had a leg broken. Several exaggerated rumours of the accident have been spread abroad, one stating that the loss included seventeen lives. We are happy to add, however, the injury to persons is limited to that already stated.

NOVA SCOTIA.—The submarine cable forming part of the line of telegraph connecting New Brunswick and Nova Scotia with Prince Edward Island, parted about two miles from the Nova Scotia shore; and it was doubted whether it can be repaired in the present season. The idea of connecting Newfoundland with Prince Edward Island by submarine cable has been abandoned, and the connexion with the continent, if accomplished, will now be direct from Cape Race to Nova Scotia, at or near Cape North, to join the line of the Nova Scotia Company.

SPAIN.—The sale by auction of the Langreo Railway, fixed for the 21st inst., is postponed indefinitely by order of the Minister of Commerce.

THE THIRD PORTION OF THE TELEGRAPHIC WIRE connecting the island of Sardinia with the coast of Africa is already attached.

RUSSIAN REINFORCEMENTS FOR THE ARMY OF THE SOUTH.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.

The whole second division of the Guards, the second brigade of artillery of the Guards, and the Hussar regiment of the Guards, has been inspected by the Emperor, and marched to share in the campaign of the south.

LORD DUNDONALD AND THE COMMAND OF THE BALTIC FLEET.

SIR,—Until yesterday, when I observed the serious manner in which a conversation said to have taken place between the Chief Minister of her Majesty's Administration and myself is now treated, I did not consider it incumbent on me to "volunteer a formal public disclosure," in order not to allow such a statement to go abroad uncontradicted, and therefore I now rectify the omission, and declare that I have never been honoured by any conversation or communication with or from Lord Aberdeen relative to the command in the Baltic, or in regard to operations to be conducted in that or any other quarter.

Permit me to add a line in justice to Admiral Napier, against whom "the indignant dissatisfaction of the nation" is said to be roused—namely, that success could not have attended the operations of combustible ships against stone batteries firing red-hot shot, however coolly unresisting walls may be leisurely demolished.

There is but one means whereby to place the opponents on an equal footing, and that I have confidently laid before the Government, with the hope that a protracted defensive war should not linger on, to the disorganisation of Europe and the ruin of our country.—I am, Sir, your obliged and obedient servant,

London, Sept. 21.

LANDING OF THE TROOPS.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

VIENNA, Wednesday, Sept. 20.

Advices from Constantinople of the 16th announce that 25,000 French, 25,000 English, and 8,000 Turks landed safely at Eupatoria on the 14th, without meeting with any resistance.

The transports returned to Varna for the reserve. The following important notification has been forwarded from the War Department:—

"Telegraphic accounts have been received by her Majesty's Government from Vienna and Bucharest announcing that the allied forces, consisting of 25,000 English, 25,000 French, and 8,000 Turkish troops, landed on the 14th [the anniversary of the death of the Duke of Wellington] at Eupatoria without meeting any resistance, and had commenced marching on Sebastopol."

DONCASTER RACES.—THURSDAY, September 14.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 sows each, h ft, with 50 added. For two-year-olds. The owner of the second horse to save his stake. Red House 1a. 22 sows.

Mr. Clarkson's Amy, by Galois, 6st 9lb Proud 1
Mr. J. Osborne's Cherry Brandy, by Sweetmeat, 7st 9lb, J. Osborne 2

Mr. R. Jones's Hanover, 7st 10lb, Charlton.
Mr. W. K. Walker's Cimicina, 7st 8lb, Clement.
Lord Chesterfield's Fly Uprais, out of Pelion's dam, 7st 5lb, Ashmall.
Mr. Mather's Lily, 7st 5lb, T. Cliff.
Mr. Norton's Van Winkle, 7st 5lb, Waddington.
Mr. Redfern's Alston, 7st 4lb, Kendall.
Mr. Arrowsmith's Wheatcar, 7st 4lb, Palmer.
Mr. T. V. Turner's Capucine, 7st 3lb, Chilmam.
Mr. Catton's Knight of the Village, 7st 2lb, Wells.
Mr. Melkham's Glimcrack, 6st 12lb, Aldcroft.
Captain Lane's Anshe (late Blue Eyes), 6st 11lb, Garvey.

Hayhoe weighed for Mr. Stephenson's filly by Launcelet, out of Billingham's dam, and the number was put up, but, at the last moment nearly, it was taken down. Under the new rule, a penalty of £10 was thereby incurred.

Betting—2 to 1 agst Amy, 3 to 1 agst Capucine, 6 to 1 each agst Wheatcar and Knight of the Village, 7 to 1 each agst Alston and Hanover. A very fine race in which the two placed, ended in favour of Amy by a short head. Capucine, Lord Chesterfield's filly Glimcrack, and Cimelina, were well up.

FRIDAY.

Match, 500 sows, 200 ft. 8st 7lb each. Red House 1a. Lord Derby's b fly Melbourne, out of Meance, Templeman 1
Lord Glasgow's br f by Pyrrhus the First, out of Miss Whip Flatman 2

Betting—1 to 2 on Miss Whip filly, who started with the lead; but, after the first 100 yards, was passed by her rival, who made play the remainder of the distance, and won in a canter by six lengths.

Sweepstakes of 200 sows each, h ft. For three-year-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb fillies, 8st 2lb. The owner of the second horse to save his stake. St. Leger Course. 8 sows.

Mr. Howard's Apollonius, by Orlando, 8st 7lb, Wells w o
The Don Stakes of 50 sows each, h ft. For three-year-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb fillies, 8st 4lb. Last mile. 5 sows.

Mr. Gully's Andover, by Bay Middleton A Day 1
Lord Zetland's Hospodar, by Hetman Platoff J. Marson 2

Betting—5 to 1 on Andover, who waited to the distance, where he went up and challenged; when opposite the Stand he got his head first, and at last won cleverly by a neck.

The Park Hill Stakes of 50 sows each, h ft. For three-year-old fillies, 8st 7lb each. Certain winners extra. The owner of the second horse to receive £100 out of the stakes. St. Leger Course. 31 sows.
Mr. A. Nichol's Honeysuckle, by Touchstone, 8st 7lb, Templeman 1

Mr. G. Barton's Jetty Treffz, 8st 7lb J. Marson 2
Mr. G. Peck's Sister of Mercy, 8st 7lb Bunby 3
Lord Chesterfield's Omoo, 8st 7lb Flatman 4
Lord Eglinton's Bianca, 8st 7lb Marlow 5
Mr. J. M. Stanley's Rosaline, 8st 7lb Charlton 6

Betting—2 to 1 agst Omoo, 3 to 1 agst Jetty Treffz, 7 to 2 agst Honeysuckle, and 4 to 1 agst Rosaline.

Rosaline went off with the lead, but was soon passed by Jetty Treffz, who carried on the running with Rosaline second, Bianca third, Honeysuckle fourth; the other two bringing up the rear. At the Red House, Bianca took second place, and soon afterwards Rosaline dropped into the rear. No further change of moment occurred until they reached the distance, when Honeysuckle went up and joined Jetty Treffz, who was at last defeated very easily by a length and a half, three lengths separating the second from the third. Rosaline pulled up and walked in.

The Town Plate (Handicap) of 70 sows. For three-year-olds and upwards. Entrance 2 sows, to go to the second horse. One mile and a quarter.

Mr. Smith's Sir Rowland Treachard, by Ithuriel, 6 yrs, 7st 3lb Clement 1
Mr. R. Harrison's King of Truumps, 6 yrs, 8st 10lb, Cartwright 2
Sir C. Monek's Hunca Munca, 4 yrs, 7st 12lb Osborne 3
Lord Derby's Hobby Horse, 4 yrs, 6st 12lb Wells 4
Mr. J. M. Stanley's The Reiver, 4 yrs, 8st 5lb, Charlton.
Mr. Peck's Mistletree, 4 yrs, 6st 15lb, T. Cliff.
Mr. M. Maxwell's Palmetra, 3 yrs, 6st 5lb, Bates.
Mr. R. Walker's Sir Robert, 6 yrs, 6st 13lb, Waddington.
Mr. J. Osborne's Solinger, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb, Bearpark.
Lord Chesterfield's Communist, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb, Comery.
Mr. R. Clark's Surgeon-General, 3 yrs, 6st 2lb, Ducken.

Betting—2 to 1 agst Hobby Horse, 5 to 2 agst The Reiver, 7 to 1 agst King of Truumps, 8 to 1 agst Communist, 10 to 1 agst any other. Won very cleverly by a length and a half; a head between second and third, and a neck only between third and fourth. The others were widely scattered. Fordham weighed for Mishop, and the number was put up, but it was soon afterwards withdrawn. Whangha's number was also put up, but before the horses were called to the post he bolted over the rails, and Sabin, his jockey, was thrown, and much bruised.

Doncaster Stakes of 10 sows each, with 100 added. For three-year-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 3lb. Certain penalties. The owner of the second horse to receive £50 out of the stakes. Last mile and a half. 116 sows.

Lord Derby's Aerobat, by Ithuriel, 8st 12lb (incl. 5lb extra), Tennyman 1

Lord Zetland's Ivan, 8st 12lb (incl. 5lb extra) J. Marson 2
Mr. H. Robinson's Grand Inquisitor, 8st 7lb Bunby 3
Mr. Howard's Scythian, 8st 8lb, Wells.
Mr. Howard's Apollonius, 8st 7lb, Ashmall.
Mr. S. Hawke's Midsummer, 8st 3lb, Flatman.
Mr. J. Singleton's Neville, 8st 7lb, Aldcroft.
Lord Zetland's Tros, 8st 7lb, G. Gates.

Betting—2 to 1 agst Ivan, 5 to 2 agst Aerobat, 1 to 1 agst Scythian. Won very cleverly by a length. Three lengths between the second and third, Scythian was fourth, Midsummer fifth, Apollonius sixth, and Tros seventh. Neville pulled up, and did not pass the post. The result of the race gave rise to a scene of the greatest uproar and confusion. John Scott, amidst a storm of groans and hisses, was hustled in every direction, and his party had to fight their way through the crowd to rescue him from the Lynch law with which his exasperated assailants threatened him.

Great praise is due to Harry Broomie for the protection which he promptly and effectually afforded him.

Whether Aerobat could have won the St. Leger or not, is a problem we are not prepared to solve. An explanation will now, doubtless, proceed from the proper quarter. Fortunately, Lord Derby had left the course before the scene took place.

The Doncaster Cup, value 300 sows. Three-year-olds, 7st; four, 8st 5lb; five, 8st 12lb; six and aged, 9st 2lb. Various penalties and allowances. Cup Course. About two miles and a half.

Mr. Howard's Virago, by Pyrrhus the First, 7st 4lb (including 7lb extra) Wells 1
Mr. Morris's Kingsham, 8st 5lb (including 7lb extra) Ransom 2
Betting—15 to 1 on Virago, who led throughout, and won in a canter by twenty lengths. West Australian, the Grand Inquisitor, El Horah, Derrish, Bolardo, Arthur Welfesley, and Midsummer, were struck out on Thursday evening at 8.15.

The Nursery Plate of 100 sows, for two-year-olds. Last mile. Mr. Clarkson's Amy, by Galois, 7st 10lb Aldcroft 1
Mr. T. V. Turner's Capucine, 7st 2lb Chilmam 2
Mr. Saxon's Evengundy, 6st 12lb Clement 3
Mr. Dubson's fly Pyrrhus the First, out of Commore's dam, 7st 2lb Wells 4
Mr. W. Baxter's Alice Laycock, 7st 7lb, F. Marson.
Lord Chesterfield's b f by Epirus, out of Pelion's dam, 7st 5lb, Ashmall.

Mr. Harrison's Noddy, 7st 2lb, T. Cliff.
Mr. Catton's Knight of the Village, 7st, Charlton.
Mr. Knowles's Channan, 7st, Wood.
Mr. Garrett's The Little Brownie, 7st, Kendall.
Mr. Newland's Mariposa, 6st 9lb, Hayhoe.
Mr. Arrowsmith's Wheatcar, 6st 9lb, Bearpark.

Betting—5 to 2 agst Commore's dam filly, 4 to 1 agst Capucine, 5 to 1 agst Amy, 7 to 1 each agst Noddy and Little Brownie, 10 to 1 agst Wheatcar. Won by half a length. Third heat; a neck between third and fourth. Mr. Stephenson's f by Launcelet, out of Billingham's dam, was struck out at 2.15 p.m.

The Ranney Stakes of 5 sows each, with 25 added. For horses beaten at this meeting, and which had never won £100 at any one time. Two-year-olds, 6st 7lb; three, 7st 10lb; four, 8st 3lb; five and upwards, 9st 9lb. Three-quarters of a mile. 8 sows.

Mr. T. Parr's Raball, 3 yrs, 7st 11lb Flatman 1
Mr. J. Osborne's Cherry Brandy, 2 yrs, 6st 7lb Ashmall 2
Mr. Williams's Tailcater, 3 yrs, 7st 9lb M-Lean 3
Mr. J. Wood's Glenstruc, 3 yrs, 7st 10lb Cowley 4
Mr. R. Walker's Sir Robert, 3 yrs, 7st 10lb J. Waddy 5
Mr. J. J. Henderson's Rylstone, 2 yrs, 6st 7lb Hall 6
Betting—6 to 1 agst Raball, 5 to 2 agst Cherry Brandy. Rylstone opened at 2 to 1, but any odds were obtainable at the close. Won by three-quarters of a length. Bad third.

Match, £100, h ft; 8st 7lb each. Half a mile.
Mr. E. R. Clark's Ruby, F. Marson, received forfeit from Mr. Henderson's Nelly Hill.

The "Cup," which was won to-day by Mr. Howard's extraordinary mare Virago, is a splendid piece of plate, valued at 300 guineas.

The horses introduced into the group of figures are after models by the well-known artist Mr. Cotterill; the figures and accessories are by Mr. Spencer. It was completed at Messrs. Garrard's manufactory, Pantons-terrace, Haymarket, and is an admirable specimen of British taste and art. There are four statues, two being equestrian, and two on foot. The principal equestrian figure represents the celebrated Queen Philippa, wife of Edward III., whilst riding through the ranks of the English army, immediately before the commencement of the battle of Neville's-cross, in the county of Durham, October 17, 1347. The battle was contested with great bravery on both sides, and many of the incidents connected with it are recorded by Froissart, the historian of the days of chivalry.

Although the attendance of general company was comparatively small on this, "The Cup Day," yet several thousands of persons were on the course, and the business of the meeting was sustained with much interest and an unflagging spirit to its close. In fact, a more brilliant meeting, in point of sport and weather, Doncaster has seldom if ever known.

TOTNES RACES.—THURSDAY.

The Yearning Plate of 25 sows. Heats. Two miles.
Mr. Fairweather's ch g The Drone, 6 yrs, 9st 10lb, J. Rogers 1 1
Mr. Formby's br g Epigram, 4 yrs, 8st 9lb Moon 4 2
Mr. C. Fursden's ch g The Herald, 6 yrs, 8st 10lb, J. Knight 2 dr
Mr. E. O'Kelly's gr in The Lark, 8 yrs, 9st Owner 3 dr
Won easily.

The Grand South Hams Steeple-chase for 40 sows, added to a Sweepstakes of 2 sows each. About four miles.

Mr. Parson's b m Louisa, h-b, aged, 11st Newcombe 1
Mr. Whidborne's b m Four of Spades, aged, 11st, Churchward 2
Mr. Watson's ch h Tipperary Boy, aged, 11st Barroughs 3
Mr. E. O'Kelly's ch g Honey, aged, 11st, owner.
Mr. Deacon's b g Edgar (h-b), 10st 11lb, owner.
Mr. Tully's b g Mountain Dew, aged, 11st, owner.

Four of Spades and Edgar were the favourites. The fences were cleared in pretty good style by nearly all the animals, and the race created the most intense interest. Mr. Newcombe, the lessee of the Plymouth Theatre, who rode iodine, displayed considerable skill in his jockeyship, and landed his nag a winner rather easily.

The Committee Plate of 10 sows. Heats. About a mile and a half. Won by Mr. E. O'Kelly's The Lark.

The Flying Steeple-chase for 20 sows. Won by Mr. Skinner's Cottager.

DOVER RACES.—THURSDAY, September 14.

A Handicap of 5 sows each, 3 ft, with 50 added. One mile and a half. 12 sows; 7 of whom paid £4 ft.

Mr. Barling's ch m Marchioness, by Leander, aged, 7st 6lb, Marbury 1
Mr. Douglas's Switch, 3 yrs, 7st Collins 2
Mr. C. Formby's Lady Blanche, 6 yrs, 8st 10lb Hammond 3
Mr. Sherard's The Harcourt's Daughter, 4 yrs, 8st, J. Stegales 4
Mr. Banks's Merrythought, 3 yrs, 6st 10lb Sherard fell

Betting—Even on Switch, and 2 to 1 agst Merrythought. Lady Blanche jumped off with the lead, followed by Marchioness, Switch, Baroness's Daughter, and Merrythought, in the order named, to the mile-post, where the favourite took second place, closely attended by Merrythought and Baroness's Daughter. In this way they ran to the hill turn, in rambling which Merrythought slipped up, throwing her rider with great force in the ground. This accident gave Marchioness a decided lead, which she held to the end, and won by half a length.

The Town Stakes of 3 sows each, with 30 added. Heats. One mile and a half and a distance. 4 sows.

Mr. Formby's Lady Blanche, by Epirus, 6 yrs, 8st 5lb, £40 Price 3 0 1 1

The Railway Plate of 20 sows. Weight for age, &c. Heats. One mile and a half. Won in two heats by Mr. Paley's b h The Doctor, by Ruler, 4 yrs, 8st 10lb (Taylor), beating Capt. Burke's Peg the Rake; and Mr. N. Power's Little Mary.

The Cornhill Plate of 20 sows. Weight for age, &c. Heats. One mile and a half. Won in two heats by Mr. Quinn's b h Wolf, by Lanercost, 6 yrs, 11st 2lb (Mr. Quinn, jun.), beating Mr. Wall's Harlequin; Capt. Burke's Peg the Rake; and Mr. Paley's The Doctor.

A fifth race was announced on the cards, but in consequence of the tide flowing in, it could not come off.

At the Newcastle Spring Meeting, Dalkeith, the winner of the Welter Stakes was objected to, for having claimed the half-bred allowance, though a thorough-bred horse, and the stakes have since been paid to the owner of Snuggler Bill, who came in second.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

The match between vessels not exceeding seven tons (R.L.Y.C. measurement), open to any yacht club, was sailed yesterday, September 14th. The prizes were a purse of £20, being £15 for the first yacht, and £5 for the second. The start was from Rith at 12.29 p.m., the course being down round a flag-boat moored off Rosherville, and up to North Woolwich. The following rules and regulations were to be strictly observed; and any yacht not conforming to them was to be disqualified—"All yachts entered must, by 11 a.m., upon their own anchors in a line between buoys laid down for that purpose by the committee, and weigh their anchors previous to starting. Yachts not in the proper line, in the opinion of the commodore, at the time of starting, to be disqualified. No open boat, or skill, allowed to sail. In all other respects the rules of the Royal London Yacht Club to be observed, so far as applicable.

The entry list closed on Wednesday week, and was as follows:—

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Gnat	1	Mr. R. Hewitt.
Blue-Eyed Maid	1	Mr. Turkvill.
Flying Dutchman	4	Mr. R. Pearce.
Little Mosquito	7	Mr. T. Bartlett.
Blue Belle	7	Mr. Talmadge.

Of these yachts, the Mosquito was found to be over-tonnage, and she was consequently withdrawn.

In order to witness this match we joined the Gannett steamer at the Blackwall pier, whence she started for Erith at 10.45, having on board Mr. Eagle, the treasurer of the club, who was the umpire of the day, several other members of the committee, and, considering the late period of the season, a goodly muster of yachtsmen. The wind was S.S.W., and blowing fresh all day, with a cloudy sky.

On reaching Erith, at 11.25, we did not observe the usual muster of yachts, but among those present were the Avalon, Curlew, Idas, Little Duchess, Little Mosquito, and a few others. Most of these accompanied the match. At the hour originally fixed for the start we were sorry to record that some of the yachts had not taken up their station; but at 11.45 all were seen in position. We have given their names above. Their stations were from the Kentish coast, Flying Dutchman, Gnat, Blue Belle, and Blue-Eyed Maid. At 12.15 the gun to prepare was fired, and at 12.20 the gun to start. Off they went! Dutchman took the lead, Gnat appeared ready to inflict her sting, Blue Belle came third, and the Blue-Eyed Maid fourth. The race was in this part a run down. On reaching Parflect, the Gnat was some distance ahead, Blue Belle second, and the Maid overhauling the Dutchman; but, while the Maid was shifting her balloon-jib for jib and foresail, she necessarily dropped somewhat astern, and Blue Belle, bolstered by the breeze, had to take in her topsail, the Dutchman being the only craft still carrying that sail.

On approaching Northfleet, the Blue-Eyed Maid passed the Dutchman, the topsail of the latter getting abrift, making, as it were, the distant signal for "an enemy in sight," but the tack and sheet were smartly brought under control, and everything re-established ship-shape. Blue Belle now reset her topsail, but Gnat wisely held on without so doing, and having moreover a reef in her mainsail, under which snug canvas she stood as upright as a dart.

The wind now dropped, and the Dutchman set her square-sail, but derived very little good from it. Till they rounded at Rishersville there was no material change; and, in doing so, the times were as follows:—

	h.	m.	s.
Gnat	1	22	15
Blue-Eyed Maid	1	23	45

In the "order of sailing," which there was no change in the "order of sailing." But perhaps no match was ever sailed in the river between small craft where smarter handling was witnessed than in the match of yesterday (Saturday); and we, therefore, hope to see many such matches, and earlier in the season. Writing at this late hour, and somewhat fatigued with the pleasures of the day, we can only record the result of the match, which terminated between four and five o'clock, much to the detriment of the engines of the Gannett steamer, the whole distance having been sailed over in some four hours, a time which even steamers find somewhat too fast.

ARRIVAL AT THE GOAL.

	n.	m.	s.
Blue-Eyed Maid	4	17	0

Mr. Eagle ably presented the prizes to the owners of the Gnat and Belle, and we were glad to observe that cheers were given for the losing yachts, as well as the winners. In one word, this match was good, honourable, and promising. It will lead to many such another. And the R.L.Y. Club deserves much honour on this occasion for their liberality.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.

(By Electric Telegraph.)

ABERDEEN, Friday Night.

The Queen left Edinburgh at nine o'clock this morning; arrived at Aberdeen at 2.10; proceeded by the Deeside Railway to Banchoy, where her Majesty had luncheon, and then drove over to Balmoral. The weather was very fine.

PARIS, Saturday.

THE BOURSE.—Three per Cent. Rentes closed yesterday for account, 54.40; ditto, for money, 73.85; Four-and-a-Half per Cents., for money, 97.25 ex div.; ditto for account, 97.50 ex div. Bank shares, 2,940. The Three per Cents. have closed a shade better.

An Imperial decree calls into active service 60,000 men, the remainder of the contingent of 1853.

The Moniteur publishes the following despatch:—

"THERAPIA, Sept. 7.—The French and the Turks left Varna on the 5th. The English fleet was to join them at the Isle of Serpents. The weather is fine."

The Isle of Serpents—called, in Turkish, Yilan Adasi; in Greek, Fidonisi; in Russian, Zmeinoi Ostrov—is a small rocky island, situated at a short distance from the coast of Bessarabia, opposite the mouth of the Danube. It is about a mile and a half in circumference. A lighthouse has been erected upon it. According to the accounts of Wallachian deserters, who arrived at Bucharest on the 2nd inst., the army of Prince Gortschakoff was in a state of the greatest demoralisation. The Russian troops, continually harassed and beaten by the Turks, over whom they were promised an easy victory at the opening of the campaign, have lost all confidence.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 7.

The storm which had raged for some days in the Black Sea had ceased. On the 4th all the troops had embarked. The whole fleet consists of 600 sail. On the 4th the first division of the fleet sailed in the direction of Sebastopol. The strength of the army is 90,000 men. On the 4th Marshal St. Arnaud sailed on board the Charlemagne.

SCIAMYL has gained a great victory over the Russians at Teflis. The Russians lost many men, seven guns, 3,000 tents, and all their baggage, with many horses and wagons. All the provisions and ammunition of the Russians fell into the hands of the victors.

THE RUSSIANS, under Prince Bebutoff, are retreating in forced marches from Kutais and Kars to Teflis.

On the 25th of August the Turkish Minister retired from Teheran to Erzerum. There is a complete rupture between the Porte and Persia.

VIENNA, Saturday, 10 A.M.

According to a telegraphic despatch of the 7th, from Odessa, eight Anglo-French steamers had, on that day, placed themselves with their broadsides towards the quarantine harbour.

A strong impression prevails that something will be undertaken at the Isthmus of Percep.

At Sinferopol, in the Crimea, great preparations are making for the reception of a high personage—probably a Russian Grand Duke.

DESTRUCTION OF RUSSIAN GUNBOATS IN THE BALTIC.

(By International Telegraph via the Hague.)

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 13.

Our papers state that an allied force has landed at Ulriceborg, near Sweaborg (Helsingfors), erected batteries, and destroyed a large division of Russian gunboats, which the enemy thought were safe in that harbour. The town was set on fire.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 9.

The formation of the reserve is definitively settled. An imperial ukase orders a levy of ten men in every 1,000 in the west of the empire.

ARREST OF MAZZINI.

The Journal de Geneve of the 9th contains the following:—"A letter from Bern of the 5th informs us that Mazzini has been arrested at Basle. He was coming from Bern, where he had spent some days in the house of a patrician, to whom he described himself as an Italian Count, greatly attached to Austria, and driven into Switzerland by the fear of the cholera. According to our correspondent, the police has discovered his residence, and was preparing to apprehend him, when he absconded, and left for Basle, under a false name. The Government gave notice to the authorities of his arrival, and he was arrested on alighting from the diligence."—[The above is untrue.—Ed.]

Our Letter-Bag.

FOWLS

Sir,—I wish to address you on a subject in which you, and many of your correspondents, take considerable interest—I mean in reference to Cechin-China fowls, bantams, and the ordinary domestic bird, of the same genus.

Domestic, however, I must say something about myself. I am a literary man by profession; that is to say, I get my living by writing for as many hours in the day as my energy will permit. I reside in a house which used to suit me marvellously, my apartments being in its rear, and looking upon quiet gardens. I did my work, earned my money, paid my rent, and pursued the noiseless tenor of my way—"the world forgetting, by the world forgot."

Now, sir, we come to the birds. My number is No. 8. At the June quarter, a wretch took No. 1; and into his garden he has turned about a dozen bantams and common fowl. At the half-quarter, a miscreant took No. 3; and into his garden he has turned seven Cechin-China fowls, of extreme ugliness, and deep bass voices. The whole party screech, and war, and chuck, and screech, and crow, and squab—privately fighting among themselves, or ferociously defying their neighbours over the wall—From 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., daily, Sunday included.

My work is greatly interfered with by this abominable and irritating riot. I shall not earn my money—I shall not pay my rent—the tenor of my way is no longer noiseless; and, so far from forgetting, or being forgotten by the world, I shall have memoranda of its requirements left with my landlady by county-court bailiffs and the like, to my extreme discommodement.

Somewhat may say that I may move. But I won't move. Why should the poultry make me vacillate my principle?

I tell you, and I tell Nos. 7 and 9 (they read THE FIELD), that I mean to kill their birds; and I want you, or some of your correspondents, to inform me of the most merciful manner of effecting my purpose. Of course, one cannot fire guns from back windows in Piccadilly. What grain shall I steep, in what soporific? I mean to throw the prepared article over the walls, right and left, over-night, and hope for the happiest results.

People who bring nuisances into populated neighbourhoods have no right to courtesy; but, of course, this is a notice of which 7 and 9 can avail themselves if they please. I had rather they removed the birds than that I did. But one party must do it; and, having a strong conviction that the party will be the undersigned, I beg to ask for the information above indicated, and to subscribe myself your obedient admirer.

Miso-GALLIE.

Millico, September 20.

THE HIGHLANDS OF SOUTH WALES.

"The sun
Itides high, and on the thoroughfares of life
I find myself a man in middle age,
Busy and hard to please."

How many of us may say the same. My simple object in now writing is to point out to some of your readers how, for a short time at least, this difficulty may be obviated.

Should any of your readers be in want of good fishing, pure, invigorating air, and, at the same time, capable of appreciating most romantic scenery, let them follow my example.

Having perused "Cliffe's Guide to South Wales," and owned over his description of "the land of the gorges," I wrote to an artist-friend, begging him to pack up his traps and be ready for a start. He gallantly responded to the invitation; and our force being strengthened by another recruit, in the shape of a young and ardent fisherman, accompanied by "Jem," his factotum, we found ourselves at the Belle Vue Hotel, Llanwrtyl, one fine Monday morning, distant from the market-town of Builth, Breconshire, ten miles. Having partaken of the invigorating mineral waters for which this picturesque village is so justly celebrated, and having done ample justice to a most substantial breakfast, we started on our first day's campaign. Ascending the river Irfon (which flows through the village), through rich and fertile vales, gradually becoming more wild and uncultivated—here gliding noiselessly along in peaceful seclusion, clothed with profusion of verdure and fantastic trees, hemmed in on either side by steep velvety mountains—there braving and foaming over immense boulders of rock, which have fallen from the overhanging crags, we reached the Grouse Inn, Abercreswell. Leaving "our" artist to sketch some of the beauties of the place, not omitting the twin churches on either side of the river, of primeval architecture, viz., Llanfawr Abercreswell and Llanfhaugel Abercreswell, where "Funeral yews,

Notched with the growth of centuries, stretching round,
Dismal in aspect and grotesque in shape, Pair after pair were ranged,"

we started off on a pioneering expedition, to search for accommodation in the adjacent valley of the Towey. Our friend the landlord of the Grouse Inn being our guide, we arrived, after a ride of five miles, at the farm of Vanog. Our reception was most hospitable, and we were at once told in the kindest manner that we should be boarded and lodged there. I must not forget to mention that, en route to this place, we felt the drenching effects of a terrific thunder-storm. Language must fail to describe the awfully grand effects produced upon the eye and ear in the desolate hills we traversed. Our guide, however, we fear, did not experience the same sensations; for, before we had time to think, he was over the hills and far away, reminding us forcibly of Tam o'Shanter, nothing impeding his progress. Could any of your fellow-crafts have seen us, we should certainly have been put down in their minds as "possessed."

How much has been said and written about hotel charges. I grant it, that, in the generality of cases, I as much as others have reason to cry out. Not so, however, in the present case; for, on our return, after partaking heartily of eggs and bacon, and imbibing some excellent "cwrw," our landlord, having found us a mount, acted as guide, and having had a thorough drenching, informed us, upon asking for our score, that there was nothing to pay; "he did it all out of respect." Never shall we forget his genuine, warm-hearted Welsh hospitality.

We returned to our quarters at Llanwrtyl by six in the evening. Our piscatorial friends produced the results of their day's work; and, to judge from the number of trout, and the size of the greater proportion, their delight must, in a measure, have equalled our own.

Next morning at seven, off to the mountains. Started to Abercreswell. Here we put our tackle in order, got out our sketching apparatus, &c., and commenced in earnest our day's work. Following the upward course of the Irfon, passing under the awfully grand and craggy heights of Allt-yr-hebog, we arrived at Camdiur-y-bleiddist, or "The Wolf's Leap." The river here, reined to a very narrow channel by the action of an accumulated age of waters, foams through the base of precipitous rocks, some fifty or sixty feet in height, their summits actually overlapping each other, forming as magnificent a subject for a picture as the most enthusiastic lover of rocky scenery could wish. Hence we proceeded up the river to "Llanerch yrfa," every step a study, and every turn a picture. All traces of cultivation being left far behind, nothing could exceed the desolate grandeur of the scenery, which, by those who have had opportunities of judging, has been compared to that of the Kyber Pass, in Cabul. The rain coming down in torrents stayed all further progress; so, like good generals, having collected our forces, we being unable to face the enemy, beat a retreat. Being wet to the skin, and hunger knocking at the door, we were obliged to call a halt at the Grouse Inn. Here we examined our baskets, and found we had bagged upwards of 25 lbs. of trout, our friend "Jem" having aided in the capture. Next came the question of cooking; and here, our host being in a fix, his cook being absent and his other domestic "not know nothing" about it, we were obliged to officiate. To fastidious epicures our cooking might have been distasteful, the dish not being certainly a la Soyer, but au naturel. Nevertheless, to hungry mortals like ourselves, it proved most acceptable. The inner man being refreshed, we started homewards, fishing all the way, notwithstanding the weather. Arrived, we made ourselves comfortable, and over good stiff glasses of grog—the best antidote for colds—discussed the events of the day. Jem was started off, and by our orders laid plenty of night lines. A good dish of eels for breakfast next morning was the result; rather rich, your epicures may say; but this was at six in the morning, and we had a heavy day's work before us. Breakfast over, we mounted our swift and sure-footed steeds, and proceeded, over as wild and mountainous a line of country as ever it has been our lot to see, en route for Vanog. In many places the eye may travel over an area of country some ten, twelve, or fifteen miles in extent; in fact, as far as eye can reach in either direction, without detecting the slightest sign of cultivation, not so much as even a shrub—nay, not even a furze bush:—

"Alone, alone, a desolate, dreary wild,
Barren and verdureless: low, swampy moss,
Where tadpoles grew to frogs, for leagues long
Our solitary path. No sight nor sound
Of moving life, except a grey curlew,
As shrieking tumbled on the timid bird,
Aye glancing backward with its coal-black eye,
Keen as by nap invisible pursued,
Was seen or heard."

What pen can describe the effects of that morning scamper? What says Tupper?—

"At five on a dewy morning,
Before the blazing day
To be up and off on a high-mettled horse
Over the hills away:
To drink the rich, sweet breath of the gorse,
And bathe in the breeze of the Downs,
Ha! man, if you can match bliss like this
In all the joys of towns."

But let us on. We arrived at Vanog, where a most hearty reception awaited us. Having put our steeds in the stables, we proceeded up the Towey, which flows immediately below the house. The scenery here is even more wild and picturesque than that of the Irfon. Would that I were gifted with the descriptive genius of old "Christopher." Would that he had been alive, and had formed one of our party, and that the result had been that, instead of my humble attempt in illustration of our exploits, he had added another chapter to his immortal "Recreations;" but, alas! I feel forcibly that

"Words are weak, and most to seek When wanted fully forth."

Having followed the course of the river for many miles, and having retraced our steps, we again arrived at our new quarters. Plenty of plain, but good and substantial, fare smoked upon the board shortly after our arrival—not forgetting the produce of our baskets, which were again weighty, and afforded a treat to many besides ourselves.

The meal over, we adjourned to the settle in the old chimney-corner. Two "gwrty" sitting in regal dignity in his old arm-chair, and his worthy partner opposite to him, busily employed in household occupations, we lighted our pipes, filled our glasses, and after a short but interesting debate upon foreign policy, war-taxes, &c.—for you must know the Welsh are great politicians—adjourned to our comfortable beds, and in less time than we can write it were safe in the embrace of Morpheus.

Early next morning we were again on the move, and inspected Cam Cellwg, or "The Cock's Step," a sight worthy of a journey from any distance. It is difficult to find the path, but "Aye floundering, on

And on I stray'd, finding no pathway save
The runlet of a wintry stream, begirt
With shelvy, barren rocks; around, o'erhead,
Yea, everywhere, in shapes grotesque and grim,
Towering their rose, encompassing my path,
As 'twere in savage mockery. Let a chasin,
Yawning, and bottomless, and black! Beneath
I heard the waters in their sheer descent
Descending down and down; and further down
Ascending still and dashing—now a rush,
And now a roar, and now a fainter fall,
And still remote—and, yet, finding still
For the white anguish of their boiling whirl
No resting-place."

Quitting with regret so glorious a sight, we proceeded downwards along the Towey, through scenery hitherto unexplored by artists, but which I pledge my sincerity I will amply repay any artist to visit, and after passing the modest little church of Ystrad filn, we came in sight of the mountain upon which Twm Shon Catti's cave is situated. The scenery here is that an artist could wish.

"Mountain upheld on mountain huge and blue," interlacing at the base, which is occasionally wooded, with the river Towey in the foreground, rushing over rocks tons and tons weight, in "rich confusion hurled," vying with each other in strangeness of outline, and each in itself a study. I ought to mention that Twm Shon Catti was a celebrated Welsh freebooter, and that this was his principal fastness. We then proceeded some distance up the Doethlan, which here joins the Towey, and had some excellent sport.

Sewin and salmon of moderate size are here abundant; consequently our basket, on our return, afforded us an additional treat.

The following day we started by a wild and mountainous road until we arrived at the Pysgotwr river, near the farm of Troed rhyr cymer, on either side of which, in lofty grandeur, from the rival rocks of Craig Pysgotwr and Craig Ddô. We followed the Pysgotwr upwards through scenes that struck us dumb with astonishment. The vale here is so narrow that a conversation may be carried on between parties on the opposite summits of the gorge, the sides of which are many hundreds of feet high. Onwards we went, the scenery growing wilder and wilder every step, until our advance was actually stopped by the inter-lapping of the huge rocky cliffs, the river only finding a passage, and too inaccessible and deep to permit of further progress by that means. We reluctantly retraced our steps until we arrived at the Dothian, following its course until we reached its junction with the Towey, and proceeded down the latter until we got to Rhaidir-mwyn. Here a vehicle met us, and conveyed us to the pretty little town of Llandover, pleasantly situated on the Towey. Having explored the ruins of the old castle at the latter place, and the new Educational College, we next morning retraced our steps to the place where we quitted the river Towey the day previous, and followed it down to Llandover. This latter part of the river forms so complete a contrast to what we had just left, that, although it is strictly beautiful, after the scenes we had just left, we could not sufficiently appreciate it. Seen, however, en route upwards, this river would not fail to attract the attention of the most fastidious. Glorious woody reaches of river—overhanging foliage

"Stretch'd away from glade to glade,
A green interminable shade."

rich reflections—bits such as Redgrave would rejoice in, and do justice to; there, arriving at rocky bits, it subjects for Jansson's able pencil, and lastly, at scenes which Richardson would idealise into reality.

A few words more and I have done. We had but a hasty glimpse—as this account will show—of scenery exceeding anything in North Wales in point of wild and barren grandeur, and what is more to the purpose, in an artistic point of view,—more comprehensible in consequence of the extreme narrowness of the gorges in the truly and justly so called "Land of the Gorges." Notwithstanding the shortness of our visit, I can conscientiously say, to any one possessed of good pluck, a stout pair of legs, and capable of taking strong exercise, that he will not regret if he follows our example. The exertions he will be called upon to make to see some of the scenes I have attempted to describe will be very great. Let not that thought, however, deter him; for "αὐτὰ νηὶ πλεῖν ἔστιν."

Once start, and the rest will induce him to proceed further. An increased stock of wealth will be the result. And, in conclusion, let me say to each of your readers—whether he be fisherman, artist, general lover of nature, or in want of change—

"Si sapiis ipse veni."

I am, sir, your sincere well-wisher,

SENEX.

P.S.—Should any of your readers take my advice, and be in want of further information as to the means of access to the country I have described, I shall be most happy to give it.

AGRICULTURE.—THE HARVEST OF 1853 v. 1854.

Sir,—As this question is the principal topic of the day, and people who know but little about it are saying it is such a wonderful good time with the farmers, I trust I shall set their minds at ease, and show them they are wrong, and at the same time write nothing that can be questioned. Before entering upon this important and vast question, I would advise the farmers not to sell their wheat, for I have reason to believe it will be dearer. My reasons are—let any one travel through this country now who did twelve months ago, and it will be very rare that an old wheat-rick can be seen. I know places where as many as ten old ricks might be seen last year at this time, and now not one. Is it likely that these persons will have so much wheat to take to market this year as last? Can any one think that they have ten new ricks this year? And again, having just sold these ricks, they must have the money, and think they will sell wheat at £10 to £12 a load. No; only those men that want money will sell. So that, in the first place, they cannot sell so much; and in the second, they will not. And one word more. How is it there is so much talk about the crops?—simply because we were graciously blessed with fine weather to gather it into our homes. If it had been wet, the cry about large crops would have been stopped; but whether it is true or wet the largeness cannot alter—only the quality, not the quantity. Last spring, people were crying out about how thin the wheat looked; if this is true, and in many places it was, it must have been so when it was cut, for wheat does not come up in spring. You might ask me—how is it wheat has sunk lately? I would say, that on account of the bad harvest last year, farmers' stock did not hold out till harvest, consequently the money ran short, and directly after harvest they were obliged to thrash to have money to keep on with; and another reason is, that persons who go by hearsay keep crying the crops up, and make them out so wonderful, that the miller won't buy. And again, I read in the paper the other day that some person had calculated that our country was better £50,000,000 by this harvest. I should like to see this man's calculation, if he has any, put in THE FIELD next week for people to read.

But to return to my subject. All will own last year was a very bad harvest; but I might here say, that I have heard this I am about to write corroborated by some sensible farmers, who, as a body, I am happy to say are fast improving. The cost of every acre sown is £6 and upwards. Last year the farmer had an average of three sacks, which made £4 18s., showing a loss of 2½s. per acre, when the prices were at famine. This year it will cost as much; and can men of knowledge think that an acre will this year pay £1 when 2½s. is deducted? I fear not. Permit me just to add, that as the farmers are the men that ought to be thought of first, and not last, as they now are, and as they are generally said to be an ignorant set, I fear they have as much sense in their little finger as those that go about crying up the crops have in their body. If a tradesman has a good year, no one knows about it; but every one dies if a farmer has. It is a great wonder that our farmers, if they do what these people say they do, have not ere now ridden in their carriages. In writing this letter I am sure I may say, from the best of judges, it is only a fair average crop.—I am Sir, yours,

Cochin.

THE DEGENERACY OF FOXHOUNDS, &c.

Sir,—Your time is so occupied in the celebration of the summer amusements—racing, yachting, and cricket—that our all-absorbing winter diversion, was it not for the occasional morning exhilarating carol, might be entirely forgotten, for things are not now as they used to be. It is seldom, in these days, that many of the most ardent in the season will go half a mile out of their way for a friendly chat with the huntsman, or look into the dormitory and give a cheering look at his old acquaintances, who are always ready to acknowledge, with un-ambiguous signs, their gratitude for such attention; and many, now called sportsmen, will pass the same without notice, the first day of the season, when, on their well-chosen parade, men, horses, and hounds, in all the exuberance of pride, strength, and condition, to greet a noble scion on his first appearance. To know that there are hounds in the field, and to be near the huntsman at the finale, constitutes a modern virtuoso.

There is, however, still some good vermin spirit left in the old English foxhunter, and a determination to keep to the hunted fox, although he will not break till he is prepared for so doing; nor are the merits in the kennel neglected, for with how many of the great professors have I frequently heard the clock strike four and five times while we have been descending on the merits of the crosses. Beware of the drafts there. What changes since the year 1779, when, in my first Christmas holidays from school at Nicheoldever, I attended my father's harriers, the clerk of the parish leading my pony; at nine rode the same independently, with the H. H. It was then stipulated in the leases to the farmers, to walk a puppy or two generally, and the miller, butcher, blacksmith, and other tradesmen, usually did the same; but, it must be observed, that there was little land under the plough, much coarse pasture, more cows, and less population. I benefitted by the custom for many years afterwards in a degree, both for hounds and other sporting dogs. Circumstances have so altered of late years, that theory and pocket frequently disagree, and the hounds which used to be kept by large landed proprietors, are now by subscription; consequently frequent changes of men and the whole establishment, and in many cases difficult to maintain through a whole season. I have lately scribbled my sentiments, and had them forwarded from one friend to another, but they seem quite reluctant to ask others to do what they show no disposition to do themselves. I expect a good example through my young friend Lord Portsmouth, who has lately formed a large establishment, near my property, at Hurstbourne-park; and, as his tenants have most of them entered into new covenants, I doubt not they will accede to his wishes about hound puppies, as the Eggford tenants always did for his father. He came into large property in Devonshire, about the year 1794, soon after which I purchased fifteen or sixteen couple of harriers for him, from Mr. Clibbester, near Barnstaple, and they were soon turned into foxhounds; three or four seasons they hunted red deer, head-quarters, Dulverton and Linton, to which places I went with him; we were also at Mr. Willoughby Stowells—that is the country for native hospitality and right good sportsmen. I take up your paper with avidity to read of them; I used to hunt with them formerly in Sir Thomas Acland's and Colonel Basset's time, near Barnstaple—I expect there are few who can say the same. The north of Hampshire has shown more sport during the last five years than I recollect for many years, much owing to the rain, but I agreed one day with Mr. Ashton Smith that some of the foxes gave up too soon this last season. I will say a word or two more, for on this subject I never know when to stop; I constantly see your paper in the winter months; your able writer on hunting subjects, be he who he may, seems to know something about it—by which I mean a great deal; it will be a national benefit if he can solve the difficulties we labour under. Now, as to horses; proper make, shape, and strength, for cavalry as well as hunters. Mr. Cecil says they must be thorough-bred for the latter. Why do the English people let the foreigners outbid them at the sales, and how keep up the succession always required? Why do I see so few thorough-breeds for twenty and thirty years together in so many large establishments, and always selecting horses of great weight and bone for the heavy ground in the woodlands. If Mr. Greville gives up racing, why will he not endeavour to try for horses that will carry fourteen or fifteen stone when they are at their full strength, eight years old? I fear many full-blood would be too impetuous for the chase. I expect artificial food would not do to continue so long. A neighbour had some hunters, bred in Hertfordshire, fed on milk till he prepared them for use, and then they had blotches all over, and no use.

I am an advocate for an additional tax on two-year-olds brought to the post, and a sliding scale on to five. Such is the rage on the turf, that I think not one less Derby colt would start, but some would attempt to breed more powerful animals, with shorter legs and joints, for the chase, and think, with me, that it would be better to be under the turf than on it—but for let it from me to interfere with the amusements of other people. Could I be flattered with the hope of your powerful assistance in my cause, I would beg the favour of a line in answer; if not, pray don't let this, my scrawl, occupy a moment longer of your time.—I am, Sir, your very obedient servant,

T. S.

CUB-HUNTING.

Sir,—The 1st inst. was told, was the day for the commencement of cub-hunting, with Mr. Drake's foxhounds. That of bel I jumped, and away I went, when we found a litter of nine cubs in some beans at Deuham, belonging, I believe, to Mr. Curtis. We lived with us about fifteen couple, and a nice hour's sport we had; at the end of which we pulled one down. I inquired, and found that the cubs were very plentiful in this hunt; so I went home highly delighted.—I am, Sir, yours, Cocin.

PRICE OF PAPER.

Sir,—I send you two paragraphs, cut from newspapers, that may interest many of your readers, now that so much attention is being paid to the paper question.—Yours, &c.,

PAPERS.

"CHEAP PAPER.—The Long Island Freeholder says: 'Dr. Antisl has invented a pulp, which, in its raw state, will not cost more than about one-sixth of a cent per pound; and, by the aid of a machine invented by Mr. Nolan, can be brought into the market made into paper, at a cost of about four cents per pound. Paper at present costs about sixteen cents, so that the value of the invention can at once be seen. The material from which the pulp is manufactured will flourish and grow abundantly in ground that is at present useless to the farmer, and here, too, the community will be the gainers. We have seen and examined specimens of the pulp, and have no hesitation in pronouncing it just the thing wanted. It is as white and clear as the most clearly bleached cotton, and it is capable of the most delicate tint. The brightness and transparency of the straw paper is not to be found in it, while it is capable of the highest finish, maintaining all the pliancy and toughness of the pure linen rags.'

"Sir,—Observing in the Daily News of Saturday, August 12, a communication from an anonymous correspondent, stating that he was in possession of a process for obliterating printer's ink from the surface of newspapers, I beg to state that ever since the public announcement of the accruing scarcity of paper, I directed my attention experimentally, with a view to supply the demand, and succeeded in discovering a beautiful, inexpensive, and effective method of utilising, if I may so speak, 'waste paper,' and which, perhaps, in the present state of the paper trade way, in its practical results, prove to be not less important than the discovery of paper making itself. Having brought my process to the required point, I lodged my specification and applied for letters patent on the 18th July last, for the invention of 'treating all kinds of paper whereon any printing, engraving, engraving, letter-writing, or lithographing has been printed or impressed, so that the same may be completely removed, discharged, or obliterated from the said paper, and so that the said paper may be readily re-used in sheets, or be re-converted and worked up again into its primitive pulp by the ordinary method, and be again manufactured into and be used as paper.' In view, Sir, of the public importance of the paper question, and the much desired prohibition of 'cheap' paper, the information may be of interest to you, Sir, and to the numerous readers of the Daily News.—I am, &c., CHARLES MAYHEW AUBURN, 3, St. James's-garden, Havercost-hill, Hampstead-road."

AGRICULTURE.

AGRICULTURAL POSSIBILITIES.

(From The Times.)

SIR.—Some remarks which I made at the last agricultural gathering at Tiptree have caused a discussion, in which I feel that I have been misunderstood, and therefore beg the favour of a little space for explanation.

The most interesting feature of Mr. Mechi's farm this year was his liquid manure system, and on this he chiefly enlarged in the way of instruction. It is not used directly to the corn crops, but the excellence of the manure fields shows how beneficial it is to them. The Italian rye-grass is the only unsuccessful crop; and Mr. Mechi, when his own illustration failed him, very fairly adduced the experience of others. He told us of the marvellous results obtained by Mr. Kennedy, in Ayrshire, whose Italian rye-grass affords keep at the rate of seventy-houseful sheep an acre. And Mr. Telfer, of Ayr, who was on the ground, corroborated this statement from his own experience, he having got from three cuttings of this prolific grass, in one season, as much green food as would have made twenty tons of hay per acre! It was, perhaps, no wonder that many were startled by such statements, seeing that this is ten times the number of sheep and ten times the weight of hay which are usually got. Men cried out, "Impossible!" They would not believe it. Perhaps it is impossible in the eastern counties, and, at any rate, it may be useful to point out the advantage which the moister climate of the west gives it in the growth of grass. The difference between the annual rainfall of the east and west of Great Britain is reckoned at ten inches. An inch of rain is equivalent to 100 tons of water to an acre; so that, on the average, nature gives to the western farmer 1,000 tons more water per acre than to his eastern competitor. In the growth of grass we know that it is all needed; for in Ayrshire, where these enormous crops of grass are grown, both Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Telfer feel the necessity of permitting no waste of liquid. During summer they apply the liquid manure early in the morning and late at night; not showering it high into the air, but directing the stream straight to the roots of the grass, so that none may be dissipated in mist, and as little as possible lost by evaporation. Now, the mechanical labour, even when aided by machinery, of applying 1,000 tons of water to an acre of land must ever present a serious obstacle to the farmer of the eastern districts; and even when he has done this he is only on the level whence the western farmer starts. I am anxious to press this point on public attention at present, that it may be duly considered in any scheme for applying town sewage to agricultural purposes. In so far as I know, there is not a single instance yet published of the profitable use in this country of town sewage applied by pipes. The case of Edinburgh is on a totally different principle. There the sewage water is run over the land by irrigation in hundreds of tons to the acre, instead of by tens of tons, to which it must necessarily be restricted in applying it through pipes by machinery. And, seeing that the solid manuring matter of town sewage is diluted in many hundred times its weight of water (as has been shown by Professor Way), we need not wonder that the report of the late Board of Health, while fully illustrating the beneficial application to crops of rich farmyard sewage through pipes, is comparatively silent with regard to town sewage similarly applied. Great caution is therefore necessary in founding conclusions of general application from the success of farmyard sewage in the moist climate of the west.

The possibility of growing such crops of grass under any circumstances was doubted by many. But wherefore impossible? A good crop of meadow hay weighs about two tons. A stalk of Italian rye-grass is twice the length of meadow-grass. If the stalks stand equally thick on the ground, the Italian rye-grass will thus weigh twice as much as the meadow-grass. But if there are two stalks of Italian rye-grass for one of meadow-grass, the crop of the former will be four times the weight of the latter. To those who have seen Mr. Kennedy's and Mr. Telfer's crops it is unnecessary to say that both these conditions are fulfilled; and it needs but the repeatable application of firm sewage to this rapidly growing grass, in a favourable climate, to secure three such cuttings in a season as Mr. Telfer affirmed he had got. To the diligent, as Mr. Mechi said truly, time is money; and the axiom could not be better illustrated than by growing three crops in a single season in place of one. A startling statement of any kind is always doubted, and disbelief in matters of this kind is usually in proportion to limited knowledge. Many farmers, because they have never seen it themselves, would say that it is "impossible" on any land in this country to grow super crops year after year without manure—to have beans, wheat, mangold, potatoes, cabbages, oats, and swedes following each other in any succession (provided the land is kept clean), each crop most luxuriant, all carried off the ground, and not a particle of manure applied. And yet this may be seen in half an hour's ride from town by the North Kent Railway, on the drained portion of Plumstead-mareh occupied by Mr. Russell. When guano was first introduced, many deemed it impossible that a brown powder, brought thousands of miles across the ocean, would be a hundred times more valuable for the growth of crops than an equal weight of good farmyard manure. In truth, one of the most serious obstacles to agricultural improvement is to be found in the limited standard which some agricultural teachers have set up as the fixed boundary of agricultural progress. There is no presumption so great as that which glibly cries "Impossible" in an age which has produced the electric telegraph.

I take the opportunity while writing to you of sending the result of some experiments made by me this season at Baldon, on the application of manure to wheat, and in continuation of similar ones made last year. In the centre of a fifty-acre field one acre was left without manure, all the rest of the field receiving 2 cwt. of Peruvian guano per acre in autumn, at the time the seed was sown. The produce of the acre unmanured has been tested against that of the adjoining acre, which received Peruvian guano, and this is the result:—

One acre, with guano, 32 bushels, 60lb. weight per bushel, at 6s. 6d. per 60lb.	£10 18 4
One acre, without manure, 25½ bushels, 60lb. weight per bushel, at 6s. 6d. per 60lb.	8 5 9
Cost of 2 cwt. of guano in 1853.....	£2 12 7
Profit per acre, besides one-fourth more straw ..	1 9 0
	£1 12 7

The inferiority in the quality of the unmanured wheat, as shown by the weight per bushel, is worthy of notice, as well as the fact that the unmanured wheat was a week later in ripening than the other.

The second experiment was made to test the value of nitrate of soda and common salt as a top dressing to wheat in spring, and the result in this case has been extremely profitable. The wheat was sown in December, after a heavy crop of swedes, all drawn off; and the whole field was top-dressed in April with 1 cwt. of nitrate of soda and 1 cwt. of salt per acre, given in two applications, at a fortnight's interval, one acre near the centre of the field having been left undressed. This and the adjoining acre have been thrashed, and yielded as follows:—

One acre, with nitrate and salt, 42 bushels, worth 6s. 6d.	£13 13 0
One acre, without manure, 30 bushels, worth 6s. 6d.	9 15 0
Cost of manure, 1 cwt. nitrate, 18s.; 1 cwt. salt, 2s.	£3 18 0
Profit per acre	1 0 0
	£2 18 0

These two experiments supply little that is new, as they only corroborate hundreds of others made in various parts of the country in previous years. But they are useful in impressing upon the British grower the power he might possess of increasing the produce of his wheat crops. It is not merely a question of profit to the farmer. Here are two substances, the application of which in certain known quantities to the soil give an increase which may be stated, on the average, at one quarter of wheat per acre, or an addition of nearly one-fourth to its natural produce. An addition of one quarter an acre all over the country would be equivalent to the food of one-fourth of our population. It would make all the difference between plenty and scarcity, between the cheap loaf and the dear loaf, between steady prosperity and a drain of gold, with all its commercial disturbance. And yet the arrangements for the supply of articles known to possess such qualities, instead of being a prime object of care to the British Government, are intrusted to the charge of some unimportant consul at the antipodes! 9, Little Ryder-street, St. James's. JAMES CAIRD.

CATTLE FROM EUROPE.—The ship Antaretic at New York, from Liverpool, brings 160 head of cattle, consisting of bulls, cows, sheep, pigs, and horses, for the Kentucky Stock Company.—Boston Daily Advertiser.

NORTH SEA.—At the end of August, 1853, the export of cattle to England from Tonnage was 7,761 oxen, 7,215 sheep, and 43 horses. At the end of August, 1854, the export was 7,259 oxen, 6,487 sheep, and 48 horses.

TO DESTROY INSECTS.—A French gardener has discovered that by painting his hot-houses with gas-tar all the insects so destructive to plants and fruits die.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A HOP MARKET AT HEREFORD.—A large and influential public meeting has been held at the Old Town Hall, Hereford, the mayor presiding, for the purpose of establishing a hop market. Resolutions in favour of the project were carried nem. con.—Local Paper.

GIANTIC EAT OF OATS.—Yesterday we had handed to us a splendid ear of oats, which was cut in a field belonging to Mr. Cronshaw, of Belthorn, a neighbourhood by no means celebrated for its fertility. The ear consisted of 200 grains. If we suppose these grains to be all sown again, and that they would increase in the same ratio for five years, the yield from a single grain would amount to 17,860 tons, estimating 500 grains to weigh an ounce.—Blackburn Standard.

CONTRACT FOR THE EAST.—Messrs. Scott, of Belfast, have contracted with Government for hay to the Ordnance and cavalry horses in Turkey, and they are shipping a prime article.

TO BE NOTED.—In a cloudy morning it is a matter of importance to the farmer to know whether it will be sunny or showery in the afternoon. If the ants have cleared their hole nicely, and piled the dirt up high, it seldom fails to bring a clear day to the farmer, though it may be cloudy till ten or eleven o'clock in the forenoon. Spider-webs will be very numerous about the tops of the grass and grain some cloudy mornings; and fifty years' observation have shown the writer of this that these little weather-guessers seldom fail in their predictions of a fair day.

Markets.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—Consols, which left off on Saturday at 95½ to ½ for money, and 95½ to ½ for the account, were quoted throughout the day 95½ to ½ for money, and 95½ to ½ for the account. Although there were arrivals from India, China, the West Indies, Australia, and America, there was no intelligence calculated to exercise much influence, and public attention is exclusively directed towards Sebastopol. India Bonds left off at 7s. to 11s., and Exchequer Bills at 6s. to 9s. premium. Exchequer Bonds quoted 99½ to ½.

TUESDAY.—Consols for money opened this morning at 95½ to ½, being a decline of an eighth, and returned to that price after a period, during which there were sellers at 95½. For the 17th of October they opened without alteration from the price of last evening, namely, 95½ to ½, and the final quotation was 95½ to ½. India Bonds left off at 7s. to 11s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 6s. to 9s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to ½.

WEDNESDAY.—Consols for money were first quoted 95½ to ½, and they left off at 95½ to ½. For the account they began at 95½ to ½, advanced till there were buyers at 95½, and closed at 95½ to ½. After regular hours, in consequence of higher prices from Paris, transactions took place at 95½ to 96. India Bonds were quoted 7s. to 10s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 6s. to 9s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to ½.

THURSDAY.—The news of the landing of the allied forces in the Crimea has caused the English funds to maintain with great firmness the improved quotations of last evening. Consols for money opened at 95½ to ½, and left off at 95½. For the account they began at 95½ to 96, and closed at that price after an interval during which there were sellers at 95½. India Bonds were quoted at 7s. to 11s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 6s. to 9s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to ½.

FRIDAY.—Consols opened at 95½ to 6.

SMITHFIELD.

FRIDAY, September 15.—The number of beasts is not large, but fully adequate to the demand. Owing to the warm weather and dull trade at the dead markets, there is great difficulty in effecting a clearance at rather reduced rates. Trade is very dull for sheep, and several remain unsold notwithstanding a disposition to take lower prices. Good lambs are saleable at late rates. Calves are lower. From Germany and Holland there are 216 beasts, 2,090 sheep, and 265 calves; 100 beasts from the Northern and Midland; and 90 milch cows from the home counties.

MONDAY, September 18.—We had again an increased supply of beasts. The average quality was very inferior, and many of this description remained unsold. Prices were rather lower for the best kinds. The number of sheep was large and the demand smaller, consequently quotations were lower, and a clearance could not be effected. The season is now much advanced for lambs, and only a few choicest qualities meet with purchasers. Calves were again lower. From Germany and Holland there were 2,510 beasts; 6,970 sheep; 174 calves; and 83 pigs. Spain: 470 sheep. Scotland: 13 beasts; and 2,800 from the northern and midland counties.

MARK LANE.

FRIDAY, September 15.—The quantity of English wheat on sale this morning was trifling in the extreme, and factors experienced no difficulty in obtaining an advance of 2s. per quarter upon Monday's rates. The finer descriptions of foreign, whether white or red, were saleable at a like improvement. Barrel and foreign sack flour must be noted fully 1s. dearer. Some thousand sacks of town-made flour are reported to have been sold for shipment to Paris, where prices continue to advance. Oats were in short supply, and again improved in value 1s. per quarter. Barley, beans, and peas were each held with increased confidence, and the turn in price was against the buyer. London averages: Wheat, 6s. 1d.; barley, 29s.; oats, 28s. 7d.; rye, 38s.; beans, 46s.; peas, 38s. 7d.

MONDAY, September 18.—There was a fair show of English wheat at market this morning by land carriage samples from Essex, Kent, and Suffolk; but from Lincolnshire and Cambridgeshire there was not much offered. The town millers were tolerably free buyers, and had to pay 1s. to 5s. advance upon the rates of Monday last. Foreign wheat was in moderate request, and 2s. to 3s. dearer. American flour must be noted 1s. to 2s. per barrel dearer. English barley sold slowly at former prices. The receipts of oats during the week have been small. Beans and peas were in very short supply, and higher prices were readily obtained.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."
OUR SAILOR KING.
SUMMER, as if unwilling to yield to her more staid successor, has cast some of her brightest smiles on the First October Meeting at Newmarket. With such splendid weather, the ground in capital condition, and a fair share of good racing, it is not to be wondered at that the meeting, ordinarily none of the liveliest, should have passed off with uncommon brilliancy. It might have been wished that the attendance and fields had been larger; but enough has been accomplished to render "The First October" a very pleasant affair. As the gathering but seldom enters on the month from which it takes its name, a change of title would remove an apparent contradiction of terms. Such an alteration would, of course, necessitate another, that of the Second October; but "The First Autumn" would afford sufficient distinction from the Newmarket October and Houghton Meetings.
The Duke of Bedford's Nathan opened the ball on Tuesday by winning the Handicap Sweepstakes over the T.Y.C., and beating easily his brace of opponents, Falcon and Spinaway. The odds were on the victor, therefore there was no lack of judgment on the part of the ring. But the reverse was the case for the Eastern Counties Handicap, when Alembic started at 9 to 4, and the winner at 8 to 1. From fifty nominations eleven only were saddled to contest the prize. This can scarcely be a matter of surprise when the eccentricities of the handicap are duly considered. Old Rowley, 5 yrs, at 5st 9lb, was absolutely turned loose. The theory, that no allowance of weight will bring an inferior animal to the form of a good one, is every day meeting with confutation. Antevorta, a four-yr-old, at the same weight with the winner, was second. The system of handicapping at Newmarket requires reformation, and we trust shortly to see a move made in the right direction. Alembic, who was certainly well in at 6st 6lb, lost start, but managed to finish third. Lord Clifden declared to win with the son of Touchstone and Latitude. But Old Rowley, not caring two straws for his opponents, made the most of his advantage, like an old soldier, and cleared the winning-post by an easy couple of lengths. Alembic's subsequent achievement in the Sixth Triennial, and his running with The Trapper, across the flat, for the Grand Duke Michael's Stakes—three races in one day—must give warning to the field that they will find in him no despicable competitor for the buster in the Cambridgeshire. Hesse Cassel, who, it was rumoured, had broken down a fortnight back in the St. Leger, contrived to take part in three different contests with a considerable improvement on his Doncaster display. These reports of breaking-down must henceforth be received by the public cum grano salis, since some of the friends of Autoerat assert that he also escaped that casualty on the eventful day that gave victory to the Knight of St. George. The style in which Clotilde carried off the Hopful Stakes must give an increase of confidence to the adherents of Lord of the Isles. Dirk Hatterick, though with the odds on him, was doomed to another defeat in the Buckenham,—Rambling Katie beating him by a head. But Lord Eglinton may console himself with the assurance that he possesses a fine colt in Dirk, and we fully expect to see the son of Van Tromp and Blue Bonnet ripen into a most formidable three-yr-old. The Trapper accomplished a brace of successes. Those who doubted his staying powers were decidedly proved to be wrong. Though he had nothing much to beat in the "Ditch In," gallop for the St. Leger Stakes, the manner in which he disposed of Hesse Cassel and Punicestone admits not of the slightest cavil. The Granby brought out a field of five; Daffodil starting the favourite at 6 to 4 on her, but Lord Exeter's Besika proved the winner by half a length. A new candidate for distinction, bearing the bold name of Wild Dayrell, made such an example of Para and Hazel in the 30 sovs Sweepstakes, that he is not unlikely to find a place in the books of those who are betting on the Derby. Sharavogue again defeated Adine, and on Thursday added the Queen's Guineas to his noble owner's account. Vanderdecken sorely disappointed the expectations of his party, as 4 to 1 was laid on him for the Fifth Triennial, Mr. Knowles's Talfourd, however, giving him the go-by in the race. But, perhaps the most interesting event, was the contest between Riflemau and Bonnie Morn in the Seventh Triennial. Bonnie Morn was by long odds the favourite, but the gallant little grey, for the first time, found a conqueror in Mr. Osbaldiston's colt. The struggle was narrowly watched, and will probably effect some changes in the market. It was a great triumph for the 'Squire, and must be highly gratifying to his lady, who, it is said, takes no little interest in the career of the smart Riflemau. On the whole, the sport was above the average, and the meeting likely to be remembered as one of the best First Octobers witnessed for some years.

Nothing has been done, publicly at least, relative to the Doncaster affair. Rumours there are in plenty, but we shall avoid noticing them till they take a definite shape. One thing we hope will prove something more than an improbability, that any part of the question should be carried into a court of law. Turf matters, like those of Cupid, are never seen to so little advantage as when unravelled by forensic acumen. Honour and not law should form the sole jurisdiction. The evidence taken before a committee of the House of Commons, some ten years back on gaming, might be resuscitated with advantage. It is extant, and the opinions of trainers and others connected with racing, may still be found amid the light literature of the penderous Blue-books of the day.
The betting throughout the week has been dull in the extreme, and, with the exception of a rapid rise in Muscovite, characterised by little or no change.
The famous West Australian, respecting whom there was also an imaginative break down a few days back, is about to retire into private life, and he certainly carries with him the biggest of reputations. The triple victory of 2,000 gs, Derby, and St. Leger, the most ambitious of steeds may hereafter long strive for in vain.

NEWMARKET HEATH.

The two clever Irish-bred fillies Helena and the Deformed, are announced for sale by auction, at Tattersall's, on Monday next. Both have accepted for the Cambridgeshire, and, at the weight, should have a fair chance of winning. They are represented as sound, and doing good work. The Deformed, we know, has been doing her work lately, and in a very artistic manner carrying off more than one valuable prize; Helena has frequently been an excellent friend to the fielders, bringing them safely through when least expected.

The programme of the Chester Autumn, on Tuesday and Wednesday next, does great credit to the skill and exertion of Mr. Topham. The added money will be upwards of eight hundred sovereigns, and, as the present fine weather gives promise of continuation, we may expect to see another agreeable reunion on the banks of the Dee. But, Chester has become so renowned for its racing, that success must follow, as a matter of course. Kelso puts forth attractions at the same time, but, from the distance, is not likely to interfere with the sports on the Roodee. The Yorkshire Union Hunt Club and Wrexham hold their meetings later in the week, and are sure to afford a satisfactory wind-up of sport preparatory to the great encounter at Newmarket Second October.

THE NEWMARKET AUTUMN HANDICAPS.

THE CESAREWITCH.

It was a wise step, one much needed, when the Jockey Club stewards strengthened the Second October and Houghton Meetings at head-quarters by establishing the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire handicap events.

Fifteen summers have rolled along the swift gliding stream of time since the Earl of Miltown's pet mare Cruiskeen (the dam of Kithborough, who ran Voltigeur the dead heat for the great Northern Turf of 1850) notched the first prize over the long course, two seasons prior to her successful throw in for the envied Cup on the time-honoured Cestrian Roodee; and the race has increased in interest and perplexity every successive campaign since then. It is remarkable, though, that among the successful animals enrolled there is not one aged horse to be found, and that the six-yr-olds have only triumphed twice, and the five-yr-olds but once—the preponderance being in favour of the three-yr-olds, who have won seven times, the four-yr-olds triumphing in five instances only. The heaviest successful weight, too, was 8st 4lb, carried on its second anniversary by Clarion, 4 yrs, but he journeyed with 4lb over-weight; whilst The Cur, 6 yrs, bore the handicapper's own impost of 8st 3lb. With the exception of 8st carried by Faugh-a-Ballagh, 3 yrs, the full brother to the celebrated Irish Birdcatcher, and which included the 10lb penalty for his Leger achievement, these are the only instances in which the winners have figured at 8st or upwards. Cornua, 4 yrs, however, who, like Cruiskeen, subsequently drained the Chester Cup, got home in triumph with 7st 11lb in 1843; and The Baron, also of Irish extract and allied to Birdcatcher, and now the stud dux of the French Government, gained the laurels with 2lb less, including his 10lb Leger penalty. The three-yr-old Arcanus won with 5st 4lb in 1842, and Legerdemain, also of the same age, with 5st 7lb in 1849, the brace being the lowest in the scale of weights; the next in rotation, but on the ascent, being the last year's winner, Haco, 3 yrs, at 5st 12lb, who carried 13lb less than Weatherage, the champion of the preceding year. Thus have the laurels been swept away:—

Year.	Winner.	st lb	Year.	Winner.	st lb
1832	Cruiskeen, 5 yrs	6 0	1847	Cawtrough, 4 yrs	7 0
1840	Clarion, 4 yrs	8 0	1848	The Cur, 6 yrs	8 10
1841	Mona, 4 yrs	6 11	1849	Legerdemain, 3 yrs	5 7
1842	Arcanus, 3 yrs	5 4	1850	Glanca, 4 yrs	7 0
1843	Cornua, 4 yrs	7 11	1851	Mrs. Tait, 6 yrs	0 0
1844	Faugh-a-Ballagh, 3 yrs	8 0	1852	Weatherage, 3 yrs	6 11
1845	The Baron, 3 yrs	7 9	1853	Haco, 3 yrs	5 12
1846	Wit's End, 5 yrs	0 2

The handicap this year has not given that satisfaction as could be wished; but "doctors will differ," and the task of allotting weights becomes more difficult each successive racing season, particularly for these autumnal trysts. For the Cesarewitch fifty-four only accept out of one hundred and fifty-one; and seventy-eight out of one hundred and fifty in the Cambridgeshire. In the former list, as it stands now, we have a solitary aged candidate, five six-yr-olds, eight fives, ten fours, and thirty three-yr-olds; the non-acceptors comprising one aged horse, a couple of six-yr-olds, fourteen fives, eighteen fours, and sixty-two three-yr-olds. The highest weight accepting is the premier one of the original handicap, viz., 9st 7lb, and the lowest, a range of seventy pounds.

The appended list will not only afford the interested reader the whole of the acceptors, and the names of their respective trainers, but show the gradation of weights allowed by Rataplan to his array of compeers:—

These weights, it must be understood, are inclusive of penalties incurred up to the close of last week only.

From the above array it will be gleaned that the maximum and minimum imposts, now, are:—

Aged horses	Highest.	Lowest.
Six-yr-olds	8st 7lb	6st 2lb
Five-yr-olds	8st 4lb	6st 12lb
Four-yr-olds	8st 7lb	5st 12lb
Three-yr-olds	8st 7lb	6st 6lb
	8st 6lb	4st 7lb

being a range of 5lb among the old animals, 20lb among the six-yr-olds, 37lb the fives, 44lb the fours, and 54lb the threes.

Prior to analysing the acceptance bevy, we must give a parting glance at the muster roll of "non-contents." Of the two aged horses, the premier-weighted one, the French bred Voyageur (late Mazuline) declines 8st, even weight with the three-yr-old Old Noll, who also declines, and of the brace of six-yr-olds crased, Sleeping Partner, 7st 7lb and Ianthe 6st 9lb, the latter accepts in the Cambridgeshire at a pound more. Fourteen five-yr-olds are struck out, leaving eight in, the unfortunate Kingstou declining 9st in both encounters, King of Trumps, 8st 9lb and 9st; Aquila, 7st 5lb and 7st 6lb; and Merry Bird, 7st for each; whilst Little Harry, 8st 11lb, stands for the Houghton affair with 7lb less; The Nahoh, 8st 10lb with 1lb more; Bird on the Wing with 1lb less; Khadijah, 7st 1lb with 2lb less; and Scarecrow, 7st with 2lb less. Of the eighteen dissentients belonging to the four-yr-old team, Defiance, Haco, The Reiver, Coomburand Stathesmon, Hobby Horse, Pharo, Jacquette, and Dove, also decline the Cambridgeshire imposts. Little David, 8st 10lb and Ethelbert, 7st 11lb, however, accept in the latter at 1lb less. Two-thirds of the three-yr-olds are "found wanting" in the acceptance list, Virago, Andover, King Tom, The Trapper, Old Noll, The Hermit, Marsyas, Wild Huntsman, The Spinner, Hospodar, Neville, Stern, The Cripple, Tom, Sine-quanon, Seducer, Grey Plover, Doctor O'Toole, Balhec, Epanimondas, Apollonius, Punicestone, Merry Monk, Gamekeeper, General Brozo, Empress Catherine, Amos, Caliph, Jack Frost, Selina, Ludwig, Motley, the California filly, and the Strife filly, not liking their respective allotments in either of the handicaps; but, Derwish, declining 7st 10lb for this, accepts in the Cambridgeshire at 3lbs more; the Pontiff, 7st 7lbs at the same weight; Shakespear, 7st 7lb at 9lb less, Lady Bird, 6st 10lb at 3lb less, Hercules, 6st 9lb at the same weight, Claret (hy Joinville) 6st at 4lb less, Miss Sellon, 5st 5lb at 1lb more, Stonehenge, 5st 4lb at the same weight, Valeria, 5st 1lb at 1lb more, Violet, 4st 10lb, and Rodo-meli, 4st 7lb, each at the same weight, and Bluebeard, 6st 5lb at 7lb less. Why Ivan should decline with the same weight as Scythian, and a 12lb allowance from the Knight of St. George, if the two latter have a chance, we cannot make out, unless the stable are sanguine with Tros; and it is somewhat strange to us, also, that Grey Plover (the brother to Chanticleer) should decline a 27lb receipt from the Leger victor, or Kingston decline meeting Rataplan with a 7lb allowance, after twice beating him, and giving him weight. A dozen accept that were not engaged in the Cambridgeshire, and thirty decline; whilst the double entries there are forty acceptors, and sixty-five dissentients.

The fifty-four "contents" are furnished by twenty-seven stables, viz., five from H. Wadlow's, four each from Abraham's, J. B. Day's, T. Dawson's, and J. Scott's; three each from Elliot's and Longstaff's; two each from Dockeray's, W. Stephens's, W. King's, J. Osborne's, T. Taylor's, A. Taylor's, and the junior Stephenson's; and one each from G. Abale's, H. Bradley's, J. Bumby's, Brooke's, Collison's, W. Day's, Joseph Dawson's, Dixou's, Harlock's, Pickering's, Roe's, and Woolcote's. Of the Stanton "lot," the Prime Minister has to give his stable companions Eva and St. Clair, the former of the couple penalised, 13lbs each, the veteran Candlowick a stone, and the Medal, 25lbs. The senior Day's quartetto comprises a four-yr-old, and a trio of threes, Barrowbie allotting 8lbs to Scythian, and 31lbs each to Diana, and Star of Surrey. Abraham's accepts with a brace of three years olds, and a solitary four and six-yr-old, Domino giving a pound to Cobnet, 26lbs to Barrel, and half a stone to Black Doctor. John Scott's three-yr-olds, the little Bracker, El Dorado, and Burlington, receive 2lb, 6lb, and 13lb, respectively, from Ammonia, 5 yrs. Of Dawson's string, Amalgamation allows 4lbs each to La Belle and the Jealous One, and a stone to the brother to Italian (Shilletto). Longstaff's Leger winner being mulcted 12lbs, is now half a stone and 12lbs higher in the scale than Indian Warrior and Eulogist; and the six-yr-old Mrs. Birch, in Elliot's stable, figures at only 2lbs more than Redcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy, a brace of fours. Of Dockeray's five year old couple, Adine gives Muscovite 4lb. Hungerford allows his juvenile companion Middlesex, 15lbs; Typee (T. Taylor's) 4lb to Omoo; Rataplan (W. Hopkins) 2lb to Rabgill; Calamus (A. Taylor's) 18lb to Lincoln's Inn; and Poodle, 5 yrs (Stephenson's) 19lb to Rodo-meli, the minimum-weighted of the handicap. Of the thirteen horses who are solitary representatives of their several stables, Rattle, 4 yrs, gives Koh-i-Noor, 5 yrs, 9lb; Joe Miller, 5 yrs, 10lb; Scherz, 3 yrs, 10lb; Exact, 4 yrs, 16lb; Ethelwolf, 5 yrs, 17lb; Ptolemy, 3 yrs, 24lb; Phaeton, 3 yrs, 27lb; Brown Brandy, 3 yrs, 2st; Kidnapper, 3 yrs, 30lb; D. O., 8 yrs, 34lb; Tros, 3 yrs, 34lb; and Naomi, 3 yrs, 35lb.

As we merely intend this article as a preliminary one to the more immediate discussion of the actual merits and chances of the acceptors, which portion of our task shall be duly performed in the succeeding waif, we may observe, in conclusion, that the candidates which have already appeared in the betting comprise—

LIFE IN THE AMERICAN PRAIRIES.—A few hours after leaving, the prairie near the horizon seemed to be moving with long undulations, like the waves of the ocean. Unable to account for this singular appearance, I looked with my telescope, when, to my surprise, I discovered the whole prairie towards the horizon alive with mustangs. Soon after they could be seen coming towards the train. Major Emery at this time was in advance of me about half a mile with his portion of the waggons. We saw the long line of mustangs approach him, and soon after pass before, the whole herd following after, and extending as far as the eye could reach across the prairie. The mustangs became restive, and we could see the teamsters hurrying forward the waggons for protection behind each other. On went the great stream, and the next moment one of the mule-teams in advance sprang from the train and dashed off at full speed after and among the wild horses. The teamster in vain tried to restrain them. It was all to no purpose. Away they went, John Gilpin like, the waggon, with six mules, followed by all the loose animals that were driven with the train, which had also partaken of the stampede. The herdsmen, in order to catch the runaways, left the train and went in pursuit, making altogether the most exciting spectacle we had yet witnessed. The chase continued for a mile; for the mules in the waggons had become perfectly frantic with fear, surrounded as they were by equally frightened mustangs, and all bounded over the prairie at their utmost speed. Seeing the danger, our men put on the lash, and we hurried forward to render such aid as lay in our power. The men of the other party fired at the herd, which had the effect of breaking the line, and turning it in another direction. The frightened herd made directly for us, in the same long line, the termination of which we could not see, as it lost itself far in the distance. I now became alarmed, fearing a general stampede among our mules, for nothing can restrain these timid creatures when frightened. If they cannot take their waggons with them, they become so frantic that they will tear themselves from their harness and flee away. Our first precaution was to close up the waggons, so that only those in the first one would see the mustangs. The mules of the second were placed alongside of the foremost waggon, the next by the side of the second, and so on to the last, each waggon thus protecting the team that followed it. We now locked the wheels of all, and men stood by the leaders to restrain and quiet them. As I had no inclination to be carried off against my will among a herd of frantic, wild horses, after the fashion of Mazeppa, I dismounted and hitched my mule to a waggon, and with several others ran with my fire-arms to meet the advancing steeds, which were now nearly upon us, led off by a fearless stallion. We discharged our arms at them as they approached, and, fortunately, with good effect. The leader was turned, and the avalanche of wild horses swept by us like a tornado, much to our relief. We held in for a few minutes until the herd had passed, when we unlocked our wheels and hastened forward to the first of the train, which had halted. By the time we reached it, the runaway waggon and mules, with those who had been in pursuit, were just coming up, after a most exciting chase. Fortunately, no one was injured, and our animals were all captured and brought back, except one, and that one of the most valuable horses belonging to the party. This animal was ridden by the waggon-master, and when in full pursuit of the runaways, he stepped into one of the hurrowing-places which abound on the prairies, fell, and threw his rider over his head. Thus freed from restraint, he joined his wild brethren and disappeared on the prairie, with his saddle, bridle, and trappings.—Bartlett's Personal Narrative.

LIVING WITH A BROKEN NECK.—The Brattleboro (U.S.) Eagle gives some singular circumstances in connexion with the attack by an enraged horse, on Mr. Brigham, of St. Johnsbury, showing that the breaking of the neck does not of necessity cause immediate death. The fracture of the neck compressed the spinal marrow so violently as wholly to prevent it from affording any communication between the brain and the body. As a consequence the whole body below the fracture was paralysed, deprived alike of sensation and the power of motion. But he retained the full possession of his mental faculties, and conversed intelligently. Not only this, but by means of the nerves not involved in the calamity of the spinal marrow, the brain kept up its communication with the vital organs, and maintained the exercises of their functions for nearly two hours. But the manner in which those functions were exercised was very unusual. Especially was this the case in regard to respiration. Ordinarily this is carried on mainly by the action of the intercostal muscles upon the ribs, and as these rise and subside, inspiration and expiration take place. By the injury of the spinal marrow those muscles were deprived of their ordinary nervous stimulus, and consequently were wholly inactive. The whole labour of respiration was assumed by the diaphragm, which faithfully performed its duty, while the internal walls of the chest remained motionless. In this manner he continued to breathe during the brief remainder of his life.

BUFFALOES BY THE ACRES.—A member of Governor Stephen's Northern Route exploring party, in a long communication to the St. Louis Republican, written from the bank of Yellow Stone River, says of the incidents of the party thus far:—"On Sunday, after a march of ten miles, the buffaloes were reached. They were estimated by some as high as 500,000—200,000 is considered as a very low estimate. Drawing up the train at our usual halt at noon, a large herd were about half-a-mile ahead. The hunters, six in number, were immediately despatched, well mounted on spare horses reserved for that especial purpose, and the whole train had an opportunity to witness a buffalo-hunt. The hunters dashed in among the herd, picked out the fattest of the crowd, and then separating the selected ones from the herd soon dispatched them. In an hour the waggons were sent but a small distance from the route to receive the choicest pieces of buffalo. In the next two days' march the hunters were kept some distance ahead to keep off the buffaloes; it was the only way the safe passage of the train could be insured through the sea of flesh. The pack-mules and spare animals following on the train, being too numerous to be separately led, were hard to control; and, despite every precaution and care, one horse and four mules were lost—they getting mingled with the herd.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

A remarkably thin attendance, and business extremely dull. For the Cesarewitch, Muscovite was backed for upwards of £250, at 10 to 1; and towards the close two or three investments were made at a point less. In last Thursday's return, by a mistake in transcribing, 500 to 25, and 200 to 10, were inserted agst Muscovite. The bets were 300 to 25, and 200 to 10.

Balrowine, notwithstanding City prejudices, returned to 15 to 1. taken to about £50. Bracken, Scherz, Ammonia, and Barrel were in good demand, and are likely to attain a very prominent position in the betting. Some small sums were entrusted to Poodle and Ptolemy, at 25 to 1 each.

Cambridgeshire.—The principal bet on this event was 1,500 to 100 agst The Early Bird.

Derby.—9 to 1 was taken to some money about Graculus Esuriens, 16 to 1 to £75 about Dirk Hatterick, and 500 to 30 about De Clare Westminster, a new outsider, was introduced at 40 to 1; taken to £100. He is in William Day's stable.

500 even was betted between Bonnie Morn and Lord of the Isles, and 500 even on John Day and John Scott agst J. E. Day and William Day. Closing prices:—

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

The Newmarket Meeting this week has not been sufficiently attractive to take away more than a small portion of the Manchester indulgences, consequently there was a tolerable muster at the rooms to-day; the business transacted, however, was considerably below what we anticipated, from the attendance would have been done. The Cesarewitch Stakes, which is the first great event now on the "tapis," causes very little speculation. Nothing being backed outright, 10 to 1 was taken to a few pounds about Muscovite, and 20 to 1 currently offered on the field, bar one. D. O. being the next in demand, £100 to 1s. was laid several times agst the Black Doctor, and 30 to 1 taken rather freely about Banel, 100 to 6 was offered agst Early Bird for the Cambridgeshire Stakes, and offers to take 20 to 1 about Orinoco; 25 to 1 was taken to a little money about Bonnie Morn. In conclusion, we may remark that betting, upon the whole, was very flat indeed.

Cesarewitch Stakes.

10 to 1 agst Muscovite (t)	25 to 1 agst Kidnapper (t)
20 to 1 — D. O. (t)	30 to 1 — Banel (t)

Count Bathany's Determination, 3 yrs, 8st 11lb, Stamford
Sir R. Pigot's Folly of the Day, 3 yrs, 8st 8lb, J. Stergless

Betting—9 to 4 agst Alembic, 5 to 1 agst Quince, 8 to 1 each agst Old Rowley and Henrietta, 10 to 1 agst Orestes, and 10 to 1 agst any other. Lord Clifden declared to win with Alembic. Henrietta and Quince took ground in front, Antevorta and Old Rowley being third and fourth until they had proceeded about 500 yards, when Old Rowley took the lead, with Antevorta lying at his side; the latter made a good effort to achieve the victory, but was at last beaten easily by two lengths; same distance between second and third; Orestes was fourth; Quince, Nicotine, Kennyside Hero, and Folly of the Day, were the next lot, well up; Orestes and Alembic got badly off.

Match. T.Y.C. 1 ft.

Duke of Bedford's Weathercock, by Weatherbit, 3 yrs, 8st 7lb, Pett 1
Lord Burghley's Bluebeard, by Gwallor, 2 yrs, 7st 13lb, Flatman 2
Betting—2 to 1 on Weathercock. Bluebeard had a slight lead to the cords, where Weathercock headed him, and he was at last defeated easily by three-quarters of a length.

Second Year of the Sixth Triennial Produce Stakes of 10 sows each. For three-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 4lb. The owner of the second horse to receive a sum equal to 10 per cent. upon the whole stake, and the owner of the third horse a sum equal to 5 per cent. upon the whole stake. A.F. 87 subs.

Lord Clifden's Alembic, by Touchstone, 8st 7lb, A. Day 1
Mr. Grattwick's Hesse Cassel, 8st 7lb, T. Sherwood 2
Mr. Mare's Fact, 8st 7lb, S. Rogers 3
Mr. Howard's Apollonius, 8st 7lb, Wells

Mr. Knowle's Sahara, 8st 5lb, Marlow
Mr. Magnin's Instructor, 8st 5lb, Marlow
Lord Orford's Firelight, 8st 5lb, Bartholomew

Betting—6 to 4 agst Clothie, 3 to 1 agst Para, 5 to 1 agst Antoinette, and 7 to 1 agst Claret. The favourite, who was very fractions at starting, made nearly all the running, and won easily by two lengths; Claret beating Antoinette for second money by a neck; Besika was a good fourth; Para, Crown Pigeon, and Firelight, close together, were the next three.

Sweepstakes of 10 sows each. For two-yr-olds, 6st 7lb; three, 8st 7lb; four, and upwards, 9st. The winner to be sold for £50, if demanded, &c. T.Y.C. 5 subs.

Mr. Sargent's Duff, by Phileascher or Mr. Martin, 2 yrs, 8st 7lb J. Stragles 1
Mr. W. Smith's Donald, 2 yrs, 8st 7lb Ashmull 2

Lord J. Scott's Rambling Katie, by Melbourne, 8st 1lb, Whitehouse 1
Lord Eglington's Dirk Hatterick, by Van Tromp, 8st 7lb, Marlow 2

Betting—6 to 4 on Dirk Hatterick. Rambling Katie made all the running, and, after a fine set-to up the ropes, won by a head.

The Grand Duke Michael Stakes of 50 sows each. For three-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 4lb. The owner of the second horse to receive £100 out of the stakes. A.F. 21 subs.

Mr. Payne's The Trapper, by Ion Flatman 1
Lord Clifden's Alembic A. Day 2
Mr. Grattwick's Hesse Cassel T. Sherwood 3
Lord Wilton's Punicestone, ... Bartholomew 4
Mr. Mare's Fact S. Rogers 5
Betting—7 to 4 on The Trapper. Won by a short head; tail third.

Match. 200 h ft. T.Y.C.
Mr. Knowle's Ferrara, by Orlando, 2 yrs, 8st 4lb, received forfeit from the Duke of Bedford's Para, 2 yrs, 8st 7lb.

The Trial Stakes did not fill.

Magnificent weather; capital sport; and the ground in excellent condition. Attendance of company comparatively thin. Bonnie Morn has arrived. No betting on coming events.

BETTING AT NIGHT.

Since the July Meeting, the Subscription Betting-room has been considerably enlarged and improved. Watson's mode of ventilation has been introduced with excellent effect, and when the intended decorations of the walls are completed, the room will, in every respect, be worthy the metropolis of the turf—for elegance, comfort, and accommodation, it will be greatly superior to any other in the kingdom. Only a few members mustered, and very little business was transacted.

The Cesarewitch.

Muscovite was in great force at 7 to 1, 25 to 1 was taken to £55 about Scherz, and the same odds to a pony about Ptolemy.

Derby.

11 to 1 was taken about St. Hubert, and 1,000 to 30, and 1,000 to 25, betted against Dirk Hatterick.

WEDNESDAY.

The Granby Stakes of 30 sows each, 20 ft. For two-yr-olds, not named in the Rutland Stakes. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb. Certain winners extra. From the turn of the Lands in. 8 subs.

Lord Exeter's Besika, by Belram, 8st 3lb Norman 1
Mr. Mare's Claret, 8st 3lb G. E. Sharp 2
Mr. W. H. Barrett's Dalhill, 8st 3lb Palmer 3
Mr. Rogers's Gaiter, 8st 3lb S. Rogers 4
Count Bathany's Wooden Wall, 8st 3lb Flatman 5
Betting—5 to 4 on Daffodil, 4 to 1 agst Besika, and 6 to 1 agst Clive Won by half a length; three-quarters of a length between the second and third; good fourth; Wooden Wall beaten off several lengths.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 15 sows each, 10 ft. For two-yr-olds. T.Y.C. 4 subs.

Mr. Smith's Donald, by Planet, 7st 4lb Charlton 1
Mr. Greville's a by Red Hart, out of Refraction, 8st 7lb, Flatman 2
Mr. Armstrong's Saling, 7st 12lb Sly 3
Mr. Kenyon's Sister to Singapore, 7st 0lb, paid.

Betting—6 to 4, each, agst Refraction and Donald, and 5 to 2 agst Siding. A good race in. Won by a neck; half a length between the second and third.

Sweepstakes of 50 sows each, h ft. For two-yr-olds, not engaged in the July, Chesterfield, Rutland, Clearwell, or Fencible Stakes. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb. A winner of £200 or upwards, 6lb extra. T.Y.C. 7 subs.

Mr. F. L. Popham's Wild Dayrell, by Ion, 8st 7lb, Marlow 1
Duke of Bedford's Para, 8st 10lb (incl. 4lb extra), S. Rogers
Lord Exeter's Hazel, 8st 7lb, Norman

Betting—7 to 4 on Wild Dayrell. Hazel made play to the cords, where the favourite went ahead, and won very easily by two lengths; dead heat for second place.

Fifty Pounds. Three-yr-olds, 7st 6lb; four, 8st 8lb; five, 8st 10lb; six and aged, 9st. D.I.

Lord W. Povey's Sharravogue, by Freney, 5 yrs, 8st 13lb, S. Rogers 1
Mr. Greville's Adine, 5 yrs, 8st 10lb Flatman 2
Mr. Coumbe's Nyronne, 4 yrs, 8st 8lb Bartholomew 3
Mr. Poddar's Roumelia, 3 yrs, 7st 6lb Allom 4

Betting—7 to 4 on Sharravogue, who made all the play, and won by ten lengths. Nervous and Roumelia pulled up a long way from home, and walked in.

The St. Leger Stakes of 25 sows each. For three-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb. Certain winners extra. Horses which had never won a Plate or Sweepstakes allowed 6lb. D.I. 19 subs.

Mr. Payne's The Trapper, by Ion, 8st 7lb Flatman 1
Mr. Grattwick's Hesse Cassel, 8st 7lb T. Sherwood 2
Lord Wilton's Punicestone, 8st 7lb Bartholomew 3

Betting—5 to 4 on The Trapper, and 5 to 2 agst Hesse Cassel. The favourite won very easily by five lengths; Punicestone trotted in a long way astern.

The Third Year of the Fifth Triennial Stakes of 10 sows. For four-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 4lb. The owner of the second horse to receive a sum equal to 10 per cent. upon the whole stake, and the owner of the third horse a sum equal to 5 per cent. upon the whole stake. D.I. 63 subs.

Mr. Knowle's Taffured by Ion, 8st 7lb Bunby 1
Mr. Magnin's Vanderbecken, 8st 7lb Marlow 2
Mr. J. M. Stanley's Vex ran, 8st 7lb Charlton 3
Lord Exeter's Filbert, 8st 7lb, Norman

Betting—1 to 1 on Vanderbecken. Won very cleverly by three lengths; very bad third. Filbert pulled up at the Duke's Stand, and did not pass the chair.

Small fields, but the sport somewhat interesting. Another brilliant day, and an increased attendance of company.

In the course of the morning, 13 to 2 was taken about Muscovite for the Cesarewitch, and 15 to 1 about Calamus.

BETTING AT NIGHT.

Scarcely anything was done to warrant a quotation. Muscovite continued firm for the Cesarewitch, at 13 to 2, and 15 to 1 was taken to a small sum about Ptolemy, 100 to 5 betted against Ethelwold, 500 even on Poodle against Ptolemy, and even money laid that both ran. Alembic was backed for £50 for the Cambridgeshire, at 16 to 1.

THURSDAY.

The Rutland Stakes of 30 sows each, 20 ft. For two-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb. Certain winners extra. From the Turn of the Lands in. 12 subs.

Duke of Rutland's b e by John O'Grant, out of Nina, 8st 7lb Flatman 1
Mr. Mare's Tynemuth, 8st 7lb S. Rogers 2
Lord Exeter's Nagara, 8st 5lb J. Rogers 3
Lord Exeter's Natrum, 8st 7lb Norman 4
Baron Rothschild's brother to Tremble, 8st 7lb Marlow 5
Captain Cookson's Lady of Lyons, 8st 3lb J. Horsby 6
Betting—2 to 1 agst Tynemuth, 1 to 1 agst any other. A very fine race in, was won by a neck; the second beating the third the same distance; good fourth. Lady of Lyons was very restive, and awkward at the post. On returning to scale, the rider of Nagara preferred a complaint against the rider of the Nina colt for swerving upon him at the finish. At the conclusion of the race the race was brought before the stewards, and after hearing evidence the complaint was dismissed.

Handicap Plate of 50 sows. For three-yr-olds and upwards. A.F. 18 subs.
Mr. Wigram's Legator, by Pompey, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb, J. Stragles 1
Mr. Rogers's Miss Bolton, 3 yrs, 8st 14lb J. Rogers 2
Mr. Coumbe's Nervous, 4 yrs, 8st 5lb Bartholomew 3
Mr. J. V. Turner's little Naughty, 5 yrs, 8st 7lb, J. Pines
Mr. Tomlinson's Tonyria, 3 yrs, 8st 1lb, Ashmull
Mr. Sargent's Table, 3 yrs, 8st 12lb, Wells
Mr. Vornon's Jessamine, 3 yrs, 8st 10lb, Fordham

Betting—5 to 2 agst Tonyria; 4 to 1 agst any other. Jessamine made play with Cable, Tonyria and Nervous well laid up. At the Bushes, Legator came out and took the lead, and was joined in the Abingdon Mile Bottom by Miss Bolton, who, admirably ridden by young Rogers, made a good effort to achieve the victory, but was defeated by a head. Two lengths between the second and third.

First Day of the Seventh Triennial Produce Stakes of 10 sows each. For two-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 4lb. T.Y.C. 18 subs.

Mr. Oshuldeston's Rileman by Touchstone, 8st 7lb, Flatman 1
Mr. Barry's The Bonnie Morn, 8st 7lb A. Day 2
Lord Orford's Billy, by John O'Grant, out of Margaret, 8st 4lb Bartholomew 3
Mr. Howard's Cavalier, 8st 7lb, Wells
Lord Exeter's Nagara, 8st 1lb, Norman
Sir R. Pigot's Katie Stewart, 8st 1lb, G. E. Sharpe
Mr. Greville's e by Red Hart, out of Refraction, 8st 7lb, R. Harding

Betting—2 to 1 on Bonnie Morn, 3 to 1 agst Rileman, 100 in 7 agst any other. After some delay, which was caused by the fractious disposition of Katie Stewart, the start was effected. Rileman and Bonnie Morn were first off, but as soon as they got into running, Refraction cut took the lead, and on his galloped with it until they arrived halfway between the New Ground and the cords. Rileman then shot to the front, and the race from that point was between him and Bonnie Morn; the latter was, however, beaten clearly by half a length; three lengths separating the second from the third. Cavalier was a bad fourth; Nagara fifth; Refraction colt sixth.

After the race, Rileman was backed for nearly £1,000, at 15 to 1 for the Derby. The buyers were, however, willing to go on at those odds.

The Queen's Plate of 100 gs. Three-yr-olds, 9st 2lb; four, 10st 7lb; five, 11st; six and aged, 11st 4lb. R.C.

Lord W. Povey's Sharravogue, by Freney, 5 yrs, S. Rogers 1
Mr. Mare's Alex, 5 yrs, G. E. Sharp

Betting—10 to 1 on Sharravogue. Soon after starting, Alex bolted, and Sharravogue cantered home alone.

Sweepstakes of 5 sows each. Two-yr-olds, 6st 10lb; three, 8st 8lb; four, and upwards, 9st. The winner to be sold for £70, if demanded, &c. Rutland Stakes Course. 5 subs.

Lord Derby's Crown Pigeon, by Wood Pigeon, 2 yrs, 6st 10lb, Wells 1
Capt. Lane's Guy Mummering, 6 yrs, 9st Bartholomew 2
Mr. Warr's Duff, 2 yrs, 8st 10lb Midgeley 3
Mr. Rogers's Duff, 3 yrs, 8st 8lb S. Rogers 4
Count Bathany's Wooden Wall, 2 yrs, 6st 10lb Stamford 5

Betting—5 to 1 agst Crown Pigeon, 2 to 1 agst Guy Mummering. Won by two lengths; the second beating the third by a length. The winner was claimed.

Match. T.Y.C. 200 sows, h ft.—Lord Clifden's Cheddar, by Catherine, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb, received forfeit from the Duke of Bedford's Para, 2 yrs, 8st 11lb.

The Autumnal campaign at head-quarters was opened very successfully. The supply of sport exceeded the first October's average, and the proceedings were marked by incidents of interest and importance.

The list of attractions was materially strengthened by the introduction of the Eastern Counties Handicap into Tuesday's programme; a "feature" established by the liberality of the Railway Company, whose designation it bears, and there is every probability that it will become highly popular.

The most important and interesting race was for the Triennial Stakes, for two-yr-olds, run this day. The encounter between Bonnie Morn and Rileman excited peculiar interest, and the result is likely to exercise a marked influence over speculation on next year's Derby. At starting, 2 to 1 was freely betted on Bonnie Morn, and 3 to 1 agst Rileman; the latter, however, defeated the favourite clearly by half a length. 15 to 1 was afterwards taken freely about him for the Derby, but it was reported that, en route to London, 20 to 1 was laid.

Throughout the three days the betting on the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire was remarkably limited. Muscovite was the only horse in demand for the former event; the latest quotation against him was 6 to 1 taken.

A continuance of brilliant weather heightened the enjoyment of the sport. The racing to-day commenced at twelve o'clock, and terminated at two. A special train, provided for the sporting visitors, left Newmarket soon after three, and reached London by about half-past five.

Notices.—Barrel, Kennyside Hero, and Domino, are struck out of their respective engagements at Chester next week.

Chesterfield Races.—Tuesday, Sept. 26.

Chesterfield to-day presented the usual aspect of a race morning. The weather was very fine, and this induced an accession of visitors, particularly from Sheffield, which town sent forth more than its usual quota of race-going people. The course was in capital order, the dryness of the autumn having suited its heavy nature. The stand was well filled, and the attendance generally was upon a par with previous years.

The racing commenced with the Rutland Stakes, for which Parris's Mountain colt was made the favourite, and, justly so, as his successful running proved. In the Scarsdale Stakes, the "punch body, white sleeves and cap," again passed the chair first. Next in order came the Chesterfield Stakes, which brought out a field of six. Hagbill, at one time the leading favourite for the Great Yorkshire Stakes, was backed to a considerable amount against the field, and his winning was looked upon as a certainty, but he was bowled over cleverly by an outsider, Mortimer, who ran too fast for his competitors throughout, and upon whom scarcely a hilling had been invested. The Jealous One reserved his position for the stake of the same name at Derby, being then first, now last. The day's amusement wound up with the Innkeepers' Stake, which was won, after two closely-contested heats, by Chorus, the non-favourite. For this event offers were made to lay 100 to 1 against an aged half-bred mare belonging to a gentleman in the locality; "the old hack," however, made such strong running as to surprise the spectators, and finished only a length from the favourite in the first heat. This is no compliment to the thorough-breds, seeing that she had been beaten easily at several village races in the neighbourhood.

The Revised Stake of 5 sovs each, with 40 added. Three-quarters of a mile.

Mr. T. Parr's br c, by Van Trump, out of Moonbeam, G. Hall 1
Mr. W. H. Brook's br f Venessa, ... Osborn 2
Mr. Thomas's Dabson, ... Nightingale 3
Mr. Palmer's b f Gahler, out of Larley's dam, ... Knott 4
Retting—Even on Van Trump out. Venessa made the running to the road, where the favourite took it up, and carried it on to the end, winning easily by a length.

The Scarsdale Stake of 30 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of 3 sovs each. One mile and a half.

Mr. T. Parr's ch e Lord John, 3 yrs, ... Kendall 1
Mr. R. Chilton's ch e Middleborough, 3 yrs, ... Osborn 2
Mr. Arrowsmith's gr e Brother to Puritan, 3 yrs, ... Carroll 3
Retting—Even on Middleborough. Brother to Puritan was started to make the running for the favourite, but he was unable or unwilling to cut out the work, and Lord John came away with a strong lead, never was reached, and won cleverly by a length.

The Chatsworth Stakes of 50 sovs, given by His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, added to a Handicap Stake of 5 sovs each, 3 ft. Once round and a distance.

Mr. T. Wood's h e Mortimer, 4 yrs, 6st, ... Snowden 1
Mr. T. Parr's b e Raghill, 3 yrs, 6st, ... Hughes 2
Mr. L. Osborn's br e Ganeland, 3 yrs, 5st 8lb, ... Ducker 3
Mr. Messer's b f Perfidious, 4 yrs, 6st 2lb, ... Carroll 4
Mr. Harrison's h e The Spinner, 3 yrs, 5st 8lb, ... E. Thomas 5
Mr. Dueson's br f The Jealous One, 3 yrs, 6st 10lb, ... Bates 6

Retting—Even on Raghill, 5 to 2 against Perfidious, 4 to 1 against The Jealous One, 7 to 1 against Mortimer, and 5 to 1 against any other. After two false starts, in which the Spinner came some distance before he could be pulled up, the six got off all together. The Spinner made the running to the first turn, where Mortimer took it up, Ganeland lying third, and the others following in close proximity. The lot travelled without any material change to the distance, where Raghill assumed the second place, and made a resolute effort to overtake Mortimer, but in vain, for the sharp rise of the hill was in favour of the four-yr-old, and he exalted no easy winner by a length, the same distance between second and third, the others getting home in the order mentioned. The result was a surprise to the ring, and a fair amount of money was settled by the book-makers. The betting, however, both upon this and the other events, was very languid.

The Innkeepers' Stake of 3 sovs each, with 30 added.
Mr. Sars's h e Chorus, 6 yrs, ... Nightingale 1
Mr. R. Chilton's ch e Middleborough, 3 yrs, ... Carroll 2
Mr. John Dabson's br in Little Wonder, aged, ... Hough 3

Retting—Even on Middleborough. Little Wonder made the running to half way up the distance, when Chorus obtained the lead, but was soon deprived of it by the favourite, who, however, succumbed at the hill, and Chorus won a good race by half a neck. Second heat: Middleborough jumped off with the lead, but was run against by Little Wonder at the turn, and Chorus resumed the lead. The run in was admirably contested, and Chorus won by sheer gameness by half a neck.

WEDNESDAY.

For the Chesterfield Stake Mortimer repeated his performance, winning still more easily than on the preceding day, outpacing the lot for the whole of the distance.

The Chesterfield Stake of 40 sovs, added to a Handicap Stake of 3 sovs each. One mile and a half.

Mr. T. Wood's h e Mortimer, 4 yrs, 6st 8lb (including 5lb extra), ... Snowden 1
Mr. J. Osborn's br f The Deformed, 4 yrs, 5st 2lb, ... Osborn 2
Mr. Flintoff's br e Whalbone, 4 yrs, 6st 2lb, ... Prime 3
Mr. Harrison's h e The Spinner, 3 yrs, 5st 10lb, ... Carroll 4
Mr. Messer's b e Warbler, 4 yrs, 6st 12lb, ... Ducker 5
Mr. Megson's br e Georgey, 4 yrs, 6st 6lb, ... Bates 6
Mr. T. Parr's Raghill, 3 yrs, 6st 8lb, ... Hughes 7

Retting—6 to 4 against Raghill, 5 to 2 each against Mortimer and Deformed, and 4 to 1 against any other. Mortimer got the advantage of a good start and led the way at a severe pace, followed by Raghill to the road, where the favourite dropped off, and Mortimer came up the hill with a strong lead; was never approached, and won in a canter by several lengths. A good race for the second place between Deformed and Whalbone, ended in favour of the former by a neck. The favourite, Warbler, and Georgey trotted in last.

The Ladies' Stake of 30 sovs, given by the Ladies of Chesterfield, added to a Sweepstakes of 3 sovs each. Heats. One mile.

Mr. Chilton's ch e Middleborough, 3 yrs, £200, ... Carroll 1
Mr. Sars's h e Chorus, 6 yrs, £200, ... Osborn 2
Mr. Flintoff's br e Reaper, 6 yrs, £100, ... Kendall 3
Mr. Arrowsmith's gr e Brother to Puritan, 3 yrs, Ducker 4

Retting at starting—Even on Middleborough, and 2 to 1 against The Reaper. A good race from the distance, Middleborough winning by a short neck; Chorus a bad third. Second heat: The Reaper made the running to the road, where Chorus took it up, and a splendid race ensued between these two and Middleborough. The Judge's bat was—Middleborough first by a short head; a neck between second and third. The winner was put up by auction after the race; but, there being no advance upon £60, the owner retained the horse.

A Handicap Stake of 3 sovs each, with 25 added from the Race Fund.

Mr. Arrowsmith's gr e Brother to Puritan, 3 yrs, 5st, ... Ducker 3 1 1
Mr. Megson's br e Georgey, 4 yrs, 6st 6lb, ... Bates 3 2
Mr. L. Osborn's br e Ganeland, 3 yrs, 5st 8lb, ... Carroll 2 3
Even on Ganeland. The first heat was won easily by a length, the second and third in a canter.

JOHNSTOWN (CO. KILKENNY) RACES.

MONDAY, Sept. 25.

The Foulcourt Stakes of 4 sovs each, with 10 added. Heats. One mile and a half. Flat Course. Won in two heats by Mr. Hartigan's b e Gamester, by Sleight-o'-hand, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb (Taylor), beating Mr. Cassidy's Roller, 8st. Only two ran.

THE STEEPLECHASE HORSE, STEAM ENGINE, is advertised for sale in Belfast, on Wednesday next.

THE CARRICK-ON-SUIR STEEPLECHASES will come off on Friday next, when the Grand National Challenge Cup, value £60 with 25 sows added; a Sweepstakes of 3 sows each, 30 sows added; a Handicap of 1 sow each, 15 sows added; and a Plate of 10 sows given by the Marquis of Waterford for farmers' horses, will be run for.

HUNTING

Mr. LYON'S, (the Palmerstown) HAWKERS, met yesterday (Friday), for the first time this season at Castlebaggot. An account of the run will appear in the next number of THE FIELD.

THE DEVON AND SOMERSET STAG-HOUNDS will meet on Tuesday, the 3rd of October, at Cloutsham; and on Friday, the 6th, at Poole Town, Lushorough, each day at half-past nine o'clock.

CAPTAIN HAMPTON LEWIS'S HOUNDS will meet at Pentreath on Monday, Oct. 3, and on Friday, Oct. 6, at Trevor-gate, at eleven o'clock.

THE SOUTH OXFORDSHIRE HOUNDS.—Cub-hunting has commenced in the southern part of Oxfordshire. On Tuesday the meet was Shotover-hill, about six miles from Oxford. Foxes were plentiful, and the young hounds tasted the blood of a brace. We hear that foxes are very numerous in the South Oxon country. Many good runs we hope the followers of these hounds will enjoy, and which at all times we shall be most happy to insert in THE FIELD, if any correspondent will favour us with particulars.

THE HALSTON HOUNDS.—A meeting was held lately for the purpose of making arrangements for keeping the pack of fox-hounds belonging to the late Mr. Furze, in the Torrington country. The Rev. C. J. Johnson, nephew and heir to Mr. Furze, made a very liberal proposition to keep the hounds till April next, with the use of kennel, &c. Mr. Johnson's offer was accepted, and a subscription list opened to meet the necessary expenses. The hounds are to be called the 'Halston hounds'; they are to hunt twice a week, on Mondays and Fridays. J. C. Moore Stevens, Esq., of Winscott, is to be the master.—RANGEH.

SHOOTING

GAME CERTIFICATES.—PENALTIES.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue hereby give notice, that every person taking, killing, or pursuing game, without first obtaining a certificate, incurs a penalty of £20, and is also liable to be surcharged in double the amount of the certificate duty.

Any person in pursuit of game refusing, on being duly required, to produce his certificate, or to permit the same to be read, or a copy thereof to be taken, or refusing to declare his true name and place of residence, also incurs a penalty of £20.

Gamekeepers are desired to take notice, that a certificate at the rate of £1. 7s. 6d. will not authorise any person to kill game beyond the limits of the manor for which he is deputed; and, in order that a certificate at such a rate of duty may protect a gamekeeper, it is requisite, not only that he should be deputed by some lord or lady of a manor or reputed manor, but also that such deputation should be registered with the Clerk of the Peace, or the gamekeeper will be liable to be surcharged in double the duty of £1. 0s. 10d., and also to be prosecuted by any common informer for the penalty of £20.

N.B.—It is the intention of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue to publish in a separate list the names and residences of all persons surcharged in double duty for sporting without certificates.

By order of the Board,
T. Keogh, Secretary.

Inland Revenue-office, Somerset-house.

THE MOORS AND THE FORESTS.

There has been a general migration of sportsmen to Liverpool to participate in the festivities of the Northern Meeting; so that our notes of sport are very few, and were principally intended for our publication last week. We may state generally that the forests have yielded some admirable deer-stalking, and that several of the finest heads seen for many years in the north have been received by Mr. Snowie for preservation. A large display of these is made in his shop, and to the Highland sportsman there are few more interesting sights than the double row of the antlered monarchs exhibited there. The finest head is certainly one shot by Lord Liefield in the forest of Rhidarch: it is a remarkably fine specimen of the Highland deer; the antlers are oval-shaped, approaching to a circle at the upper part, and measuring no less than thirty-four inches at the widest part. This deer was well known at Rhidarroch, and had been frequently but unsuccessfully stalked. A correspondent in the west, who writes in triumph of its capture, mentions that Lord Lichfield, when he came upon the track of this deer, was in high spirits, and promised that, if he killed it, one of those who were with his lordship should receive a present of five guineas, and another a lesser sum. After a long and patient day's stalking his lordship brought down the deer, and paid the promised rewards. Among those who have succeeded in shooting fine specimens of the Highland deer this season are the following:—Sir Arthur Chichester, Bart., Lochalsh; Earl of Seafield, Balmacraun; Captain Stratfield; A. C. Barclay, Esq., Struy; Sir Henry Vaue; F. G. Caulfield, Esq., Fannich; G. T. Gordon, Esq., Foyers; Mr. Digby, Kinlochewe; V. R. Corbett, Esq., Fasnakyle; E. Mills, Esq., Erchless Castle; Captain Inge, Fasnakyle; Earl of Lichfield, Rhidarroch; George Bateson, Esq., Achintoul; C. E. Prine, Esq., Eskadale; Sir Philip Grey, Eghton; R. B. Harvey, Esq., Gernserrie; Sir Henry Meux, Bart., Dundriggan; Colonel Tottenham, Ord; Rev. G. T. Hutson, Inveresche; Captain Bence, Kirdala; E. K. Blagream, Esq., Aldourie; Lord Ashburton, Kinlochlichart; T. Ogilvie, Esq., Corriemoney; Mr. Holford, Roschall, &c.

At Lagnall, Lord Henry Bentinck was out stalking on the 6th, and killed two good stags, one with eleven points; and on the 7th, he killed two capital stags, one of them having a royal head, the other ten points. His lordship left here for Benalder Forest, to have a few days' stalking with the noted stalker, Mr. Cattinach, Laggan.

Sir H. Wilmot was fortunate enough, a few days ago, to shoot a fine specimen of the Capercaillie at Carr-bridge. It weighed 10 lbs., and is supposed to have strayed from Taynmouth.

Mr. Akroyd and Mr. Edwards, accompanied by Mr. Corbett and Mr. Barnett, had a good day's ptarmigan shooting on the hills of Aberarder on Friday last—the bag being thirty-six brace. The grouse shooting at Gleushiero still continues good for the advanced season, twenty-five to thirty brace being the average day's sport of each party. Major Hall, Mr. Elwes, and party, left Manalia for the south about ten days ago. Before leaving they gave their yearly ball to the neighbouring tenantry, which was well attended, and afforded much amusement to the neighbourhood. These gentlemen have made themselves very much liked in the country by their kindness and attention to all with whom they came in contact. The party, since the 12th of August, have killed altogether about 1,400 brace of grouse and 11½ brace of ptarmigan. At Dalnigavie, Mr. Mackenzie Kettle, and Mr. Foster, who have now gone south, have killed since the 12th of August about 520 brace grouse, and a great number of hares, snipe, &c. At Lower Killin, grouse are exceedingly numerous, strong, and healthy, but unaccountably wild. Although Mr. Rogers is a first-rate shot he cannot make a very heavy bag. His sport for the last six days is as follows:—6th September 20 brace of grouse, one blackcock, and a hare. In a few hours upon the 7th September he shot 18 grouse and two partridges. In a few hours on the 8th he shot 21 grouse, 1 hare, and 2 black-games, on the 9th, 8 grouse, 18 black-games, 2 woodcocks, and two hares; on the 12th, 20 grouse, 3 black-games, 1 partridge, 1 woodcock, and 8 hares; on the 13th, 10 grouse, 12 black-games, 3 woodcocks, 5 partridges, and 2 hares. Mr. Wynne Williams and party have had continued excellent sport on the Tulchen Moors, having up to the 4th instant killed 1,150 brace of grouse, besides other game. The Hon. Mr. Mostyn, M.P., bagged on an average 30 brace a-day for the first fourteen days of the season. Lord H. Bentinck is spending a few days with Mr. Williams, en route to Ardvie-rikie. The usual annual ball was given on the 6th inst., by Mrs. and Miss Wynne Williams, at Tulchen Lodge, and was numerously attended. At Laggall the weather up to 9th September was all that could be wished for by sportsmen. The grouse, however, were getting very wild. They were to be seen on the bare ground hundreds of them together. The 5th instant was the last day of Mr. King's sport here. He killed 33 brace grouse. Mr. George Bentinck, upon the 4th, killed 14 brace; on the 5th, 27 brace; on the 6th, 6 brace; on the 7th, 7 brace; on the 8th, 9 brace; on the 12th, 16 brace; on the 13th 14, brace; and on the 14th, 8 brace. Mr. Walker, on the 5th, killed 25 brace grouse and 1 brace snipe; on the 6th, 23 brace; on the 7th, 16 brace; on the 11th, 12 brace; on the 12th, 16 brace; and on the 14th, 23 brace.—Inverness Courier.

THE GAME SEASON.—It is acknowledged by all sportsmen that the game this season is most abundant. The coveys of partridges round this neighbourhood are very large many having not less than from fifteen to thirty each. On the Morfe-lands, and around the extensive parishes of Worfield, Claverley, the friends of the trigger have incessant work; the only drawback the past week has been from the excessive heat.—Shrewsbury Journal.

SPORTING MISCELLANY.

THE following story referring, doubtless, to the Earl Mulgrave, and the celebrated Peter Purcell, appears in the Dublin University Magazine for this month:—"It was during the time of a fiercely-contested election at Carlrow, that his Excellency the Earl of M— came to the Curragh to course. On this occasion he was chaperoned by P—r J—ll, Esq., whose house was 'convaynient' to the spot, and he was himself a keen sportsman and a highly popular man. As his excellency rode on, he attracted an extemporaneous staff of all comers—mounted gentlemen, farmers' sons, and a tail as long as a Highland chief's of rabble, which his lordship suffered and enjoyed, being too fond of popularity to act out the Odi profanum vulgus on an occasion like this. The sport was wretched; the 'nublo greyhound strained upon the leash,' but a hare was to be seen; and good-natured Peter was beside himself at such a mark of disrespect from the feline race to vicerealty. Up and down they rode, and amidst and around the furze bushes, till Lord M—, losing all patience, exclaimed with a loud voice, 'Not a hare to be had, I declare! Now, Mr. P—r J—ll, I should like to know where all the hares in the Curragh are gone to this morning?' While Peter was meditating an apologetic response, a voice answered from the crowd and brought so extraordinary, so rich, so flat, and so sonorous, that every one burst out laughing. 'Perhaps, my lord, it is to Carlrow they're gone.' And the horseman dismounting, the speaker, who rode on a blood mare, and was an Irishman, followed, with a fussy face and two greenish eyes, whereof, and fun, and shrewdness strove alternately, emerged before his excellency. Peter was indignant at the intrusion. 'Go home, M'Gomeril, this is no place for your folly.' 'Oh! I beg, I entreat,' said Lord M—, amused beyond measure at the figure and the voice, 'that this gentleman will not go till we hear how it is that the hares have gone to Carlrow, as he says. 'It's some nonsense, my lord, of this fellow; he is an Orange squireen, from Dunlavin, a crack-brained fool of a fellow, and not fit to speak to your excellency.' 'Oh I assure you, Mr. P—r J—ll, I excessively enjoy the little he has said,' said Lord M—, laughing, 'and am impatient to be further enlightened by him respecting our missing game. Do pray, sir, tell us what you know of it.' Thus encouraged, the party commenced, all present hurrying out laughing the moment he opened his huge mouth. 'Why thin, your Excellency, I said the hares was gone to Carlrow, and it was Mither Pether here who sent them there, and spoiled your lordship's sport.' 'What do you mean? you impudent bosthoon,' said P—r J—ll, frying with vexation, while the Castle party were convulsed with mirth. 'Why, Mither Pether, can you deny to the Lord Liftinist what you said this morning, and I hearing you? Did't you give out in the horse-yard at Naas, and cracking your whip all the time, that every living sowl, man, woman, and child, must immediately go off to Carlrow, and vote for the Radical nimmer? and so, my lord, I suppose the hares went with the rest.'"

BETTING ON A SALMON.—A sharp contest took place lately on a northern river, between Captain Jones and a salmon of considerable weight which he booked there. A few gentlemen were sitting on the bank of the stream near the scene of action, and, by way of increasing the excitement of the spectacle, began betting on the safe capture of the fish. One of the party, an experienced angler, estimating at a glance the weight of the fish, and the disadvantageous spot where it must be played, opened the betting at six to one against the Captain, and in favour of the salmon. The trial of strength against skill went on for a long time—the fish making some fierce runs, and a few very ticklish jumps and wriggles; but half an hour told on its strength, while the Captain lost nothing of his skill, and pressed the fish harder than ever. The betting turned in favour of the Captain; it ran up step by step till it came to twenty to one against the salmon, which was now nearly spent. At length there was little more line out than the gut; the fish was swinging back and fore, coming nearer land each time, and "old Johu" stood by with the never-failing clip on his hand, ready to plunge it into the salmon's side, and hand him gracefully to his grassy bed upon the bank. Another minute would have done it, when the sharp edge of a bit of rock touched the strained gut; in an instant it snapped in two, set the salmon free, and muled the Captain's gambling friend of a twenty-pound note.—Inverness Courier.

CAPTURE OF A FOX AT CLUMBER-HOUSE.—On Tuesday morning, the 12th instant, a novel occurrence in the annals of sporting, transpired at Clumber-house (near Worksop), the seat of his Grace the Duke of Newcastle. A fine fox was seen to walk leisurely into the court-yard, and after a short survey, his olfactory nerves attracted him to the room of Mrs. Orove, the housekeeper, where a portion of the domestics were sitting at breakfast. The window being open, easy access was offered to master Reynard, who, with a composed air bolted through the open space, and in his descent knocked down several flower-pots, much to the wonder of the occupants of the room. Not meeting with that hospitable reception on which perchance he had fondly calculated, he exhibited considerable consternation, ran up the perpendicular wall of the room, made a bolt at the ceiling, and falling on the carpet, was captured by Isaac Fairham, the usher of the servant's hall, who boldly seized and held him up by his beautiful brush, and placed him in a box for safe custody, until the Earl of Lincoln had breakfasted. His Lordship on being made acquainted with the circumstances, like a true English sportsman, ordered Reynard to be liberated, much to the amusement and gratification of his sister, the Lady Susan Pelham Clifton, and the Ladies Hamilton, who were on a visit at Clumber-house. The domestics of the noble duke's establishment were also assembled to witness the release of poor "foxy" from "durance vile," and who on the covering of the box being removed, leaped joyfully forth, but on taking his departure, evinced his gratitude by turning round to his friends and giving them a farewell glance, as much as to say "good bye and thank ye," and then swiftly bounded away over the green sward, right glad once more to snuff the air of freedom and regain his woodland home. He was as fine a young dog-fox as ever was seen, without spot or blemish, and it is supposed he had been affrighted by the music of the Rufford hounds, who had been cub-hunting in the neighbourhood.

RACE-HORSE DUTY.—The surveyor of taxes having caused those who run horses in the Grautham steeplechase to be furnished with surcharges for race-horse duty, Mr. Sampey, one of the persons charged, feeling indignant at having to pay, wrote to the managing commissioner at Somerset-house, as to his liability, informing him that the horse in question was paid for as all common riding-horses are. In reply, Mr. Keogh wrote—"That the board have made inquiry into the matter, and they find that you are charged only the ordinary duty on your horse for the present year, and that, under the circumstances, you will not be assessed for a race-horse in respect of the use of your horse on the occasion to which you allude." This case fully proves, and may be of service hereafter to the sporting world, that any gentleman who may choose to enter his horse in a steeplechase, may do so without being compelled to pay race-horse duty.

THE ACROBAT AFFAIR EXPLAINED.—That Acrobat affair at Doncaster has made a noise. Why the horse should on Wednesday lose disgracefully, and on Friday win triumphantly, may be a sort of mystery to some folks, but I can assure you—and I am pretty well acquainted with stable secrets—that all was fair, that Lord Derby's conduct was strictly honourable, and that Scott was as innocent as a baby. The fact was that Acrobat would have been beaten on Friday, but for his extreme terror. One of the horses behind him—I think Orlando—got into Acrobat's stall some nights before, and viciously bit a piece out of the roof of his tail. Seeing the same horse on the ground on Friday, and dreading a repetition of the outrage, Acrobat set off like the wind and beat everything. Lord Derby knew this quite well, and made a good joke about "tailing off," which I should spoil by endeavouring to repeat.—Correspondent of Punch.

A JUVENILE SPORTSMAN.—On Thursday last a brave-spirited little boy, some twelve years old, who is at present visiting his relations in this neighbourhood, had a very narrow escape from a frightful death. His friends have lodgings at Culloden. About five in the afternoon, he went out in quest of rabbits. At ten in the evening he had not returned, and no one knew anything of him. Messages were despatched hither and thither regarding him, quite in vain. At last it was determined to re-search the hill where he had been last seen. On approaching the place a little dog by which he had been accompanied made its appearance, frisking delightedly, and conducted the party to a rabbit-hole, where, however, nothing was visible, or could have been suspected, till one of the gentlemen thrust his arm into the place, and got hold of the little fellow's beels. He was so firmly wedged in that it was impossible to extricate him by merely pulling, and he had at length to be dug out. When brought to light, much to the gratification and comfort of the folks around, the little fellow presented a very extraordinary appearance, but he coolly intimated that he would get better when he was washed, that he had slept for some time, and that he was sorry for the loss of the rabbit he had pursued.—Inverness Advertiser.

A HORSE RACE IN THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—The women and girls are decidedly the best riders. With them, not as with the ladies of our Atlantic cities, side-saddles are out of the question. In their loose flowing drapery, hair streaming in the wind, their beautiful erect position, and their horses career along, like the march of a whirlwind, they look majestically dangerous, and yet they are never thrown from the saddle. There is many a lady in civilised nations who would envy the equestrian skill of these Hawaiian women. There is many a finished artist that would be glad to have one of them as a subject for his pencil. It may be owing to this mode of exercise that they, in part, acquire such an exquisite development of form. I wish I could fully portray these Saturday afternoon sports. Yonder, on the plain, some forty or fifty women are speeding almost with the rapidity of lightning towards some well-selected goal. Every nerve and muscle of both horses and riders is stretched to the utmost tension—the former from sheer instinct to gain the victory—the latter from a spirit of almost matchless daring, mirthfulness, and excitement. Now comes along a party of men and boys, many of them clinging, with their naked limbs, like leeches, to the flanks of their foaming steeds, while their restless hands and arms are describing all sorts of circles in the air, as if under pain of dismemberment, but, in reality, to cheer along their animals to a swifter speed. Clouds of choking dust follow their wake. Here and there may be seen a mounted foreigner, quietly looking on, or sharing in their mirth and sports. But yonder is a scene that defies all attempts at description. A few horses and donkeys, not under immediate use, but which, a few minutes since, were quietly feeding on the ever-living pasture, have caught the spirit of that fiery locomotion by which their compeers are impelled over the plain. Unable any longer to control their nature, away they speed, in the utmost confusion, as though their powers of a life-endurance were all concentrated in this single moment. Now, they have mingled with the mounted animals, sharing their foam, and madly plunging through the clouds of dust, and endangering the life and limbs of any pedestrian who fails to get out of the way in time. On they speed, like fiery Arabians over their native sands, all and each one struggling for the mastery in the well-contested race for glory.—Sandwich Island Notes.

AN IRISH GAMEKEEPER recently knocked over two deer at one shot at 150 yards. One of the deer had his head in a line with the neck of the other at the time. Soon after he perceived the antlers of another, and judging where the head should be, brought the animal down by a ball between the antlers and the ears.

WORCESTER AUTUMN MEETING.—Trainers and owners of horses are reminded that the entries for this meeting (of all races that close previous to the Meeting) will close on Tuesday, October 10th.—Bell Hotel, Worcester, Sept. 23th, 1854.

PISCATORIAL PROLUSIONS.

BY THE HAMPSHIRE FLY-FISHER.

FISH-PRESERVING.

I have hitherto considered what may be properly classed as the natural causes of the falling off of our fisheries. I now come to those which depend altogether upon ourselves. For the former, it may be difficult to find an entire remedy, but the latter, as it seems to me, if they do not admit of absolute prevention, may be, at least, in a great measure guarded against. I need not say I allude to what is commonly called poaching. Now, in my acceptance of the word, it will embrace a variety of offenders, from the so-called angler—who blushes not at the use of salmon-roe, live May fly, and caddis—to the lawless marauder, who, in company with his fellows, sweeps the river with a huge drag-net. It were long to enumerate the various individuals that fall within this definition; perhaps it would not be wise. "Arrah, Pat!" said the priest, to an Irish ostler, at confession, "and how came it that you are guilty of that frightful sin of greasing the horse's teeth?" "Eh, the Father, dear! don't be too hard with Pat," was the reply. "Sure and 'twas yourself gave me the idea the last time I came to your reverence to confess, and you as'd me the very question." The story may be an old one, but the moral of it is clear, that to suggest a sin to the inquisitor is pretty generally certain to ensure its commission. Now, some of the practices of these persons it is impossible to prevent. It is impossible to enact any law which shall prevent anglers from the killing of fish under-sized, or out of season, or by unfair means. If they have not the feelings of sportsmen and gentlemen, nothing else will check them. The only remedy I know is for proprietors of fisheries vigorously to exclude any one who shall be known to be given to any such abomination from access to their waters. It would, indeed, be a good practice, and tend both to the improvement of scientific angling, fair fishing, and the increase of fish, if there were a general rule established that no one should use any but an artificial bait for trout, should kill above a certain number, say five brace in a day; that no fish should be taken under a certain size, to be regulated by the growth of fish in each particular river, nor out of condition. Of course the limitation should not extend to grayling or dace, or any coarse fish, but solely to the nobler salmonidae. But a more important safeguard still to trout streams, and one which is capable of legislative enactments, would be to establish regular fence months. No fish ought to be taken before the 14th of March, nor after the 14th of September. I am perfectly aware that trout will rise at the fly or take the worm both earlier and later. I know, too, that there is a great difference in rivers as to the time when trout are fit to kill. In Devonshire and Cornwall I am told they are a full fortnight or three weeks earlier than we are in Hampshire. Bright, rapid, gravelly streams are also more advanced than deep and sluggish waters. In Scotland I once took, in the River Rannoch, in Perthshire, ten brace of good fish, in high condition, on the last day of October. But still, I think as a general rule, if the two dates I have fixed on were commonly observed for the commencement and ending of trout-fishing, anglers, even if they found their periods of enjoyment were somewhat curtailed, would find it more than compensated by the increased award of sport; and there would be no difficulty I think in framing, or any objection to, a law making it a misdemeanour for any one to kill trout during the prohibited time, to destroy the spawn, or to have trout in his possession. The penalty may be, in the first place, a pecuniary fine, half to go to the informer; a term of imprisonment might be added for a second or subsequent offence, with a good sound flogging for boys, if the court should think fit. But I would visit the offence of possession, either in the person offering for sale, purchasing, or otherwise, even more severely than I would that of taking the fish. "If there were no receivers, there would be no thieves," is an old adage. I have particularly specified a punishment for boys, because I know, from sad experience, the mischief done by them, especially in the neighbourhood of large towns. The female trout, about the time of spawning, and immediately after, is to be found in narrow, shallow, bright streams, and easily falls a victim to any little ragged urchin that happens to catch sight of her. The proprietors of the beautiful rivulets round the town of Newport, in the Isle of Wight, know, to their cost, what destruction has been wrought by them, aided, I fear, by offenders of riper years, by whom the large reservoir, or mill-pond, which used to be full of the finest fish, has, of late years, been nearly depopulated. It would be also very desirable if some regulations, similar to those which have been adopted in the case of dealers in marine stores, could be brought into operation, namely, that every fishmonger, or other person dealing in fish, purchasing anywhere but in market, should keep a book in which to enter the name, date, &c., of the person from whom he bought, and other particulars, with a penalty for omitting to make such entry, giving a false name, or otherwise impeding the operation of the law. Similar rules might be also established in every market; and a license to sell fish should also be necessary, such license, as in the case of game, to be duly registered, any person selling fish without a license to be subject to a penalty. I was told the other day, by one of the most intelligent officers in the Hunts constabulary force, that in the course of his duty he constantly had occasion to search carts and suspected persons coming into Winchester, and had found, on search, from ten to thirty and forty brace of fine fish, which he knew must have been obtained unlawfully, but which he had no power to detain, or even to call on the possessor of them to account for their possession. For my own part, too, I should not object to the introduction into England of the system which has lately been tried in Ireland, namely, that no person should fish for trout or salmon without a license. The cost of obtaining the license might be almost nominal, but it would of course have to be registered.

THE NATURAL MINNOW.

Sir,—Perhaps the following may not be uninteresting to some of your piscatorial readers. Being exceedingly fond of fishing, I have spent much time and labour on it. In fishing with the natural minnow, it had been my custom to thread them on the lead whilst they were still alive, adhering to an idea amongst most fishermen that fish will not take a natural minnow after it is dead, or has in any way been injured. I dare say after having caught a fish, or felt a bite, most of your readers have taken the bitten minnow from the hook, and have placed a fresh one on it. Now, from my experience, I have discovered that this idea is erroneous. It happened that I was one day fishing with the natural minnow, and had exhausted all my stock but one, which was dead, nor could I procure another. I then, as a last resort, placed on the dead one. Moreover, as was my custom, I added a little oil of olivum, not that I think it attracts the fish, but takes away the smell of the hands, and gives out a smell which may not be disagreeable to the fish. On casting the minnow, I did not, as is usual, "hol" with it, but let it glide gently down the stream; from the first hole that it passed a trout rushed forth and seized it. I landed him and found that he had mauled the head of the minnow, which had slipped up the line. I replaced it in its proper position, and went again to work. I had not proceeded far, before another trout fell my prey. I again replaced the minnow, and once more fell to; this time a diminutive urchin came forth, and, instead of hooking himself, bit the minnow in two parts, and escaped, rejoicing with the head. I would fain have gone on, but my ammunition was exhausted, and I could not fish with a plain hook. Since then, I have caught very many trout with dead and injured minnows, and I hope again next spring to continue my sport. I was using at the time, a bamboo rod, crick, and silk line, every thing in fact of the plainest.

RURO PETENS.

THE MUDDIEST WATER can be rendered clear and pure as crystal, by mixing with it a small particle of pounded alum.

THE WYE FISHERIES.—The salmon fishing this season in the river Wye has proved extremely successful, and the angler and fisherman have been rewarded with remarkably fine and healthy fish. It has been noticed that many large salmon have this summer been captured, and this no doubt is owing to the careful manner in which the waters are preserved from wholesale poaching. The Wye associations have determined to prosecute all parties discovered laying out lines either in the Wye or the Lugg. A salmon was captured the other day, weighing upwards of 30lb., and more than a yard in length. In the Severn the fishing has also been very good, and the fish in fine condition.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.—A sailor who could not read lately appeared at the naval rendezvous at Greenock, who, in answer to one of several questions put to him, said he had an excellent written character, which he was proud of, and, in proof of his assertion, handed the following document to the officer:—"I hereby certify that—, sailor, was admitted into the— Infirmary for delirium tremens, on June 25, 1854, and is discharged well this day (June 30, 1854). Signed,—, House-surgeon."—Edinburgh Courier.

SAILING MATCHES AND CLUB REGATTAS, &c.

- October 7.—Avalon, Ponrl, and other yachts of the Royal London Yacht Club, to start from Blackwall Pier at 4 p.m., conveying members to Brith, this being the day for the annual "closing trip" and dinner at the Crown. Blue-eyed Maid, &c., will join company at Blackwall.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON INTELLIGENCE.—SEPT. 28.

- ARRIVALS.—Sept. 28. Fairy, schooner, Marquis of Conyngham, from Ireland, and came into harbour to lay up.—23. Derwent, schooner, M.E. Moore, Esq., Ryde and other ports.
 SAILINGS.—Sept. 27. Titania, schooner, Robert Stephenson, Esq., for Newcastle.—26. Miranda, yawl, John Gray, Esq., for Madeira.
 YACHTS AT AND ABOUT THE STATION.—Nymph, Aurora, Arrow, Cygnet, Virginia, Derwent.
 SCHOONER-YACHT NOVICE.—This flag-yacht left Holyhead yesterday week (Friday), at noon, and arrived in Portsmouth harbour on Monday, at seven in the morning, having made her passage, the distance being about 400 miles, in less than sixty hours. Notice left the schooner-yacht Shark at Holyhead, but some three hours before she got under weigh, the Princess Olga and Enchantress had started for the English Channel.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The first monthly meeting of the club since July 5th will be held at the Bedford Hotel, Covent-garden, on Wednesday evening, the 4th of October, at half-past eight o'clock precisely. The following gentlemen will be balloted for:—Granville Sharpe, Esq., Alfred Club; Henry B. Allenby, Esq., Tadcaster, Yorkshire; Robert Hewett, Esq., Barking, Essex; Joseph Reynolds, Esq., De la Bere, Berks; Henry Dunsbury, Esq., Dymoke-lodge, Oval-road, Regent's-park; Robert Bryce Hay, Esq., Army and Navy Club; Henry Robinson, Esq., 5, Cantorbury-villas, Maidenhall; John Kirby, Esq., St. Osyth; Essex Marshall Paine, Esq., Acadia-road, St. John's-wood; William Upward, Esq., Carlton-road, St. John's-wood; and Leeds Paine, Esq., Stock Exchange. Members and their friends who intend to dine at the monthly club dinner, on Wednesday the 4th of October, should enter their names in the house book on or before two o'clock on that day. Each member may introduce one friend. Dinner at six o'clock precisely. We may mention, for the convenience of new members, that the secretary, Capt. P. C. Stuart Grant, attends at the club-rooms on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, from two to five o'clock, p.m., to receive subscriptions, give information, &c. The fourteen following club yachts are for sale:—Zephyretta (schooner), 180 tons; Lily of the Test (ditto), 91; Vestal (ditto), 75; Intrepid (cutter), 60; Guerilla (ditto), 45; Streamlet (ditto), 38; Cygnet (ditto), 35; Pauline (ditto), 35; Daring (ditto), 31; Secret (ditto), 25; Daisy (ditto), 18; Sunbeam, (ditto), 18; Diavolo (ditto), 15; Curlew (yawl, for gunning), 10. Applications for particulars should be addressed to the secretary, at the Bedford Hotel, Covent-garden.

YACHTING LITERATURE.

We have recently received many applications for information, and to decide acts, on the subject of yachting magazines; and the private replies we have given having, in several instances, failed to convince the inquirers that the idea of starting a yachting magazine is not a novelty—in fact, that such periodicals were contemplated long before those at present existing—we have now simply to repeat that we know our opinion to be correct, and that, in proof of its being so, at least two instances of yachting publications, prior to Hunt's and Bonner's, can be mentioned, viz., that of the Regatta Register, which appeared, monthly, in 1836 (now eighteen years ago), and Grove's Yachting Magazine. We here subjoin a copy of the prospectus, issued in May, 1837, in regard to the latter. The green cover of the former is still to be seen in many a club library.

Price Three Shillings.

THE YACHTING MAGAZINE AND ROYAL YACHT CLUB GAZETTE.

"Yachting has been wisely fostered by our sovereigns, who have felt that the security of kingdoms is increased by every man being, more or less, a sailor."—Captain Marriot, R.N.

The national importance which the Royal Yacht Clubs throughout the Kingdom may be justly said to assume, not only as a valuable nursery for seamen, but for the improvement and skill of our ship-builders, renders it desirable that they should not be without some standing record of the many, exciting, and interesting regattas which they bring before the public in the yachting season.

The Yachting Magazine will be a periodical devoted to all subjects connected with yachting, and will be chiefly contributed to by distinguished yachtsmen, containing a full account of the annual regattas in the United Kingdom, with a description of the splendid cups and other prizes offered for competition; minutes of committee meetings, if officially transmitted through the secretaries; improvements in yacht and boat building, several useful tables, with a complete list of all the yachts belonging to the Royal Yacht Clubs, with owner, builder, tonnage, &c., &c.; sketches of yachting characters, commencing with the late much esteemed Commodore of the R. Y. S. the Earl of Yarborough; a full account of the Thames, Oxford, and Cambridge boat races, &c., &c.; thus forming a complete register of the yearly proceedings of the Royal Yacht Clubs, and a work of reference at any period, supplying a desideratum long required by the nautical public.

The Yachting Magazine will also be a useful advertising medium for all matters relative to the disposal and purchase of Yachting property, and be published quarterly (every octavo, price three shillings). In the first week of March, June, September, and December; but, owing to the very limited time now left for the preparation of the first number, it will not appear until the 1st of July. The publisher respectfully solicits the support of yachting gentlemen, and will be glad to receive original articles and correspondence connected with the subjects advocated in this periodical, not less than fourteen days previous to the time of publishing. Orders for the work will be received by him, and at the different Royal Yacht Club Houses, where registers for names of subscribers are opened.

Lymington: Published by R. A. Grove, marine publisher and printer by appointment to the Queen.

May, 1847.

THE MEDWAY YACHT CLUB.—Chatham, 23rd Sept.—Last evening, at luncheon, Commodore Robinson struck his broad pendant on board the "Vixen" for the season.

DEATH OF MR. FARLEY.—We regret to have to record that this well-known builder of yacht-models expired at his house in Fleet-street on Friday morning (yesterday), at half past twelve, after having suffered with great resignation the attack of a most painful complaint, which for many weeks confined him to his bed. He leaves a widow and one son, who will carry on the business, and in this urgent case it is to be hoped yachtsmen will continue their patronage, especially as under the very same roof the sale of boat models has been carried on for more than a century.

BREEZE AND MASSENA.—We learn from the Washington Daily Star that a race took place at Old Point on Saturday, the 22nd ult., between the yachts Breeze, of James River, and the Massena, of New York. The latter was beaten nineteen minutes in a distance of forty-one miles.—New York Paper.

ROWING

MATCHES APPOINTED.

- September 30.—Mr J. H. McNeil and Mr. R. Reid of Glasgow, to row two and a half or three miles, for £50 a side.
 October 2.—M. Curly and S. Slean, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £10 a side.
 October 4.—T. Puck and F. Styles, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £25 a side.
 October 9.—R. Wharf and J. Synnott, to row from Old Hargy House, Woolwich, to Limehouse Hole, for £25 a side.
 October 19.—G. Robbins, of Battle Bridge, and R. Savage, of Horsley-down, to row from Putney to Mortlake for £25 a side.
 October 23.—W. Mancy, of Putney, and J. Rols, of Christchurch, to row from the Pier at Putney to the ship at Mortlake, for 20 guineas a side.
 October 25.—G. Robbins and R. Savage (below-bridge men), to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £25 a side.
 November 20.—T. Cole (the Champion of the Thames) and J. Messenger, of Teddington, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £200 a side.
 November.—Robert Newell and William Pocock, to row from Putney Bridge to the Ship at Mortlake, for £25 a side.

THE NELEUS CLUB.

The Neleus Club rowed their second pair-oared race of the season on Monday, for a series of presentation prizes, added to silver challenge cups. The regatta was at Mortlake, and the Curlew steamer, which had been engaged for the accommodation of members and their friends, accompanied the several heats, with a highly respectable party, including a great number of ladies, on board.

FIRST HEAT.

- H. Porter and J. Curling White 1
 D. Cairn and T. Raper Orange 2
 A. Hamlin and N. Swanson Pink 0

The course was from the Parsonage round a boat off Barker's rails, returning by the Surrey shore round a boat off the Parsonage, and finish at Mr. F. Godfrey's, the Queen's Head, which was, as usual, headquarters for the party. After a few strokes the winners began to draw a head, but the other party hung close together for some distance.

SECOND HEAT.

- H. Harris and T. Cavanagh Red 1
 J. Cairn and J. Roberts Green 2

It was a walk over, thus leaving the two first pairs in the first heat and the two last named to contend, J. Rorke and W. Branscombe, who were the holders of the challenge cups.

FINAL HEAT.

- J. Rorke and W. Branscombe Blue 1
 D. Cairn and T. Raper Orange 2
 H. Porter and J. Curling White 3

A good start was effected, white taking a slight lead, shortly after which blue and yellow came close together, but not so near as to constitute a decided foul. Then a most exciting race followed between them until blue went ahead, and, after challenging white, overhauled them. Orange now collared white, and another gallant race followed between this pair to the finish, who almost made a deal heat of it, blue being four or five lengths ahead. By this second victory Rorke and Branscombe became the absolute owners of the cups.

COSTUME FOR LADY-ROWERS.

Sir,—In your account last week of the Clew Bay Regatta, you gave an account of a boat-race by women. Now, in a forthcoming regatta in this neighbourhood we have decided on a similar race, and the fair competitors have requested me to ask if you will kindly give them a description of the dress worn by their sister aquatics, and even if you could extend your gallantry so far as to insert a sketch of it in your next number, which will give them time to prepare accordingly. I am Sir, your obedient servant,

ONE OF THE COMMITTEE.

[A letter to the R.W.Y.C. Plymouth, would obtain the costume of the Sultan ladies.—Ed.]

SEBASTOPOL;—THE CALM BEFORE THE STORM.—DRAWN BY T. H. WILSON.

On the appointment of Lord Denman (then Sir Thomas Denman) to the office of Attorney-General, in 1830, the Court of Common Council, on the 25th of November of that memorable year, passed the following resolution of thanks unanimously, Sir John Key, Bart., then Lord Mayor, presiding:—"That the thanks of this Court be presented to Sir Thomas Denman, his Majesty's Attorney-General, late Common Serjeant of this city, for the eminent ability with which he has discharged the functions of the office of Common Serjeant, and especially for the zeal, integrity, and humanity with which he has executed the judicial duties that have devolved upon him since his election to that important station; and though this Court cannot but regret the loss of so distinguished an officer, they earnestly hope that the elevated rank to which he has just been raised by his Sovereign, may prove a source of happiness to himself, and a benefit to the country."

Mr. Denman was long ambitious of the honour of representing Nottingham, his native place, in Parliament, and about this time he achieved that honour. The learned gentleman was attending the assizes at Nottingham. This was immediately after a dissolution of Parliament, and while the good people of that place, like the good people of all other places in the country, were over head and ears in the politics of the coming election, it chanced that there was a division amongst the Liberal electors of Nottingham, as to the fittest person to represent them. Some one at a public meeting then held on the subject mentioned the name of Mr. Denman, and it was received with great and general enthusiasm. Encouraged by this favourable circumstance, the gentleman who had named him, and who was one of his personal friends, hastened to the Court in which the assizes were being held at the time, to communicate to him the gratifying intelligence, having previously told the electors that he would bring Mr. Denman to them immediately. On reaching the Court he found that Mr. Denman had quitted it, and had stepped into his hotel, and there to wait until the next case in which he was engaged should come on. He at once agreed to meet the electors, was introduced, and on the day of the poll came in by a large majority.

On the death of Lord Tenterden and the elevation of Sir Thomas Denman as Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, in the year 1832, the Court of Common Council, who had watched the rising progress of their great political and judicial favourite, at once caused a special Court to be convened by Sir Peter Laurie, the then Lord Mayor, at which a resolution was passed expressing that the feelings of the Court of sincere gratification at the elevation of their late Common Serjeant to the high office of Lord Chief Justice of England, "arising at once from great personal esteem, from a sense of the honour thereby reflected upon this city, and from a regard to the interests of the public." An address was also agreed to, and a deputation appointed, consisting of the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen present, the Sheriff, and ten Commoners, to present the same, which took place at his lordship's then residence, in Russell-square, on the 6th of December. His lordship having received the deputation with his usual urbanity, after the address had been read by Mr. Woodthorpe, the town-clerk, answered the address of his fellow-citizens in a manner which showed the feeling of sincerity that actuated his mind while looking proudly back to the past, pleasingly to the future, and in conclusion said, the kind expression with which the deputation on behalf of the corporation greeted him at the commencement of a far weightier task, encouraged him to hope that he might not be found altogether unworthy the favour with which a gracious king had regarded him, nor wholly disappoint the expectations of that enlightened country to which it was their pride and happiness to belong, "and among all the motives which can spur to faithful and zealous exertion, none has more influence in my breast than the hope that my fellow-citizens of London may never feel shame, nor incur just censure for the unexampled favour they have been pleased to bestow upon me."

Lord Denman presided over the Court of Queen's Bench until 1850, when he retired, and was succeeded by Lord Campbell. His lordship gave much satisfaction as a judge. For some time after his elevation to the bench, the bar thought they observed in some of his decisions an immaturity of judgment. He rapidly improved, and was soon acknowledged to be equal to the duties of his high office. The fearlessness and independence which he manifested when practising at the bar, he strikingly displayed while sitting on the bench. His decision in the case of Stockdale, in opposition to the House of Commons, proved that the rights and liberties of the subject would be safe in his hands in the worst of times. Previous to the decision in this case it was stated by Lord Brougham, in his work on "Political Philosophy," that the privileges of Parliament were so powerful, that he questioned much if even the most upright judge would dare to take the part of an injured man against the House of Commons, if such a case of injustice should ever happen. And when this case really did happen, and a decision, contrary to his belief, had been given by his friend Lord Denman, he passed the highest eulogium on the independent and noble conduct of the Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench. This was, certainly, the most striking display—this acting in opposition to the pride and power of the House of Commons—of fearlessness and independence that Lord Denman ever exhibited, not excepting perhaps his conduct on the occasion of the trial of Queen Caroline. His celebrated words on O'Connell's case will never be forgotten, that if the finding of the jury were not to be overruled, trial by jury would henceforth become "a mockery, a delusion, and a snare."

On the retirement of Lord Denman, from increased bodily infirmity, in 1850, as Lord Chief Justice, he received addresses from the bar through Sir John Jervis, the present Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, then Attorney-General, expressive of their regret that his lordship should have been compelled, through illness, to resign an office which he had so long filled with distinguished honour to himself.

Lord Denman was a most intimate friend of Lord Brougham. With the latter he largely shared that ardent attachment to literature and science which has always been one of the most marked characteristics of Lord Brougham's public career. It is true that Lord Denman was not, like his friend, known for any great efforts he made as an author; but he was always among the foremost to encourage the institution of literary and scientific societies; and he proved, times without number, by his speeches, that he was a man of extensive information, and of a cultivated literary taste. His speech on his inauguration as President, at the opening of the theatre of the London Institution, was of itself sufficient to prove this.

There was something very striking about Lord Denman. He had a fine figure, a manly, dignified expression of countenance, and a broad, high, intellectual forehead. His face beamed with intelligence, his eye was quick and lustrous, and his regular features wore a placid aspect highly becoming to his judicial dignity. The natural inference one drew from looking on his countenance was, that he possessed a calm and untroubled spirit, arising, as a writer has observed, "from the consciousness of having, in despite of the powerful temptations which have beset his path, acted according to his convictions in every situation in life in which he has been placed." Certainly, a more honourable or upright man never adorned the English bar; a more consistent or honest politician never crossed the threshold of Parliament; nor did ever a more independent or purer minded individual preside on the judicial bench of this country.

Lord Denman is succeeded in his title and estates by Thomas Denman, Esq., barrister-at-law, who was born July 30, 1805.

LOCK-JAW CURED IN THE HORSE.—Another case of this fearful malady has just been cured, under the influence of belladonna, by Mr. Edward Dyce, proprietor of the well-known horse-repository, Dublin. The case was one arising from an injury in the knee of an aged horse, the property of Mr. Cairness, Camden-street. The horse was three weeks under active medical treatment, three weeks in convalescence, and is now at harness work. In the several cases of lock-jaw cured by Mr. Dyce, the average dose of belladonna administered was one drachm three times daily. The dose in the above case, we understand, was a maximum dose of two drachms three times per diem, with a more speedy effect. Mr. Dyce is pursuing a course of experiments on the effects of chloroform and belladonna in nervous diseases of the lower animals, an account of which may be expected in a work on the veterinary art which he is about to publish.

ELECTION OF LORD MAYOR.—Friday, being Michaelmas-day, a Common Hall was held at the Guildhall, for the purpose of electing an alderman to fill the office of Lord Mayor for the year ensuing. The two aldermen next in rotation were Mr. Alderman Moon, and Mr. Alderman Salomons, the former of whom was elected.

ILLNESS OF ROSSINI.—A letter from Leghorn, in the Gazette de Savoie, says:—"I regret to announce to you that the health of the great composer Rossini has of late declined so much that there is no hope whatever of his recovery. A violent attack was lately near carrying him off, but he partially recovered, and was able to return to Florence. But, even if he should live, he will never recover his clearness of ideas. The deepest melancholy has had possession of him since his last illness."

FINE ARTS.

Mr. Ackermann, of 96, Strand, has just published another naval engraving of the very highest order. Mr. Briery, when on board H.M.S. St. Jean d'Acre, at Kiogo Bay, on the 4th of April in the present year, witnessed "the declaration of war" by signal, communicated to the fleet by Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Napier. From this original by Mr. Briery, Mr. T. G. Dutton has now, with his usual and universally-acknowledged ability, made an excellent drawing on stone, which Messrs. Day and Son, the lithographers to the Queen, have most ably worked-off in colours; and the result of the combined exertions of these gentlemen has been the presentation to the public of a most spirit-stirring picture. H.M.S. Gorgou, Leopard, Olin, Duke of Wellington, Edinburgh, Monarch, Neptune, Royal George, Princess Royal, and St. Jean d'Acre, are all seen at anchor with sails furled, and each finds a prominent place in it, while the city of Copenhagen is seen in the distance. The flagship is covered with her telegraphic hunting, the rest of the fleet have hoisted the answering pendant, the crews are swarming the rigging, and, so minutely sketched is everything, that the very distinguishing masts are seen above the main-trunks of the liners. Half-a-dozen minor craft are seen in the foreground, including a steamer full of Copenhagen "cockneys," gazing in wonder at the exciting scene, which is well worthy every naval officer's, as well as civilian's, inspection, since we have here some vessels steam-on, others showing their full broadside, and, in one word, a downright good, hearty, and truly English picture, fit to find a place in the best cabin of H.M. yacht.

Home News.

THE COURT.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, has been out several times in the deer forest, near Balmoral, and enjoyed the sport of deer-stalking. The Queen has accompanied him for a considerable distance, on his journeying to the forest. The other members of the royal family are enjoying their accustomed excellent health, and availing themselves of the favourable change in the weather to walk and ride in the vicinity of the royal residence at Balmoral. On Tuesday, her Majesty the Queen, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Princess Royal, Princess Alice, and Princess Helena, and attended by her Grace the Duchess of Wellington and Major-General the Hon. C. Grey, drove to Invercauld, the seat of James Farquharson, Esq., where her Majesty honoured Mrs. Farquharson with a visit.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland are entertaining a select circle at Dunrobin Castle. The Marquis and Marchioness of Stafford are among the recent arrivals; and the Earl and Lady Constance Grosvenor are expected to stay some days with the noble duke and duchess on their return to the south. The Duke and Duchess of Argyll and Lord and Lady Blantyre are also expected on a visit at the castle. The noble duke and duchess remain at Dunrobin Castle until the last week in October.

The Duke of Beaufort has arrived at Gopsall Hall, Leicestershire, on a visit to the Earl and Countess Howa, from his shooting quarters in Perthshire. The Duchess and family have been staying some weeks with the noble earl and countess.

The Duke of Roxburgh has arrived at the Clarendon Hotel, from Flour Castle, Kelloe.

The Earl of Burlington and Lady Louisa Cavendish, and the Hon. E. and the Hon. F. Cavendish, have arrived at Scarborough, from Holkar Hall, near Milnethorpe, with the intention of sojourning several weeks at that watering-place.

The Earl and Countess Grey are making a tour of visits in Scotland, and do not return to Howick until the close of the ensuing month.

The Earl of Jersey is, we are gratified to learn, gradually amending in health.

The Earl of Desart has left town for Desart Castle, Kilkenny. The Countess relieves the Duchess of Wellington this week as Lady-in-Waiting on her Majesty.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Heulfort, who recently returned from a tour in Germany, have left town for Ireland. The Marquis and Marchioness of Clanricarde and the Ladies De Burgh have returned to Portunna Castle, Galway, from the Lakes of Killarney.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Drogheda have returned to their seat from visiting the Earl and Countess of Dunraven, at Adara Manor near Limerick.

Viscount and Viscountess Golerich have arrived in Carlton Gardens, from Necton Hall. His lordship is on the eve of making a continental tour.

Viscount and Viscountess Villiers and family have arrived at Upton Hall, Warwickshire, from town.

The Countess of Cottenham and the Ladies Peypa are passing the autumn at Ryde, Isle of Wight.

Lord and Lady Wodehouse are shortly expected in town, from visiting the Earl of Clare, at his lordship's seat in Ireland.

Lord and Lady Truro are staying at the Marquis of Lansdowne's villa in the same delightful locality.

Lady Beresford has left Boulogne for the Hotel de la Terrasse, Paris, for the winter. Captain Townsendl, R.N., M.P. for Tamworth, who recently succeeded to the Townsendl estates on the death of his cousin, Lord Charles Townsendl, has been honoured with the appointment of naval aide-de-camp to her Majesty, vacant by Commander Eden's obtaining his flag.

Her Majesty Queen Maria Amelia (ex-Queen of the French), the Duke and Duchess de Nemours, and their Royal Highness's children, the Count d'En, the Duke d'Alençon, and the Princess Margaret, and suite, arrived at the Bedford Hotel, Tavistock, on Tuesday. On Wednesday they visited Kinkaid's cottage, the seat of his Grace the Duke of Bedford, K.G., and also the Duvon Great Consols Copper Mines, and on Thursday, after visiting the beautiful scenery near Morwell rocks and Cotehill, they left for Plymouth.

The Earl and Countess of Wemyss are receiving a select circle at Gosford House, near Haddington. The Countess of Jersey, Lady Clementina Villiers, the Earl and Countess of Warwick, the Countess of Lucan, and the Ladies Bingham, and Lord and Lady Mleho, have been amongst the visitors.

Lord and Lady Seymour are entertaining a few select friends at Mabley Bradley, the Duke of Somerset's seat in Wilts.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester left town on Thursday for the Bedford Hotel, Brighton.

The Duchess Dowager of Hamilton has left Portman-square for Easton-park, Suffolk.

The Earl Fortescue and family are passing a few weeks at Scarborough, where Lord and Lady Courtenay, Lady De Dunstanville, and many other fashionables, have arrived.

METROPOLIS.

SWEARING IN OF THE NEW SHERIFFS.—A Court of Aldermen was held on Thursday, at the Guildhall, for the purpose of inducting the recently-elected Sheriffs of the City of London and Middlesex, Henry Muggridge, Esq., citizen and innholder, alderman of Castle Baynard Ward, and Charles D. Crossley, Esq., citizen and poulterer. Previous to the holding of the court the Sheriffs elect entertained the master, workmen, and court of assistants of the Innholders' Company, the deputy and common council of the ward of Castle Baynard, Sheriffs Wire and Wallis, and a numerous circle of private friends, to a splendid breakfast at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street. Shortly before two o'clock the Lord Mayor, attended by several members of the Court of Aldermen, the Recorder, Sheriffs Wire and Wallis, the sheriffs elect, their under sheriffs, and other corporate officers, proceeded to the hustings in the Guildhall, to attend the Common-hall of the livery, where the oaths were administered by Mr. Serjeant Merewether, the town clerk, to, and subscribed by, both the sheriffs elect, and also by Alex. Crossley, Esq., as senior under-sheriff. The chains of office having been placed over the shoulders of the sheriffs, the ceremony closed. The sheriffs briefly addressed the livery, and the Lord Mayor, aldermen, and sheriffs returned to the Court of Aldermen.

MUSEUM OF ORNAMENTAL ART.—The Museum at Marlborough-house will be re-opened on Monday next. During the recess the specimens have been re-arranged, and considerable additions have been made. The collection of arms from the Royal armory at Windsor will continue to be exhibited. An alteration has been made in the days of admission. In future the Museum will be opened on Saturdays, which will be free days, instead of Tuesdays. This change has been made chiefly with the view of enabling the schools in the metropolis to send their students to visit the Museum on the afternoons of Saturday.

DISCOVERY OF HUMAN REMAINS.—During the last two days a large quantity of human remains have been discovered by the workmen employed in excavating the site of two houses on the south side of Long-lane, Smithfield. From old records there is no doubt that this formed part of the burial-ground of the ancient monastery, as a great number of human remains have been found on pulling down other houses in the vicinity, as well as five or six stone coffins, one of which is in the possession of Mr. Palmer, the late churchwarden of that parish. Nothing but dust was found in the coffins. On the north side of the boundary wall, through which the new sewer is now being made, formerly plague-pits were formed, and upwards of 50,000 persons interred; adjacent to which Bishop Stratford enclosed a piece of land with a brick wall, on which he built a chapel, and named it the Pardon-churchyard. Here also suicides and persons who had been executed were buried; and in Smithfield the remains of martyrs who were burnt at the stake were found during the formation of the sewer through Smithfield.

CRYSTAL PALACE, Sept. 23.—FIVE SHILLING DAY.—Admission at the doors, 163; by season tickets, 1,014; total, 1,167.

RISE IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Wednesday a great number of the bakers in the metropolis increased the price of their bread a halfpenny the 4lb. loaf. In the poor and densely-populated localities the ordinary price among the cheap bakers is now 7½d. for what is termed "best wheaten bread," and for "good wheaten bread," or "seconds," it is a halfpenny less; but where competition among the bakers is keen, the former quality is frequently to be had for 7d. the 4lb. loaf. Other bakers are selling their bread at various prices, up to 9½d. the 4lb. loaf. The corn-chambers are selling their flour at from 2s. 6d. to 3s. per peck of 14lbs.

Our Opera-Glass.

ADELPHI.—This theatre goes on as swimmingly as ever, and therefore no change in the performances since the opening night has been found necessary. The drama of the "Discarded Son" grows in favour on each representation; the excellent acting of Mrs. Keeley, Miss Woolgar, Messrs. Leigh Murray, Keeley, Selby, and Paul Bedford, developed as it is by the capital construction of the piece, could not fail to produce any other result. Mr. Morris Barnett, in the character of Monsieur Jacques, has won "golden opinions" from crowded audiences. In referring to this revival, we cannot refrain from saying a word or two in praise of the feeling and taste shown by Miss Woolgar in her impersonation of Nina, the old Frenchman's daughter. The part itself, though not of great importance, is rendered by this versatile and clever actress one of the most interesting features in the piece, and with so powerful an auxiliary it is not much a subject for wonderment that Mr. Barnett has brought the little drama of "Monsieur Jacques" triumphantly off. The farce of "Capers and Coronets" is in preparation for this actor. The burlesque of "Norma" winds up the evening's entertainments with a hearty roar. Paul Bedford is as riant and racy as ever, and is in full pipe, doing ample justice to Bellini's strains. Miss Woolgar, as Pollio, and Mr. J. Rogers, as Adelgisa, make the cast a strong one.

TURKISH MUSEUM, HYDE-PARK CORNER.—The exhibition at Hyde-park Corner continues to attract all the fashionables still left or arriving in town. On Thursday it was honoured with a visit from the French ambassador and Countess Walewski, also the Portuguese minister, Count Lavradio, and his lady.

ROYAL PANOPTICON OF SCIENCE AND ART.—On Thursday, at the fourth annual meeting of the proprietors of this institution, a dividend of £1 per cent. was declared on the paid-up capital, out of the net receipts for the three months ending the 30th June last, being at the rate of four per cent. per annum. It was stated that the finances were in an improving condition, and that arrangements were being made to reduce the mortgage debt from £20,000 to £12,000. Mr. Clark, the late general manager, had been granted by the council a pension of £300 a year, and was succeeded by the Rev. Dr. Biber, whose salary had been fixed at £500 per annum, and a commission on the net profits set aside for dividend, &c. The chairman stated that all the liabilities of the concern had been provided for, all the shares taken up, and that the institution would re-open on Monday next, with such attractions as would be sure to draw large assemblies of those interested in science and art.

GARRISON THEATRICALS.—The amateurs (non-commissioned officers and privates) of the 3rd Buffs, stationed in this town, have given some theatrical representations during the last month with very considerable success. Already four pieces have been played, the last, on Tuesday evening, entitled the "Golden Farmer," was pretty well rendered, and the various characters sustained with tolerable ability. A number of civilians were present, and seemed to relish the amusements provided for them, which, on the whole, were of a most agreeable character.—Newry Telegraph.

BIRMINGHAM.—Madame Celeste and Mr. Webster have arrived here from Hull, and are playing to more crowded houses than have been seen for years.

THEATRE-ROYAL, HULL.—MR. WEBSTER AND MADAME CELESTE.—This beautiful theatre, in Number-street, has been nightly the receptacle of numerous-attended audiences, assembled to witness the performances of these world-wide celebrities, Mr. Benjamin Webster, lessee, and Madame Celeste, directress, of the well-known Adelphi. On Monday evening Madame Celeste appeared in Beckstone's masterpiece, the drama of the "Green Bishops; or, a Hundred Years Ago," herself performing the character of Miami, the huntress of the Mississippi, and as a necessary sequence, that of Madame St. Aubert also. This talented lady's acting throughout was marked with grace, ease, and dignity, and at the close of her performances she was summoned before the curtain amidst the loud plaudits of the house. Mrs. Raymond, a neat lively little actress, was an efficient representative of Nelly O'Neil, the late Mrs. Fitzwilliam's celebrated character; and Mr. R. Ross an excellent Master Grinnidge. After the drama, Mr. Benjamin Webster appeared as Capitain Sans Souci, and Madame Celeste as Helene de Montecau, in the amusing comedy of "Flying Colours, or Crossing the Frontier." On Tuesday, and the two following evenings, Mr. Webster and Madame Celeste appeared in a round of favourite characters, and they will make their last appearance this evening.—Hull Packet.

ACCIDENT AT THE QUEEN'S THEATRE, GLASGOW.—On Saturday night, while the performers in the Queen's Theatre were performing the "Courier of Lyons" for the first time, one of the company, named Beaumont Hughes, was severely wounded in the hand by the accidental discharge of a pistol he had in his possession. The performance was, in consequence, suddenly brought to a close for the evening.—North British Daily Mail.

DEATH OF MRS. WARNER.—The demise of this celebrated and respected actress took place on Sunday last. She had been suffering during many months under cancer in the breast, and her friends were therefore fully prepared for the melancholy event. Indeed, her living so long, under such circumstances, caused considerable astonishment to her medical attendants. Mrs. Warner must have been about fifty years of age. She was a native of Ireland, and her career in London is too well known to require any lengthened notice. Who can ever forget her magnificent embodiment of the part of Joan of Arc, in the drama of that name—of Rachel, in the gorgeous spectacle of "The Jewess," on the boards of Old Drury? She also performed several important characters in the plays of Shakspeare with great success at our principal theatres, and was generally respected for her artistic abilities, no less than for her moral worth. It is rather a curious circumstance, that death should have followed so shortly after her benefit at Sadler's Wells. The same incident occurred in the cases of Mrs. Glover and poor Kenny. It is a pleasing task to dwell upon this talented lady's career. Her maiden name was Huddart; in fact, she was the daughter of Mr. Huddart, the celebrated tragedian, who made so successful a début at Old Drury but a few nights before the first appearance of the late Edmund Kean. This was in January, 1814. Miss Huddart, at the age of fourteen, made her first public appearance on the stage. The theatre chosen was that at Woolwich; and there, in March, 1818, she played the character of Edward Harp, the boy in Soane's melodrama of "The Innkeeper's Daughter." The other performances on the occasion were "The Wonder," in which the débütante's father played Don Felix, and Mrs. Alsop, the daughter of Mrs. Jordan, came down from Drury Lane specially to sustain the part of Violante. In the "Innkeeper's Daughter," Mrs. Alsop also played Mary, and the rôle of Richard was enacted by Mr. Montague, the father of the present Mrs. Compton. During Mr. Huddart's engagement at the Surrey Theatre under the management of Mr. T. Dibdin, Miss Huddart did not reappear. Her next performance was at Bristol, then managed by Mr. Macready, the father of the present eminent tragedian. From Bristol Miss Huddart went to Lynn, and thence to Dublin, of which city her maternal grandfather was once Lord Mayor. Here she acquired considerable reputation as a tragic actress, and took that high station in the profession which she for so many years sustained and even increased.

DEATH.—On the 26th inst., at his residence, 45, Newington-place, Kennington, Mr. Edward Cross, late of the Surrey Zoological Gardens, in his 81st year.

BURNING OF THE THEATRE.—BOULOGNE, Sunday Evening.—The return of the Emperor on Saturday evening to the Hotel Brighton put all Boulogne on the qui vive for a new round of festivities, especially as it was for some time thought that he had brought the Empress with him. The people, however, were again disappointed, as her Majesty had postponed her visit until Tuesday. As on this day week, the solemnisation of a grand high mass at the camp at Ambletuse drew to that locality an immense number of visitors. Meanwhile, another scene was taking place in the low town, the result of which has been to throw more than one hundred persons out of employment, and materially to curtail the programme of the public amusements in honour of the visit of the Empress. This was nothing else than the total destruction of the theatre by fire. About half past twelve o'clock the bells of the Hotel Ville, St. Joseph's, and St. Nicholas rang the alarm of fire, and the rappel summoned the military to duty. Every one was soon on the alert, and a general rush took place in the direction of the Rue Neuve Chaussee, whence the smoke and flames seemed to proceed, which circumstance gave rise to the opinion that it was the Hotel Windsor which was on fire, for the theatre being at the top of the Rue Monsigny almost faces that celebrated establishment. As they arrived on the ground they were, however, made aware of the real state of the case, and were called on to form the chain and pass the buckets of water from hand to hand to be thrown on the blazing pile by the firemen, who were mounted on ladders placed against its sides. The alarm no sooner reached the Emperor than he ordered his carriage, and, accompanied by his staff, drove to the scene of destruction. The moment he discovered what structure it was that was in flames, he alighted, and, leaving his carriage in the Rue Neuve Chaussee, walked up the Rue Monsigny, and directed the efforts of those who were struggling to extinguish the conflagration, and was as active as any other man in forwarding the water-buckets to the firemen, in which service he was zealously aided by the officers of his staff. There is a law in France that all persons present on such an occasion should aid in extinguishing the flames; but an ignorance of its existence was well-nigh bringing a few of our countrymen into trouble, as they crowded the ground merely in the character of spectators, and did not understand the language or brook the manner in which the military called on them to help. Indeed, one of them who, in attempting to pass onward, was prevented by a soldier, immediately wrested the musket from his grasp, and to prevent any injury being inflicted in the scuffle, unscrewed the bayonet. This latter manoeuvre was altogether misunderstood by the bystanders, who, under the impression that he was going to use the bayonet for the purpose of stabbing his antagonist, became fearfully excited against him. He was immediately surrounded and placed in the hands of two of the police, who unceremoniously dragged him to prison, one holding him by the necktie and the collar of his coat, and the other impelling him with his hand pressed against the back of his neck. This was an episode to the main act, which might have been avoided by a little forbearance. The fire still raged in despite of all the efforts made to extinguish it, and, indeed, it would have been a miracle if they had succeeded, for the scanty supply of water, scanty when compared with the magnitude of the conflagration, must have had the effect of increasing rather than of allaying the flames, and the fire-engines would have brought a broad grin on the face of Superintendent Brabwood. All soon became convinced of the futility of trying to subdue such a body of fire by means so inadequate, and accordingly the building was left to its fate. The fire, it is said, originated in an actor having incautiously brought a lighted cigar into the costume-room, the burning ashes of which having fallen on a dry portion of the properties ignited them, and they spread the flames to the scenery and stage, where the company were at the time rehearsing. It is said that the loss is amply covered by insurance.

ENCORE.—A few years ago, a writer in a magazine proposed that the Latin word repetitus should be used instead of encore. Among other advantages, he suggested that the people in the gallery of a theatre would pronounce it repeat it us, and thus make English of it.

SIGNOR TAMBURINI.—The friends and admirers of Signor Tamburini—and who that have ever heard or known him are not among the number—will be glad to hear that he is enjoying a true otium cum dignitate at Sèvres, where he has for many years been the proprietor of a most elegant villa, the artistic beauties of which are the result of his own taste and direction. It is picturesquely situated on the banks of the Seine, just below Bellevue, a name which would be more appropriate to itself, since it commands a fine panoramic view of Paris and the adjacent country. The name, however, by which it is known in the neighbourhood is the Palais Tamburini, and a very appropriate one too. With him and Madame, reside Signor and Madame Gardoni, another daughter and son, and a blooming array of goodly grandchildren. On the occasion of the magnificent fête, last month, the Signor very handsomely gave his services to lead and enrich the choir at the celebration of high mass.

AN IRON THEATRE GOING TO AUSTRALIA.—Messrs. Edward T. Bellhouse and Co., of Eagle Foundry, are now engaged in the construction of a complete iron shell and framework of a spacious portable theatre, for Mr. George Coppin, who recently appeared at our Theatre Royal, in a round of characters. It seems that Mr. Coppin has engaged Mr. G. V. Brook, the tragedian, to perform in the principal towns in Australia for 200 nights, for which performances he pays Mr. Brooke the sum of £50 per night, or £10,000 for 200 nights! Now, with a vast scheme of this sort it would not do to be at a stand-still, owing to the total absence of suitable room, or the caprices of the proprietory; so Mr. Coppin determines to go out with a complete portable theatre of iron, which, with all fittings and appointments, will cost a sum exceeding £4,000. The building contracted for by Messrs. Bellhouse is eighty-eight feet in length, forty feet wide, and about twenty-four feet high from the ground level to the peak of roof. As the floor level of the pit will be sunk about five or six feet below the ground level, there will be considerable altitude in the interior. The walls will be of cast-iron, uprights (Bellhouse's patent), and galvanised corrugated iron sheets, No. 18, wire gauge. The roof will consist of strong iron principals, having the galvanised sheets hoisted thereupon. To the gable-end of the building, which forms the front, will be attached an ornamental building, which will be arranged as box and pit offices, lobbies, and entrances. A degree of ornamental effect will be given to this facade. The pit will be very spacious, extending back from the foot-lights to the wall below the boxes to about fifty-four feet, and being fifty-nine feet across. The gallery for the boxes will project twenty-four feet from the wall opposite the stage, and eight feet from the wall on each of the sides of the theatre. This gallery will be supported on iron columns and strong framework of timber. Messrs. Bellhouse have undertaken the complete shell of the building, the ornamental facade, and the principal framework of the interior, and have engaged to have the whole on board ship in London in about thirty days from date of contract.—Manchester Examiner.

OXFORD.—The latest return of the state of the cholera at Oxford Board of Health, up to Wednesday evening, was that of the previous Monday, which was as follows:—Monday the 25th of September.—New Cases: Diarrhoea, 169; choleraic-diarrhoea, 5; cholera 1.—Old Cases: Diarrhoea, 156; choleraic-diarrhoea, 12; cholera, 17.—Deaths, cholera, 2. The change in the atmosphere had a most beneficial effect on Sunday and Monday, the fresh cases of cholera on the former day being three only, and on Monday, as the above return shows, one only. This improvement, we regret to say, was not of long duration, for although the returns of Tuesday and Wednesday have not been made up, we are sorry to find that on each day several fresh cases were under medical treatment, and that several deaths had also taken place from cholera on those days. One of the nurses employed by the Board of Health, on Wednesday evening, fell a victim to its malignity caused by her maternal solicitude for her child, which was taken ill on Tuesday; on that day she went home to nurse it, and although warned by the medical attendant on no account to kiss the child, her motherly feelings could not be controlled, and a kiss (doubtless many) was given by the mother to the sufferer, and the consequence was she was taken ill on Wednesday and died in the evening. While in her avocation as nurse, she had been at the death-bed of several of the victims of this most mysterious disease, without having the slightest illness. The Vice-Chancellor has, in the most kind and considerate manner, opened the kitchen of Worcester College, for the purpose of supplying the poor of St. Thomas' parish with good wholesome food, such as legs of mutton roasted, and plenty of good beef-tea, to those that are at all ailing. The Dean has also opened the kitchen at Christ's Church, for the purpose of supplying the poor of St. Ebbe's and St. Aldates. It is gratifying to record these acts of kindness on the part of the university, more particularly just now when it is so much needed, as the medical men all agree that good and plenty of wholesome diet is a great preventive of the cholera.

INCENDIARISM AT ENFIELD.—During the last six or seven weeks a considerable amount of alarm has been felt at Enfield and its immediate vicinity, occasioned by the destruction by fire—the work of an incendiary—of a number of hay-stacks and other property belonging to Mr. Bosanquet, the hanker, and Captain Bevan. The locality where the property is situated is rather retired, and after more than one hay-stack had been burnt, a field-shed was set on fire. Suspicion was immediately aroused, but what was most singular, although there was considerable farm property round about, the mischief seemed to be confined to that belonging to the gentlemen named above. A cessation would take place for a short time, when another hay-stack on fire would arouse the people of the place from their beds. The damage done is included five of these, and notwithstanding the existence of several stacks of wheat and oats belonging to various farmers, not one has been injured hitherto. Three of the stacks and the shed which have been burned belonged to Mr. Bosanquet, and two stacks to Captain Bevan. It is intended in future to have a couple of policemen stationed in closer proximity to the place at night, with a view of preventing or detecting any further attempts of a similar character.

SCOTLAND.

THE QUEEN IN SCOTLAND.—The Earl of Aberdeen has arrived at Balmoral, on a visit to her Majesty the Queen and Prince Albert.

ARCTIC WHALE FISHING.—The gallant Captain Penny set sail on Friday from our port, in his trim little brig, for the Arctic regions, to prosecute the whale fishing. We believe he has every expectation of meeting his other vessel, the Sophia, on her way home with a full cargo.—Aberdeen Herald.

THE WEATHER.—The weather for the last eight days has been on the whole highly favorable to the completion of the harvest operations. There have been frequent and sharp showers, but, being followed by brisk and drying breezes, they did little or no mischief; and since Sunday there has been a great improvement, the weather being mild and bright, with a promise of continuance.

EDINBURGH, Sept. 26.—The government has conferred a pension of £200 from the Literary Fund on Mrs. Fullerton, the widow of the late Lord Fiddlerston.

GOLF COMPETITION.—The annual meeting of the Innerleven Golf Club for the competition of the gold medal, took place on the Links on Thursday week. A pretty good muster of the members were forward; the day was fine, and many spectators lined the play-ground. T. Peters, Esq., won the badge of honour, after good playing at eighty-nine strokes. On Saturday a grand match for Gourlay's golf hall came off with much spirit, as our local bard sings—

"The tilted lord, the county squire,
The magistrate in barish frown,
To clear his fame keenly aspires,
On the banks of Innerleven."

IRELAND.

SUDDEN DEATH OF THE MARQUIS OF ORMONDE.—The city of Kilkenny was on Tuesday thrown into a state of unusual excitement by a rumour, which unhappily later, but better authenticated accounts, completely verified, of the sudden demise of the Marquis of Ormonde, at Loftus Lodge, county of Wexford, whither he had gone a short time since, accompanied by the Marchioness and family, to enjoy the benefit of sea-bathing. One of the local papers (the Kilkenny Journal) has the following account of the melancholy event:—"In the course of the forenoon accounts were received which went to alleviate the apprehensions previously entertained. They were to the effect that the noble Marquis had been suddenly seized with an apoplectic fit, which rendered him unconscious, but that hopes of his recovery were still entertained. Later in the day, however, the tidings which reached Kilkenny were such as to leave no doubt of the fatal nature and termination of his lordship's illness; but from the imperfect means of communication between this city and Fethard, nothing more than a vague and somewhat confused narrative of the melancholy event could be obtained. From this it would appear that about eleven o'clock on Monday morning Lord Ormonde was walking with the Marchioness upon the sea-beach observing their children bathing. Suddenly his lordship was seized with a fit, which almost rendered him insensible, and in this state he remained till his death, which did not take place for several hours afterwards. Unhappily, no medical assistance was at hand, and when it did arrive earthly aid was of no avail. We have heard two causes of death assigned—the one apoplexy; the other the rupture of one of the vessels of the stomach. With the first intelligence of the noble Marquis's death the deepest concern was manifested throughout the entire city of Kilkenny, and the windows of all the houses of business were partially closed. This tribute of regret was more than deserved by the late Lord Ormonde; for he was, in truth, a good man in every relation of life. As a landlord kind, indulgent, and generous, he had but few equals in this country, and deeply will his loss be deplored by the tenantry of his extensive estates in this and the adjoining counties. As a gentleman, he was ever affable, unassuming, frank, and high-minded; as a magistrate and a public man, sensible, upright, and honourable, guided always, even if in error, by a strict sense of the proper and the just. It is his best epitaph that a people who, of necessity, differed from him in faith and feelings, paid him, while living, the tribute of a high and warm-hearted respect, and, when dead, mourned him with a sincere sorrow. The late Marquis of Ormonde was born on the 24th of August, 1808, and succeeded in the title in 1838. He married in 1843 Frances Jane, daughter of the Hon. Sir E. Paget, second son of the late Earl of Anglesey, by whom he leaves four sons and two daughters. The young Earl of Ossory (now Marquis of Ormonde) is only eleven years old."

HORN'S TAVERN, KENNINGTON.—SEPT. 26TH AND 27TH. DIVERS v. WEST-END AND CRYSTAL PALACE RAILWAY COMPANY. (Before C. J. Abbott, Esq., Under-Sheriff, P. A. Micheling, Esq., Assessor, and ten special Jurors.)—This was a proceeding to assess the amount of compensation to be paid to the claimant for a small piece of land, comprising 7 rods and 25 perches, proposed to be taken by the company, pursuant to their notice dated the 3rd of November, 1853, the company having subsequently given notice of abandonment, it being their intention to vary the line within their Parliamentary powers. The particulars of the claim were—First, That the land situate in Norwood contained brick earth, which could be excavated to the depth of 18 or 20 feet, and that the quantity comprised in the 7 rods and 25 perches would make 7,000,000 of bricks, upon which he calculated his profit at £2,800. Secondly, The railway passing through his land in a deep cutting would cut off one part of the field from the other, and so render the remaining portion valueless for brick-making, for which he claimed £2,100. The third item of claim was, that the land would be available for building purposes after the clay had been excavated, and that in consequence of the mode in which the line would pass there would be damage by loss of frontage to the amount of £113. 4s. per annum, and that, taken at twenty-five years' purchase, would be £2,831. 8s.; the total amount of the claim being £7,731. 8s. Negotiations had commenced between the parties for the purpose of coming to an amicable settlement, but having failed, they were compelled to issue their precept to the sheriff to summon a jury to assess the amount of compensation. Evidence was produced by the plaintiff in support of the particulars of his claim, which was met by counter evidence on the part of the company, showing that the clay was of a very inferior quality for the manufacture of bricks, and that there being a great quanty of it in the immediate neighbourhood, it was impossible that the demand for Mr. Dices' bricks would be so great as to justify his making such a claim; one of the principal points of defence also being founded on a section in the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, which provides that, in the event of a company not using the land taken by them, the landowner from whom it was taken should have the option of re-purchasing it from the company; and that as in this case the company manifested their intention of not using it, the plaintiff could not, in that respect, sustain any damage.—The case was conducted by Mr. Bevil and Mr. Haichin for the claimant, and by Mr. Wells for the company.—The learned assessor having succinctly summed up the case to the jury, they consulted for about ten minutes, when they stated their unanimous verdict to be, that the plaintiff was entitled to £550.

GUIDE-HALL.

BAD MEAT.—Mr. Williams, a charman, was summoned by the Inspectors of Meat for Neigate-market for sending the body of a cow to market for sale which was totally unfit for human food.—Sir R. W. Carden and Alderman Rose severely censured the practice of sending meat in such a state to market at any time, but more particularly during the prevalence of such a fearful epidemic as that from which all London had been suffering, and to which hundreds of persons had fallen victims; but, as they had no summary jurisdiction in the matter, they had no alternative but to commit the defendant to take his trial at the sessions.—Committed accordingly.

MARYLEBONE.

EXTORTION.—Upon the arrival of the Government van from the House of Detention, Clerkenwell, a great crowd of persons assembled at the Paradise-street entrance to the court, in order to obtain a sight of four prisoners; two of them men, named Hurst and Iken, and two women, named Mary Hadden and Louisa Lee, all of whom had been taken into custody by Potter, 81, and Curman, 263 D, on the charge of having been concerned in the perpetration of robberies in the amount in the aggregate of upwards of £7,000.—Mr. Wootner and Mr. Lewis were in attendance on behalf of the prisoners.—The particulars of each previously transpired, in reference to the extensive and systematic mode of plunder adopted, have already appeared in our paper.—It will be remembered that upon Hurst was found a gold watch, value forty-five guineas, also a chain, worth fifteen guineas, together with between £7 and £10 in cash. On Iken was found a "Jenny" (a four-bar) and a knife.—Mrs. Pemberton, the wife of the barrister of that name, deposed that she resided at 72, Warwick-square, Finsbury. On Friday, July 21st, she missed from her dressing-table a gold chain, bracelets, and other articles of jewellery, of the value of 150 guineas. Upon the discovery of her loss, she immediately communicated with the police, to whom she described, as accurately as she was able, the property which had been stolen. She believed that the diamonds, garnets, &c., produced by the officers employed in the case, formed part of the property which she had lost.—By Mr. Wootner: I have had the chain by me for ten or twelve years, and I can swear it is mine.—William Curman said that, on Friday, July 21st, he saw the male prisoners loitering about Mr. Pemberton's house a short time previous to the robbery.—By Mr. Lewis: I cannot swear that the prisoner Iken was one of the men, but I believe him to be so.—The next case gone into was that of stealing a valuable gold watch.—Mrs. Patty Young, 40, Bedford-street, Finsbury, deposed that, on the 2nd of August, she found that she had been robbed of her gold watch, and £10 in gold and notes, as also a large quantity of jewellery. The greater part of the property was stolen from her dressing-cup in her bed-room.—The watch was produced by Potter, 81 D, and was identified by Mrs. Young.—By Mr. Wootner: I asked the prisoner Hurst how he accounted for the possession of the watch and gold, and he said they were his own, and that he had had them for a long time.—It was shown, in the course of the inquiry, that a silver candlestick, found at the residence of the prisoner Hadden, 63, Castle-street, Leicester-square, was a portion of a robbery committed at the house of the Rev. Mr. Nicholl, 5, St. Bride's-terrace, Brighton, in May last. A ring, found upon the prisoner Iken, had also been identified by the Rev. Mr. Nicholl, who deposed, Brighton, as having been stolen among other valuable property, from his premises.—Curman added that he took from Iken's lodgings in Berkeley-street, Oxford-street, a daguerrotypic portrait of him (Iken), which he showed to a female servant living at the house adjoining that of Mr. Madlocks, and who instantly recognised the likeness as being that of the prisoner Iken, whom she saw leaving the house of Mr. Madlocks just before the robbery was known to have been effected.—Some additional evidence was gone into, and, in reference to the above cases, so well got up by Potter and Curman, the officers, a gentleman, whose name did not transpire, said that, seeing in the papers a report of the last examination, he had come forward, declaring that the prisoners were the parties who had recently committed an extensive robbery at Hilling.—The whole of the prisoners were remanded till Wednesday next.

SOUTHWARK.

ISRAEL FANATISM.—A well-dressed young man, named Charles Benjamin Koch, described in the charge-sheet as a master painter, residing at No. 21, Welbeck-street, City-road, and who evidently appeared to be labouring under a species of religious insanity, was placed in the dock before Mr. A'Beckett, charged with causing an obstruction in the Borough-road, on Sunday afternoon, and refusing to go away when required by the police.—Margaret James, the landlady of the White Hart, in the Borough-road, stated that for some time past, on Sunday mornings and afternoons, she and her neighbours had been much annoyed by the defendant and another man collecting a mob of persons in front of their doors, preaching in a very excited manner. Their conduct was generally so abrupt and violent that it was a complete nuisance.—Mr. A'Beckett told her to confine herself to the charge against the defendant, as there was no other person in custody.—Witness continued that, on Sunday afternoon, a little before three o'clock, the defendant placed himself near the entrance leading to the Queen's Prison, and his excited manner soon collected a large mob around him. He held a Bible in his hand, and abused the Catholics, and spoke much against the Irish. There were several of the latter present, and also several very much that a riot would have ensued. She consequently sent for the police to disperse them.—Mr. A'Beckett: Did you say the prisoner was preaching?—Witness: Yes, sir; but very improper. His language was blasphemous, and more likely to cause a disturbance than gain converts.—Mr. A'Beckett: You say he used disgraceful language towards a particular sect and people?—Witness: Yes, sir. He damned the Irish and the Catholics, which I considered very improper conduct. I saw a number of Irishmen near him, and apprehending, from their gestures, a disturbance, I sent for the police. The defendant and another man had disconcertedly conducted themselves for some Sunday past, and it had become an intolerable nuisance.—A police constable, who had taken the prisoner into custody, gave similar evidence.—The prisoner, in reply, broke out in an excited strain, declaring that he had a mission from God, and defied any one to prevent his preaching.—After keeping up a conversation in the same style for some time with the magistrate, Mr. A'Beckett said to the constable: Has he any friends, as he seems not to be in his right senses?—Prisoner: That's all trash. I am commanded by God to preach in the highways and byways, and my being here is all spite.—Mr. A'Beckett: You are labouring under a great mistake, and you cannot be allowed to create an obstruction in the streets. Will you promise not to offend again?—Prisoner: I'll not make such a promise, as I am only obeying the commands of God.—Mr. A'Beckett: I have no doubt that your intentions may be good, but your conduct is likely to cause a great deal of ill-feeling among the parties who may surround you. You must keep within the limits of the law, or you will be punished. You are now discharged.—The prisoner then left the court with several of his friends.

THAMES.

STABBING.—George B. nect, an ingenious-looking boy of seventeen, was brought up on remand before Mr. Yardley, charged with feloniously and maliciously stabbing Alfred Audley, on the 21st of July last, at Loughorn, on board the brig Xian, of Newcastle, and with intent to murder him, or do grievous bodily harm.—The lad sobbed aloud, buried his face in his hands, and said he had nothing at all to say.—Mr. Yardley committed him for trial at the next sessions of the Central Criminal Court.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday, Sept. 28.

The Emperor and Empress—Preparations for Next Year—New Paris Police—The Opera-singer and her Critic—How an Englishman spends his Money—Fatal Duel—Theatricals.

THERE is a general report here that the Emperor and Empress will visit her Majesty and Prince Albert at Windsor during the present autumn, and remain for a week. The account of the speeches, or rather the conversation, which took place at the much-talked-of farewell supper, given by the Emperor to his Royal Highness at Boulogne, is asserted here to be true to the letter; but both the Emperor and his principal guest were extremely angry at the publication of what took place. But the correctness of the report is guaranteed by one of the company at the royal table.

Paris continues to furnish up all its old buildings, in honour of its expected visitors next year to the Exhibition; and every quiet, antique street and court in remote parts of the town, which have not known the brush or ladder since their construction, are now perforce undergoing the cleansing process, by orders from Government. This has occasioned much grumbling on the part of messieurs les proprietaires; but the effect is already beautiful. When completed, Paris will assuredly be, with its new, brilliant addition, by far the most magnificent of European capitals.

All visitors to Paris will be delighted to learn that we are about to have a police system similar to that of London. Residents are not quite so elated on the subject, as they will naturally have to pay for it pretty handsomely. The advantage is very great over the old system, by which horse-patrols slowly move through the streets at stated intervals, during the night, and whose hoofs give marauders and other lawless vagabonds due notice of the precise moment when to decamp and when to return. They have long been the laughing-stock of the nightly filibusters of Paris. It must be said, however, that, for a capital so ill-protected, the number of robberies and outrages are exceedingly limited.

I last week mentioned the disgraceful traffic by which a distinguished artiste of one of our leading theatres of the capital had been induced to pay for the favourable notice of a writer for one of the influential journals the sum of 8,000 francs per annum, with, perhaps, the more scandalous fact, that the individual stigmatised by so base a betrayal of his duties had been able to command influence enough to sustain him in his post, and still continued to deliver his honest and impartial critical opinions in the weekly feuilleton of the newspaper in question. The Pigaro, which gave the particulars of this ignoble business to the public, intimated that it would publish further details on the subject in its next number; but deep was the disappointment of hundreds of readers on unfolding its columns on Sunday last to find not a syllable—not a hint on the subject. The affair, in fact, had been buried. The inference drawn by the public from this silence is, that the same influence which sheltered the offender from well-merited dismissal, has also been exercised on his behalf at the bureau of our friend, the vivacious "Tonsor." This silence of the press, however, only makes the public more curious and more loquacious on the affair; and report thus supplies the following account of the causes which led to the revelations made to the proprietor of the Paris journal on the part of M^{me}. — The voice of rumour proclaims that the fair artiste who had paid the enthusiastic scribe with such ill-requited liberality, having accepted an engagement for St. Petersburg, on terms which rendered her future career wholly independent of the criticism of the honest Parisian press, she determined, on quitting France, to leave a Parthian farewell for her quondam friend. Indignant at his ungenerous (to say nothing of honour and principle) neglect from the time she had ceased to pay for his praises, M^{me}. — made no secret of her feelings upon his conduct, and looked forward with anxious desire for the moment when circumstances would place her in a position to brave his wrath and expose his dishonesty. Hence the disclosure to the editor in the terms described last week; it was made by the lady's husband on the eve of their setting out for the Russian capital. The circumstance of the departure of the accuser was, it appears, adroitly made use of by the accused, and he and his patrons entirely deny, according to one version of the story, the truth of the charge, notwithstanding the direct, formal, and explicit manner in which it was made, evidently with a view to challenge publicity. There is, however, another version afloat of the cause which led to the re-installment of the incriminated feuilletonist, namely, that the system of bribery is so generally prevalent throughout a great part of the press, that it would be unfair to visit M. — with punishment for practices the existence of which has been recognised by usage among the "gentlemen of the press!" It is, I believe, only fair to say that this last version is a gross libel on the character of the journals in Paris, most of the writers in which would spurn any traffic of this nature with becoming indignation. Some of the musical journals are understood not to be so punctilious; but these are scarcely known to the public at large, being almost wholly supported by musical artistes, who are somehow persuaded that they can be of benefit or injury to them. The best thing in the present affair is that it is likely to lead to a general reform, as the Literary and Dramatic Association is about to take up the affair, and to submit the writers and their practices to severe investigation.

A rich Englishman, who has lately taken up his quarters at the principal hotel in Granville, and who is evidently troubled with more money than wit, has recently been visited by the police, to remonstrate with him for creating daily confusion and riot in the town by throwing money out of his window to the populace of the place. The eagerness to profit by this vulgar munificence is so great, that peasants from the neighbouring villages flock into the town every day in great numbers, and the struggles for the spoil are described as positively murderous. "Milord" expressed himself very indignant, on the "trueborn Englishman" plan, at the interference of the authorities, and threatened to acquaint the Emperor!

A singular, but unfortunately fatal, duel took place on the plaine de Monceaux on Monday. Two young mechanics, employed in the engineer department of the Versailles Railway, having quarrelled about a pretty sempstress they had met at a public dance on the Sunday night, resolved to settle the dispute by weapons which, though much used in the days of Goliath, are not familiar to modern warfare—videlicet, stones. They stood at a hundred yards' distance, but both being very adroit, they were dangerous antagonists; and, after a few throws, one of them received a blow on the temple which felled him to the ground. He was carried to a neighbouring hospital, but expired in a short time, notwithstanding all the appliances of surgical skill.

A few days of chilly weather have somewhat brought up the theatres, which all have been doing badly, with the exception of the Français on Rachel nights. "Arna" and "Norma" have come back to the Variétés, and are felt in the receipts. Bouffé, you will be glad to hear, played one night for a benefit at the Porte St. Martin, with renovated health; his powers are not yet what they were, but he is gradually gaining strength. The house was crowded to the ceiling, and the manager arranged with him for twelve performances; but the Minister (!) interfered and forbade the engagement, on the ground that it was not a theatre for vaudevilles.

Nota.—The after-pieces here invariably belong to the vaudeville class.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

INDIA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIA.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

TRIESTE, Wednesday.—The steamer Bombay arrived this morning at 8 o'clock from Alexandria (the 22nd of September), in 111 hours. The India mail left Alexandria on that day, with advices from Calcutta of the 19th of August; Madras, the 24th of August; Bombay, the 28th of August; Shanghai, the 24th of July; Amoy, the 29th; Canton the 5th, and Hongkong, the 6th of August; Singapore, the 13th of August; Sydney, the 21st of July; Melbourne, the 25th of July; and Adelaide, the 29th of July. Trade in India was dull. Exchange at Calcutta, 1.11½. Canton was in a state of seige, all business suspended, and in a few days would be in the hands of the rebels. No tea brought to market. Whampoa and Fushan are still in possession of the rebels. Sir John Bowring was in the north. Exchange at Shanghai, 6.1; Canton, 4.11.

In Australia there is great depression in all commercial affairs. The half-yearly report of the Great Nugget Vein Mining Company is unfavourable, and no dividend was declared. Mrs. Chisholm and her party of emigrants landed at Port Phillip on the 14th of July. New South Wales gold was worth, at Sydney, £3 17s.; Port Phillip, £4.

AUSTRALIANA.

REDUCTION OF POSTAGE TO NEW SOUTH WALES, VICTORIA, AND SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—General Post-office, Sept. 1854.

—On and from the 1st October next, the postage upon letters conveyed, whether by packet or private ship, between the United Kingdom and the following British colonies—viz. New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia—will be reduced to a combined British and colonial rate of,—For a letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight, 6d.; for a letter exceeding half an ounce and not exceeding one ounce, 1s.; for a letter exceeding one ounce and not exceeding two ounces, 2s.; and so, increasing one shilling for every ounce or fraction of an ounce. The postage upon these letters may be paid in advance, or they may be forwarded unpaid at the option of the sender. The foregoing reduction of postage will extend to all letters directed to Van Dieman's Land, which are sent by the Australian Mail Packets, whether those which go direct to Australia, or those which take the route of Singapore, as well as to all letters for New Zealand specially addressed "via Melbourne," or "via Sydney," but upon such letters, both those for New Zealand, and those for Van Dieman's Land, the postage must be paid in advance, or the letters cannot be forwarded. To the reduced rate of 6d., a French transit rate of 5d. per quarter ounce, must be added in the case of all letters for the above-mentioned colonies, which may be specially addressed to be sent via Marseilles, making the total charge upon such letters:—When under a quarter of an ounce in weight, 11d.; when weighing a quarter of an ounce and under half an ounce, 1s. 4d.; when weighing half an ounce and under three-quarters of an ounce, 2s. 3d., and so on. The correspondence for Western Australia is forwarded as a rule by private ship. Letters for that colony specially addressed to be transmitted "via Singapore," will continue liable to the existing rate of 1s. the half ounce, or, if also directed to be sent via Marseilles, to the existing rate of 1s. 10d. the quarter ounce, but letters for Western Australia, addressed to go by the direct Australian packet, will be sent in the mail for Melbourne, and will be liable only to the reduced rate of 6d. In all cases the postage must be prepaid. It must be understood that the foregoing reduction of postage applies only to letters put into the post on or after the 1st of next month, and that all letters which are put into the post before that date will be charged with the existing rate of postage.

OUTWARD BOUND.—The departures from the port of London for the Australian colonies during the week have comprised seven vessels—three for Port Phillip, with an aggregate burden of 2,545 tons; two for Sydney, with an aggregate burden of 1,274 tons; and two for Adelaide, with an aggregate burden of 762 tons. Their total capacity was consequently 4,581 tons. The rates of freight exhibit no material alteration.

ARRIVAL.—The Eagle has arrived in the Thames from Melbourne, whence she sailed on the 30th of June, with 80,000 ounces of gold and 35,000 sovereigns, making a total of £355,000.

GOLD FIELDS.

GOLD IN CORNWALL.—Ten waggons laden with ore from a mine near Callington passed through Saltash on Tuesday. The ore was safely enclosed in boxes, and is supposed to contain a large proportion of gold. It has been shipped for Messrs. Ransome and May, of Ipswich, to be crushed and assayed.

AUSTRALIAN GOLD FIELDS.—At the recent meeting of the British Association, Mr. H. E. Michel, B.A., New College, Oxford, presented a paper which was read by the secretary, "On the Results to be obtained by the scientific Treatment of the abandoned workings of the Australian Gold Fields," of which the following is an extract:—"Whilst at the present moment public attention has been so forcibly directed to the obtaining of gold from Englishore, it might not be inopportune to inquire into the results which might be achieved were capital and scientific knowledge directed to the treatment of abandoned Australian workings. The average rate of labour being £1 a day has caused the partial abandonment of auriferous strata, whose results operated on by the simple cradle did not attain that limit. Yet under certain conditions from an ounce to an ounce and a half might be recovered per ton of earth. Opposed as I am to experimental quartz crushing, I believe that until the rail has bridged the ravines of Australia, and the tunnel penetrated her mountains, results which will pay for the expenditure necessary for that process can never be attained. But the solution of the great problem of the disintegration of the auriferous matrix by the electric current, would at once render our quartz veins productive, and rank the scientific discoverer amongst the first men of the age. At present, with the aid of powerful machinery, the earth, stones, and clay carefully washed, exposed to the action of sieves moving horizontally under water, and afterwards carried down sluices, would, with the addition of the amalgamating process, recover all the contained metal. Companies failed hitherto, from incompetent managers unacquainted with the country or its requirements; the machinery, too heavy for transports, was abandoned and the tribute system, which is the best spur to individual mining energy, was ignored. Whilst abandoned ground can now be obtained on leasehold, companies can count on the assistance of the Colonial Government, anxious to develop the resources of the country, and it is a matter of surprise that as yet no steps have been taken in this direction. Sluice washing of the rudest nature, without the aid of machinery, has been found on the Owens to pay remarkably well, and is extensively practised, and new gold fields having opened up at Mount William, the Avoca, and the Buckland rivers, the Bendigo, Ballarat, and Forest Creek districts having been partially drained of their occupants, no difficulty would be experienced in obtaining ground. Unlike speculative mining, results on this system could always be predicated with some degree of certainty, whilst errors would lie directly at the door of the manager. In no instance hitherto has the process been attempted on a large scale, whilst the new field thus opened to adventure is of a magnitude which baffles calculation. From Bengerarra to Bendigo, a distance of more than 1,500 miles, auriferous gullies, each one of which would give employment to several engines, are to be found in profusion. The system once brought into operation, an increased impetus would be given to trade by the increased production of gold; the demand for steam-engines would be largely augmented; railroads would become a necessity to the Australian; the demand for iron rails would benefit the ironmasters of England; whilst the countless wealth of the antipodes would fertilize Europe in a steadily increasing stream. Emigrants, at length convinced that solvent companies can afford to pay them £1 per day, will seek in thousands the great southern land; whilst by the increased consumption of manufactures an impetus will be given to trade unparalleled in the history of nations. The experiment is yet to be tried, and it remains for the scientific and intelligent capitalist to consider whether these propositions are feasible, or whether utopian and impossible results have been predicated."

Our Letter-Bag.

WHIPS AND SPURS.

MR. EDITOR.—I really thought the much-vexed question of ladies' whips and spurs had been set at rest by the last letter but one in your paper—the only sensible epistle, I think, that has appeared. But, since the "Brighton Riding-horse" has wound itself up to indite another of its lengthy productions, I must beg to insert a line or two in answer.

And, first, I wish I had that very horse in harness, for, I make no doubt, it's just the one to jib, or be what they call on board, skulker and shirker. If men, who have twice our strength—and, it is fairly to be inferred, intellect to match—(though I have known many a heavy dragoon whose brain was about as large, and as useful, as when he sat on his mother's lap)—have, for protection, pleasure, or vengeance, two spurs, a lady might, with justice, wear four, and a brace of whips, if she could carry them. And as true merit, like scum, will rise, and mediocrity must find its level, so if a girl can manage her horse, he will soon find it out; if she cannot, he finds that out too. In the first place, she is worthy of her spur; in the other, he throws her, and there ends the matter. Our sex manage lovers and husbands the same way, and understand perfectly well what they may do, or how far they may go, without losing their mastery, or over-irritating their subject. Therefore, I think this a question which may be safely left to the discretion and ability of the riders. As for laying down one system for all horses and all equestrians it is absurd, as there never yet were two horses or two riders who required or used the same management. Of course, it is notorious that at Brighton, as at Scarborough and elsewhere, people ride who never mounted a horse before in their lives. So I suspect that the back who writes has been pulled about by queerish bands, and kicked with reckless heels; guided, perhaps, by fingers more intent on grasping the crutch or the pommet, than relieving the mouth. I can only say I have for a couple of years ridden a young thoroughbred, which had a trick of bolting round quickly to the left, whenever he deemed he had a rider on his back who could not resent his conduct. But if he were aware that she wore a spur, and would use it if required, he never, to my knowledge, so much as attempted it. I need not say how useless a whip on the right side is to warn a horse from the left. I am no advocate for cruelty, and am very fond of my horses; but I never ride without a whip and spur, which punish if required.

With apologies for trespassing on your space, I remain, Mr. Editor, yours, AMV.

P.S.—My horses prefer being stroked by hands gloved, in well-fitting buckskin—not white kid, suitable only for the Brighton riding ladies.

MOTHS.

SIR,—So many useful questions are asked and answered in your interesting paper, that I trust you will permit me to inquire if any of your readers can inform me how to eradicate moths from the lining of a carriage? I am, sir, yours, &c.,

A SCARSCARE.

GUNS.

SIR,—I have been, with many hundreds of others, much amused lately by the publication in yours and other journals of the proper and safe way to handle or carry a gun—a thing ninety-nine boys out of every hundred, to say nothing of sportsmen, as well knew before as they did how many beans made five. But there is one thing in that letter I cannot agree with, nor do I know one first-rate sportsman with whom I have been out—and that is no small number—that does not carry his gun, in the field or on the moors, full-cocked, as being quicker and safer far. If you have to cock too much, or move two locks after your bird has risen, you would lose many double shots, as well as from the flurry on the bird rising, even with old sportsmen; that you would often miss letting the seer go with the full cock, on the thumb slipping, and your gun go off, to the great danger of your friend, or your dog. I have known a few such accidents; and I could name a few of the great guns who would not go out with any one carrying his gun in that way but with my safety-guard to a gun. The expense is trifling, and I have used one for twenty years, in all weathers, and have never had it get out of order; and I will contract to keep it in repair for a shilling a year. With it no accident can happen getting through a hedge, if carried at half-cock, full-cock, or, what is much oftener the case, that having fired one barrel only, in your hurry you forget to put the other lock back to half-cock, and the jar of loading sets off the other lock, and takes off a few fingers. Many accidents of this kind occur every season; but they do not get into the newspapers, as they would were it to occur in the field of battle. I remain, sir, your obedient servant,

J. L.

September 14th, 1854.
P.S.—I do not wish to hurt the feelings of poor old Bishop; but he speaks of the knowledge of a gun for forty-four years. It was very little more than thirty he was porter at Cuff's, silversmith, corner of Glasshouse-street; nor did I ever hear he ever fired off a gun—at game. I have shot at matches, and won the handsomest piece of plate ever shot for at the Red House, against Captain Ross, Osbaldeston, and all the great guns, Sir Richard Sutton, and a host of others, in the field; but I do not wish to go farther with it, or puff.

Sir,—Having seen in your paper the excellent letter of Mr. Bishop, on accidents with fire-arms, I wish to offer a few remarks on the subject. A great number of accidents are occasioned by persons going out shooting that are almost totally unacquainted with the management of a gun—carrying it as carelessly as they would a walking-stick—and, when a bird rises, firing in any direction without noticing whether there is anybody in the way, as was the case at the beginning of this season.

Let every beginner, before he goes out shooting, practice handling and firing his gun under the direction of an experienced friend; the trouble will be amply repaid by increased safety, confidence, and, consequently, success in the field. Above all, never trust a loaded gun in the possession of an inexperienced servant. In getting through a fence, of course, the shooter always goes first; let him keep the point of the gun before him, with the locks at half-cock, his hand grasping it round, with his thumb on the caps between and the hammers, when it is impossible for it to go off. In uncocking put the thumb of the left hand across the caps in the same way, the fear of hurting which, will effectually prevent letting the hammer down too quickly, which has occasioned many accidents. And, to conclude, never take the caps off till fired, for as long as they are on, any body can tell that the gun is loaded, and be more careful with it, and never let the cocks down on the caps.

An accident happened but a few days ago from a gun having been put by loaded, with the cap taken off; another person was going to shoot, and loaded it again, when the barrel bursted and blew his hand to pieces, whereas, if the cap had been left on he would not have put the second charge in.
HUGH.

COCKING AND UNCOCKING GUNS.

Sir,—I was very much amused a few weeks ago at the Times newspaper receiving into its columns some half-dozen letters upon the cocking and uncocking of a gun, with the same solemnity as it would introduce a letter on the discovery of a new sun or moon, or of a new country presided over by Jack the Giant-killer, or some great wonderment that all the little children in France speak French, or that young ducks swim naturally on leaving the egg-shell. The Times, perhaps, has taken out a game-certificate for the first time in its life this year, and is riding its new hobby, and astonishing us with its knowledge of sporting matters, and indulging a Cockney sentiment.

The subject has been written to death in all the books and essays on shooting, and the Times shooter, who says that he always carries one barrel cocked, and cocks the other after the discharge of the first or cocked barrel, must be an amusing sight on an Irish snipe-bog, or a November stubble, and, if I had the gentleman's reference, I would go some miles to see him put his theory into practice. The practical rules, about cocking and uncocking a gun are simply these:—

Never carry your gun cocked over a fence, or in a road, or in any place except where you really expect game to rise, and think it worth while to be quite on the qui vive for a shot; and, whatever you do, do not always be cocking and uncocking your gun, and messing with your locks. When you uncock your gun lower the cock—as Mr. Bishop, of Bond-street, tells you in The Field of last week—beyond the half-cock, and put it back safe to half-cock, and never hold the muzzle of the gun, when cocked or uncocked, towards any living being. Form your habits in this respect, by constant care and practice, and there will not be much the matter.
UMBRA.

INTERPRETERS IN TURKEY.

Sir,—The perusal of the following will show the necessity for our authorities in Downing-street having the Turkish language taught in England, and employing only English interpreters:—"When the advanced guard of Omar Pasha's army advanced upon Frateschl, some weeks ago, the light cavalry, under Kadik Pasha, captured a Russian officer, who happened to be from Kourland. This officer gave all the information he could give, and, among other matters, he mentioned the intimate knowledge the Russians have of the doings of the French and English camps. He named the vessels and number of transports in the harbour of Varna, the position of the divisions in the camps and the town; in short, this Russian officer was better informed than the clerks in the quartermaster-general's office, who, on one occasion, had to confess to me their complete ignorance of the whereabouts of the infantry depot companies. The Russian officer went so far as to say that he could, if required, repeat the substance of conversations held by British officers in their tents. To the uninhabited this seems strange enough, as, in a camp, eavesdroppers cannot hope to pass unnoticed by day, while at night the sentinels keep off every one but those attached to the corps. But the matter appears a little more explicable if I remind you of certain interpreters that are attached to each regiment, and quartered next to the tents of the officers highest in command. These interpreters, some of whom speak not only the languages of the country, and French, as a medium of interpretation, but also English, are almost all members of Greek and Armenian families from Stamboul. The Greeks and Armenians are fond of Russia, and fond of money. Their political sympathies, and the Russian gold, are enough to explain the leaking-out of information; and while spies are in this manner kept in the camp, and paid and rationed, our general officers and colonels fight shy of every English civilian, lest that civilian should happen to be a correspondent to one of the London journals. There is so much danger of dangerous information finding its way into the Crimea by way of London and St. Petersburg. The Russian spies know of a shorter route, and they have facilities for procuring information such as no correspondent could ever boast of." The above appeared in the Daily News of Monday week.—Yours, &c., BASHT-BAZOUX.

Bits and Spurs.

CROPS DESTROYED BY GAME.—A case of some interest to farmers was lately tried at the Sheriff Court here. The pursuer, Mr. J. Black, who had been for many years tenant of the farm of Lescraige, near Turfiff, in 1844 renewed his lease for nineteen years, at the annual rent of £70. By the printed regulations which form part of the lease, he became bound "strictly to preserve the game of all descriptions." At the date of the renewed lease, the game upon the farm was not abundant, and no noticeable damage was done to the crops. In a few years the game began very greatly to increase, and the tenant stated that, in the year 1850, it had increased to an unprecedented extent. On the 9th of October, 1850, the tenant wrote the defender, his landlord, a letter, asking damages for the destruction of his crops by the game. The same request was renewed in September, 1851, and in December, 1852, the pursuer raised an action against the defender, claiming damages for the loss sustained in his crops in 1851, reserving action for other damages sustained by him on previous crops, as well as for crop 1852. In defence, the defender maintained that the pursuer had agreed and become "strictly bound to preserve and protect the game of all descriptions." The record having been closed, Sheriff-Substitute Watson allowed the pursuer a proof of his statements, and the defender a cross-proof. Against this judgment the defender lodged a reclaiming petition, objecting to the pursuer being allowed to prove that any of the damage was done by rabbits, as rabbits are not game, and the pursuer was entitled to kill all rabbits on his farm. This petition was answered by the pursuer, and the Sheriff-Substitute, on the 27th of April, 1853, adhered to his former judgment. The defender then appealed the case to the Sheriff-Principal, who pronounced judgment, recalling the interlocutor appealed against, and allowing the pursuer a proof of the averments in his condescendence as to the excess of hares only upon his farm, and the damage done by them to his crops in the year 1851. The pursuer being thus limited to a proof of the damage done to his crops by hares, examined several witnesses, and the defender did the same. On the 1st of February, 1854, the Sheriff-Substitute pronounced judgment, finding the gross amount of damage to the crops by the excessive game to amount to £47. 13s. 11d.; but as the injury done had been partly by rabbits and partly by hares, he restricted the damage to £15. The pursuer then appealed the case to Sheriff Davidson, who found it not proven that the defender had used any extraordinary means for the protection and increase of game, or that the hares on the farm were in unusual numbers, or that they had increased in 1851 to a greater number than in 1844, or that more damage was done by hares in 1851 than in 1844. He found, also, that there were no data for determining what proportion of the damage done to the crops in 1851 was done by hares, and what proportion was done by rabbits, which appear to have greatly increased since 1844; and that the pursuer, therefore, had no relevant claim of damage against the defender for injury done by rabbits.—Aberdeen Journal.

A SENSIBLE DUEL.—A friendly duel, says the San Joaquin Republican, took place on Monday afternoon, at Moquelumehill, between Mr. Laforge, county clerk of Calaveras, and a Mr. Dudley. They chose the unique manner of squinting water at each other, to cool their wounded honour. One combatant supplied himself with a hose of the Union Water Company, the other with that of the Massachusetts Company. Marking the distance, which was about twenty feet, they commenced playing upon each other. The combatants withstood the cool application manfully for about ten minutes, when Mr. Dudley, thinking discretion the better part of valour, retired from the contest.—New York.

PROPORTION OF DEAF AND DUMB PERSONS IN DIFFERENT COUNTRIES.—From a comparison of the proportion of deaf and dumb in Ireland with that which prevails in other countries of Europe, from which accurate information can be obtained, we learn that the proportion being 1 in 1,593 is greater than that of the duchies of Luxembourg and Wurtemberg, and the kingdoms of Tuscany, Bavaria, Belgium, and Holland, in which the average is 1 in 2,209; and less than in Sardinia, Norway, and parts of Switzerland, where the average is 1 in 642. In some of the Swiss cantons the ratio is as high as 1 in 206—i. e., above seven times as great as in Ireland.—Medical Times and Gazette.

"DOMBEY AND SON."—Knowing the care with which Mr. Dickens has selected his names in indication of the characters or peculiarities of his divanatis personæ, I was curious to discover if the individual described (p. 122) as having "two unbroken rows of glistening teeth, whose regularity and whiteness was quite distressing—the observation of which it was impossible to escape, for he showed them whenever he spoke," &c., who is generally spoken of throughout the book as "the man of teeth," derived his name "Carker" from the Greek καρχαρίας, I received a courteous reply from the author, stating that "the coincidence in question is accidental."—From Notes and Queries.

CONSISTENCY, A JEWEL.—A French author says:—"When I lost my wife, every family in the town offered me another; but when I lost my horse, no one offered to make him good."

TALES.—"My dear, don't say tale, say narrative," said a modest lady to her little son, who was relating a very interesting "tale" he had just read in the newspaper. While the little fellow was thinking of his mistake, the old house dog walked in, shaking his tail, and looking quite familiarly at the boy; when he exclaimed, "Ma, make Sancho quit shaking his narrative."

A CHALLENGE.—A little fop conceiving himself insulted by a gentleman, who ventured to give him some wholesome advice, strutted up to him with an air of importance, and said, "Sir, you are no gentleman! here is my card; consider yourself challenged! Should I be from home when you honour me with a call, I shall leave word with a friend to settle all the preliminaries to your satisfaction." To which the other replied: "Sir, you are a fool! here is my card; consider your nose pulled! and should I not be at home when you call on me, you will find I have left orders with my servant to show you into the street for your impudence."

CHOLERA AND PLAGUE.—A letter in the Times of September 9, signed "A Resident of Broad-street," attributes the mortality in this district to the disturbance of an old burial-ground. The following extract from a long account in Miss Seward's Letters is in corroboration:—"In 1666 the plague visited the village of Eyam, in Derbyshire; the churchyard being speedily filled, a plot of ground was fixed on in the immediate neighbourhood. In 1757 this plague ground was dug over by five men; they came to something which had the appearance of having been linen; fearful of consequences, they buried it again, but in a few days they all sickened of a putrid fever, and three out of the five died, and the disease proved mortal to seventy persons at Eyam. Thus, after the period of ninety-one years, the subtle, unextinguished, though abated power of the superlatively dreadful disease awakened from the dust."

AN UNGALLANT EPIGRAM.

When Eve brought me to all mankind,
Old Adam called her woman;
But when she woo'd with love so kind,
He then pronounced it woman.
But now with folly and with pride,
Their husbands' pockets trimming,
The ladies are so full of whims,
The people call them women.

NOT MARRIED.—The Syracuse (U.S.) Standard says:—"Our readers will recollect the case of a young lady of this city, mentioned in the Standard a day or two since, who went crazy because her lover deserted her for another lady. Rumour has it now that the faithless swain has hard work to make his marriage stick. The story is substantially as follows:—At Clifton Springs, a short time since, a gay party was assembled, among them Miss M. of Buffalo, and Frank N. of Syracuse. In the course of the evening gaiety began to flag, and some one proposed a marriage. Up springs the gay Miss M. and expressed a willingness to be the bride. She was followed by Frank N., who joyfully consented to be the groom. A young gentleman present, who sometimes deals in jewellery, and is well-known in Syracuse circles, performed the ceremony, and the merry couple made the usual responses. After the ceremony was over, the groom gave his bride to understand that he considered it binding. She demurred, and started for her home at Buffalo, the baffled bridegroom following her, and pressing his claim at the house of her father. He was sent about his business, with some striking specimens of parental indignation from the lady's father. Matters remained in statu quo, and the lovely damsel remains a 'wedded maid.' The gentleman claims her as his lawful wife, and her relatives deny the claim."

USEFUL INVENTION.—The enormous quantities of scoria cast aside daily from the blast-furnaces of the iron works of the South Wales coal-field are, it appears, about to be turned to good and useful account by the ingenuity of Dr. Smith, of Philadelphia. This gentleman, with a staff of assistant chemists, has for some time been staying at Merthyr, with a view of experimenting upon the blast-furnace scoria, with the ultimate object of producing therefrom a variety of articles in daily use, such as square tiles, paving flags, bottles, and utensils in ordinary domestic use, and we are glad to state that in thus converting the furnace cinder Dr. Smith has been very successful. The bottles thus made are much tougher, and the annealing is more perfect than in the common glass ones, from which, in their appearance, the new bottles cannot be distinguished. It is a most important invention, and has been taken up by Lady Charlotte Guest and others interested in the ironworks. Hugo heaps, containing thousands upon thousands of tons of furnace cinders have been deposited.

LONGEVITY.—The provincial newspapers have recently mentioned several cases of extraordinary longevity. The Lorientais states that there is now living in the commune at Plouharnel, department of the Morbihan, a woman named Jégoural, who is 123 years of age. She is, it adds, possessed of all her intellectual faculties, has a remarkable memory, eats and drinks with great appetite, and smokes like a trooper. About nine years ago she fell in trying to jump over a ditch, and broke one of her ribs; and since then she has been confined to her bed.—Galignani.

PRESERVATION OF LIFE FROM DROWNING.—Simplicity and efficacy combined.—We beg to call the attention of Members of Royal Yacht Clubs, Pleasure-boat Parties, &c., to a sure safeguard in case of casualties on the water. Yachts and Pleasure-boats fitted to order.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.

THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Peat Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficacious for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangel Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at 4s. per ton, and in quantities less than half a ton, at 5s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Termini of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 26, Down-street, London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

KNOW THYSELF.—Persons desirous of knowing the gifts, defects, talents, tastes, affections, and other characteristics of themselves or any friends in whom they are interested, must send a specimen of the WRITING, stating sex and age (including thirteen penny postage stamps), to MISS GRAHAM, 3, New-road, Hornsey, Middlesex, and they will receive a minute graphological delineation, written in a style peculiarly her own.—Testimonial from W. R.: "Having been several of your portrayals of character, and being much struck with the forcible truths contained in them, I should like your opinion of mine."—Miss H. S.: "Your delineations are most faithful."—Miss Grove: "Your letter gave great satisfaction."—Miss Rosa C.: "Accept my sincere thanks for your advice. I was exceedingly doubtful of him."

BELONGING TO

H. J. and D. NICOLL,

MERCHANT TAILORS AND PALETOT PATENTEES.

THE best Materials, Talent, and Workmanship are employed, and the principle of a combination of economy and excellence maintained. Here also the Dress Buttons and Colours of every Yacht Club or Hunt are always ready for inspection.

FOR HUNTING.

The Scarlet, Brown, Olive, or Mixed Cloths, are both blue and strong, the dye cannot even be moved by acids, and in the course of manufacture they are prepared by a peculiar process to resist a very heavy shower of rain.

FOR YACHTING.

Every description of Pilot and Pea Jackets, with prepared India Rubber and other Waterproofed clothing, may also be seen.

For Shooting, Fishing, Rowing, or Cricketing, all suitable materials are provided.

Nicoll's Dry-seat Coat

Is useful to all, whether Sportsman or Traveller, as it is well known that rheumatism and colds, with the thousand and one other ills that flesh is heir to, are chiefly caught through damp seats.

114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill.

BILLIARD TABLES.

MESSRS. THURSTON AND CO.,

MANUFACTURERS by appointment to her Majesty, 14, Catherine-street, Strand, London, caution their friends and the public against spurious imitations of their Tables, lately advertised by men professing to have left their Establishment. They beg to say that they have not parted with any of their workmen whose services were worth retaining.—N.B. 14, Catherine-street, Strand, is the only house where the THURSTON TABLE can be obtained. Messrs. Thurston and Co. are the patentees of the improved vulcanised Cushions, which retain their elasticity in the coldest climate. Also Manufacturers of the Central Revolving Lamp, the best light ever constructed for Billiard Tables.

SHOOTING SEASON, 1854.

F. JOYCE'S

ANTI-CORROSIVE PERCUSSION CAPS.

THE Nobility, Gentry, and Sporting World at large, are respectfully informed that these well-tried Detonators, warranted in every respect, which have now stood the test of many years' experience, both at home and abroad, may be had as usual of Messrs. J. Blanch and Son, 29, Gracechurch-street; J. C. Beckwith, 38, Skinner-street; Parker, Field, and Sons, 233, High Holborn; J. C. Reilly, 502, New Oxford-street; B. Cogswell, 224, Strand; W. Moore and Grey, 43, Basil-street; S. Nock and Co., Jernyn-street; H. Tatham, 37, Charing-cross; T. Ross, 73, St. James's-street; and of most respectable Gun-makers and Dealers in Gunpowder throughout the United Kingdom.
To prevent accident and disappointment to purchasers, from the use of spurious imitations, they are requested to observe the Name and Address of F. JOYCE, ORIGINAL INVENTOR and SOLE MANUFACTURER, on each Sealed Packet, without which they are not genuine. This precaution is rendered necessary by some unprincipled individuals having imitated the Labels and Wrappers.

Tubes, Foil Covered Caps, Wire Cartridges, and Waddings of every description.

WATER POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bouchurch, Isle of Wight.
The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed singular channels throughout the entire length."— Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha
Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

March 10, 1852.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

A NEW DISCOVERY IN TEETH.

MR. HOWARD, SURGEON-DENTIST,
32, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely
New Description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth, as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay,
and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will support
and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication.
Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, FLEET-STREET.—At home
from 1 till 5.

DO YOU WANT LUXURIANT
HAIR, WHISKERS, &c.?—If so, use
MISS GRAHAM'S NIGROURIN, the most effi-

DEAFNESS.

DEAFNESS.—Dr. MANFRED'S IM-PORTANT DISCOVERY—the New Treatment for instantly restoring hearing without operation, use of instruments, blistering, leeching, physicking, probing, syringing, or the usual absurd treatment. One consultation is sufficient; a permanent cure is guaranteed to any sufferer of forty or fifty years' duration.

This truly wonderful discovery is known and practised only by Dr. H. Manfred, who has made diseases of the ear his entire study both in hospital and private practice. The new treatment is applied by him daily on numbers of applicants with perfect success in every case, enabling persons to hear conversation with ease and delight, and almost instantly removing those noises in the head and ears. Thousands of letters from persons cured, any of which may be seen. Dr. Manfred, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, Consulting Surgeon in Diseases of the Ear only, and receives patients daily, from ten until five, free of any charge, except in those cases where restoration of hearing is positively certain. Dr. Manfred, M.R.C.S., 72

HOLLOWAYS' OINTMENT.—
An extraordinary and rapid Cure of Erysipelas in the Leg, after medicinal aid had failed.

Copy of a letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yates, of the Post-office, Aldwick-road, near Bognor, Sussex, dated January 12th, 1853.

TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. I did so without delay, and am happy to say the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in this neighbourhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful servant,

RUPTURES BY ROYAL LETTERS

PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment
of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so often harmful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PA- TENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 728, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Double ditto, 31s. 6d., 42s.,
and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Post-office orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Picca- dilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS.—The material
of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly ELASTIC and COMPRESSIBLE, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the
LEGS, VARICOSE VEINS, SPRAINS, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 10s. each. Postage, 6d.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

THE BLACK SEA.

THE LANDING IN THE CRIMEA.

[IMPORTANT GOVERNMENT DESPATCHES.]

"SUNDAY NIGHT, Sept. 24; eleven p.m.—"The Duke of Newcastle presents his compliments to the editor, and having received late this evening intelligence which he thinks may relieve the anxiety of the many families who are looking for accounts from the East for the safe landing of those who are dear to them, begs to place at his disposal the following extracts from the despatch of Lord Raglan:—

"The allied armies arrived at the place of disembarkation near the Old Fort, in latitude 45, at break of day on the 14th, and before night succeeded in landing nearly all their infantry and part of their artillery. On the 15th, the swell on the shore considerably impeded operations, but some progress was made, and the exertions of the fleet, under the immediate command of Rear-Admiral Sir E. Lyons, excited the admiration of the army, and were in fact above all praise. The surf continued on the 16th (the day on which the despatch was written), but, nevertheless, the disembarkation of the horses and baggage was proceeding with the utmost rapidity. Old Fort is about thirty miles north of Sebastopol, and nearly twenty south of Eupatoria."

VIENNA, Sept. 24th.—Omar Pasha received at Bucharest on the 22nd the following despatch, dated from Old Fort, the 17th, and signed by Marshal St. Arnaud and Lord Raglan:—"Highness, we have safely landed to the northward of Sebastopol; the enemy offered no resistance to our taking possession of these positions. This circumstance has produced the deepest impression on the Tartar population, who do not conceal their good feelings towards us. The material and the artillery have been landed. We march on Sebastopol with the fullest confidence in the success of our grand enterprise."

SERPENT ISLAND, OFF THE DANUBE.—"Spies arrived here, state that the whole of the Crimea, with the exception of the environs of Sebastopol, is destitute of troops. Prince Menschikoff is said to have concentrated most of his forces round that formidable fortress. It is consequently under its walls the first battle will be fought, and it will be a bloody one if we have to cope with an adversary worthy of us. We cannot undertake anything serious before the 20th or 22nd. I reason on the hypothesis that the Russians will allow us to disembark quietly, and install ourselves in their country, which, I repeat, is considered extremely probable from the reports of the spies."

LETTER FROM THE FLEET.

Her Majesty's Ship —, off Eupatoria, Sept. 13.

When I wrote to you from Constantinople, on Thursday last, I had just been warned to be ready to go on board the Danube, a little flat-bottomed river steamer, which had been brought into the service, and was being sent up to the fleet to assist in landing troops. We had but just time to buy some wine, porter, tongues, portable soup, and such-like luxuries, but after all this hurry we did not start till next morning at seven o'clock, and then broke down within an hour. We had therefore to wait for repairs at Therapia, and only got finally to sea in the afternoon. The weather was charming, and the run up the Black Sea very fine. We had a good dinner, and an equally good supper, but soon afterwards the wind rose, and in our wretched little eggshell of a boat we had a precious tossing all Saturday and Sunday. On the latter day we fell in with the French fleet, sailing in company with the Turks. The two combined made nearly forty sail, and you may imagine how splendid they looked at sunset in such a sea. The next morning (Monday) we reached the English fleet. Nothing can be more full of interest. All yesterday and to-day the three fleets have been collected, and there are not less in all than 700 ships, many of them of the largest class and of the greatest power. In feeling, the change from Constantinople is as great as is the scene. The whole fleet, officers, men, and boys, are eager for action, and in the highest spirits. Every manœuvre that is performed—weighing anchor, making sail, &c.—is done with a degree of enthusiasm quite indescribable, and I believe the ship would be deserted if all who wished were allowed to volunteer on shore. As it is, our part is to be rather a show one. We are to protect the landing, which will begin at noon to-day, and only send a few boats to the great flotilla by which it is to be accomplished. In the meantime the weather is perfect, a smooth sea, light favourable winds, and cold healthy temperature. It is most vexatious that an hour of such weather should be lost.

This ship has been decimated with cholera. They lost 140 men in less than a week, and had at one time 600, out of 950, ill. There were actually not enough left to work the ship. The most affecting instances are told of the devotion of the men to their comrades, and of their own heroism. Not a single officer died, and the crew is now recruited by that of the Tiger, and a batch of new arrivals from England. We have been now for two days off the shore of the Crimea. It is here low; a good deal like the Isle of Thanet—all corn land and with very few houses. Inland it rises into considerable hills. I hope to know more about it before the week is out. The troops are now quite healthy, and so is the fleet. The voyage has restored both, and the sharp, bracing air, which makes me long for all the warm clothes I left in England, has brought round the convalescent wonderfully. To give an idea of the feeling on board, I will mention two instances. When they were leaving up the anchor this morning the men cried out, "We'll drop it in Sebastopol." Last night a very small mid., about twelve, asked me if we should not land at daybreak? I asked why? "Because that's in my watch, and I shall go."—P.S. Eupatoria has just been occupied without opposition.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

VIENNA, Friday.—According to advices from Constantinople, on the 13th, Eupatoria was occupied without opposition by 2,000 Turks, and one English and one French regiment. On the 14th, the main army landed half way between Sebastopol and Eupatoria without meeting with any opposition. The Russians, 25,000 strong, were entrenched on the Katscha, and the allied army was to march to attack them on the 17th. A battle was expected to take place on the 18th.

PARIS, Friday evening.—A telegraphic despatch from Marseilles announces that the steamer Ajaccio, which arrived at Constantinople from the Crimea on the 19th, left the allied forces in the act of marching against the Russians. The force of the enemy before Sebastopol did not amount to more than 25,000 men, but they expected a reinforcement of 15,000 more. A battle was expected on the 20th before the Russian reinforcements came up. The weather was magnificent.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 20.—The despatch-boat, the Ajaccio, which left the Crimea yesterday, reports that the army was to march on that day against a Russian force of 25,000 men, to anticipate the arrival of 15,000 more, who were expected. The inhabitants, who knew nothing of the war, had not removed their crops from the fields. They voluntarily brought provisions to the army, and were to be furnished with arms, in order to act as auxiliaries. During the disembarkation, a very serviceable and skilful diversion was made against Katcha by eight steamers. At Eupatoria, 400 Russians surrendered at the first summons.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

ENGLISH CHANNEL.—The Walmer Castle, transport, put in at St. Helen's roads on Sunday afternoon, with 410 privates and ten officers (French troops) from the Baltic, weather-bound; all well on board.

The last accounts from Cherbourg announce that a ship of the line and a frigate arrived in that port on the 23rd, coming from the Baltic, and that another ship of the line was signalled at that date.

The English Government having given the name of France to one of the ships of war lately launched, in honour of the existing alliance, the Minister of Marine has ordered that the word "Graudé" should be added to the name "Bretagne," given to a ship now building at Brest, which will be the largest and finest in the French navy. The Grande Bretagne is to be furnished with engines of 1,200 horse-power, which are being manufactured at the imperial foundry of Indret, and are to be ready in December next.

The steam frigate Sané and the aviso Brasier have returned to Toulon from their experimental trip. The Sané had on board a gun of a very powerful calibre, of which the Minister of Marine ordered a trial to be made. It succeeded perfectly. The length of range of the new gun is extraordinary, and the Sentinel de Toulon regrets its not having been tried sooner, as every ship of the squadron now before Sebastopol might have been provided with this engine of destruction.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.—Our anxiety as to the movements of the English and French squadron, of which we had not heard any authentic and precise accounts since the commencement of the war, was relieved by the intelligence from the Sandwich Islands on the 12th inst. The following account of the arrival at Honolulu of the combined squadron is condensed from one of the local papers. On the 17th of July six vessels under sail, besides a war steamer, were all seen bearing down for the anchorage, and a splendid sight it was. The British and French flags were commingled in the fleet in beautiful accord, and all the vessels looked neat and trim and prepared for service as well as display.

By two o'clock they were all at anchor in a line off the harbour, and turned out to be the British frigate President, flagship, the Amphitrite and steamer Virago, the French frigate Forte, the Ernydice, the Artemise, and brig Obligado, three English and four French—the English carrying 80 guns, and the French 138. This fine squadron is from Callao, via Nukahiva, one of the Marquesas Islands, and was but fourteen days in making the passage from the latter port. They are, of course, looking for the Russians, but the Russians are somewhere else just now, and they must be hunted up, if possible, when warm work will, of course, take place. At last accounts the people of Vancouver's Island were under much anxiety, daily expecting a visit from the Russian vessels, under which they had no means of defence.

The following is the list of the English ships and chief officers comprising the squadron:—

Frigate President, 60, Flagship of Rear-Admiral David Price; Edward H. Howard, Flag-Lieutenant; Richard Burridge, Captain; Matthew Conolly, Commander; H. A. Hurlingham, W. G. H. Morgan, J. H. Marryat, and George Palmer, Lieutenants; V. G. Roberts, Master. Frigate Amphitrite, 24, Captain Charles Fredericks; W. L. Staiforth, Douglas Walker, and E. B. H. Franklin, Lieutenants; W. H. Craze, Master; T. J. Jones, Second Master; Richard K. Wilson, First Lieut. of Marines.

Steamer Virago, 3,300 horse-power, Commander Edward Marshall; W. C. Forsyth and Lewis J. Moore, Lieutenants; G. H. Inskip, Master.

The following is a list of the French ships and officers:—Frigate La Forte, 60, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Favier des Pothues; Capitaine de Frigate, De Miniac; Lover, J., Lieutenant de Vaisseau; Bouillon, G. Rahier, J., and Thomas, L., Lieutenants de Vaisseau; Guvraïn, P., Coetneupren de Kersant, and Laplanche, Enseignes de Vaisseau.

Frigate L'Ernydice, 32, Capitaine de Vaisseau, Lacrandiere; Masallong, Capitaine de Frigate, second; Feissoles, Lacornie, Lefebvre, Lapasse, and Bourasser, Lieutenants de Vaisseau; Jéquel des Touches, and Castreusen, Enseignes de Vaisseau; Officier, Danais.

Corvette L'Artemise, 30, Capitaine de Frigate, L'Eveque; Tounon and Alisa, Lieutenants de Vaisseau; Haril, Jéquel, and Amet, Enseignes de Vaisseau.

Brig L'Obligado, 16, Capitaine de Frigate, Ronssou de Rosenerat; Wanchichout, Journel, Dinol, and Jéquel des Etouches, Enseignes de Vaisseau.

The officers of the combined squadron seem to have had a pleasant time of it during their stay. Their official proceedings, the arrival of her Majesty's frigate Figue to join the squadron from England, and its departure, you will find given in the Polyglossian, published at Honolulu.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

The screw-steamer Genova arrived at Gibraltar on the 6th inst., from Liverpool; the steamer Peninsula, from London, arrived same day; the steamer Taurus, and the Danube, from Liverpool, arrived on the 9th, the former bound to Constantinople, and the latter to Corfu and Trieste. The Taurus had on board Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. James

SOU DJAK BAY CIRCASSIA,

Lindsay, of the Grenadier Guards, some officers of the 20th Regiment, and a medical staff of thirteen surgeons and assistant-surgeons, proceeding to join the army of the East. Her Majesty's steam despatch gun-boat Arrow, Lieutenant Jolliffe commanding, arrived at Gibraltar on the 9th inst. in seven days from Spithead. She left on the 10th for the Black Sea. The steamer London, six days from London, having artillerymen on board for Constantinople, called at Gibraltar on the 10th inst.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

The 46th Regiment of Foot, at present stationed at Windsor, have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to Woolwich to embark there for the seat of war in the East.

The three divisions of the 57th Regiment, which left Limerick, for Birr, have marched to Killaloe and Nenagh. Under the Mutiny Act, the Mayor of Limerick issued an order to the proprietors of the cab establishments to convey the sick of the 57th hence to Birr, receiving a fair remuneration. Assistant Surgeons Phelps and Walker, 57th Regiment, are ordered to Turkey.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

In spite of the news of the landing of the Allies in the Crimea, the Russians in Vienna carry their heads very high, and profess to be of opinion that France and England "are likely to make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the world." Fortunately, the Russians are very liable to be mistaken in their calculations. Last November they were firmly convinced that they should get possession of Constantinople, as is pretty evident from the following anecdote, which is from the first hand.—A Russian general, who fell ill and recovered in Bucharest, paid the physician handsomely for his attendance, and, in the excess of his gratitude, promised to bring the wife of his Esculapius "a load of oil of roses from Constantinople." The lady, who is no admirer of the Russians, declared that she did not like the perfume in question, but would feel obliged to the gallant officer "if he would send her a small barrel of caviare as soon as he got back to Russia."

By Odessa letters of the 12th, we learn that fourteen ships were still off that port. The roofs of the houses nearest the water are being taken off. A new means of defence is to be employed. Vast quantities of coal have been collected at four places where landing could be effected, and, in case of need, they will be set on fire. The object of the Russians is to prevent the rapid advance of the Allies, and to facilitate their own escape.

The Moniteur publishes a letter from Alexandria, stating that since the departure of Said Pasha, Egypt has continued to enjoy the most perfect tranquillity. Said Pasha had promised to the Porte a reinforcement of 10,000 men, and orders had consequently been issued for the concentration at Alexandria of all the troops disposable. Several batteries were likewise to be shipped for Constantinople. An English regiment of cavalry coming from India was shortly expected to land at Suez. That regiment is on its way to join the army in the East. The Egyptian Government, at the request of the Consul-General of Great Britain, had permitted its passage through Egypt.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

Advices from Varna state that the Allies in the Crimea were reported to be entrenching themselves at Mamaschai, a village near the mouth of the river Katcha. Their outposts were at Kamenna—in the direction of Bakhli Sarai. At Buriuk several Russian spies were shot. A deputation of submission and obedience from the native population had appeared in the allied camp.

The Tunisian troops, which have all arrived at Constantinople, will not be employed during this winter, but remain quartered in the barracks of the Seraskierat. Indeed, the soldiers have no cloaks or winter clothing, and are in many other respects incapable of doing public service. They are badly officered, shabbily dressed, and the medical department is composed of illiterate Italians, most of them formerly employed as barbers. The soldiers are fine quiet fellows, and behave with great discretion.

The news that £400,000, on account of the loan, on their way to this capital per steamer London, has sent the exchanges down to 130 piastres the pound sterling.

CARRYING THE WAR INTO BESSARABIA.—(By Electric Telegraph).—Omar Pasha is making preparations to besiege Ismail.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

We give an illustration of Sondjak Bay on the coast of Circassia, in THE FIELD of to-day. The whole coast is now the scene of the most stirring events. The inhabitants of Anapa have been since the beginning of the month in daily expectation of a bombardment. It was known at Batoum on the 11th that Anapa was blockaded by a squadron of eight ships of war, viz., three line-of-battle ships, and two brigs. Admiral Lyons, who commands this squadron, was only awaiting orders from Admiral Hamelin to bombard the town. We from time to time give illustrations of Circassia, since every point on the coast cannot but possess peculiar interest at the present crisis.

SOUKOUK KALEH, CIRCASSIA.—I have met here an old Polish soldier, who, after having deserted about twenty years ago from a Russian regiment, fell into the hands of the mountaineers of Tchetchenia, who sold him as a slave to the Circassians. He remained among the latter people in this capacity until the outbreak of the present hostilities with Russia. The Naib, being then desirous of securing the favourable opinion of the Europeans, restored him to liberty, and conducted him to Soukouk Kaleh, where he is now employed as a domestic servant. The greatest source of his happiness in the first days of his freedom was that he was able fully to use his feet in walking. I must inform you that when a man is condemned to slavery by the mountaineers of the Caucasus they make in the middle of the soles of his feet a large incision, into which they introduce horse-hair, over which they afterwards let the wound close. The poor slave can then only walk on the tips of his toes, and of course moves about as little as possible. He is, however, thus enabled to attend to the only duties imposed on him, namely, following the women in the fields, and aiding them in their various labours.

PARIS.—The Moniteur publishes the following:—"Letters from the Black Sea announce that Russian troops which had embarked at Tangarog, on board gun-boats for the Crimea, met on the 4th Sept. with a severe gale, which sank eight or nine of them, with 200 men. By advices of the 12th, received at Constantinople, we learn that the Circassians, commanded by Daniel Bey, a relation of Schamyl, after having passed the Yarouk Sou, burned sixty villages, the inhabitants of which sought refuge in the vicinity of Tiflis. They gave two battles to the Russians commanded by General Wrangel. In the first the Poles, who formed part of the Russian corps d'armée, deserted with two guns, and made prisoners thirty Cossacks of the regiment that pursued them. After second combat the Russians took to flight, throwing two guns into a ravine, and the Circassians formed a junction with Schamyl at Zakatolo."

TREBISONDE, Sept. 6.—The retreat of the Russians and the evacuation of Bayazid are confirmed; the anxiety caused by their aggressive movement has entirely vanished.

We read in the Journal de Constantinople:—"Ismail Pasha, late commander-in-chief of the division at Kalafat, who so greatly distinguished himself in the defence of that important place, has been rewarded by the Sultan with the appointment of Muehir. Ismail Pasha is appointed commander-in-chief of the army in Anatolia, in the stead of Zarif-Moustafa Pasha."

Naval.

THE following letter has appeared in the Times:—"Sir—The unfounded charge brought against Lord Aberdeen, refuted by 'the only testimony that could be adduced,' being now transferred to Sir James Graham, accompanied by the assertion of a person that he heard the imputation from a friend of mine, I feel it to be my duty further to declare that Sir James Graham never offered the command of the Baltic fleet to me, and that I did not ask it, under the impression that Admiral Sir Charles Napier was the most capable of undertaking the arduous task of bringing the crews of an undisciplined fleet to order. I mentioned, however, to Sir James Graham that, if the attack on Sebastopol (the most desirable object of the war) failed to terminate hostilities, I should hold myself in readiness to employ my 'secret plan' on any naval enterprise, more especially if such were deemed impracticable by the usual art of war. Attacked as I have been for stating the truth in regard to Lord Aberdeen, I trust that a generous public will suspend their judgment until at an early day I shall rebut the calumnies with which I have been assailed.—I am, Sir, your obliged and obedient servant, DUNDONALD."

SOUTHAMPTON, Wednesday, September 7.—The United States frigate San Jacinto, Captain Stribling, sailed this afternoon for the Baltic, with the intention of taking a cruise as far as Cronstadt before the ice sets in. The officers are in the hopes of reaching the Gulf of Finland in time to witness the bombardment of Revel by Sir Charles Napier, which is expected to take place before the return of the allied fleets to the British Channel; for this purpose the greatest expedition is to be used in getting the San Jacinto to the scene of war in the northern seas. Mr. Robert Anderson, an experienced Baltic pilot, belonging to Deal, has been specially engaged to take charge of the San Jacinto during the cruise in the Baltic, which will not occupy more than a month. The mayor and corporation of Southampton visited this fine steam-frigate yesterday in official costume, and were most hospitably received by Captain Stribling, who had previously paid his respects to the chief magistrate of Southampton at the Audit-house. On disembarking from the ship, the mayor and corporation were saluted with the heavy guns of the San Jacinto. Captain Ford, the Ottoman consul at Southampton, has also visited and been officially recognised by this frigate, and the commander and officers have made themselves generally very agreeable to the authorities and inhabitants during their short stay in this port. The San Jacinto will call at Southampton for coals and supplies on her return from Cronstadt.

THE BALTIC.—The Russian fleet in the Baltic comprises the following sailing ships, together with three steamers of 400-horse power, mounting eight guns each, two steamers of 120-horse power, mounting four guns each, and one steam-cruiser of 20 guns and 450-horse power. That portion of the fleet which is in the harbour of Helsingfors has commenced preparations for the winter season. The ships have unbent their sails and struck their topmasts. In a month from the present time they will be frozen in.

SHEERNESS.—The Royal Albert got up steam on Saturday last and steamed out of the fitting basin in first-rate style, proceeding to her harbour moorings to receive her armament, &c. This ship, which has caused so much attraction during her being in the basin, and in dock, was numerously visited as before; although we have strong winds with a heavy short sea in the harbour where she is riding, nothing seems to prevent persons visiting Sheerness by the excursion steam-packets from going off to her. She is to be taken round to Portsmouth to be finally prepared for proceeding to the Black Sea, where she is to serve as flagship of Vice-Admiral Dundas, Commander-in-Chief of the British fleet in the Mediterranean and Black Sea station, and the crew of the Britannia will be turned over to her on her arrival there.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—A telegraphic despatch has been received at the Admiralty from Rear-Admiral Sir William Carrol, at Cork, announcing the arrival of her Majesty's ship Phoenix at that port, with Captain McClure, of the Investigator, on board. The following is the text of the message received at the Admiralty:—"Arrived, her Majesty's ship Phoenix, bringing captains of the Investigator, Assistance, and Resolute; and part of crews of Assistance and Resolute. The North Star and Talbot convey the remainder of the crews of the Assistance, Resolute, Investigator, and tenders; first and third lieutenants and surgeon of Resolute, master and clerk in charge of Assistance, and Monsieur Debray arrived in Phoenix."

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

THE French ships of war Pursuivant and Sirene have passed through the Downs for Cherbourg with French troops from the Baltic. The Algerine, Trident, Duperré, Duguesclin, Breslau, and Jemappes have left the Baltic for France.

THE COLUMBINE transport has arrived at Boulogne from Bomarsund, with the trophies taken from the Russians by the French troops.

The Minister of Marine has received despatches, dated the 3rd inst., from Captain Guilbert, of the French frigate Psyché, which forms part of the allied squadron in the White Sea. The despatch states that the national fête of the 15th ult. was celebrated off Archangel by salutes from all the vessels, the officers of which afterwards assembled at a grand banquet given on board the Psyché. The crews were in excellent health. Captain Guilbert states that the sound of their guns when firing the salutes must have reached far beyond Archangel, and expresses his regret that the draught of water of the vessels would not allow them to come within gunshot of that place.

STEAMERS.

PACIFIC.—The Senate of the United States has passed a bill to establish a line of mail steamers between San Francisco and China, to touch at the Sandwich Islands and Japan, and already a company has been formed in San Francisco to carry out the project, which has purchased the steamers of one of the lines plying from Panama, in the hope of procuring the Government mail contract.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—The Salamander, 6, paddle-sloop, Commander Priest, left Spithead for the Baltic on Saturday morning.

SOUTHAMPTON, Wednesday, Sept. 27.—The Peninsula and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's steamer Euxine, Captain T. S. Russell, sailed this afternoon with the usual mails for Vigo, Gporto, Lisbon, Cadiz, and Gibraltar. The Euxine takes out forty-two passengers, among whom are the Count Pepoli (Portuguese Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin) and wife, Lieutenant-Colonel Thorold, Signor and Madame Castellan, Captain Selwyn, &c.; and on freight specie value £34,250, of which £23,000 is for Lisbon, and £11,250, chiefly in gold bars, for Cadiz, and an average general cargo. The Peninsula and Oriental Company's steamer Nubia, Captain Harris, with the heavy portion of the East India, China, and Australian mails, is expected at Southampton about the 4th proximo. The Candia, Captain Field, is to take out the mails for the East Indies and China on the 4th of October, and the Tagus, Captain Joy, the mails of the 7th for the Peninsular ports. The General Screw Steam Shipping Company's steamship Argo, Captain George Hyde, is to leave on the 4th of October with the contract mails for Adelaide, Port Phillip, and Sydney. The next West India and Mexican mails, due on the 1st of October, will be brought home by the Magdalena, or La Plata. The General Screw Steam Shipping Company's steamer Indiana, Captain Lambert, is to leave Havre, on the 3rd and Southampton on the 4th of October, for New York.

LOSS OF THE STEAMSHIP CITY OF PHILADELPHIA.—Liverpool, Wednesday.—The steamer City of Philadelphia left Liverpool on the 30th of August, at about three p.m. On the night of the 7th of September, at about eleven p.m., in a fog, breakers were seen on the starboard bow, when the engines were immediately reversed, but not in time to prevent her going on to the point of Cape Race; soundings gave fifteen to thirty fathoms of water, and she was backed off and steered for St. John's, Newfoundland; but, finding the water gaining on the pumps, she was put ashore on a sandy beach six miles from Cape Race (Chance Cove) to save passengers, &c.; the passengers, about 540, were all landed and provided at St. John's, and their baggage was being got on shore. One of the officers had dived to the leak, which was found to be small, and with extra pumps and diving apparatus she was expected to be got off in a few days. There was only eight feet of water in her hold at last accounts, and, being of a height of thirty-five feet, the cargo was all likely to be saved, although partially damaged.

STARTING-GEAR.—Mr. Thomas Baker, inspector of machinery afloat, and at present borne on the books of the Britannia, 120, flagship, for the purpose of inspecting the war steamers serving in the Black Sea, has received a letter of thanks from Vice-Admiral Dundas for the excellent manner in which he, with the assistance of the engineers of the fleet, had altered the position of the starting-gear of all the war steamers in the Black Sea fleet, to render that gear, so important to be protected from shot or shell, less liable to be injured in actual warfare. Mr. Baker has effected his object by placing the starting-gear under or near the base of the engines, instead of being near the top level or above the engines.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

Advices have been received under date Memel, September 24, that her Majesty's steamers Archer and Amphion had captured no less than twenty Russian coasting-vessels, laden with grain, and rags for the manufacture of paper.

The Revenue cruiser Lively has taken a Russian prize, called the Geth, into Hull. Another Russian vessel, called the Furst Beckhoff Albrecht, has been seized by the Customs' officers of Dundee with simulated papers.

THE WHITE SEA SQUADRON.—The following is an authentic list of captured Russian vessels burnt or destroyed by her Majesty's steamship Miranda, between the 24th and 31st of August, 1854:—A lugger, 57 tons, laden with salt-fish, burnt; a lugger, 63 tons, laden with salt-fish and five casks of oil, burnt; a lugger, 67 tons, laden with salt-fish and rye flour, burnt; a lugger, 35 tons, laden with salt-fish, burnt; names unknown, captured the 24th of August. A lugger, 61 tons, laden with salt-fish, scuttled, name unknown, captured the 28th of August. A lugger, 55 tons, laden with rye-flour, scuttled, name unknown, captured the 29th of August.

The following is a list of Russian merchant vessels captured by her Majesty's steamship Miranda in Litscha Fiord on the 24th of August:—The Bogmoja Medaschda, schooner, 170 tons, laden with salt-fish; sent to England in charge of Mr. Charles W. Mauthorp, acting mate, and seven seamen. The Dwina, brigantine, 139 tons, laden with salt-fish; sent to England in charge of Mr. Edward C. Smyth, acting second master, and six seamen.

MONROSE, Sept. 27.—The Bogmoja Medaschda (Mauthorp, R.N., in charge), prize to her Majesty's steamer Miranda, and bound from Rola for Sheerness, put in here to-day for supplies and a pilot. She parted company with the Dwina (prize) on the 4th, off North Cape, in a gale of wind from the west. The latter may be expected soon.

The brass guns captured from the Russians have been placed in the iron stores in the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich. The Prince, screw-steamship, in which they were brought home, also sent on shore at the Royal Arsenal a Russian horse, the property of Brigadier-General Jones, Royal Engineers, and the animal, attended by the Brigadier-General's groom, proceeded for Chatham. The horse is from fourteen to fifteen hands high, and marked "S." on the near shoulder and "35" on the hind quarter. The gallant Brigadier-General has another Russian horse sent home for his use, and now in one of the transport vessels returning to this country. Major Ord, Royal Engineers, has also two Russian horses belonging to him on their way to this country as trophies of the war with Russia.

THE ALBAN AT ABO.—The following is an extract from a letter from the Baltic:—"Her Majesty's ship Alban, on the 12th inst., received orders from Rear-Admiral H.B. Martin to transport 25 Russian prisoners, nine being officers, and several of the soldiers wounded, from Bomarsund to Abo. Every attention and kindness was shown to them, which they cordially appreciated; and, after twice grounding in getting on shore, the last quite defying all present efforts to get the vessel off, Captain Otter decided on proceeding to Abo (a distance of 13 miles) in his gig, with a flag of truce flying, to request the authorities there to send for the prisoners. On his arrival at the port, he met a Russian steamer, and on communicating he delivered the Commander-in-Chief's despatches, which were immediately forwarded to the governor of the district, and orders were sent to the captain of the Nordvakt to proceed with a lighter to the assistance of the Alban. After strenuous, though ineffectual effort to launch her into deep water, which strained the Russian's engines, she left with the wounded officers and men for Abo, promising to return the following morning with further assistance. In the afternoon of the following day she returned with another steamer in company, towing at the same time a large flat-bottomed punt. Happily these adjuncts were dispensed with, as the Alban was hove off by the vigorous exertion of her crew. On the fortunate occurrence of the Alban sliding off the rock the Russian officers gave a loud national 'hurrah,' indicating their identity with the safety of the ship they had been so long on board. On the Saturday the officers departed, with many expressions of good-will, and regret that they could not present souvenirs for the hospitality they had received, and the English on the following day (Sunday) were much mystified in seeing their old friend, the Nordvakt, towing a cutter. Speculation was rife in every man's mind,—what could be the object of their visit? These conjectures were soon set at rest by the Flag-Lieutenant, Baron von Bioge, coming on board, stating that he had been requested by General Wendt, Commander-in-Chief at Abo, to request the acceptance of a hallock, some sheep, potatoes, &c., for the crew, and cream and butter, with a cask of capital Madeira for the officers, as the prisoners (officers) had informed him that they had 'polished off' the remaining stock of sherry."

Military.

ARMS FOR THE ORDONANCE.—A communication has been received by the Commissioners of Customs from the Lords of the Treasury, signifying that the Board of Ordnance have entered into a contract with an eminent firm of Antwerp for the supply of 500 gun-harrels, and that it was their lordship's desire that the Board would give directions for them on arrival in this country to be passed duty free, with as little delay as possible; and the commissioners have given the necessary directions to insure their lordships' orders being obeyed.

IRELAND.—Limerick has at length been totally ungarisoned. For the first time since the siege, the city of the violated treaty is left in the keeping of a handful of raw recruits. The 57th depot has gone off to Birr, and the 40th depot has been removed up to the New Barracks to replace the "die hards." The Castle Barracks, in which the 40th was stationed, has, since their removal, been closed, and there are at present a sergeant, a corporal, and two or three privates keeping possession of it.

THE CRIMEA.—The Monitor publishes the following telegraphic despatch from Marshal de St. Arnaud to the Minister of War, dated Therapia, Sept. 17:—"Bivouac of Old Fort, 16th.—The allied armies landed at Old Fort on the 14th, without meeting with any resistance. The troops are full of ardour. The Tartar population appears very favourably disposed. We are establishing ourselves by the landing of the cavalry and the matériel. This is a laborious operation, and is sometimes impeded by the wind; but it advances, and I hope to be prepared to leave to-morrow. Our commencement is very satisfactory." We read in the Constitutionnel:—"Old Fort, where the landing was effected, is, according to the best maps, 45 kilometres (28½ English miles) to the north of Sebastopol, and 23 kilometres (14½ English miles) to the south of Eupatoria, a little above the river Boulganack. This position is indicated, in some maps, by the name of Traktir."

Yeomanry and Militia.

That portion of the Derbyshire Yeomanry Cavalry from Repton and Gresley have just completed their seven days' training at Derby, under the command of Captain Clive. Previous to being dismissed, they were reviewed by Lieutenant-Colonel Unett. The colonel expressed his approval of the manner in which the troops went through the manoeuvres.

The Queen's Own Royal Staffordshire Yeomanry Cavalry muster for seven days' training to-day at Lichfield.

Orders have been sent from the Home-office to the Lords-Lieutenant of East Lothian and Berwickshire to raise their regiments of Militia. They are principally to be disciplined for artillery service.

The Lord Provost of Edinburgh has received a similar notice. A sufficient number of men is expected to be obtained by voluntary enrolment.

The 2nd Regiment of Cheshire Militia, Lieutenant-Colonel Davenport commanding, out at Chester, are now in their fourth week's training. The men have a very soldier-like appearance, and go through the manoeuvres with precision. They are to be reviewed by the district commanding-officer early next week.

The Yorkshire Hussar Yeomanry Cavalry completed their seven days' training yesterday at York. There was a grand review.

The North Somerset Yeomanry Cavalry, Colonel Miles, M.P., commandant, are now out training at Wells. The regiment has attained a high state of discipline.

The Cambridgeshire Militia, Colonel Duncombe, out for duty at Ely, received their colours on Tuesday at the hands of the Countess of Hardwicke in Ely Cathedral. The regiment proceeds to Ireland in a few days.

The Middlesex Edmonton Rifle Militia, Colonel Viscount Enfield, musters at Barnet on Monday for twenty-eight days' training.

The Second Somerset Militia, under the command of Colonel Pinney, M.P., assembled at Bath on Tuesday for drill, preparatory, as it is generally understood, to their being embodied for garrison duty at Cork. The men mustered in considerable force, and there is little doubt that, with the exception of the 120 men who since last year's drill have volunteered into the regular army, the regiment will present its full complement. The officers have expressed their readiness to accompany the regiment, and the men show every disposition to serve their country. It is understood that about 600 or 700 will be called upon to proceed to Ireland in the course of a few days.

Several fresh militia regiments are to be embodied, consequent on the removal of those sent to Ireland.

The following circular has been addressed to the colonels of the Irish Militia, preparatory to the enrolling and training of that force. Thirty thousand are to be enrolled; about 8,000 will be embodied next spring, and it is supposed that 15,000 will be called out for training this present autumn:—

War-office.

I have the honour to transmit to you, for your information and guidance, the accompanying copy of the Militia Ireland Act, 1854, and Militia Pay and Clothing Act; also a copy of regulations for militia regiments when not embodied.

I have to request that you will specially call the attention of the adjutant of the regiment under your command to the instructions contained in these regulations, by which he should be strictly guided in the performance of his duties as adjutant and acting paymaster.

A separate supply of these regulations will be transmitted to him for his use, and that of the surgeon and other officers of the regiment.

I have the honour to be your most obedient, humble servant,
Colonel —, Regiment of Militia. SIDNEY HEDBERT.

THE GENERAL THANKSGIVING.—The following is the form of a Prayer of Thanksgiving for the present Abundant Harvest; to be used at Morning and Evening Service, after the General Thanksgiving, in all churches and chapels in England and Wales, on Sunday next (to-morrow):—

"Almighty God and Father, of whose only gift it cometh that the earth is made to yield its increase for the sustenance of man, vouchsafe, we beseech Thee, to accept this our sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, that Thou hast crowned the year with Thy goodness and caused the earth to bring forth abundantly, that it might give seed to the sower and bread to the eater. We acknowledge, O Lord, that it is of Thy great mercy that the evils of want and scarceness are not added to the dangers of warfare abroad and the terrors of pestilence at home. We might have sown much and brought in little; the heaven might have been stayed from dew, and the earth withered from her fruit. But Thou hast dealt graciously with thine unworthy servants, and hast blessed the labours of the husbandman and filled our granaries with all manner of store. And now, Lord, we entreat Thee, together with these temporal mercies, to bestow the inestimable gift of Thy Holy Spirit, that a due sense of Thy goodness towards this land may awaken in us a more sincere repentance toward Thee and a more earnest faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. Grant that the dangers by which we are still threatened, the pestilence which walketh in darkness, and the sword which destroyeth at noon-day—may lead us to a more active obedience to Thy laws, a more earnest endeavour to conform to Thy will and to advance Thy glory. Dispose the hearts of those to whom abundance has been given to use that abundance in relieving the necessities of the poor and destitute, that, while many have gathered plenty, none may pine in want and penury. Thus may Thy judgments and Thy mercies alike work together for the spiritual benefit of all the people of this land, and tend to graft in their hearts an increasing love and fear of Thee, our only refuge in the time of trouble.—[The following is to be added where the cholera prevails:—And may the frequent instances of mortality which we have seen remind us all of the nearness of death and of the judgment that is to follow; that, whether living or dying, we may be found faithful disciples of Him who has taken away the sting of death and opened the gates of everlasting life to all believers.]—Hear, we beseech Thee, O Lord, these our humble petitions, and receive these our thanksgivings, for His sake, our only Mediator and Advocate. Amen."

DEPARTURE OF THE BISHOP-DESIGNATE OF BORNEO.—On Thursday morning a special service was held at the parish churches of St. James's, Piccadilly, for the purpose of enabling those who take an interest in the missionary operations in Borneo, to bid farewell to the Rev. Dr. McDougall, the bishop elect, and the missionaries who are about to sail with him to that distant sphere of labour. It is not yet known when Dr. McDougall's consecration to the new bishopric will take place. The bishop-designate was formerly a medical man connected with King's College, London.

NORTH OF ENGLAND ARCHERY SOCIETY.

We recently received the following circular:—

"It is a matter of regret with archers generally, that as archery meetings invariably are productive of so much gratification and so much good feeling among those who attend them, they should not be of more frequent occurrence; the great obstacle to which appears to be the want of a fund wherewithal to provide prizes for competition. As the novelty of these meetings to the public exists no longer, it cannot be expected that persons not taking an interest in archery will subscribe for the purpose of promoting them, and they must depend in future on the support of archers themselves."

"It is proposed, with a view of getting up an annual meeting in the north of England, that the archers of the northern counties shall form a Union Club, the subscription to be one guinea per annum, which, in case there be twenty subscribers even, would be sufficient to give a list of prizes, as annexed, which (as it is presumed gentlemen shoot more for pleasure than for the value of prizes) would afford means of providing memorials of the meeting to the winners if desired; but it is suggested that the amounts of prizes shall be paid in money, to be disposed of at pleasure."

"It is proposed that these meetings be held with as little expense as possible, and to this end it would be desirable that they should be alternately at places within convenient railway access for subscribers, and where the local societies can afford facilities for shooting at little or no expense to themselves. That the ordinary targets used be sufficient for the occasion, or if new covers are required they shall be paid for, by subscription on the ground, by competitors."

"It would seem that York, Leeds, and Manchester could alternately supply accommodation for the meeting with very little trouble, and it would be possible for subscribers within the probable circle of the club to return home, if desirous, the same day. To render this the more easy, it is suggested, that in lieu of the usual formal lunch in the middle of the round, there should be sandwiches, &c., provided, and only so much time allowed as may be sufficient for moving the targets; and that a dinner be provided as early as possible after shooting, the charge for which shall not exceed 2s. 6d. per head; after expenses to be at pleasure."

"There are many archers who are prevented attending the national meeting from consideration of the time and expense required, who will be glad of the opportunity of being competitors at a meeting which involves so little sacrifice of either. Co-operation in the promotion of the club is invited. All gentlemen desirous of joining are requested to send in their names to Mr. Fox, Hon. Sec. to Leeds Archers, Leeds, as early as possible, so that if a sufficient number can be got, a meeting may be held before the close of the season."

PROPOSED LIST OF PRIZES:

	£	s.
1. For the greatest gross score	3	0
2. For the greatest number of hits	4	0
3. For the greatest score and number of hits added to 100 yards	3	0
4. For the like at 80 yards	2	10
5. For the like at 60 yards	2	0
6. For the best gold of the day	1	10
7. For the greatest number of golds	1	10
8. For the best gold at 100 yards	1	0
9. For the like at 80 yards	1	0
10. For the like at 60 yards	1	0

"Should the number of subscribers admit of it, the prizes may either be increased in value, or additional ones given for the hits separately at each distance, and also for the greatest number of golds at each distance."

"If the proposed club can be formed, a challenge prize will be provided, open to competition by the members, to be awarded on the same principle as the Champion's Medal at the National Meeting."

The following will show that the club has been started since the date of the above circular:—

The first meeting of this society took place at Leeds on the 26th inst.

LIST OF PRIZES.

1st prize.—Mr. Hilton, Cheetham Hill, greatest gross score, 370.

2nd do.—Mr. Wilson, York, greatest gross number of hits, 81.

3rd do.—Mr. W. W. Hargrove, York, greatest score and hits at 100 yards, 136.

4th do.—Mr. Ollier, Cheetham Hill, greatest score and hits at 80 yards, 172.

5th do.—Mr. Farrer, York, greatest score and hits at 60 yards, 128.

6th do.—Mr. Wainchop, Leeds, most central hit.

7th do.—Mr. Fox, Leeds, greatest number of central hits, 7.

8th do.—Mr. Franks, Leeds, best hit at 100 yards.

9th do.—Mr. Pollock, Leeds, best hit at 80 yards.

10th do.—Mr. Bell, Leeds, best hit at 60 yards.

The challenge medal for the greatest number of events was won by H. Hilton. The number of arrows shot was twelve dozen—viz., six dozen at 100, four dozen at 80, and two dozen at 60 yards.

A handsome silver medal, suitably engraved, was presented by the members of the Leeds Archers, as a challenge prize, to be held each year, by the winner of the most points at the various distances, and, on this occasion, it was awarded to Mr. Hilton, of Cheetham-hill.

It is perhaps necessary to remark, that this society differs from others, inasmuch as it is composed of members of the York, Richmond, Leeds, Hull, Cheshire, Cheetham-hill, and Manchester Clubs, and that although at present it is intended to confine its meetings to towns in the north of England, easily accessible by railway, yet it is open to any gentleman in the United Kingdom, who enrolls himself as a member.

At the termination of the shooting, a meeting was held, at which Mr. Bell, of Headingley, the originator of the society, presided, when a committee of management was formed, Mr. Fox, of Leeds, being elected secretary, and Mr. Bell treasurer. A series of rules were also drawn up for the regulation of the society; and it was resolved that in future the annual meeting should be held on the Wednesday in Whitsun-week, the town for the following year's meeting being determined by the assembled archers. On the present occasion, as an acknowledgment of the liberality and courtesy of the Leeds Archers, the meeting for 1855 was fixed to take place in Leeds, but it was considered not advisable, in future, to hold two consecutive meetings in the same town.

The business was concluded with a vote of thanks to the Leeds Archers, for the satisfactory manner in which the fit had been conducted, after which an excellent dinner was served up in the hall of the Leeds Society's Lodge.

In conclusion, we may add that from the number of members that have been enrolled, this Archery Society augurs to become the most powerful one in the kingdom, being already composed of the most efficient members of all the societies in Lancashire, Yorkshire and Cheshire.

THE TORQUAY TOXOPHOLITE SOCIETY.

This society has held a grand archery fit on the Cricket Grounds, Chapel-hill-cross. Among the visitors we noticed:—

LADIES.—Mrs. Carey (Tor Abbey), Miss Carey, Lady West, Miss West, Mrs. Admiral Rich, the Misses Rich, Mrs. Colonel Saunders, Mrs. and Miss Cornish, Miss Saunders, Mrs. Coxen, Mrs. Spencer Madan, Miss F. Madan, Miss C. Madan, Mrs. and Miss O'Kelly, Miss Baldwin, Mrs. and Miss Bovill, Miss Ogilvie, Mrs. St. George, Mrs. and Miss Granville, Mrs. and Miss Kelson, Miss March Phillips, Mrs. and the Misses Toogood, Mrs. Stantforth Beckett, Miss Tounge, Mrs. Price, Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. C. Kitson, Mrs. and Miss Barber, Mrs. and the Misses Dove, the Misses Goodridge, Mrs. Bellfield, Mrs. and the Misses Lowe, Mrs. Tinlin, Miss Grant.

GENTLEMEN.—Admiral Sir John West, Lord Spencer Compton, the Very Rev. the Dean of Exeter, Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Clogher, Rev. E. Champness, Rev. W. G. P. Smyth, Mr. Spencer Madan, Mr. William Madan, Mr. Cury, Mr. Shelden, Mr. L. Carey, Mr. O'Kelly, Mr. S. Beckett, Rev. R. Price, Mr. G. Coxen, Captain West, Captain Swinney, Rev. Fitz Taylor, Mr. A. O'Kelly, Mr. D. O'Kelly, Lieutenant Miller, Mr. Tulin, Mr. Potts, jun., Mr. H. L. Brown, Mr. H. L. Tulin, Mr. Toogood, Rev. J. Belfield, Mr. W. R. Hole, Mr. C. Kitson, Mr. W. H. Kitson, Mr. John Kitson, Mr. Cary (Johnston), Mr. Melluish, Messrs. Miller, Maude, and Wade (15th Hussars), Mr. St. George, Mr. Bovill, &c.

The result was as follows:—

MEMBERS' PRIZES.—The first ladies' prize was won by Miss Carey, Tor Abbey. Second ditto, Miss C. Madan. The first gentleman's prize by Rev. R. Atkinson, Exeter. Second ditto, Mr. W. R. Hole.

VISITORS' PRIZES.—Ladies' first prize, Mrs. West. Gentlemen's ditto, Captain West.

The Torquay band was in attendance under the direction of Mr. Hatchard, and during the shooting played several pieces with great effect. At five o'clock the party partook of refreshment on the lawn, the arrangement for which was very excellent. Mr. Le Batt, of the Castle Inn, was the caterer for the occasion, and he performed his duties with much taste and excellence. The table was spread with viands of the choicest description, interspersed with bouquets of flowers, that gave the whole a pleasing and tempting appearance. At eight o'clock the dance commenced in the pavilion of the Cricket Club, which was decorated and illuminated most tastefully, under the superintendence of the hon. secretary, Mr. Spencer Madan, who deserves the best thanks of the society for his indefatigable exertions. Much is also due to Mrs. Carey for the part she has taken in rendering the meeting so effective.

CHANGE OF PUBLICATION.

In the present week, the First Edition of THE FIELD was published on Saturday at four o'clock, A.M., in time for the early trains; and the Second Edition on Saturday, in time for the latest evening post. During the past summer we found it necessary, for the convenience chiefly of our country subscribers, to issue our first edition somewhat earlier than is now felt to be necessary for the autumn and winter. Under our new arrangements, we shall henceforth be enabled to give the very latest intelligence reaching the metropolis, from the provinces or abroad, up to the very hour of publication.

SECOND EDITION. LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, Saturday.

THE BOURSE.—The Three per Cents. closed yesterday at 75f. 25c. for the end of the month, and the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. at 98f. 96c.

MADRID, Sept. 26.

The Three per Cents. were done at 34.

DANTZIC, Friday, Sept. 29.

The Basilisk has arrived. She left the fleet at Nargen on the 26th.

Sir Charles Napier reconnoitred Sweaborg on the 23rd.

H. M. S. Prince Regent, Neptune, St. George, and Monarch have been ordered home.

RETURN OF FRENCH SHIPS OF WAR FROM THE BALTIC.

(By Submarine International Telegraph via the Hague.)

NTBOG (GREAT BELT), Sept. 29.

The French line-of-battle ship, Breslau, Rear-Admiral Penaud, arrived here yesterday from the Baltic, and sailed to-day for the Kattegat. The Vice-Admiral, Parseval Deschênes, is expected with the rest of the French line-of-battle ships.

(By Electric Telegraph.)

FALMOUTH, Sept. 29.

The Sardinian frigate, the Geoua, arrived here from Stockholm. She is bound for the Mediterranean.

GRECE.

The Emperor Napoleon has decided that the army of occupation in Greece shall consist exclusively of marine infantry and artillery, commanded by a lieutenant-colonel acting under the orders of Rear-Admiral Le Barbier de Tinan. The new companies to be sent out (completed according to the new regulations, to 115 men per company) will be selected principally from the force just returned from the Baltic. Lieut.-Colonel de Vassoigne is appointed to the command of this force.

THE PRINCIPALITIES.

The following important statement appears in the Steele:—"We learn to-day, in a quarter whence we often derive reliable information, that the Ottoman Government, in concert with the Western Powers, has demanded that a limit shall be fixed to the number of Austrian troops in the occupation of the Principalities. The figure of from 20,000 to 25,000 men is spoken of, but on this subject we will not affirm anything positively. We believe, however, it may be taken to be probable that the reinstatement of the Hospodar Stirbey has occasioned some coolness between Vienna and Constantinople."

THE CRIMEA.

A correspondent at Constantinople, writing on the 19th, announces that the disembarkation was completed on the 16th, and on the 19th the allied army was to cross the Alma.

A Russian courier had been captured, bearing despatches, from which it appeared that 20,000 Russians (2,000?) were prostrated by the cholera, and that the whole force in the Crimea did not exceed 45,000 men.

A battle was expected on Sept. the 20th. On Sept. 18, the Scotch Greys sailed for the Crimea, on board the Himalaya.

PARIS, Saturday Morning.

The Moniteur of yesterday announces the departure of the allied army from Old Fort for Sebastopol on the 19th. A telegraphic despatch has been received from Marshal St. Arnaud, mentioning that everything was going on well, but that an unavoidable delay of forty-eight hours had occurred in his movement on Sebastopol. If this be the case, it would explain the want of intelligence since the landing.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

VIENNA, Saturday.

It is rumoured in Greek mercantile circles that the allies have obtained a signal advantage. The funds have risen in consequence.

Further telegraphic messages confirm the accounts of the favourable disposition manifested towards the allies by the Tartar population of the Crimea. The sanitary condition of the allied army was excellent.

An official bulletin communicated to the Ambassadors at Constantinople, and dated from the bivouac at Old Fort on the 6th, announces that the allies had intended the next day to attack an entrenched camp of 10,000 Russians posted in the direction of Sebastopol, but that the camp had been raised in the night, and that the Russians had fallen back upon the town.

Twelve thousand Tartars had offered themselves to the allies as volunteers, and their services had been accepted.

It was reported that the attack upon Sebastopol had been fixed for the 25th.

The Russian fleet had been reconnoitred in the port of Sebastopol by the French steam-ship Napoleon.

DETERMINED ATTEMPT AT ABDUCTION OF A WARD IN CHANCERY, AND GALLANT ARREST.

We have received, says the Morning Herald, the following narrative from respectable authority. We do not vouch, however, for all the particulars, although the names, &c., of all the parties who are stated to be implicated have been communicated to us.

MARKET HARBOROUGH, Sept. 28.—No sooner has the Irish abduction case ceased to be of interest, than England steps forward with a case equalling in atrocity and surpassing in romance the late "Carden affair." The papers have recently announced that a certain rich heiress has been declared the purchaser of very extensive estates in Northamptonshire. A young lady, about eighteen years of age, with between £20,000 and £30,000 a-year, must naturally cause some little feeling of anxiety on the part of "younger sons," or others, "about to marry."

For some time past Market Harborough has been infested with a certain number of suspicious persons, who professed to be on the look out for "horses for the army," and in pursuing this occupation many visits were made to the village in which the young lady before alluded to is living under the control of her guardian. At last a noble captain made his appearance, whose movements soon attracted the vigilant eye of Mr. Superintendent Iliffe, who determined on closely watching his movements. This he did with a tact which not only redounds to his own credit, but was the means of preventing a young lady being suddenly and most basely deprived of her home, her happiness, and perhaps her fortune. Last night the gallant captain was seen leaving Market Harborough with a companion, about eleven o'clock, in a conveyance, with lamps, and having every appearance of being prepared for a long journey. On leaving the town the lamps were suddenly extinguished and a cross-road traversed, which brought them to the park gates of the "fair one." The police being fortunately close to their heels, Mr. Superintendent Iliffe and his two men immediately proceeded to the keeper's lodge, and with his assistance at once proceeded in search of their prey. On entering the park gates they discovered one person evidently on the watch. They soon led this person to believe that they were merely poachers, and that they also supposed him to be the same. The trap was immediately fallen into, and after a short parley, arrangements were made as to the division of the game, &c. This allowed the police (who were all disguised) an opportunity of watching the movements of the other men—no less than ten. Nothing daunted, however, they cautiously screened themselves, and by degrees got near to the house, when they saw one man boring a hole through the drawing-room window, and the others watching. The police, by manoeuvring, succeeded in drawing two or three of the party away, and when they got them a convenient distance from the others, arrested them, and then secured their companions in like manner, the window luckily all this time withstanding their attempts to open it. The surprise of the men on confronting each other in the gamekeeper's house, cannot be imagined, and their disgust at being captured by three policemen and a gamekeeper whom they supposed to be poachers. If they had been aware of the plot laid for them the consequences must have been dreadful, as all the men were armed to the teeth with knives and revolvers, and all swore that they would rather have sacrificed their lives than have been thus secured. On their being searched, and from their own statements, it is evident they did not mean plunder, but the forcible abduction of the heiress we have before alluded to; and it is stated that such was their determination to secure their intended prize, that in the event of their being interrupted in the house immediate death was to stay the first interposer. Rope ladders were found, and the requisite conveyances to elude the vigilance of any followers, in case they had succeeded in their desperate undertaking. We understand the persons under arrest have hitherto moved in the highest circles, one of the principals being brother-in-law to an earl, and the others highly connected.

THE DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR ON BOARD THE DAUNTLESS.—Portsmouth, Friday.—This painful inquiry on the part of the civil power was opened this morning at the borough police-court, in the gaol, before Mr. Stigant (mayor), and Messrs. B. Bramble, J. G. Scale, and T. E. Owen (aldermen), and Major Travers, Captain Sager, and Mr. G. Gilbruan, magistrates of the borough. Captain Ryder, of the Dauntless, and several other gentlemen of note were on the bench.

DEATH OF DR. ROUPELL.—We regret to announce the death of this physician from cholera, which took place at his residence in Welbeck-street last evening. Decided symptoms of cholera became evident on Thursday evening, and, notwithstanding the exertions of several professional friends, he expired within twenty-six hours after the first symptoms had appeared.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR.—The Acrobat agglomeration is still untwisted. A gallant admiral, long connected with the turf, is reported to have lent the rough hand of a sailor to the work, and thereby involved himself in a scrape for his indiscreet interference. Assertions are made of libellous letters, threats of actions-at-law, retraction, and apology, with other disagreeable contritumps. Surely half-a-dozen gentlemen could in a couple of hours, and by an open investigation, have placed the blame on the right shoulders. Many of the public have been sufferers, and they have, at least, a right to a knowledge of the truth. All they require to learn is, whether the late transactions at Doncaster are in accordance with the strict usages of the turf, in an honourable sense? A large rent-roll is a valuable weapon of defence, but, at the same time, it is the most ungracious article wherewith to beat down any individual, however humble, for entertaining an antagonistic opinion. Lord Derby, many years back, made a terrible onslaught on his former colleagues in the Ministry by his famous "thimblery" speech. Now, your readers who have visited the race-course, must be aware that the "thimblery" is a very artful dodge. But a rig may be carried on with three horses as well as three thimbles, and the public cannot be censured if they claim to know where the pea really was, or if there was any pea at all. Everything may be explained satisfactorily, but no man is disarmed of his discontent by being treated with laudatory silence. It is more than probable that the Newmarket Second October Meeting will see this disagreeable matter finally set at rest.

THE FIRST OCTOBER went off with great éclat, and the Squire's signal, victory with his Rifleman over the great northern stable was hailed with the loudest acclamations.

The bill of fare provided by Mr. Topham for the little autumnal banquet on the Roodee ought to attract a large attendance, and realise the best hope of the projectors. The racing commences on Tuesday with THE SHORTS HANDICAP. For this seven furlongs spin thirty horses are entered. Billy Richardson, Snowdon Dunhill, Master Slender, Butterfly, and Amy, appear to have none the worst of the weights, the last two, to my fancy, being the most dangerous.

THE MOSTY STAKES may be placed to the credit of Mrs. Righy.

INNKEEPER'S PLATE, Grosvenor-course.—For this event 1 must take The Sheriff, Cassio, and Gruyère, in the order named.

THE MERSET STAKES, with 100 added.—Twenty-eight youngsters are handicapped for this race. The weights are so well adjusted, that it renders the selection of the winner no easy task. The Chicken is not out of the race even at the top weight, 8st 9lb. Amy, too, at 8st must not be overlooked, but the winner may probably spring from among the light division, and of these I prefer the chances of Rose and Gimcrack.

TRADESMEN'S WELTER CUP.—Titterstone, Gerard, or Bright Phœbus, I apprehend, will be handy at the finish.

WYNNSTAY PLATE of 100 sovs for two and three-year-olds. Seven furlongs. Comfort and Sister of Mercy ought to be foremost among the elders, and Lady Palmerston and Chicken should keep the young ones safe. Were I assured of a start I should certainly stand by the last named.

HANDICAP of 5 sovs, with 50 added.—Another little affair for the two-year-olds, with thirteen nominations. The issue may depend much on previous running; but were I to make choice of Maid of Cadiz, it might prove, after all, a matter of Moonshine.

THE CHESTER PLATE; one mile seven furlongs. Forty-eight nominations. Lidian Warrior tops the list, at 8st 12lb, and Jujube is the feather, at 5st. From so many horses, with no betting to indicate the intentions of owners, the attempt to pick out the A 1 is all but hopeless. I should take Lancashire Lass and Annie Sutherland from the heavy, La Belle, Pumicestone, and St. Clare from the middle, and Kidnapper and Gruyère from the light weights, and even then the winner might escape me. But I must own to a strong partiality towards St. Clare for this contest.

KELSO has its meeting also on Tuesday and Wednesday, the brace of Cups given by the Stewards forming the principal items. The first, the donation of the Duke of Roxburghe, has twenty-four nominations in the mile and half run, for a valuable prize. Honeysuckle, Aribbas, Braxey, and Lady Vernon appearing to me the most formidable of the lot. The second, given by the Earls of Wemyss and Dalkeith, two miles, has an entry of fifteen, from which I am inclined to select Viugtun, Rabgill and Braxey.

THE YORKSHIRE UNION HUNT CLUB has its meet on Thursday; and for the YORK AND AINSLEY HANDICAP mile and three-quarters, I can see nothing better than Adelaide and King of Trumps.

THE JUVENILE HANDICAP, T.Y.C.—I must stand the venture with Cimicina.—Yours, TOBY PEDER.

RACING SYNOPSIS.

A TELESCOPIC PEEP INTO THE GREAT HANDICAP.

With the second of these two levithan encounters, which will take place during the last week of the ensuing month, will the Racing Season of 1854, at head-quarters, be brought to a close; and never, in the memory of the oldest turfite living, has there been a season so rife in misdeeds, misgivings, and mal-practices, as the one about to find its ending on the 23rd of October next. Deeds alike disgraceful to the British turf and degrading to a large portion of its members. Oh, for a second Lord George Bentinck, to cleanse the Augean stable of its foulness! The Admiral has great weight in all matters connected with horse-racing; he has a locus standi not to be disturbed; and if he will but come holdly forward, take the helm of our turf warfare, REFORMATION, steer her safely through the shoals of degradation, and the quicksands of disgrace, then may we cheerily exclaim,—

"Our little barque no storm shall overwhelm,

She must ride safe if he is at the helm."

Digression apart, non hey presto for the handicaps. If public running be any criterion, or has anything to do with the two great events forthcoming at Newmarket, the chances of victory may be brought within a very limited circle of possibility, and assigned to a very limited number of animals, notwithstanding the vast disparity of the impostos assigned to each in these the last two great handicaps of the season. But, as late events have proved the total inability of testing their capabilities, either by public running or the market betting, and made outlays dangerous even upon those who could have won but did not try, I must chauce there being a little bit of honesty left for the nether end of the season to clear my vision through this telescopic view of shame for the past, and hope for the future. This would make some little atonement for the wrong-doings which has made our national pastime a bye-word in the mouths of all right-minded men. The Cesarovitch Handicap, a name in itself (under existing circumstances) disgraceful to the Jockey Club and our turf directors for its retention in our Racing Calendar, as well as in the authoritative lists of the day. The impostos for this race commenced unusually heavy, hence the great falling-off in the acceptances from the original nominations; the highest and lowest impostos, as they stand at present, ranging from the 9th 7lb of the four-year-old Rataplan, down to the 1st 7lb of the three-year-old Rodo-mell. Here are two animals banded at a difference of 5st for the year, and, yet, in my opinion, they might both as well remain in the stable for all the chance they have to win, if I am right; but let the sequel prove. The following seem to me the most likely to be found upon the telegraphic board as starters:—

Hungerford	Ammonia	Ptolemy
Muscovite	Mrs. Birch	Phonon
Balrowmle	Jealous One	Kidnapper
Cobnut	Candlewick	Calamus
Indian Warrior	St. Clair	Poodle
Koh-i-Noor	Burlington	D. O.
Scherz	Naomi	Rodo-mell
Ednot	Radcliffe Hero	Horatio

This is as near a guess as I can make about the starters; and, without attempting to see too far through this telescope of mine, or laying claim to anything like the prophetic, as the Ring offer to back the field against any eight, were I disposed to invest on a pick, the following would be my selection:—

Muscovite	Balrowmle	Candlewick
Exact	Poodle	Naomi
Calamus	Ammonia

And was I called upon to reduce the eight to four, thus would I spot them:—

Muscovite	Poodle
Balrowmle	Ammonia

And as the running for the Cesarewitch will, in all probability, make a vast deal of change for the Cambridgeshire, I must decline touching that event in the present article; which I again disclaim is sent forth as any prophecy, as the following doggerel will testify:—

To call this pick a prophecy
Good sense would be transgressing;
I only wish to have a shy,
And do a bit of guessing. GOLDFINCH.

MANCHESTER.—FRIDAY.

Cesarewitch Stakes.—Muscovite has been backed for a large amount at 7 to 1, the highest offer against him at the close being only 6 to 1. The other horses quoted "taken" were backed to small amounts. Ammonia and Poodle quite friendless, the former in consequence of her defeat at Northallerton. Cambridgeshire.—Orinoco, Early Bird, and Alembic were in general demand, and were the only horses backed to any amount. The Derby.—The only changes are in Bonnie Mori, Dirk Hatterick, Ridenow, and Wild Dayrell, consequent on their running at Newmarket. Chester Handicap.—Kidnapper would have been backed for a sum at 6 or 7 to 1, but there were no layers.

Cesarewitch Stakes.

6 to 1 agst Muscovite (7 to 1)	2 to 1 agst Kidnapper (t)

PAINES-LANE RACES.—MONDAY, Sept. 25.

This little annual local meeting came off on Monday and Tuesday last.

A Quarter-master's Pony Stakes of 10s. each, with 8 sors added. Heats. Once round and a distance.

Mr. Morris's ch m Crucifix	1 1
Mr. Williams's br Hackway	2 2
Mr. W. Anker's b f Flying Nancy	3 3
Mr. J. Wilhaus's ch Creeping Jenny	4 0

Won easily.

The Pains-lane Handicap of 5 sors each, 2 ft, with 50 added. Twice round and a distance. 30 subs, 17 of whom accepted.

Mr. Oliver's Bright Phoebe, 3 yrs, 5st	1
Mr. J. Wadlow's Kitchley, 5 yrs, 7st 10lb	2
Mr. Merry's Morning Star, 5 yrs, 7st 10lb	3
Mr. Dawson's Heli, 4 yrs, 6st 10lb
Mr. Choice's May-day, aged, 6st 6lb
Mr. Niece's Meeaw, 6 yrs, 6st 6lb
Mr. Smith's Ferret, 6 yrs, 6st 2lb
Mr. Frail's Liberty, aged, 6st 2lb

Won by a neck.

A Hack Stakes for Half-bred Horses, of 1 sov each, with 10 added. Heats. Twice round and a distance.

Mr. Weatherglass's ch m Ginger, 4 yrs, 11st 12lb	1 1
Mr. Tomlin's Crazy Jane, 5 yrs, 11st 6lb	0 2
Mr. E. Partin's b f Gipsy Girl, 3 yrs, 9st 7lb	2 0
Mr. Dawson's gr m Half-bred, 6 yrs, 12st
Mr. Evans's bk m Cat, 12st

Won in a canter.

TUESDAY.

The Donnington-wood Stakes of 1 sov each, with 10 added. Heats. Twice round and a distance.

Mr. W. Walter's gr g Meander, 4 yrs, 8st 11lb	1 1
Mr. Langley's ch m Shamrock Lass, 6 yrs, 8st	2 2
Mr. H. Neake's b f Birdline Girl, 3 yrs, 8st 7lb	fell
Mr. Loughran's b f Heli, 3 yrs, 8st 12lb
Mr. Williams's ch m Creeping Jenny, 5 yrs, 5st 12lb

Betting.—First heat: 5 to 4 on Birdline Girl, 3 to 1 agst Shamrock Lass, 4 to 1 agst Meander, 5 to 1 agst any other. The favourite made the running, but on rounding the turn just past the Stand fell, threw her jockey, who lay stunned on the course, when she got away, and her chance was out, to the great mortification of the knowing ones, who had backed her to win a large sum. Before coming to the straight run in, Shamrock was leading by about four lengths. At the distance Meander came out, challenged the chestnut mare, and won easily by two lengths. Second heat: 2 to 1 on Meander. Heli made play, the favourite lying second. On passing the Stand the second time Shamrock took the lead, but was passed by the grey at the top of the hill, before reaching the flat, and defeated cleverly.

The Ironmasters' Plate, a Hurdle Race of 2 sors each, with 20 added. Second to save his stake. Heats. About one mile and a half.

Mr. Williams's Punctuality, 4 yrs, 10st 7lb	1 2
Mr. Weatherglass's Ginger, 4 yrs, 10st 12lb	3 1 2

Betting.—First heat: 3 to 1 on Punctuality, who made the running, was only once headed for a few yards. A splendid race home, won by a neck. Second heat: 5 to 1 on Punctuality. At the distance Ginger came out, and after a terrific struggle, won, on the post, by a neck. Third heat: 6 to 1 on Punctuality, who made the running, and at the half distance was twelve lengths ahead; here Ginger put on the steam, and was only defeated by a head. Had Ginger been well ridden, she must have won both the first heats. There was great grumbling upon the subject.

The Priors Lee Cup of 2 sors each, with a Splendid China Racing Cup, and 10 sors. Heats. Twice round and a distance.

Mr. Weatherglass's Ginger, 4 yrs	1 1
Mr. Williams's Punctuality, 4 yrs	2 2

BELFORD RACES.—MONDAY, Sept. 25.

The Hunters' Stakes of 3 sors each, with 20 added. Gentlemen riders. Heats. Two miles. 3 subs.

Mr. G. Charlton's gr g Star of the West, by Paulus (b b), 6 yrs, 12st	1 1
Mr. Henderson's ch m Moley, aged, 12st 12lb	1 1
Mr. Graham's Sam Stick, b b, aged, 12st	3 3

The first was a dead heat; the others were severely contested, and won by half a neck only.

The Farmers' Plate of 15 sors, added to a Sweepstakes of 2 sors each. Heats. One mile and a half. 3 subs.

Mr. Harper's ch m The Forest Queen, aged	1 1
Mr. Laidler's br g The Peasant, 4 yrs	3 2
Mr. Graham's b h Outcast, 6 yrs	2 bolted

A fine race.

The Tradesmen's Plate of 10 sors, added to a Sweepstakes of 1 sov each. One mile and a distance. Won, in two heats, by Mr. Harper's h h Worcester, 6 yrs, 10st 4lb (Fulton), beating Mr. Graham's b m Miss Lucy Barton, aged, 10st 4lb (Marson). Mr. Percival's br g The Swell, 4 yrs, 8st 10lb (Livesey). Mr. Gill's Jack Peck, 3 yrs, 7st 6lb (Gill). Mr. Lane's b f Small Parcel, 3 yrs, 7st 4lb (Patterson), and Mr. R. Graham's b m Mary Brown, h-b, 6 yrs, 9st 10lb (Coxon).

BREWSTER RACES.—MONDAY, Sept. 25.

The Chillington Stakes of 2 sors each, with 10 added. Heats. Once round and a distance. 3 subs.

Mr. Shepherd's h m Merry Lass, aged, 10st	1 1
Mr. Wood's h g Doubtful, 5 yrs, 9st 6lb	2 2

Won easily.

The Hurdle Stakes of 2 sors each, with 10 added. Heats. Once round and a distance. 4 subs.

Mr. Shepherd's b m Merry Lass, aged, 12st	1 1
Mr. Lowe's ch g The Turk, by Harkaway, 6 yrs, 12st	3 2
Mr. Miller's br m Atlanta, 5 yrs, 11st 6lb	2 3

Won easily.

The Consolation Stakes of 10s. each, with 5 sors added, once round, were won, in two heats, the first by a head and the second easily, by Mr. Davis's b g The Miller, aged (A. Groom), beating Mr. Lowe's ch g The Turk, and Mr. Haynes's b m Kitty, aged.

WHITEHAVEN RACES.—TUESDAY, Sept. 26.

This meeting has come off with great eclat. The weather was splendid, and the attendance each day highly respectable and numerous. The entries were more numerous than ever.

The Whitehaven-castle Stakes of 5 sors each, 3 ft, with 25 added. For two and three-year-olds. T.Y.C.

Capt. Spencer's Cherry Brandy, 2 yrs, walked over

The West Cumberland Selling Stake of 5 sors each, 3 ft, with 20 added from the Race Fund.

Mr. Hartley's b h Angelo, 4 yrs, £50	1
Mr. Fearon's g m Little Jane, 6 yrs, £25	3
Mr. W. Hartley's gr c Bedouin, 3 yrs, £20	3

Bedouin led off starting, closely followed by Little Jane and Angelo. Going round the bottom turn, Bedouin dropped into the rear; Angelo then went to the front, and won easily by two lengths. Angelo at starting was backed at even agst the field, and after the race was sold for £29. 17s.

The Whitehaven Plate of 50 sors, added to a Handicap of 10 sors each, 5 ft, and 3 only if declared. For horses, &c., of all ages.

Mr. Robson's b b Dalketh, 5 yrs, 8st 3lb	1
Capt. Spencer's b c Seducer, 3 yrs, 7st 7lb	2
Mr. Hodgson's br h Angelo, 4 yrs, 7st 9lb	3
Mr. J. Fearon's gr h Young Hack, 5 yrs, 7st 13lb
Mr. Mostyn's b g The Sheriff, 3 yrs, 7st 14lb

Young Hack went away with the lead, Dalketh second, Seducer third, Angelo bringing up the rear. They continued in this order for the first mile and a half; Dalketh then went to the front, Seducer second. They continued in this position to the finish, Dalketh winning easily by three lengths. 2 to 1 agst Dalketh, and a 1 to 1 agst all the others. The owner of Seducer objected to Dalketh on account of being handicapped as half-bred, when he was proved to be thoroughbred.

The Tally-Ho Handicap Stakes of 5 sors each, 3 ft, with 20 added for bona-fide hunters.

Mr. Robson's Dalketh, 5 yrs, 12st	1
Mr. J. Fearon's g m Little Jane, 6 yrs, 10st 10lb	2
Mr. Howe's b m Fairthorn, 4 yrs, 11st 6lb	3

Little Jane took the running, Fairthorn second, Dalketh bringing up the rear. They continued in this order for three-quarters of a mile, when Dalketh went up to his horses and won easily by two lengths. Dalketh was backed agst the field at crews.

The Speedwell Plate of 5 sors each, 3 ft, with 25 added from the fund.

Mr. Hartley's br h Angelo, 4 yrs, £50	Brown 1
Mr. Howe's b m Fairthorn, 4 yrs, £50	2
Mr. Fearon's m in Little Jane, 6 yrs, £25
Mr. Masterman's b g The Sheriff, 2 yrs, £190

Little Jane took the lead at starting, but the horses changed position repeatedly. Angelo was backed at even agst the field. After a severe and well-contested race, Angelo won by about half a head. This was the best contested race during the meeting. The winner was put up for sale, and claimed for £51.

The Tradesmen's Handicap of 7 sors each, 5 ft, and only 3 lb declared, with 40 added.

Mr. Robson's Dalketh, 5 yrs, 8st 1lb	Howe 1
Captain Spencer's h c Seducer, 3 yrs, 7st 5lb	2
Mr. Hodgson's br h Angelo, 4 yrs, 7st 7lb
Mr. Howe's h m Fairthorn, 4 yrs, 7st 7lb

Fairthorn took the lead, closely followed by Seducer, Dalketh and Angelo following closely in the wake. They continued in this order till passing the Gravel Stand the first time round; Dalketh then took up the running, was never headed, and won easily by two lengths. Dalketh was freely backed at 2 to 1 agst the field at starting.

The Pinner's Plate of 3 sors each, 2 ft, with 20 added. This stake did not fill.

A Beaten Handicap Stake of 3 sors each, 1 ft, with 14 added. For beaten horses.

Mr. Fearon's gr h Young Hack, 5 yrs	Old Cassidy 1
Mr. Howe's b m Fairthorn, 4 yrs	2
Mr. Wilkinson's gr m Little Jane, 6 yrs	3

The young Hack went off with the lead at starting, was never headed, and won easily by five lengths. 3 to 1 on the Young Hack at starting.

WALSALL RACES.—WEDNESDAY, Sept. 27.

The Inverkeith Stakes of 3 sors each, with 20 added. Heats. Once round and a distance. 3 subs.

Mr. Shepperdson's ch f by Ithuriel, dam by The Saddler, 5 yrs, 8st 1lb	Ashall 1 2 1
Mr. Parkes's br m Syren, 4 yrs, 8st 2lb	T. Cliff 3 1 2
Mr. J. T. Langley's b f Katinka, 3 yrs, 7st	J. Walters 2 3 dr

First heat: Won by a neck, Syren knocked out at the last turn but one, being a bad third.—Second heat: Won by a neck; half a length between second and third. Oliver rode Katinka in this heat.—Third heat: Won by half a neck.

The Members' Stakes of 3 sors each, with 25 added by C. Forster, Esq., M.P. for the borough. Heats. Once round and a distance. 3 subs.

Mr. J. Rose's ch g Go Away, by Harkaway, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb	J. Walters 1 1
Mr. Flintoff's b f Wire, 5 yrs, 6st 7lb	G. White 3 2
Mr. Shepperdson's ch f Maid of Golborne, 4 yrs, 8st 4lb	Ashall 2 3

First heat: Won cleverly by half a length; Wire, who ran out, a bad third.—Second heat: Won by a length and a half; half a length between second and third. Maid of Golborne ran under protest for not claiming an allowance of 7lb. The winner was not sold.

The Bradford Handicap of 5 sors each, 3 ft, and 1 only if declared, with 50 added. Two miles. 16 subs, 7 of whom declared.

Mr. Owen's b h Timotheus, by Heiman Parrell, 6 yrs, 8st 1lb	G. White 1
Mr. Handley's br m Lancashire Lass, 4 yrs, 8st 13lb (including 5lb extra)	T. Cliff 2
Mr. G. Taylor's ch f Lady in Waiting, 5 yrs, 7st 9lb	Ashall 3
Mr. Walker's br h Bullseye, 5 yrs, 7st 13lb, Demnan
Mr. Oliver's ch g Bright Phoebe, 3 yrs, 7st 7lb (including 5lb extra), Oliver
Mr. G. Dyde's gr f Clio, 3 yrs, 6st 2lb, J. Hall

Betting.—7 to 4 agst Lancashire Lass, 2 to 1 agst Timotheus, and 3 to 1 agst Bright Phoebe. Timotheus went in front, and, after a splendid race from the last turn with the favourite and Lady in Waiting, won cleverly by a neck, half a length dividing second and third. The others beaten off.

The Saddlers' Stakes of 3 sors each, with 20 added by the saddlers of Walsall. One mile and a half. 5 subs.

Mr. Parkes's br m Syren, by St. Leon, 4 yrs, 8st 13lb, 2nd T. Cliff	1

Mr. G. Taylor's ch f Lady in Waiting, 5 yrs, 8st 12lb	Poodle 1 1 3

Mr. G. Taylor's ch f Lady in Waiting, 5 yrs, 8st 12lb, 2nd Demnan 2 3 2

Mr. Sharratt's br g Crenn-of-the-Valley, 3 yrs, 8st 3lb, 3rd G. White 3 3 4

First heat won by a head, the second by a neck, and the third by three lengths. There was no advance on the selling price of the winner.

NORTHALLERTON AND NORTH-RIDING MEETING.

THURSDAY, September 28.

The favourable weather and the highly satisfactory programme, drew together a very large attendance of company. The stand was well filled, but the running-ground was hard. The Amateur and Selling Plate having both failed to attract an entry, reduced the first day's sport into a small compass, although plenty of horses were in the town to contend for the various prizes; indeed, we hear that more horses than usual were at Northallerton.

The Trial Stakes of 5 sors each, with 20 added. For all ages. One mile. 3 subs.

Mr. Hawdon's b c Courtney, by Fintona, 2 yrs, 6st, Bule	1
Mr. Kewen's b c Snowden Dunhill, 4 yrs, 8st 12lb, 0 Unites	2

Mr. Bank's h c Monzie, 2 yrs, 6st, Place.

Mr. D. Wray's br c New Holland, 3 yrs, 6st, Wood.

Betting.—7 to 4 agst Snowden Dunhill, 5 to 2 agst Courtney, and 6 to 1 agst Bourgeois. After several attempts they got away, on good terms, Courtney, Tadeaster, New Holland, and Snowden Dunhill running abreast to the top turn, where Snowden Dunhill took up the running, and Tadeaster became second, Bourgeois third, and Courtney fourth. No further change occurred until reaching Jackson's farm-house, where Courtney took the third place, passed Tadeaster at the bottom turn, caught Snowden Dunhill at the distance, and won very cleverly by three parts of a length; a head between second and third. Tadeaster was a very bad fourth, Johnny Taft fifth, Mistake sixth, Cossey seventh, New Holland eighth, and Mendie last.

The Two-Year-Old Stakes of 10 sors each, h b, with 25 added. T.Y.C. 8 subs.

 Mr. J. Dunlop us b m Medlock, 5 yrs, 9st 7lb, T. Webb 3
 Mr. McIntosh's b m Ansty, 4 yrs, 9st 9lb, W. Noble bolted
 John Dory won by a length and a half; Medlock a bad third.

The Perth Handicap of 5 sovs each, 5 ft, and only 3 if declared, with 50 added. One mile and a half. 4 subs, one of whom declared.

Mr. Thrift's b h The Greek Prince, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb, T. Webb 1
 Mr. Redfern's b f Garrulity, 3 yrs, 7st 7lb, Morrison 2
 Mr. Hampden's b c Delusion (late Motley), 3 yrs, 7st 12lb, H. Robertson 3 Delusion the favourite. The Greek Prince won a slow run race by two lengths; the same between second and third.

The Ladies' Plate, value 75 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each. Heats. Once round and a distance.

Mr. Redfern's b g John Dory, aged, walked over.

There being only one horse entered for this race, the steward withheld the Plate. Mr. Redfern, however, intends taking legal proceedings for the recovery of the same, having been allowed to walk over for it in 1832.

The Lottery Stakes of 5 sovs each, with 20 added. One mile and a half. 2 subs.

Mr. J. Halliwell ns b m Mary Ann, 5 yrs, 7st 3lb, C50, Wadlie 1
 Mr. G. Keppie ns br g Gipsy Boy, 6 yrs, 8st 1lb (car 8st 4lb), C50, Neil 2
 Won by half a length.

MONMOUTH RACES.—THURSDAY, September 29.

The weather on Thursday was all that could be desired, and the attendance on the course was extremely large and fashionable, embracing the principal resident gentry with their families, as well as those from miles round. The stand and enclosure were extensively patronised by the speculative fraternity. The racing was exceedingly good, and appeared to afford great amusement to the vast number of holiday folk present.

The County Members' Plate of 80 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each, 2 ft. One mile. 15 subs.

Mr. Bartley's b g Magnet, by Paragon, 4 yrs, 7st 7lb, Oliver 1
 Mr. Parr's br c Van Tromp, out of Moonbeam, 2 yrs, 6st, D. Hughes 2
 Mr. Davies's b g Gaylad, h-b, aged, 8st 4lb, Sly, jun. 3

Betting—6 to 4 on Magnet, and 6 to 4 agst the Moonbeam colt. The favourite started with a clear lead, followed by Gaylad and the two-year-old to the farther side of the course, where Gaylad went up, ran with Magnet to the half-mile post, and then gave way to the young one, who, on rounding the lower turn, got to Magnet's head, but was beaten at last by half a length; a bad third.

The Monmouthshire Stakes of 10 sovs each, h fl, and only 3 if declared with 10 added. Two miles. 25 subs, 10 of whom paid £5 and 9 £3 each 10.

Mr. E. Parr's b c Newbold, by Robert de Gorham, 3 yrs, 6st 12lb, Quinton 1
 Mr. Palmer's b f Lurley, 3 yrs, 6st, Wilson 2
 Mr. Oliver's b g Battery, 4 yrs, 7st 11lb, Oliver 3
 Mr. Robinson's ch h Power, 0 yrs, 7st 11lb, Kendall 4
 Mr. Davies's ch g Titterstone, h-b, 6 yrs, 8st 7lb, Sly, jun. 5

Minerva was weighed for by Hawkins, but did not go to the post.

Betting—6 to 4 agst Newbold, 2 to 1 agst Titterstone, 5 to 2 agst Lurley, and 5 to 1 agst any other. After two attempts, the first caused by Battery breaking away, and the second by the saddle of Lurley breaking, whereupon her jockey had to dismount and obtain a fresh one, they left the post in close order, Tower having a slight lead, which he increased to several lengths on passing the stand, followed by Battery, Titterstone, Lurley, and Newbold, in the order named. There was no change until passing the T.Y.C. post the second time, when Titterstone and Battery fell back, and left Lurley and the favourite in attendance on Tower, who at the distance was joined by his two followers and Battery; a fine race home, with the lot resulting in favour of Newbold by a length, Lurley beating Battery by three parts of a length, and the latter vanishing a lead heat with Tower for third; Titterstone beaten off.

The Maltia Plate of 25 sovs, added to a Handicap of 5 sovs each, 2 ft. One mile and a half.

Mr. Turley's ch g The Deformed, by Hereford, 5 yrs, 10st 9lb, Mr. Davenport 1
 Mr. Seobell's b f Empress Catherine, 3 yrs, 9st 12lb (car 10st), Owner 2
 Mr. Davies's br g Dhustone, h-b, 4 yrs, 10st 4lb, Owner 3

Betting—4 to 1 on Empress Catherine. Dhustone started with the lead, followed by The Deformed and Empress Catherine to the further side of the course, when The Deformed took up the running, was never afterwards caught, and won in a canter by two lengths. Dhustone beaten off.

The Monnow Stakes of 3 sovs each, with 15 added. Heats. One mile and a half. 4 subs.

Mr. Stinton's b f Donna, by Spanish Jack, 3 yrs, 8st 7lb (including 5lb extra), Kendall 1
 Mr. Baker's br f The Unclear, 3 yrs, 8st 10lb (including 5lb extra), J. Lowe 2
 Mr. D. Samuel's b m The Merlin, 5 yrs, 9st 7lb, F. Morgan 3
 Mr. Williams's b m Cinderella, aged, 9st 3lb, G. Vivian 4

Betting—First heat: Even and 6 to 1 on The Unclear. Won by a length; Merlin a bad third, Cinderella last, beaten off. Second heat: 3 to 2 on Donna, who won very cleverly by two lengths; Merlin a bad third.

FRIDAY.

The Chippendale Stakes of 10 sovs each, h fl, and only 3 if declared, with 35 added. Heats. One mile and a half. 22 subs, 9 of whom declared.

Capt. Berkeley's ch g Bright Phœbus, 3 yrs, 8st 10lb, Oliver 1
 Mr. Burrow's b g Eden, 6 yrs, 7st 11lb, Trean 2
 Mr. Parr's b c Jonathan Martin, 3 yrs, 7st 5lb, Kendall 3
 Mr. J. Day's b h Waterfall, 6 yrs, 7st 3lb, Quinton 4
 Betting—Even on Bright Phœbus, who won both heats in a canter.

The Wye Stakes of 5 sovs each, with 25 added. Seven furlongs.

Grey Chicken, by the Anchor, C30, Wilson 1
 Fanny, by the Anchor, C30, Grubb 2
 Merry Lass, by the Anchor, C30, Galley 3
 Betting—1 to 1 on Grey Chicken. Won by two lengths, Merry Lass a bad third.

The Borough Members' Plate of 20 sovs, added to a Sweepstake of 5 sovs each. Two miles.

Mr. White's b c Florist, by Fancyboy, 4 yrs, Mr. Elwes 1
 Mr. Seobell's h f Empress Catherine, 3 yrs, Owner 2
 Mr. Caldwell's Samie, 5 yrs, Owner 3
 Betting—5 to 1 on Florist. Won by three lengths; Sandie a bad third.

The New Handicap was won by Grey Chicken (Kendall), beating Waterfall (Mr. London), The Unclear (Hughes), and Donna (Grubb).

Betting—6 to 4 on Grey Chicken. Won by three lengths; The Unclear a bad third.

The Hedder Hurdle Sweepstake of 5 sovs each, and 20 added. Heats. One mile and seven furlongs.

Massaroni, 4 yrs, walked over.

TURFIANA.

DEATH OF FRENCH.—This celebrated race-horse, thought by many good judges to be the best horse—not even excepting Faugh-a-Ballagh—ever foaled in Ireland, is now "numbered with the slain," his owner, Colonel the Hon. J. C. Westmore, owing to his helpless condition, having reluctantly consented to his being shot on the 9th ult. He was foaled in 1830, got by Roller out of Promise, by Walton out of Parosol, by Pot's out of Prunella, by Highflyer, &c., and was consequently in his 25th year. His many triumphs on the Irish Turf must still be fresh in the recollection of our readers. He scored no less than twenty-seven winning races, and closed his racing career on Saturday of the June Meeting, 1837, by winning the King's Plate of 100 gs, four miles, carrying 9st, beating Birdcatcher, 4 yrs, 7st 10lb, and Langford, 4 yrs, 7st 10lb, the two best horses of their year. He was also distinguished as a stallion, being the sire of Wolflog, Fireaway, Highwayman, Fanny Callaghan, Dispatch, and last, though not least, Sharvogue, besides Buckjumper, Equinox, The Brigand, the Celt, and many other steeple-chase horses, too numerous to mention.

William Edwards, who lived for the best part of half a century at the Palace, at Newmarket, where he formerly trained for George the Fourth, and William the Fourth, and other masters, including the Duke of Bedford, &c., has quitted Newmarket for the neighbourhood of Windsor. The old establishment is broken up, and as the property reverts to the Crown, it is more than probable that the ancient Palace, which has been the residence of more crowned heads than one, will be sold to the Woods and Forests.

RUGBY CLUB v. WELLINGBOROUGH.

This match was played at Rugby on Monday, Sept. 18th. There were cross purposes connected with this match which caused each club to take pot-luck, and to send the best men they could to the field under existing circumstances. Arrangements had been made some time past for a match between Northampton and Rugby School, to be played on the school field. The preliminaries were arranged, and everything was settled for a two-days' match, to have taken place on Monday and Tuesday. The doctor put his veto upon this business by a negative very late last week. The Northampton being disappointed in this match, and some of them belonging to the Wellingborough Club, asked the school if they could find an eleven in Rugby to meet eleven of the Wellingborough Club in a friendly match for Monday. This difficulty was at once got over by an appeal to E. M. Caldecott, Esq., of the Rugby Club, who promised to do all he could to oblige. It is but fair to say that the Rugby Club was taken at a nonplus, and it was stated on the ground that some of the Wellingborough side were actually taken from a railway carriage on the eve of starting for London; thus, too, they appeared to have been put about to obtain a muster, and no doubt this accounts for the odds in the score. The morning was bright and clear. Rugby went in first by sending in Caldecott and Sandford, the former doing his 20, and the latter his 59, which all agreed was not a bad beginning. E. Sawyer put down 30; W. Benn, 22; J. Atty, 18; while Goppy, Warde, and Leech obtained 1 between them. The wicket, &c., of Wellingborough amounting to 55, gave the Rugby side a total of 264. A sumptuous dinner was now served by Mr. Williams, on the ground, to which a very large party sat down. After a few bottles and a few jokes had been cracked, the Wellingborough side went in, under a dark and cloudy sky, drizzling rain, and a stiff breeze. The light was very much against them, and two hours saw them all out for 57. They followed their goes, and at six o'clock, the time fixed for drawing the stumps, they had made 24, leaving their opponents 183 ahead.

KENSINGTON SCHOOL v. BRAMSHILL CLUB.

This match was played in Bramshill Park (Hampshire), on Wednesday, the 13th of September. Bramshill, winning the toss, went in first, and, after some very good play, obtained 63 runs, to which Messrs. Goodchild and Videa each contributed 9. It being now two o'clock, both elevens partook of dinner; after which, Kensington took the bat, and made a very successful innings, scoring 105 runs. Kensington proving victorious by 42. Le Messurier scored 38; Bayford, 23; Harris, 20. The bowling and fielding of both elevens was admirable. The hospitality and kindness of the Bramshill eleven and certain friends were highly appreciated by the Kensingtonians. The score was as follows:—

MOSELEY v. HANDSWORTH.

A match was played between the above clubs on Monday week, on the ground of the latter, at Birchfields, and terminated in favour of the Moseley by six wickets to go down. The Handsworth first handled the willow, and obtained a score of 51, when the Moseley went in, and their wickets were soon disposed of for 36; when again the Handsworth took their places, and obtained a score of 55, leaving the Moseley 71 to obtain in their second innings, which they soon accomplished, Newbury making 27, not out. The ground being in bad condition, together with the swift howling of Power, was the cause of the great number of byes on the side of the Moseley, and that of York on the Handsworth, whose howling and batting was very good. The fielding of the Moseley, considering it is a young club, was highly praiseworthy. The following is the score:—

A match was played between the above clubs, on the ground of the former, on Tuesday week, when the Kendal Eleven were victorious, with five wickets to spare. Mr. Walker, of the Crown Inn, supplied an excellent cold collation, at two o'clock, in the field, which was partaken of most heartily by both clubs. William Ainsworth, Esq., Preston, officiated as umpire for Cartmel, and Mr. Dixon for Kendal; and their decision gave the greatest satisfaction to every one. The following is the score:—

ELY v. CAMBRIDGESHIRE MILITIA.
A second and well-contested match was played between these parties on Friday, the 22nd instant. The Militia first took the wicket, and were disposed of for 62 runs, of which Captain Reed scored 24 in good style. The Ely then went in, and after some good play from Messrs. Hogg and Pigott, were got out for 55 runs—thus leaving the military gentlemen ahead by 7 runs. The Militia again went in, and scored 60, leaving their opponents 63 runs to get to win in about two hours, which they did with the loss of five wickets only, Mr. Hogg having scored 35, and not out, in his usual masterly style, and Mr. Neale winning the match with a slashing hit for 5. The following is the score:—

DEATH OF DEARMAN, THE CRICKETER.—In another column we announce the death of James Dearman, of Barnall, who for many years past has distinguished himself among the cricketers of the town. We understand that he has left a wife and a family of nine children in circumstances so unfortunate as to induce a number of his friends to commence a subscription on their behalf. The widow and the orphan have at all times a claim upon the sympathy of the public. In this case, those especially who are admirers of the game, in which the deceased was no mean performer, will feel it a pleasure, as well as a duty, to respond to the appeal. Subscription cards have been sent round; but as many, who would be glad to contribute, may not by oversight receive one, it has been arranged for subscriptions to be received at the Anvil Inn, Waingate.—Sheffield Independent.

HARROW SCHOOL CRICKET MATCHES.—Mr. Winckley, bookseller, of Harrow, is the publisher of this pamphlet, which we are sure will have a large sale among the Harrovians. It contains an authentic register of the principal matches played at Harrow and Lord's during the season of 1854, with the averages of the "Harrow Eleven." Some of our readers may not be aware that in the autumn of 1853 the Harrow Cricket ground was thoroughly drained, and that consequently play was not stopped one single day throughout the whole summer. The "Averages" are given in the pamphlet before us. We are sure all Harrovians will patronise Mr. Winckley.

THE RUDDY CLUB.—The wind-up of the above club took place on Monday last, and was to have ended in a game between "The Town" and "Neighbourhood." Other pursuits had the effect of setting aside this arrangement, so a game was played by sides chosen upon the ground. The day was remarkably fine; and, according to custom, Mine Host of the Horse-Shoes hotel—who supplies the Pavilion with what is necessary for the inner man—stood roils and Stilton, with home-brewed bitter and stout, for lunch, which was heartily enjoyed by the members, who left their beautiful ground for the season at five o'clock, after the most successful season they ever had, both in the number of victorious games, the accession of members, and the increase of funds. Precisely at seven o'clock the dinner was served at the Horse-Shoes hotel, and consisted of all the delicacies of the season. Between twenty and thirty sat down. C. M. Caldecott, Esq., was voted to the chair, and J. Atty, Esq., was solicited to occupy the vice-chair. There were also present:—Lord Dunboyne; the Hon. C. Lennox Butler; Sir T. Shipworth; J. W. Boughton Leigh, Esq.; E. Boughton Leigh, Esq.; T. Boughton Leigh, Esq.; R. Fenton, Esq.; Fenton, Esq.; D. Buchanan, Esq.; — Moore, Esq.; — Smythies, Esq.; W. Benn, Esq.; G. Benn, Esq.; G. Dainty, Esq.; C. Guppy, Esq.; &c., &c. The dinner-party, if not so numerous as on former occasions, never was more select than on this evening, nor did they separate till they acknowledged the catering of the host and hostess, and were at a loss which most to approve, the excellency of the viands, or the favour of the champagne—of the quantities of which, the guests were no mean judges.

ATLESBURY STAR CLUB v. CHESHAM.—A match between these two clubs was played on Monday week at Chesham, when, after some good play, the latter won by seven wickets, of which, on the part of the A. S. C. C., Long scored 15—0; Copcutt, 5—22, made up of a 7, a 4, a 3, three 2's, and a brace of singles; Howard, 4—1; Barnes, 3—0; Neale, 1—11; Fenton, 15—3; Clark, 10—0; Phillips, 0—2; Miller, 1—1; Crook, not out, 2—7; Knight, 0—1; Total, 58—48. On the part of Chesham, Mayo scored 19—0; Payne, 9; Christman, 16; T. Wehh, 14, not out, 2; Howard, 3—10; Munday, 2—7; G. Webb, 5; J. Webb, 3—1; W. Oldfield, 4; R. Oldfield, 2; Howard, 0; byes, 8—0; Total, 85—20.

Freemasonry and Masonic Intelligence.

MEETINGS.

MONDAY, October 2nd.—Quarterly Meeting of Boys' School, at eleven. No. 25: Freemasons' Tavern. No. 82: London Tavern. No. 85: Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street. No. 168: Builders' Arms, Russell-street, Chelsea. No. 223: White Hart, Bishopsgate-street. No. 257: George and Vulture, Cornhill. No. 30: Freemasons' Tavern. TUESDAY, 3rd.—Audit, Com. Female School, at eleven. No. 9: Freemasons' Tavern. No. 33: Chequers, Providence-road, Finsbury. No. 98: Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street. No. 118: Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street. No. 264: George and Vulture, Cornhill. No. 781: Freemasons' Tavern. THURSDAY, 5th.—No. 29: George and Blue Boar, Holborn. No. 63: Falcon Tavern, Fetter-lane. No. 158: Rudley's Hotel. No. 227: George and Vulture, Cornhill. No. 281: Freemasons' Tavern. No. 812: George Tavern, Commercial-road, East. SATURDAY, 7th.—Com. Boys' School, at four.

This month of October may be considered the commencement of the Masonic season, and we congratulate the Brethren of the Order upon the excellent prospect before them. Having seen several summonses for the ensuing week, we find that candidates for initiation are more numerous than usual, showing that Masonry is on the increase, as it should be; for where is charity dispensed more bounteously than from the various institutions which are our pride. Each Lodge has its benevolent fund, to which application is never made in vain by a "poor and distressed Mason." We have a Board of Benevolence attached to the Grand Lodge, at which a committee sits monthly to relieve the deserving indigent brother, as also widows and orphans of deceased Masons.

We glory in our "Asylum for Aged and Decayed Freemasons," our "Boys' School," and that beautiful institution, "The Royal Freemasons' School for Female Children," at Wandsworth, which we earnestly recommend brethren to visit occasionally, accompanied by their wives and daughters, and if any repugnance to Masonry ever existed with them, surely such a sight must have a counteracting influence.

Apocrypha, would not a little less selfishness on the part of brethren, by following more generally the example of a few—such as giving the ladies, now and then, a ball or dejeuner, at least once in the season—improve the feeling of the fair sex towards Freemasonry? The query we think unanswerable. It is most creditable to the Lodges who carry out such ideas—we regret to say they are few—but let us hope, ere long, to have scarcely a Lodge without a bye-law in which the ladies are considered.

HORTICULTURE.

NORTH LONDON FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Never were the far-famed Highbury Barn Gardens more appropriately employed than by the committee of the above society, who, on Tuesday last, brought together, through their members and friends, so fine a display of the choicest gems of Flora; and highly were they appreciated by the good folks of "right merrie Islington." Various as are the uses to which "the Barn" is applied, from the fair back-fall of the athletic Cornish wrestlers annually on Good Friday, to the feed of the "lumps" of the great metropolis, with at least one hundred and one uses et cresco, none, we should think, can claim to be of a more rational character, from its purity and thought-inspiring tendency, than the one now recorded. That horticulture can claim to be counted among the sciences of the day, none dare deny. Free from the party strife of politics, countenanced and upheld alike by the wealthy as the humble artisan, or rustic cottager, and even to a degree of usefulness beyond the conception of the general multitude, who merely seek the passing gratification of joining in the delight of a flower-show, we could dwell on the theme to a length which want of space forbids; and so append the awards made by the judges:—

For the best six plants of Fuchsias to Messrs. James and John Fraser, of Lea-bridge; second, to Mr. G. Smith, Horney-road. First prize to private growers, Mr. Weatherill, gardener to J. M. Neil, Esq., Tyroese Cottage, Horney-road. The principal varieties of merit in these collections were, Nil Desperandum, Telegraph, Duke of Wellington, Gem of the Season, and Pearl of England. Scarlet geraniums were admirably produced by Mr. Weatherill, including Cerise Unique, Tom Thumb, Lady Howick, &c. The lanceifolium lilies from Mr. J. Edwards were evidently past their best; the fragrance imparted by them was most telling, and fully rivaling the perfume emitted by the glorious group of autumnal roses contributed by Mr. Wilkinson, of the Rose Nurseries, Ealing. The display of verbena merits much praise, made up, as it was, by the three most eminent cultivators of that most useful flower, Messrs. Lochner, G. Smith, and Weatherill; the prize, however, for the best single truss was awarded to Mr. Windsor, of Kentish Town, for a wonderful exhibition of Defiance; both hollyhocks and pansies received first-class prizes, as did the dahlias sent by Mr. C. Turner, of the Royal Nursery, Slough. As an autumnal flower, the dahlias stand pre-eminent, and although not the most kind season for their cultivation, nevertheless, on this occasion, a most glorious combination of excellence awaited the visitors, who, during the day, were rivetted to them. The second prize in the dahlias class fell to Mr. Legge, of Edmonton; so with the many varieties, Mr. Turner taking first honours. Private growers' class for twelve blooms of distinct varieties: first prize, Mr. Jeffrey, of Windsor; second, Mr. Robinson, Thames Bank Pimlico; third, Mr. W. Holmes, Hackney; fourth, Mr. Procter, Bermondsey; there were four other exhibitors. For six new varieties, first prize, Mr. Robinson; second, Mr. Procter; third, Mr. Pope; fourth, Mr. Cook; and, in six fancy blooms, Mr. Robinson was again first and Mr. Procter second. Rather than give the names of the flowers in the winning collections we make a selection of the best from the entire exhibition, that such of our readers who may be seeking the cultivation of the Dahlia may, at a glance, know the best varieties "to have and to hold," either for the purposes of exhibition or decoration:—Amazon, Beauty of the Grove, Brilliant, Dr. Frampton, Fanny Keynes, Golden Eagle, Lilac King, Morning Star, Miss Caroline, Marcel, Rachel Hawkins, Sir J. Franklin, Triumphant, Admiral, Laura Livingston, Miss Mathews, Duchess of Kent, Miss Ward, Wonderful, Queen of Lilacs, Richard Cobden, Fearless, Topsy, Annie Salter, Sir R. Whittington, Mahina, Gloire de Kaln, Duke of Wellington, Essex Triumph, General Faucher, George Villiers, Miss Spears, Mr. Nelson, Sir Robert Peel, Sir Charles Napier. Of new flowers—the class to which the connoisseur turns his attention—a good display was made, and already speaks much for the future. First-class certificates were awarded to Doctor Reid, to Annie, and to Empress; Espartero and Crimea were highly commended; all may be considered as of great merit. Others were Port Royal, Cassy, Miss Russell, Bermondsey Hero, Sovereign, Rose Unique, Ellen. Taken as a whole, a more interesting exhibition has not taken place near to the metropolis for some seasons. A select few (about thirty) did ample justice to the catering of mine host Hinton; the President of the Society, J. Edwards, Esq., F.R.S., in the chair. The sages, the singers, and the doings, were in strict keeping with the occasion.—The Crysanthemum Exhibition will be held on the 23rd of November.

AGRICULTURE.

RUGBY SEPTEMBER CATTLE FAIR.

This fair was held on Monday last, and on no previous occasion was there ever more, if so many, head of beasts and sheep brought into this market in one day. The town teemed with live stock, and many who were unable to secure pens had no alternative but to occupy the outskirts of the place, and keep their droves together in the best way they could. There was also a very large attendance of buyers from Birmingham, Coventry, Leicester, Northampton, Warwick, Daventry, and adjoining towns. The hotels and inns had every bed engaged for some time previous, and many considered themselves fortunate in the possession of an arm-chair and a rug on Sunday night. The cattle were sent unusually early to secure standing places, and by peep of day business had commenced. The supply of fat beef of the prime quality was limited, and may have reached a trifle over 63d. per lb. The greater portion consisted of very useful beasts, for which rather more was demanded than was acceded to. The farmers had to give way, and a heavy trade was done from 6d. to 6½d. per lb. Nearly all the fat sheep were disposed of from 5½d. to 6d. per lb.; a few pens of choice wethers bringing 6½d. Store sheep, 28s. to 30s. per head. There were large quantities of Irish and Scotch store beasts, in which a hanging trade was done; they moved off slowly, at prices far from satisfactory to the salesmen.

A NEW GUANO ISLAND.

Private advices, received since our last from San Francisco, refer to the recent report of the discovery of a new guano island on the coast of the Pacific. It was understood that one of the principal American houses at San Francisco, in connection with some parties in the Sandwich Islands, had received information on the subject, and had purchased a revenue schooner, named the Frolic, and a clipper bark, the Emily, at 400 tons, to proceed at once for cargoes. These vessels were fitted out with as much secrecy as possible, but were believed to have taken a considerable number of men and a large supply of implements. The situation of the island is supposed to be about the latitude of Acapulco. It is said that it has no good harbour, and that the guano will have to be shipped from it in small vessels to some port near. Other accounts allege that the island is somewhere on the coast of Lower California.

RUGBY CHEESE AND ONION FAIR.

The quantity of cheese pitched, on Wednesday last, at this fair was less by about 50 tons than last year, each dairy averaging a deficiency of 10 cwt. The prices obtained for the best cheese may be fairly quoted at 7d. per lb. The second quality, or "two-meal," as it is termed, brought 6½d. per lb. A good clearance was effected at the above rates. There was a much larger quantity of onions brought from Bedfordshire and Northamptonshire than was contemplated, owing to the crops in this neighbourhood being a failure. They were all sold from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per bu. chd. Pickling onions, 6d. to 7d. per gallon. Shallots, 1s. per gallon.

CAMPAN BREAD.—"Sir,—As I saw in the Times lately the bread given to the soldiers in the East turned sour, I send a receipt for bread that we use in India in the jungles, and I have had no other for months together. The following is the receipt:—Take 1 lb. of flour of wheat; lay the flour on a flat board; add a pinch of salt, mix with half a teacup of milk or water, roll out the dough, pour on one teaspoonful of melted butter, work it up well for three or four minutes, roll out to the thickness of half an inch, cut out in shapes at pleasure, put them in a dry frying-pan, fry over a very slow fire, when a little brown on one side turn over, and in about five minutes they are ready. This is enough for a moderate eater's breakfast. It is quite as digestible as bread.—An Old Indian."

COMMERCE.

BILLS.—It appears, from a recent correspondence between Mr. J. T. De Mattos, of the firm of De Mattos and Godefray, and the Board of Indian Revenue, that it will be legal on and after the 11th of October to negotiate and transfer foreign bills of exchange either with the inland stamp, if less than three of the set are drawn or endorsed at the same time, or in sets of three, liable to the reduced duty of one-third each bill, on condition of the whole set being transferred at once.

THE TEA TRADE, September 25.—The deliveries of tea in London for the week to which the latest returns are completed, were 638,167 lb., being a slight excess over the previous week. The movement in the trade to the 16th of September, 1853, 1854, respectively, was as follows:

	1853.	1854.

Markets.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The English funds opened with dullness, and the market was languid throughout the day. Consols, which closed on Saturday at 95 to ½ for money, were first quoted 94½ to 95½, but they shortly recovered to 95 to ½, and remained without further variation up to the termination of business. For the account, the last price was 95½. India Bonds left off at 7s. to 10s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 6s. to 9s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to 100.

TUESDAY.—The English funds were again without the slightest animation, and quotations remained unchanged. The transactions in Consols were at 95 to ½ for money, and 95½ to ½ for the account. India Bonds left off at 7s. to 10s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 6s. to 9s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to 100. It is understood that the whole of the instalment of £300,000 paid on the Turkish loan is already in course of remittance in sovereigns to Constantinople.

WEDNESDAY.—The English funds showed a slight tendency to increased firmness. Consols for money opened at 95½ to ½, being an advance of an eighth, and they left off at 95½ exactly. For the account, the price, both at the opening and the close, was 95½ to ½. India Bonds were quoted 7s. to 10s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 6s. to 9s.; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to 100.

THURSDAY.—The English funds showed a slight tendency to increased firmness. Consols for money opened at 95 to ½, and closed at 95½ to ½. For the account they began at 95½ to ½, and, owing to some speculative purchases, left off at 95½ to ½. Money is in undiminished demand, both in the Stock Exchange and out of doors; but the arrivals of gold which have just taken place are likely to lessen the pressure. India Bonds were quoted at 7s. to 10s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 6s. to 8s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to 100.

FRIDAY.—Consols for Account only varied between 95½ to ½ and 95½ to ½, and are now quoted 95½ exactly, or the same as they closed yesterday. For money the transactions have been at 95½ to ½, which is also the present quotation. Exchequer Bills have been dealt in at 6s. to 8s. premium.

SATURDAY.—Market flat. Consols opened at 95½ to ½; at noon business improved, Consols 95½ to ½.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY, Sept. 26.—The number of beasts was very much smaller than on Monday last, and the average quality very indifferent; consequently, choicest descriptions were readily disposed of at advanced rates; indeed, all kinds were rather dearer. The supply of sheep was also considerably less, and therefore trade was more active, but it was exceedingly difficult to obtain much higher prices. Lambs and calves were selling about the same as on Friday. From Germany and Holland there were 1,851 beasts, 6,140 sheep, 200 calves, and 15 pigs; Scotland, 40 beasts, and 2,500 from the Northern and Midland Counties.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

BEVERLEY.—The fortnight market was held on Wednesday. Large show of sheep, which went off slowly at declining prices.

DEBENT SMITHFIELD, Sept. 26.—There was a better supply of fat beasts to-day, and in good request, the attendance of buyers also being numerous, but no alteration of price. The pens were well filled with sheep and lambs. The supply of fat pigs was large. Beef made 5½d. to 6d.; mutton, 6d. to 7d.; lamb, 7d.; veal, 7d. to 7½d. per lb.; pigs, 9s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 6s. 6d. per stone, commencing Aug. 21. Hides, young, 85 and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 85, 3½d.; old cows, all weights, 3d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10lb. and under, 4d.; above 10 and under 16, 4½d.; above 16, 3½d.; all cut calf skins, 4½d. less.

EAST RIMINO, YORKSHIRE.—The great annual sheep fair for this district took place Monday, at Market Weighton. The quantity of sheep offered for sale was estimated to be about 30,000. The market was dull. The cattle fair was held on the Saturday previous. Scarcely anything was done.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 25.—A fair demand was experienced at this morning's market for cattle, and all brought forward were sold at prices a shade higher than last week. First-class sheep were in good demand, but middling and inferior a slow sale. Beef, 5d. to 6½d.; mutton, 5½d. to 7d.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY, Sept. 25.—There was a fair display of samples of wheat upon the Essex and Kent stands this morning. Picked samples realised the extreme rates of Monday last; but other descriptions were dull sale, at that day's quotations. Foreign wheat sold on much the same terms as before. American flour could scarcely be bought so well as last week. Barley must be noted as dearer. Oats were in good request, and 6d. to 1s. dearer than on Monday last. Beans and peas supported the currency of this day's market. The exports of wheat and flour last week exceeded the imports.

FRIDAY.—The receipts of wheat this week have been moderate, and the only arrival of foreign flour is one of 50 sacks. The wheat trade was steady this morning, and Monday's rates were rather exceeded upon choice qualities of old foreign wheat and barrel-flour. Barley was in fair request, and fully as dear. The finer descriptions of oats brought rather more money than earlier in the week. Beans and peas were unchanged in value.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

BIRMINGHAM, September 28.—At this day's market there was again a large supply of wheat from the farmers, which was taken off at the currency of this day week. Barley and beans both held for an advance of 1s. to 2s. per quarter. Oats sold slowly.

IREWICK, September 26.—We observed more wheat at market to-day, the condition being excellent, and a demand existing for export to the Continent, the trade ruled not only firm, but an advance on last week's rates of 1s. to 2s. per quarter was fully established. The increase to the supply of barley was but little; some malsters are about to commence steeping, that a further advance of 1s. and 2s. per quarter had to be paid to the grower. Beans and peas in very short supply, and held for more money. We quote prices to the growers: wheat, red, 52s. to 58s.; white, 58s. to 64s.; barley, malting, 28s. to 31s.; grinding, 26s. to 28s.; beans, 38s. to 42s.; peas, 36s. to 37s. Averages for the week ending Sept. 23: wheat, 96s. 6d. at 52s. 7d.; barley, 33 qrs. at 26s.; peas, 14 qrs. at 35s. 11d.

SUNDERLAND, September 23.—Harvest being all finished, the farmers are now bringing their supplies freely to market; the quality of the new wheat is very good, and meets with a quick sale. From the eager manner in which our principal farmers are purchasing, there is every prospect of a further heavy rise in the prices. A small parcel of barley was offered for sale, which was sold at 42s. Flour meets with a ready sale. Wheat, white, 60s. to 64s.; red, 55s. to 58s.; barley, 42s. to 44s.; oats, 30s. to 34s.; flour, 40s.

HOPS.

BOBROW, Sept. 29.—Messrs. Pattenden and Smith report that the market is advancing, and duty declining.

FOREIGN.

MEDITERRANEAN.—The following telegraphic despatch has been received here:—"Genoa, September 21.—The commercial community is reminded by a memorandum of the Sublime Porte of the 4th inst., that the export of corn after the gathering of the harvest is subject to the regulations till now in force. The sanitary direction contradicts the report of the breaking out of the yellow fever on board the American steam-frigate Serrano, in the Gulf of Spezia."

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."

OUR SAILOR KING.

THE Racing Season may be said to have fallen far into the "sere and yellow leaf" when the advent of the Second October is at hand. The brief lapse of a fortnight will then bring us to the Houghton Meeting, which, ten years ago, if we except an addendum of a small affair at Worcester that followed closely on its heels, was wont to terminate the sport of the year. But the times are changed, and now, after the great, final gathering on Newmarket Heath, we have several meetings of no little importance that carry us on to the end of November. Beginning in February, the season may fairly be stated to range over no less than ten months. Steeple-chasing then steps in to occupy some weeks of the intervening space. And, when we take into account the large sums of money that are given by the public, in almost every locality, to enrich the value of the various stakes, the proof is undeniable that the old attachment of the English people for horse-racing is greatly on the increase. We hail the fact with pleasure, and would fain see our national sport rise each year in estimation. The press has the power to save it from reproach by at once denouncing all attempts at unfair play, and we may yet behold "The Turf" take rank among the best of our institutions.

Chester, not content with holding the best and most popular of Spring Meetings, is making rapid strides in the advancement of its October racing. But with spirited and judicious management what may not be effected! The Short's Handicap afforded another opportunity of successful display for the clever two-yr-old Amy. Comfort was backed with some spirit, but the race was never in doubt. Horatio showed considerable improvement; but the same cannot be said of the Cheshire Marquis, who brought up the rear. The name of this colt is anything but a compliment to the noble owner of Eaton Hall, whose princely residence is so near to the ancient city. For the Mostyn Stakes, Orson was rude enough to upset a "good thing" by defeating Mrs. Rigby by a head. The favourite started with the odds 5 to 2 on her. Old Noll, who at one time had some money thrown away on him for the Derby, finished a bad third. The Tradesman's Welter Cup was won by Defiance, who, after giving his jockey anything but a comfortable ride, in consequence of the stirrup leathers giving way, came in first by an easy two lengths. During the latter part of the race the winner was unmanageable, and, on return to scale, charges were made against him by the riders of Caliph and Milkboy, but which were over-ruled by the gentleman who, in the absence of the stewards, heard the evidence. The owner of Caliph, however, entered a protest against the decision of the referee. Charges of jostling and crossing have been rather frequent of late, and should be avoided, unless imperatively called for. The Maid of Cadiz, having all the best of the weight, won the Nursery Stakes as she liked. They made Enlogist the favourite for the Innkeepers' Plate over the Grosvenor-course, who started at 5 to 4 on him; but there are not many horses that can give a moderate three-yr-old at this season 34lb for the year, and the son of Eulogy is certainly not of the number. Gruyère, notwithstanding her foreign appellation, found herself quite at home, in a district so famous for its cheese. The Handicap Sweepstakes for two-yr-olds proved an easy conquest for General Picton, who was immediately claimed for the conditional £100, and goes into Mr. E. R. Clark's stable. Lady Palmerston justified the confidence of her friends by winning the Wynnstay Handicap with ease. The principal feature, the Chester Handicap, proved a good slice of luck for the fielders. Little David was the "pet," but 8st 2lb is rather more weight than he can conveniently manage. Jetty Treffz gave token of her Melbourne blood, and won with some pounds in hand. A Plate of 50 sovs, and a Selling Stake, which afforded scope for distinction to Young Hack and Louisa, brought this agreeable reunion to a close.

Kelso has witnessed a change of tactics on the part of Lady Vernon. To carry off a brace of cups in anything like respectable company is a notable performance.

The Yorkshire Union Hunt Club and Wrexham Meetings followed on Thursday and Friday. The York and Ainsty Handicap was placed to the honour of the King of Trumps, who can run amazingly well when so inclined.

The Newmarket Second October will monopolise the attention of the turfite during the forthcoming week. That the meeting will excite interest and secure a numerous attendance cannot be doubted, but we may scarcely hope to see it reach the success of some that have gone before.

The Cesarewitch is of course the feature of the Meeting. On the merits of the Handicap we have on more than one occasion expressed an opinion. The class of the animals engaged, with a few exceptions, is of the moderate order; and, as several horses are in the same stable, we can scarcely look for a large field.

Muscovite is still the favourite, though closely pressed by Rattle and D. O. Mr. Greville's horse ought this time to have a good chance of acquiring renown, but we must acknowledge that we are by no means sanguine of his success.

The appearance of Graculus Esuriens is anxiously looked forward to, and should he strip for the Clearwell, his victory must be reduced to the easiest certainty, or farewell to his position for the Derby.

Kingston is likely to retain the honour of the "Whip," and that, to all appearance, without the necessity of a struggle. As this trophy of bygone days may be again challenged for on Monday or Tuesday, we should like to see the gauntlet thrown down for the stout Rataplan.

A large part of Lord Exeter's stud is to be brought to the hammer on Thursday; to be followed by another sale in the Houghton week of yearlings from Burghley. The retirement of Lord Exeter from the turf will occasion a void that will not soon be filled up.

THE NEWMARKET AUTUMN HANDICAPS.

THE CESAREWITCH.—(Concluded.)

Having last week disposed of a multitude of necessitous statistical matter connected with the first of the autumn handicap tournaments on the Heath, we will, prior to discussing the probable issue of the anxiously-awaited tussle, and by way of completing the chain of analysis, as well as to enable the reader to form an opinion of his own, irrespective of ours, give a carefully compiled list of the actual weights either given or received by each acceptor.

Rataplan gives a stone to Adine, 16lb to Knight of St. George, 17lb to Hungerford, 18lb each to Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 20lb to Balrownie, 22lb to Omoo, 23lb to Indian Warrior, 26lb to Rabgill, 27lb to Koh-i-noor, 28lb each to Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 30lb to Domino, 31lb to Cobnut, 32lb to Middlesex, 33lb to Prime Minister, 34lb to Ammonia, 34lb to Exact, 35lb to Nancy, 35lb to Ethelwolf, 36lb to Bracken, 37lb to Black Doctor, 37lb to Mrs. Birch, 39lb to Radcliffe Hero, 39lb to Cabin Boy, 40lb to Amalgamation, 42lb to El Dorado, 42lb to Ptolemy, 44lb to La Belle, 44lb to The Jealous One, 45lb to Phæton, 46lb to Eva, 46lb to Brown Brandy, 46lb to St. Clare, 47lb to Candlewick, 47lb to Calamus, 48lb to Kidnapper, 49lb to Burlington, 51lb to Poodle, 51lb to Diana, 52lb to Star of Surrey, 52lb to Tros, 52lb to D. Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, each receive 18lb from Rataplan, 2lb from Adine, 2lb from Knight of St. George, 2lb from Hungerford; giving 2lb to Balrownie, 4lb to Omoo, 5lb to Indian Warrior, 8lb to Rabgill, 9lb to Koh-i-noor, 10lb to Joe Miller, 10lb to Scythian, 10lb to Scherz, 10lb to Eulogist, 12lb to Domino, 13lb to Cobnut, 14lb to Middlesex, 15lb to Prime Minister, 16lb to Ammonia, 16lb to Exact, 17lb to Nancy, 17lb to Ethelwolf, 18lb to Bracken, 19lb to Black Doctor, 19lb to Mrs. Birch, 21lb to Radcliffe Hero, 21lb to Cabin Boy, 22lb to Amalgamation, 24lb to El Dorado, 24lb to Ptolemy, 26lb to La Belle, 26lb to Jealous One, 27lb to Phæton, 28lb to Eva, 29lb to Brown Brandy, 29lb to St. Clare, 29lb to Candlewick, 29lb to Calamus, 30lb to Kidnapper, 31lb to Burlington, 33lb to Poodle, 33lb to Diana, 34lb to Star of Surrey, 34lb to Tros, 34lb to D. O., 35lb to Stiletto, 38lb to Barrel, 38lb to Naomi, 40lb to Game Lad, 40lb to The Medal, 47lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 52lb to Rodomeli.

Balrownie receives 20lb from Rataplan, 6lb from Adine, 4lb from Knight of St. George, 3lb from Hungerford, and 2lb each from Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee; but gives 2lb to Omoo, 3lb to Indian Warrior, 6lb to Rabgill, 7lb to Koh-i-noor, 8lb each to Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 10lb to Domino, 11lb to Cobnut, 12lb to Middlesex, 13lb to Prime Minister, 14lb each to Ammonia and Exact, 15lb each to Nancy and Ethelwolf, 16lb to Bracken, 17lb each to Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 19lb each to Radcliffe Hero and Cabin Boy, 20lb to Amalgamation, 22lb to El Dorado and Ptolemy, 24lb each to La Belle and Jealous One, 25lb to Phæton, 26lb each to Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 27lb each to Candlewick and Calamus, 28lb to Kidnapper, 29lb to Burlington, 31lb each to Poodle and Diana, 32lb each to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 34lb to Stiletto, 36lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 38lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 45lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 50lb to Rodomeli.

Omoo receives exactly 2lb from Rataplan, Adine, Knight of St. George, Hungerford, Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, than Balrownie does, consequently has 2lb less to give to the remainder of the acceptors.

Indian Warrior receives 23lb from Rataplan, 9lb from Adine, 7lb Knight of St. George, 6lb Hungerford, 5lb each from Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 3lb from Balrownie, and 1lb from Omoo; giving 3lb to Rabgill, 4lb to Koh-i-noor, 5lb each to Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 7lb to Domino, 8lb to Cobnut, 9lb to Middlesex, 10lb to Prime Minister, 11lb each to Ammonia and Exact, 12lb each to Nancy and Ethelwolf, 13lb to Bracken, 14lb each to Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 16lb each to Radcliffe Hero and Cabin Boy, 17lb to Amalgamation, 19lb each to El Dorado and Ptolemy, 21lb each to La Belle and The Jealous One, 22lb to Phæton, 23lb each to Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 24lb each to Calamus and Candlewick, 25lb to Kidnapper, 26lb to Burlington, 28lb each to Poodle and Diana, 29lb each to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 31lb to Stiletto, 33lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 35lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 42lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 47lb to Rodomeli.

Rabgill receives 3lb more from Rataplan, Adine, Knight of St. George, Hungerford, Muscovite, Rattle, Typee, Balrownie, and Omoo than does the Indian Warrior, consequently has to allow 3lb less than him to those who are lower in the scale.

Upon the same principle Koh-i-noor is allowed 1lb more than Rabgill, and has to concede a pound the less.

Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist each receive 28lb from Rataplan, a stone from Adine, 12lb from Knight of St. George, 11lb from Hungerford, 10lb each from Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 8lb from Balrownie, 6lb from Omoo, 5lb from Indian Warrior, 2lb from Rabgill, and 1lb from Koh-i-noor; giving 2lb to Domino, 3lb to Cobnut, 4lb to Middlesex, 5lb to Prime Minister, 6lb each to Ammonia and Exact, 7lb each to Nancy and Ethelwolf, 8lb to Bracken, 9lb each to Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 11lb each to Radcliffe Hero and Cabin Boy, 12lb to Amalgamation, 14lb each to El Dorado and Ptolemy, 16lb each to La Belle and The Jealous One, 17lb to Phæton, 18lb each to Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 19lb each to Candlewick and Calamus, 20lb to Kidnapper, 21lb to Burlington, 23lb each to Poodle and Diana, 24lb to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 26lb to Stiletto, 28lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 30lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 37lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 42lb to Rodomeli.

Domino receives 2lb, Cobnut 3lb, Middlesex 4lb, and Prime Minister 5lb more from the dozen top weights than do Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, therefore have to allow two, three, four, and five pounds less, respectively to their followers in the list.

Ammonia and Exact are allowed 34lb by Rataplan, 20lb by Adine, 18lb by Knight of St. George, 17lb by Hungerford, 16lb each by Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 14lb by Balrownie, 12lb by Omoo, 11lb by Indian Warrior, 8lb by Rabgill, 7lb by Koh-i-noor, 6lb each by Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 4lb by Domino, 3lb by Cobnut, 2lb by Middlesex, and 1lb by the Prime Minister; and concede 1lb each to Nancy and Ethelwolf, 2lb to Bracken, 3lb each to Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 5lb each to Radcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy, 6lb to Amalgamation, 8lb each to Ptolemy and El Dorado, 10lb each to La Belle and The Jealous One, 11lb to Phæton, 12lb each to Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 13lb each to Candlewick and Calamus, 14lb to Kidnapper, 17lb each to Poodle and Diana, 18lb each to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 20lb to Stiletto, 22lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 24lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 31lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 36lb to Rodomeli.

Ethelwolf and Nancy receive 35lb from Rataplan, 21lb from Adine, 19lb from Knight of St. George, 18lb from Hungerford, 17lb each from Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 15lb from Balrownie, 13lb from Omoo, 11lb from Indian Warrior, 9lb from Rabgill, 8lb from Koh-i-noor, 7lb each from Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 5lb from Domino, 4lb from Cobnut, 3lb from Middlesex, 2lb from the Prime Minister, and 1lb each from Ammonia and Exact; giving 1lb to Bracken, 2lb each to Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 4lb each to Radcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy, 5lb to Amalgamation, 7lb each to El Dorado and Ptolemy, 9lb each to La Belle and The Jealous One, 10lb to Phæton, 11lb each to Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 12lb each to Candlewick and Calamus, 13lb to Kidnapper, 14lb to Burlington, 16lb each to Poodle and Diana, 17lb each to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 19lb to Stiletto, 21lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 23lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 30lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 35lb to Rodomeli.

Bracken gets 1lb more from the twenty-two first horses in the list, than do Nancy and Ethelwolf, and has that pound less than them to allow to the remainder.

Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch have 2lb more conceded to them than Bracken, and consequently have 2lb less to give to the twenty-seven who succeed them, in the acceptance array.

Radcliffe Hero and Cabin Boy receive 30lb from Rataplan, 25lb from Adine, 23lb from Knight of St. George, 22lb from Hungerford, 21lb each from Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 19lb from Balrownie, 17lb from Omoo, 16lb from Indian Warrior, 13lb from Rabgill, 12lb from Koh-i-noor, 11lb each from Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 9lb from Domino, 8lb from Cobnut, 7lb from Middlesex, 6lb from Prime Minister, 5lb each from Ammonia and Exact, 4lb each from Nancy and Ethelwolf, 3lb from Bracken, and 2lb each from Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch; giving Amalgamation 1lb, to El Dorado and Ptolemy 3lb each, La Belle and The Jealous One 5lb each, 6lb to Phæton, 7lb each to Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 8lb each to Candlewick and Calamus, 9lb to Kidnapper, 10lb to Burlington, 12lb each to Poodle and Diana, 13lb each to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 15lb to Stiletto, 17lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 19lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 26lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 31lb to Rodomeli.

Amalgamation receives 1lb more than Radcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy, and allots 1lb the less.

El Dorado and Ptolemy also receive 3lb more than Radcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy; and have to concede 3lb less to their twenty-two successors.

La Belle and The Jealous One are allowed 44lb by Rataplan, 30lb by Adine, 28lb by Knight of St. George, 27lb by Hungerford, 26lb each by Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 24lb by Balrownie, 22lb by Omoo, 21lb by Indian Warrior, 18lb by Rabgill, 17lb by Koh-i-noor, 16lb each by Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 14lb by Domino, 13lb by Cobnut, 12lb by Middlesex, 11lb by Prime Minister, 10lb each by Ammonia and Exact, 9lb each by Nancy and Ethelwolf, 8lb by Bracken, 7lb each by Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 5lb each by Radcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy, 4lb by Amalgamation, and 2lb each by El Dorado and Ptolemy; giving 1lb to Phæton, 2lb each to Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 3lb each to Candlewick and Calamus, 4lb to Kidnapper, 5lb to Burlington, 7lb each to Poodle and Diana, 8lb each to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 10lb to Stiletto, 12lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 14lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 21lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 26lb to Rodomeli.

Phæton receives 1lb more than La Belle and The Jealous One, and has 1lb less than them to give away.

Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare have each 2lb more conceded to them than either La Belle, or The Jealous One; and have also that 3lb each less to allow.

Calamus and Candlewick receive 47lb each from Rataplan, 33lb from Adine, 31lb from Knight of St. George, 30lb from Hungerford, 29lb each from Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 27lb from Balrownie, 25lb from Omoo, 24lb from Indian Warrior, 21lb from Rabgill, 20lb from Koh-i-noor, 19lb each from Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 17lb from Domino, 16lb from Cobnut, 15lb from Middlesex, 14lb from Prime Minister, 13lb each from Ammonia and Exact, 12lb each from Nancy and Ethelwolf, 11lb from Bracken, 10lb each from Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 8lb each from Radcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy, 7lb from Amalgamation, 5lb each from El Dorado and Ptolemy, 3lb each from La Belle and The Jealous One, 2lb from Phæton, and 1lb each from Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare; giving 1lb to Kidnapper, 2lb to Burlington, 4lb each to Poodle and Diana, 5lb each to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 7lb to Stiletto, 9lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 11lb to Game Lad and The Medal, 18lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 23lb to Rodomeli.

Kidnapper gets 1lb more allowed him, and Burlington 2lb, than either Candlewick and Calamus; and have to allow 1lb and 2lb, respectively, less than that complement do.

Poodle and Diana receive 51lb each from Rataplan, 37lb from Adine, 35lb Knight of St. George, 34lb Hungerford, 33lb each Muscovite, Rattle and Typee, 31lb Balrownie, 29lb Omoo, 28lb Indian Warrior, 25lb Rabgill, 24lb Koh-i-noor, 23lb each Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 21lb Domino, 20lb Cobnut, 19lb Middlesex, 18lb Prime Minister, 17lb each Ammonia and Exact, 16lb each Nancy and Ethelwolf, 15lb Bracken, 14lb each Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 12lb each Radcliffe Hero and Cabin Boy, 11lb Amalgamation, 9lb each El Dorado and Ptolemy, 7lb each La Belle and The Jealous One, 6lb Phæton, 5lb each Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 4lb each Candlewick and Calamus, 3lb Kidnapper, and 2lb from Burlington; giving 1lb each to Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 3lb to Stiletto, 5lb each to Barrel and Naomi, 7lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 14lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 19lb to Rodomeli.

Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., receive 1lb each more than do Poodle and Diana; and have that much less weight to give away than the latter complement have.

Stiletto gets 3lb additional to Poodle and Diana, and concedes 3lb less than they do to the last half dozen on the acceptance roll.

Barrel and the "dark" Naomi receive 56lb from Rataplan, 42lb from Adine, 40lb from Knight of St. George, 39lb from Hungerford, 38lb each from Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 36lb from Balrownie, 34lb from Omoo, 33lb from Indian Warrior, 30lb from Rabgill, 29lb from Koh-i-noor, 28lb each from Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 26lb from Domino, 25lb from Cobnut, 24lb from Middlesex, 23lb from Prime Minister, 22lb each from Ammonia and Exact, 21lb each from Nancy and Ethelwolf, 20lb from Bracken, 19lb each from Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 17lb each from Radcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy, 16lb from Amalgamation, 14lb each from El Dorado and Ptolemy, 12lb each from La Belle and The Jealous One, 11lb from Phæton, 10lb each from Eva, Brown Brandy and St. Clare, 9lb each from Candlewick and Calamus, 8lb from Kidnapper, 7lb from Burlington, 5lb each from Poodle and Diana, 4lb each from Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., and 2lb from Stiletto; giving 2lb each to Game Lad and The Medal, 9lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 14lb to Rodomeli.

Game Lad and The Medal receive 2lb each more than Barrel and Naomi; and have to concede 7lb to Lincoln's Inn, and 12lb to Rodomeli.

Lincoln's Inn is allowed 65lb by Rataplan, 51lb by Adine, 49lb by Knight of St. George, 48lb by Hungerford, 47lb each by Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 45lb by Balrownie, 43lb by Omoo, 42lb by Indian Warrior, 39lb by Rabgill, 38lb by Koh-i-noor, 37lb each by Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 35lb by Domino, 34lb by Cobnut, 33lb by Middlesex, 32lb by Prime Minister, 31lb each by Ammonia and Exact, 30lb each by Nancy and Ethelwolf, 29lb by Bracken, 28lb each by Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 26lb each by Radcliffe Hero, and Cabin Boy, 25lb by Amalgamation, 23lb each by El Dorado and Ptolemy, 21lb each by La Belle and The Jealous One, 20lb by Phæton, 19lb each by Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 18lb each by Candlewick and Calamus, 17lb by Kidnapper, 16lb by Burlington, 14lb each by Poodle and Diana, 13lb each by Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 11lb by Stiletto, 9lb each by Barrel and Naomi, and 7lb each by Game Lad and The Medal; giving Rodomeli 5lb.

Rodomeli gets 70lb from Rataplan, 56lb from Adine, 54lb from Knight of St. George, 53lb from Hungerford, 52lb each from Muscovite, Rattle, and Typee, 50lb from Balrownie, 48lb from Omoo, 47lb from Indian Warrior, 44lb from Rahgill, 43lb from Koh-i-noor, 42lb each from Joe Miller, Scythian, Scherz, and Eulogist, 40lb from Domino, 39lb from Cobnut, 38lb from Middlesex, 37lb from Prime Minister, 36lb each from Ammonia and Exact, 35lb each from Nancy and Ethelwolf, 34lb from Bracken, 33lb each from Black Doctor and Mrs. Birch, 31lb each from Radcliffe Hero and Cabin Boy, 30lb from Amalgamation, 28lb each from El Dorado and Ptolemy, 26lb each from La Belle and The Jealous One, 25lb from Pheton, 24lb each from Eva, Brown Brandy, and St. Clare, 23lb each from Candlewick and Calamus, 22lb from Kidnapper, 21lb from Burlington, 19lb each from Poodle and Diana, 18lb each from Star of Surrey, Tros, and D. O., 16lb from Stiletto, 14lb each from Barrel and Naomi, 12lb each from Game Lad and The Medal, and 5lb from Lincoln's Inn.

The above will enable the reader to arrive at a conclusion of his own touching the merits of each candidate; but to those who have enlisted under the Pythos banner, the subjoined disinterested criticism and analysis of the weights may not altogether prove unacceptable.

Rataplan heads the array of fifty-four acceptors, with the steady weight of 9st 7lb; and, notwithstanding the heavy concessions he is called upon to make, we cannot but think the game brother to Stockwell, despite the extraordinary amount of work he has gone through this season—triumphing, too, in seventeen races out of twenty-eight, at all distances and weights—will prove more troublesome in the finale than is generally anticipated. Adine has been nibbled at within the last few days, notwithstanding the prestige of her companion; and we shall not be at all surprised to see her selected one to do battle for the Clerk of the Council, after all. Knight of St. George, penalised 12lbs, is out of the question. He can neither get the distance or give the weight required; therefore is not likely to repeat the dose administered by his countrymen, and Leger predecessors, on two consecutive occasions, viz., by Faugh-a-Ballagh and The Baron, in 1844-45. Muscovite has been a great favourite, and carries an immense stake; but we seldom see the "confidence" favourites win. Their successes are, "like angel's visits, few and far between;" and there are more unlucky things than the downfall of Muscovite in the market, if not in the trust itself. He is, however, a fine, powerful animal, and has only been out twice this season, running second to the clipping Virago for the Great Metropolitan (having, though, with one or two exceptions, a very bad lot of horses behind him), and beating Carnaca, in a match over the Knavesmere. His position at "The Corner" is entirely attributable to reports of recent private performances. Rattle has come with a very great rush, and is in high esteem, among the Manchester men in particular. At Chester, too, he was in prominent demand, early this week, and bids fair to rival the Russian don in the premiership. We have seen him but once in public this season, when he ran a respectable third, on the dual swards of Sussex, to Cat's-paw and Knight of St. George, giving them 10lb and 11lb, in the mile and a quarter spin for the Chesterfield Cup. We question his staying powers, and should certainly rather trust him for the Cambridgeshire, for which race also he is in repute. Typee has proved herself a good mare, combining speed with endurance; but, like the patched-up Omoo, she is under "suspicion," if not actually "amiss." Balrownie has suddenly retreated; the "why and the wherefore" of such a movement deponent knoweth not, at the time of writing. The repeated fruitless offers of 100 to 1, however, is "confirmation, strong as holy writ," that the reasons are sound; and, we presume, that something irretrievable is up with him. Mr. Howard has had an extraordinary strong run of good prizes from the wheel of fortune, and can afford now to step aside for less fortunate adventurers. Indian Warrior, much fancied in the north, is not unlikely to be the only representative from Longstaff's establishment. He is a good horse, but a very unlucky one, and has thrice run second this campaign. His long rest, doubtless, will benefit him materially, and we have every reason to believe that he is in excellent form again. Rahgill, whom Mr. Parr purchased on the strength of his Mid-Lothian finish, is not, in our humble opinion, class sufficiently good enough; and his Doncaster running induces us to fancy that he will not be very fond of the Cesarewitch length, even if he is sent, which we doubt. Koh-i-noor is a speedy animal, and prefers a "sprint" to a distance. Joe Miller must greatly mend his Castle Irwell form to have the semblance of hope to reap honours in the struggle of Wednesday next; as even Rataplan has him as safe as a convict at the hulks. Scythian, much improved as he is since he first reached Mitchell-grove, must yield to stable companions. Scherz arrived from Germany a short time back, but he has few admirers on the heath. We cannot enrol ourselves among the foreigner's adherents, either; and opino he will have but scanty support on the day. Eulogist, another of Longstaff's team, will be an absentee, we should think. Cobnut must surely be better than Domino at the weight; and, though the Indian Warrior gave him quite an 8lb beating on the Roodee, still we cannot look upon his subsequent easy conquest over Sittingbourne and Filbert, for the Jockey Club Plate, over the trying B.C., without having a "lingering affection" for the son of Nutwith and Glenara. Middlesex cannot be within 15lb of Hungerford. The Prime Minister has been occasionally backed at a long shot, but we have yet to be convinced that he can travel the Cesarewitch distance in the company he will have to meet next week. Despite her Northallerton defeat, Ammonia, a very uncertain mare, finds support; and those who have entrusted her with a heavy stake will do well to get out of it whilst there is a chance of hedging, for La Belle, at 5lb less weight, is sure to beat her again. Sam Rogers claimed Exact for 500 sovs after her Queen's Plate win at Hampton, the only one this season; although she is fancied in certain quarters we have no penchant for her ourselves, considering that Rataplan and Poodle both have her quite safe, if the Somersetshire finale be any criterion, as she now meets them upon 6lb worse terms than when they bowled her over on the heights of Lansdowne. Nancy is a perfect "will-o'-the-wisp;" but if ever she had, or is to have, a chance, she has surely received it in this instance. John Osborne is a clever Mentor, but we doubt his wizard power of transforming her to the old form. Our firm impression is, her running has irretrievably altered for the worse. If there be any truth in public running, and the horse be in health and condition, Ethelwolf looks very "rosy" at 7st; nevertheless, up to the time of our writing this (Wednesday), there has been no demonstration made in his favour. We believe him to be more fit than he was in the Knavesmere race; and why Bracken should be backed with such fervour at 25 to 1, and he discarded, we are at a loss to understand, inasmuch as Bracken was beaten easily by him at Ascot, where there was 16lb between them, and now they are brought into collision at a pound only. If, therefore, the little northern horse, chained twelvemonths back for 300 gs., is worth such repeated investments, at what price ought the Newmarket one to be at? Black Doctor has lost all his running, still is not overburdened at the present impost. Mrs. Birch is in the same stable as Cabin Boy and Radcliffe Hero. The two former appear hopeless; but we shall err very greatly if the latter does not figure conspicuously, for there are a combination of little circumstances to lead us to conclude that he has been purposely saved to "break a lance" in the Cesarewitch joust. Tom Dawson, who has been sadly down on his luck, will have to discard Amalgamation this journey; but he has a very frail reed to cling to, in either the oft-defeated Jealous One or La Belle. His only hope—if there really is any for him—must be in the brother to Italian, Stiletto. El Dorado and Burlington are in John Scott's establishment. We doubt the probability of starting the former; and the latter looks more fitted for a spin on the T.Y.C. than to face this tedious length over the famed heath. Ptolemy, who seems in bad odour, is also more suited for a half-mile race. Pheton, though he cannot have the remotest prospect of success, will sport the narrow blue and white stripes, we presume. He has sadly belied the two-year-old promise entertained by his noble owner, who, it will be remembered, prior to the Criterion, backed him to win close upon £40,000 by the Epsom encounter, 1,000 to 15 having been taken thirty-nine times. Eva, St. Clair, and Candlewick, belong to Wadlow's quintette of nominations. The old mare will like the course, and, undoubtedly, has a fair outside chance. Calamus is in considerable force, and has a host of confident partisans, among whom are many good judges, who seldom make a mistake. He disappointed a great number of staunch friends by his ebullition of temper on the Doncaster moor; and the Leger victor has now to concede 31lb to him, which the Irishman will find beyond his power, or Scythian, to beat him at the 9lb, either. It was a wise step that 600 sovs claim after his A.F. spin at the Craven meeting. Kidnapper and Diana meet on the same terms as they did when the mare beat him for place in the Lowes Handicap; and the latter must again succumb to Adine, as they are now at a pound less than the Goodwood impost. Brown Brandy, too, will have to lower his colours once more to Adine, on the present terms. Star of Surrey, if we were convinced that he was all right again, and fit, should be our unconditional champion for the tourney; but, in the absence of such knowledge, we are compelled to look elsewhere for our selected one. The lop-eared Poodle has been most favourably treated by the handicapper. A five-yr-old with 6st 12lb! Finishing third to Rataplan at 24lb for the Somersetshire, he has now to receive 51lb from him, being an additional 27lb. He was in great demand at Tattersall's on Monday last, in good health, has done plenty of work, and is literally turned loose. Tros is a lazy animal, and requires more riding than any of our light weights can give him. He, also, meets Adine on the Sussex terms. D. O. (late Earl of Derby) must mend his Radcliffe running with Typee, at 32lb, to turn the tables upon her at only two pounds more. That improvement is said to have been effected since then; and the takers of the odds have been very eager, whenever they have had the opportunity of backing him; and a large sum has been already laid out at 15 and 16 to 1. Stiletto, belonging to that esteemed turf-partisan, Mr. Meiklam, whom we are about to lose, owing to ill-health, has had a long rest, not having been out since the summer gathering on the banks of the Irwell. Barrel has lost all of his two-yr-old beauty, and is grown into quite a hackney-looking thing. Still, he has some wear and tear, as well as speed, about him. To our thinking, he is the most dangerous of the three-yr-old team. Naomi, notwithstanding that she has been so heavily engaged, has not been out since last campaign; and Game Lad has been doing the extensive in the "leather-flapping" department this season, but has only won once out of upwards of a score of attempts. The Medal is at Wadlow's, and more likely to be eating her corn at Stanton than troubling Mr. Hibbard next week. Lincoln's Inn is also a most probable absentee. There has been a strong disposition evinced lately to back Rodomeli; but Ethelwolf and Tros, be it borne in mind, beat him a long way for the Great Ebor at 31lb and 10lb, and now they concede 39lb and 18lb. He is the minimum weight of the handicap, 4st 7lb; and, surely, if he was looked upon as having a chance for either the Two Thousand Guineas or the Derby, for which he ran, he ought to repay the stable this essay. We must, however, give the pas to his stable companion; still, if it should yet transpire that they have been put through the mill and the young 'un triumphed, our readers must act accordingly.

Having carefully analysed the weights, and commented on the whole team, in the acceptance list, we will now remark that the "cream" appears to us to comprise:—Rataplan, 9st 7lb; Adine, 9st 7lb; Indian Warrior, 7st 12lb; Cobnut, 7st 4lb; Ethelwolf, 7st; Radcliffe Hero, 6st 10lb; Candlewick, 6st 2lb; Calamus, 6st 2lb; Poodle, 5st 12lb; D. O., 5st 11lb; and Barrel, 5st 11lb. Taking public running as our guide, which, in three cases out of every four, is the safest criterion to go by, we select ADINE, ETHELWOLF, and POODLE as the best trio to furnish the destined wearer of the chaplet, giving the preference to who, should he prove successful, will be the only five-yr-old winner since Cruiskeen swept away the laurels in the maiden essay.

Next week we shall dissect the CAMBRIDGESHIRE STAKES list.

October 3, 1854.

HYMNOPROBIA IN A HORSE.—A correspondent of the Mark-Lane Express, dating from Whetstone, relates the following case:—Six or seven years ago I had a valuable cart-mare bitten by a strange dog. My man was in the chaff-house, and he was aroused by a sudden rearing, plunging, and unusual noise; he immediately entered the stable, and thought he saw a small dog jump out of the manger and leave the stable; he thought this must have frightened the animal as it was dusk. I told him to bring it out to the light, when we observed three or four long scratches or incisions just deep enough to draw blood; an uneasy thought crossed my mind at the moment, but it was soon forgotten, and it was only last week that I was pleasing myself that the mare was improving in condition. On Monday last she appeared to have a sore throat. I sent for the farrier, who administered some remedy, and ordered fomentation, which was very frequently applied. She appeared something better on Tuesday morning, but towards evening became worse, and at last we found it necessary to kill her.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Although there was only a scanty attendance of members, speculation took a rather extensive range, and some of the horses named below were backed with much spirit and confidence.

The Cesarewitch.—During the greater portion of the afternoon Muscovite maintained his position at 11 to 2, taken towards the close, however, 6 to 1 was laid to £50, the layer offering to go on. D. O. would have been backed for some money at 16 to 1, but the odds were not obtainable. At nearly the last moment 15 and 14 to 1 were taken in small sums. 500 to 30 two or three times, and 800 to 50, twice, were taken about Calamus. Balrownie was "in full retreat"—1,000 to 10 was offered against him. Ptolemy also gave way; at the conclusion he was nominally at 500 to 10. 1,000 to 10 was taken about Bracken, and the same odds to some money about Poodle; 22 and 20 to 1 about Indian Warrior. Rattle, a new favourite, was introduced at 25 to 1, and with an effect which quickly advanced him to 20 to 1. He was also backed for the Cambridgeshire at 25 to 1, but the preponderance of favour was clearly on the side of the Cesarewitch. Rodomeli was supported in good quarters at 33 and 30 to 1. 10 to 1 was betted in ponies and fillies against lots of 25 each—the layer, of course, having "the pick."

Cambridgeshire Stakes.—The principal investments were on Early Bird, from 14 to 1 (taken to about £200); he rose to 12 to 1 (taken).

The Derby.—Graculus Esauensis was nominally at 9 to 1. St. Hubert at 11 to 1, 15 to 1 wanted. Oulton, Hildemur, Lord of the Isles, and De Clare received good support at 1,000 to 60 each. 1,000 to 50 was taken about the Cruiser, 1,000 to 25, each, Wild Dayrell and Westminster, 2,000 to 40 Afghan, and 3,000 to 45 colt by Melbourne, out of Fausta.

THURSDAY.

A thin attendance, and only a limited amount of business transacted. The deep disappointment occasioned by the official announcements in the Gazette, just published, relative to the state of affairs in the Crimea, was the chief topic of conversation. It was only during brief pauses that the bets comprised in the following list were made:—

Cesarewitch.—The principal movements for this event were in favour of Rattle and D. O.; separately, at 10 and 9 to 1, and together, at 4 to 1, they were backed for a good deal of money. An attempt was made to shake Muscovite, but at the close 13 to 2 were the highest odds offered. Rodomeli was backed with a degree of confidence at 25 to 1, which leads to the belief that he will, after all, be the trusted one to do battle for his stable. La Belle was supported in good quarters at 1,000 to 30, and 30 to 1; similar odds were taken about Koh-i-noor; 1,000 to 25 Hungerford, and 1,000 to 20 Exact.

Cambridgeshire.—The odds quoted were laid to only small sums. Alenbie had the misfortune to rupture a blood-vessel whilst at exercise last Monday morning, and it is reported that he is dead.

Derby.—9 to 1 was currently offered on the field; 11 to 1 taken in the aggregate to £200 about St. Hubert; 15 to 1 to a third sum about Lord of the Isles, and 1,500 to 100, and 500 to 30 about Rifman; 1,000 to 60 was taken about Oulton, but 17 to 1 was afterwards offered. 2,500 to 50 taken about Afghan. The quotations at the close were as follows:—

13 to 2 agst Muscovite (7 to 1 t)	30 to 1 agst La Belle (t)
9 to 1 — Rattle (t)	50 to 1 — Koh-i-noor (t)
9 to 1 — D. O. (t)	50 to 1 — Cobnut (t)
10 to 1 — Calamus	50 to 1 — Radcliffe Hero (t)
50 to 1 — Barrel (t)	40 to 1 — Hungerford (t)
25 to 1 — Rodomeli (t)	50 to 1 — Exact (t)
25 to 1 — Poodle (t)	50 to 1 — Ethelwolf (t)
25 to 1 — Indian Warrior (t)	400 to 100 — Rattle and D. O. coupled (t)
30 to 1 — Ammonia (t)

Ptolemy was struck out on the 3rd inst, at 9 a.m.

15 to 1 agst The Early Bird (t)	25 to 1 agst Monie Moses (t)
10 to 1 — Rattle (t)

9 to 1 agst Graculus Esauensis (off)	10 to 1 agst Rifman (t)
11 to 1 — St. Hubert (t)	17 to 1 — Oulton (t)
15 to 1 — Lord of the Isles (t)	50 to 1 — Afghan (t)

NOTICE.—The run will be opened on Saturday next.

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

Since Saturday, Muscovite has been very steady for the Cesarewitch at 6 to 1, and a great disposition to back D. O. has shown itself in good quarters, 100 to 6 being the taking price. Barrel, Indian Warrior, and Calamus have also been in tolerable request. Yesterday, although there was a full attendance at the rooms, the taking of Sebastopol was the chief topic of conversation, and many hundreds of pounds will have to change hands should the report of its being taken prove to be correct, large amounts having been wagered that it would not be taken before the expiration of last month—all prices being laid, from 20 to 1 agst, to 3 to 1 on it, being taken in the said time. After the arrival of "Wright's official list" from Tattersall's in the evening, a fair amount of money was invested upon Rattle for the Cesarewitch at 25 and 20 to 1, and, from the eagerness of his backers, we fancy that hundreds to six would have been taken to money had an opportunity presented itself. To-day the rooms were nearly deserted, nearly all the subscribers having left for Chester.

The following quotations are what we consider the current odds at the time of writing:—

Mr. W. H. Scott's Miss Sellon, 3 yrs, 9st 11lb (including 7lb extra), W. Evans.

Betting—5 to 2 agst Caliph, 4 to 1 agst Milk Boy, and 5 to 1 each agst Defiance and Titterstone. On approaching the distance, Caliph, with Milk Boy in close attendance, held the lead, Defiance lying third. About the same time, however, White's stirrup-leathers came out of the lars, and Defiance became unmanageable. Before reaching the winning post, White was twice thrown on the horse's neck; but, despite this mishap, Defiance passed the post first by two lengths. Milk Boy, who was second, being about a length in advance of Caliph, who was third. Professor Buck was fourth; Titterstone fifth. After passing the post, White fell to the ground, but was, fortunately, uninjured.

Defiance got loose, and knocked down a man before he was caught. On returning to saddle, the rider of Caliph lodged an objection against the riders of Milk Boy and Defiance, for driving him nearly upon the rails. Whitehouse, the rider of Milk Boy, also preferred a complaint against Defiance on the same ground. In the absence of the stewards, the case was referred to John Trevor, Esq., who, after hearing evidence, decided that Defiance was entitled to the stakes. Mr. Morris, the owner of Caliph, however, entered a protest against the decision, on the ground that the referee had no authority to act in the matter.

The Chester Nursery Stakes (Handicap) of 5 sors each, with 100 added. For two-yr-olds. The winner of any Handicap after the weights were published 7lb extra. The owner of the second horse to receive £30 out of the stakes. Seven furlongs. 28 subs.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. Roche has advertised for sale his entire stud, which includes The Bedouin, Cavalier, The Dasher, &c., at Dyer's, on Saturday next (this day week).

IMPORTANT TO RACE COMMITTEES.—The following paragraph is to be found amongst the rules and conditions of the Johnstown (County Kilkenny) races, which came off on Monday and Tuesday last. It is a gem in its way:—"Any horse stopping at any hotel, the proprietor not paying £2 10. to the fund, to carry 14lb. extra; such as stop at any other house, the proprietor not paying 1 sov., to carry the like extra weight. Shopkeepers who are in the habit of sending goods to those races, and who have refused subscribing, may expect that their cars or goods will not be admitted into the course." To give an idea how the first clause worked on the nerves of the owners of horses, we may state that exactly six animals, the property of THREE different persons, were brought out to compete for the several events. How the poor shopkeepers got on our correspondent does not inform us; but in all probability, on arriving at the gap, if they refused paying in their quota to the funds, their "cars or goods" were sent to the right-about by those blessed worthies (the race committee), quite regardless of how the "inner man" of the vast multitude present would have fared during the entire day. Hear this, Mr. Dorling, of Kilmoy, and all caterers for sport throughout England and Ireland, and answer is not that the way to fill your coffers, and insure a good entry of horses for the future?

A REMINISCENCE OF OLD COACHING DAYS.—On all the great high roads of England there are some houses that was famous for something. At Hartley-row it used to be stewed carp; at Godalming, a spatchcock; at Sittingbourne, veal cutlets; trout at St. Albans; the sauce to eat it with—good, also, for rump-steaks—at Bedford; mutton and chickens—mutton, however, by too much matrimony—at Burford Bridge; cels at Watford; spiced beef at Grantham; and so on of the rest. "The Castle" at Marlborough was celebrated, I soon found, for what you seldom get in perfection anywhere out of Normandy; a roast capon. The rearing of capons appears to have been practised time out of mind at Marlborough, for Camden tells us that every freeman on his admission to the guild was bound to present the mayor with a couple of greyhounds, two white capons, and a white bull.—Dickens's Household Words.

HARES.—In answer to the enquiry of a correspondent, who asks if "a hare, when hotly pursued by a greyhound, will suddenly tack off and run in a contrary direction," we extract the following from "Blaine's Encyclopedia of Rural Sports":—"A hare generally, it is said, describes a circle in her flight, larger or smaller, according to her strength. . . . Besides running the foil, they frequently make douches, which is going forward to tread the same steps back again, on purpose to confuse their pursuers; and the same manner in which the first double is made they mostly continue, whether long or short."

SAILING MATCHES AND CLUB REGATTAS, &c.

October 7.—Avalon, Pearl, and other yachts of the Royal London Yacht Club, to start from Blackwall Pier at 4 p.m., conveying members to Erith, this being the day for the annual "closing trip" and dinner at the Crown. Blue-eyed Maid, &c., will join company at Blackwall.
October 16.—Sailing Match of the London Model Yacht Club, on the Thames, between the 11ft. boats.

ROYAL VICTORIA YACHT CLUB.—RYDE, Oct. 5

YACHTS CRUISING AND ABOUT THE STATION, &c.—The Novice, A. Arcebreken, Esq.; Wildfire, F. Thynne, Esq.; Aurora, L. M. Thomas, Esq.; Gem, Sir J. B. Atill, Bart.; Vesta, Lord Newborough. The continued fine weather still animates the yachtsmen to keep afloat.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting took place on Wednesday evening. About twenty-five gentlemen sat down to dinner. J. Farmer Bailey, Esq., of the schooner yacht Czarina, with his accustomed liberality, presented a magnificent haunch of venison. About forty members were present at the meeting. The eleven gentlemen (as per circular) were unanimously elected. The chair was at first taken by the worthy treasurer, Captain Wheeler, and afterwards by the gallant commodore, Lord A. Paget, M.P., who was looking admirably well, and in high spirits for the forthcoming campaign. There are already ten more candidates for hallot on Wednesday, November 1.

The following notice of motion, by Harrison Chilton, Esq., of The Belvidere, was given for the November meeting:—"That no shifting hallast, sliding keels, or other machinery, be allowed to be used by yachts sailing in the club matches."

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

The club met on Tuesday, in accordance with the following circular, at Anderton's Hotel, 164, Fleet-street:—

"Sir,—I beg to inform you that the next general monthly meeting will be held on Tuesday, October 3rd, at eight o'clock precisely, when the following gentlemen will be balloted for:—

Name.	Address.	Proposed by.	Sec. by.
Mr. A. Williams	Belgrave-road, Finsbury.	Hon. Sec.—A. Bennett.
Mr. Jos. Hollingsworth, 1, 2 Edgeware-road		Vice-Commodore, E. Gibbins.
Mr. A. F. Jackson	2, Middle Temple-lane.	Vice-Commodore, E. Gibbins.
Mr. Edward Coleman	118, Finchurch-street.	Vice-Commodore, E. Gibbins.

"Notice of motion by Mr. Luxton: 'That in future the club matches intended to be sailed on the Serpentine river do take place much earlier in the season than hitherto.'"

"The day for the closing trip of the season 1854 also will come under notice.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your very obedient servant,

"W. B. CRABY, Hon. Sec."

"September 29th, 1854."

A large number of members were present, when the chair was taken by Commodore Tuckwell at eight o'clock, and Vice-Commodore Williams in the vice-chair. This was the ninety-fifth monthly meeting of the club. The notice of motion by Mr. Luxton was carried, as a recommendation to the Sailing Committee, which has, according to rule, the arrangement of such matters as that in question. It was next RESOLVED,—That the CLOSING TRIP DO TAKE PLACE ON THE 16th OCTOBER, when a trial match for a sweepstakes will be sailed by the second-class yachts, of 12 feet (it is expected that five or six will take their stations), the distance to be from Greenwich to Erith and back. A notice of motion was given by the hon. secretary to the following effect: "That a list of the candidates for admission, and notice of the business intended for the then ensuing club meeting, be printed, about the middle of every month, and forwarded by post, during the current year, to those members (and to them only) who may have furnished the hon. secretary with twelve postage envelopes (with name and address already written thereon), and also subscribed one shilling to the printing fund." In the course of the evening, the commodore, owing to his many other avocations, announced his intention to retire from office at the close of the year; and expressed the hope that no member would, at the next general meeting, again put him in nomination (the meeting in November being the time fixed upon in the Rules for the nomination of officers).

The commodore having soon afterwards vacated the chair, the vice-commodore came up to the head of the table, and songs and toasts, bearing on the British successes in the East, made it somewhat late before the members separated.

ENTRY FOR THE RACE, OCT. 16.

Wasp Flying Cloud Mary Anne.

A fourth yacht is also entered, and at the Sailing Committee Meeting on Monday next, two or three more will be entered, if they can be fitted. The whole of these craft are new.

ROYAL MERSEY YACHT CLUB.

The usual house dinner was provided for the members at the Marine Station on Tuesday evening last, Commodore Littledale presiding, surrounded by several of his officers and a good party of the members. Several of the smaller yachts were cruising about the river, although the larger vessels are being dismantled for the winter months. After her Majesty's health had been drunk with all due honours, the commodore very appropriately introduced that of "The Army and Navy," who, in conjunction with our gallant allies, the French, have so gloriously distinguished themselves in the recent conflicts in the East. Business matters were commenced shortly after eight p.m., and Mr. Charles Woodward was elected into the club. The members separated at a late hour, after spending one of the most pleasing meetings of the year.

MARGATE REGATTA.

This regatta came off on Thursday week. The wind blew a steady breeze from the N.W., which proved all that could be wished for the sailing matches. Upwards of 3,000 persons, says the Dover Chronicle, were on the pier and new landing-place during the day; the fort, and every available place for a view, was crowded; and we may very fairly say, that altogether some 7,000 or 8,000 persons were congregated together. The committee had, through the courtesy of Col. Grant, been able to secure the services of the Dover garrison band. There was not so liberal a display of hunting as we have seen on former occasions. The prizes were displayed in a window of the Duke's Head, and there was a regatta concert and hall in the evening, at the Assembly-rooms, which was well attended. The weather had been very fine, but at about six o'clock, and just as the boats were coming in in the concluding match, the rain poured down in torrents. The committee, after the business of the day, dined together at the Duke's Head, where Mr. Adam served up a most sumptuous repast. The weather fortunately clearing up, the proceedings were adjourned to the Tivoli-gardens, which were crowded, where the prizes were delivered over to the successful competitors. The following is a programme. The first match was between second-class luggers.

The Hazard, Edward Parker	White	1
Pride of the Ocean, J. Twyman	Red	2
Good Intent, J. Malpas	Yellow	3
Tally-Ho, J. Harman	Blue	4

Gentlemen's Match for a pair of silver oars. The following boats started:—Miranda, Queen, Emily, and Alarms. There was a dispute respecting the winner of this match, but it was ultimately agreed by the committee that the silver oars should be awarded to Messrs. Yonug and Neame.

Four-oared Gallies.—First prize, £7; second ditto, £3. 10s. third ditto, £1. 10s.

Jenny Lind, G. Gilbert	Yellow	1
Eleanor, S. Penny	Blue	2
The Coquette, A. Jenkins	Pink	dis

Sailing Match for Service Luggers.—First prize, £12; second ditto, £6; third ditto, £2.

Nelson, J. Knight	Yellow	1
Champion (Haustrate), S. Penny	White	2

Two others started, but were left to finish their course in the dark. This was the crack match of the day, created much interest, and was a well-contested one. The Nelson took the lead at starting, and gallantly kept it throughout the match, though a smaller boat than her antagonist, the Champion, whom she beat by forty seconds.

Sprit-sail Boats.—First prize, £3; second ditto, £2; third ditto, £1; fourth ditto, 10s. 6d. This was contested for in two heats, by the following:—

Sarah, F. Howland	1
Queen, G. Bushell	2
Lively, P. Fox	3
Emily, S. Davies	4

The Ladies' Cup was won by — Nottidge, Esq.

Six-oared Gallies.—First prize, £10; second ditto, £5; third ditto, £2. This was rowed for in two heats by the following:—

Ocean, Henry Rowe	1
Mary Nelson, J. Cooke	2
Victory, John Gilbert	3

SIDMOUTH REGATTA.

The annual regatta took place here on Monday week. The day originally fixed was the previous Wednesday, but owing to various causes it was postponed. In this instance the old proverb, that "delays are dangerous," was not verified, inasmuch as the weather on Monday was delightfully fine, and the town was filled with visitors. Another circumstance also contributed to add to the general gaiety. The last day for the inspection, for the present season, of Kuowle Cottage, the property of T. L. Fish, Esq., was on Monday, and there was in consequence a large accession of visitors. In fact, vehicles of every description continued to arrive from Exeter and other places during the whole of the early part of the day. It is calculated that upwards of 400 or 500 persons visited Knowle Cottage alone, while there was of course a much larger number collected on the beach. The season of the year, it is true, is somewhat advanced for holding regattas, but the inhabitants of Sidmouth and the surrounding neighbourhood appeared determined to keep up the occasion as a holiday. It was fully expected that the steamer from Torquay would have brought a large party from that fashionable watering-place, but the people of Sidmouth were disappointed, as the steamer did not make its appearance during the day. This did not, however, damp their spirits or their energies. The loveliness of the scenery around Sidmouth had attracted visitors from other quarters, and general admiration was expressed by strangers not only at the beautiful land views, but at the fine bay which spreads out before the town. At no watering-place on the southern coast of Devonshire is there a finer piece of water for a regatta. A course of almost any length can be fixed, and all the boats will still be in sight. The heights on either side of the town, which is situate in the intervening valley, command magnificent views. With the aid of an ordinary glass, places may be seen at an extraordinary distance on the opposite side of the coast; while the eye gazes inland on hill after hill, until the view is lost in the distant horizon. With these natural recommendations it is not surprising that Sidmouth obtains a large number of fashionable visitors, albeit it has not the facilities of a railway. That a line of railway communication between Sidmouth and Exeter would prove a great boon to the town there cannot be the slightest doubt.

To return, however, to the regatta. The weather was everything that could be wished, and every arrangement was made by the stewards for providing a good day's amusement. In this attempt they were successful, and much praise is due to them for the excellent manner in which they performed their duties.

The following is an account of the racing:—

1st Class Sailing Boats.—1st prize, £3; 2nd ditto, £2; 3rd ditto, £1.

Lily of the Valley, Shears, Lymington 1
Julia, Moss, Exmouth 2
Pamella, Carnell, Exmouth 3

ROWING BOATS.

1st Class.—Four-oared.—1st prize, £1; second ditto, 10s.; third ditto, 5s.

Saney Anne, Borman, Seaton 1
Union, Skinner, Sidmouth 2
Saucy Jack, Sutter, Sidmouth 3
Happy Jack, J. Turner, Sidmouth 4

2nd Class.—Two-oared.—1st prize, 10s.; 2nd ditto, 6s.; 3rd ditto, 4s.

Dove, S. Ware, Sidmouth 1
Elizabeth, Spencer, Sidmouth 2
Who'd-a-thought-it, Turner, Sidmouth 3

Punt Chase.—Prize, £1.

This race was won by E. Bartlett, and it afforded considerable amusement to the spectators.

During the day a band played at intervals on the beach, and everything bore the aspect of hilarity and gaiety. In the evening the band continued to perform in various parts of the town, and many a social party wound up the day's amusements at many hosteries.

PLYMOUTH.—Lord and Lady Colville have sailed hence on a cruise in his lordship's yacht, the Sultana.

THREE MEN DROWNED IN IRELAND.—On Sunday evening, the 24th ult., about four o'clock, as Mr. Irvine, his servant, Mr. Moore, the architect and his son, were all four sailing under a stiff breeze, on Lake Erne, about four and a half miles down the lake from Enniskillen, in Mr. Irvine's yacht, the yacht made right before the wind with all her canvas on, and immediately sank from carrying too much canvas. Mr. Moore and son, together with Mr. Irvine's servant, were drowned. Mr. Irvine narrowly escaped, as we hear, by wrapping his Mackintosh closely about his body, keeping the air (by which the Mackintosh was inflated) secure until he was driven by the waves so near shore as to allow him to walk on dry land. Mr. Moore leaves a wife and a young family to deplore his untimely death.

CHRISTENING VESSELS.—I have always considered this to be more a Pagan than a Christian ceremony, a relic of the ancient litation rather than a "caricature of the sacrament of baptism." In modern Greece, when a ship is launched, the bow is decorated with flowers, and the captain takes a jar of wine, which he raises to his lips, and then pours out upon the deck. It is more than probable that many nautical customs, superstitions (the broom at the mast-head when a vessel is for sale, shaving when crossing the line, whistling for wind, &c.), and even technical terms, might be derived from a very remote antiquity. Even if we descend to a comparatively modern period, we may find that sailors have preserved among them the technical terms of their profession though numberless terms of other trades and professions, have become obsolete within the last two centuries. Scarcely the half of the technical terms of various trades and professions that may be found in that most curious omnium gatherum, Rundel Holme's "Academy of Armory," would be understood by their respective craftsmen at the present day, whereas every nautical term in the much earlier production, "A Ship of Fools," would be understood by the modern seaman.—Notes and Queries.

DANTIC, Michaelmas Day.—Admiral Martin, in Leopard, remains in Ledsund with some paddle-steamers. Euryalus, cruising in the Gulf of Finland, fell in with a small pleasure-boat, in which there was one Russian gentleman jolly drunk. The boat contained all sorts of good things, wine, beer, &c., sheet fast, and helm hard down. The gentleman was taken on board, and when sober the next morning, awoke considerably surprised. He said that he had been "picknicking" with a party of ladies and gentlemen; that there had been a quarrel; that he had got into the boat, had set sail, and had (literally) got "half-sens over." He was allowed to land at Nargen. An incident something similar to this occurred to the schooner Speculation, which came into this port last week—a heavy squall caught her when about forty miles south of Gotland. While all hands were taking in sail, she was hailed, but the night being very dark, nothing could be seen, until a boat containing one fisherman touched the schooner's side. The fisherman caught the rope that was thrown to him, and was hauled over the stern of the schooner just as his boat sank. The fisherman was landed here. He had been blown off the coast of Gotland, and did not know where he was.

"We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others forwarding their Appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience."

MATCHES APPOINTED.

October 9.—R. Wharf and J. Synnott, to row from Old Barge House, Woolwich, to Limehouse Hole, for £25 a side.

October 19.—G. Robbins, of Battle Bridge, and R. Savage, of Horsley-down, to row from Putney to Mortlake for £25 a side.

October 23.—W. Maney, of Putney, and J. Rolfe, of Christchurch, to row from the Pier at Putney to the ship at Mortlake, for 20 guineas a side.

October 25.—G. Robbins and R. Savage (below-bridge men), to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £25 a side.

November 20.—T. Cole (the Champion of the Thames) and J. Messenger, of Teddington, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £200 a side.

November.—Robert Newell and William Pocock, to row from Putney Bridge to the Ship at Mortlake, for £25 a side.

ROWING FROM CAMBRIDGE TO CHESTER.—On Sunday evening, two under-graduates of Cambridge arrived in Chester, having rowed across England—viz., from Cambridge to Chester, in a couple of wicker boats. The dangers of the expedition, arising from mills, sluices, and rushes in the rivers, and from boats and locks in the canals, were very numerous. The distance traversed proved about 270 miles.

PEDESTRIANISM AT NORWICH.

A great all-England One Mile Handicap Foot-race, for £85, took place, on Monday and Tuesday, on the cricket-ground at Norwich, for which twenty-six men entered, including Hospool, of Sheffield, the one-mile champion; James Stainer and James Pudney, of London; C. Wilton, of Gateshead; E. Goddard, of Gravesend; William Walker, of Workson; Robert Bruno, of Norwich, &c. Hospool, however, did not come up to the scratch, in consequence, it was rumoured, of a match having been made between him and Bruno, of Norwich, for the belt; and, of course, under those circumstances, it was not likely he would venture to run a handicap race with his opponent previous to the great contest. Wilton, Goddard, and Pudney, were also absent; but still eighteen men came on the ground, and gave promise of some excellent sport; and anticipation was fully realised, some of the races being capital contests. The ground was the same as that of the last handicap race in July, the course being three times round the cricket-ground—pretty nearly level throughout. The first day was fine, with a somewhat stiffish breeze. The men were divided into four lots, and started at intervals of half an hour, the winning men running the deciding heat on the second day. At three o'clock, the following started for the

FIRST HEAT.

yards	yards
Richard Fennew, Norwich 45	William Paul, Coatessey 105
James Stainer, London 50	Alfred Milner, Sheffield 115
George Clarke, Yarmouth 90	William Daniels, Norwich 130

Daniels went off with the lead at a rattling pace, but was soon winded, and gave up at the end of the first round. Clarke knocked under in the second, and Milner in the third, leaving the race to the other three. It ended in Newman, who, though suffering from illness, ran with considerable pluck, winning by about twenty yards. A good race for the second place, between Paul and Stainer, was decided in favour of the latter, by three or four yards.

SECOND HEAT.

yards	yards
John Gent, Norwich 95	William Bales, Norwich 120
William Waller, Stoke 100	George Newman, ditto 120

Newman kept the lead throughout, but was closely pushed by Waller in the latter part of the third round, and only succeeded in getting in first by three or four yards. Gent, who, up to the last few hundred yards, had kept up a sharp race with Waller, whom he headed during the first two rounds, was some distance behind. Bales gave up in the second round. The race was run in four minutes and thirty-three seconds.

THIRD HEAT.

yards	yards
Robert Bruno, Norwich 15	John Cambia, Norwich 130
D. Catteman, ditto 120	John Sands, ditto 135

Notwithstanding the long start of his opponents, Bruno passed them all easily, and came in first by a long distance; Catteman being second. The race was run in four minutes and thirty-nine seconds.

FOURTH HEAT.

yards	yards
William Walker, Workson 10	Ben. Clarke, Norwich 130
James Mace, Norwich 85	Thomas Goff, ditto 135

Mace and Clarke soon left the race to the other two. Walker either could not or would not lessen the distance between them to any great extent, and Goff won easily by about seventy yards. The time was four minutes and thirty-five seconds. This finished the first day's sports.

SECOND DAY.

Tuesday was rather dull, and the sky looked watery; but still there was a considerable number of persons assembled to witness the decisive races. The second best men of the previous day took up their positions to contend for £5, divided into prizes of £3, £1. 10s., and 10s., at the same distances as before, viz.:—

yards	yards
William Walker, Workson 10	William Waller, Stoke 120
James Stainer, London 50	D. Catteman, Norwich 130

This was a well-run race; but Waller proved himself too much for his opponents, whom he passed one by one, and came in first with the greatest ease, Waller being second, and Stainer third.

GRAND HEAT.

yards	yards
Robert Bruno, Norwich 15	George Newman, Norwich 120
Richard Fennew, ditto 45	Thomas Goff, ditto 135

Goff was looked upon as the winner of this race from his long start; but Fennew, notwithstanding his late bad health, gradually crept up, and, passing the rest, won by eight or ten yards. Goff was second, and Bruno not far behind him. The race was run in four minutes and twenty-nine seconds.

RUGBY SCHOOL ATHLETIC GAMES.

This annual trial of skill took place on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday, October the 2nd, 3rd, and 5th, and created as usual a deal of interest. The school-field on Monday presented an unusually gay appearance, the pavilion being filled with ladies, chiefly relatives of the competitors, who frequently cheered the youths as they hastened towards the goal. The day was bright, and the majestic old elms threw a deep shadow, under which were congregated many who, long ago, had gambolled on the sward in their youthful days, and whose offspring were straining every nerve to excel their rivals in the race. The ground was in excellent running condition, and a great deal of the programme was gone through on the first day.

Tuesday brought sunshine and fair weather, and the attendance, although good, was not so great as on Monday; but owing to Professor Orginski Rosenfeld giving a performance on acrobatic, but an hour and a half was occupied in the game.

Thursday afternoon was set apart for the finish, but the rain rendered the ground very slippery, and the falls very frequent; there were comparatively few spectators. The trials commenced at half-past two, and ended at half-past five. The stewards were Messrs. Cole, Salt, Hunt, and Bullock, whose decisions gave general satisfaction. The following were the winners of the grand trial.

First Race of 200 yards. Open to all.—Newman and Wills, equal.
Race of 200 yards. Open to all under five feet seven inches.—William.
Standing High Jump. Open to all.—Blunt.

Race of 200 yards. Open to all under five feet two inches.—Williams first, Harrison second.

Running High Jump. Open to all.—Powell.

Flat Race of 100 yards. Newman first, Wills second.

High Jump. Under five feet six inches.—Elliot first, Williams second.

Throwing a Cricket Ball. Wills first, Newman second.

Cricketing. Newman first, Powell second.

Race of 200 yards, over twelve hurdles. Eight started.—Little first, Wills second.

Race of 200 yards, over twelve hurdles. Open to all under five feet seven inches. Fifteen started.—Bernard first.

Race of One Mile. Open to all. Seven started. This may be taken as the grand trial, and was very exciting.—Green took the lead and kept in admirably, and was loudly cheered on coming in.

Race of a Quarter of a Mile. Open to winners of running prizes.—Wills first, Newman second.

Throwing a Single Wicket, distance varying from 20 to 40 yards.—This prize was obtained by Wills.

This Mr. Wills stands as champion, and having won the Prizeman's Cup, will hold it till next year.

Cheers were given for Dr. Goulburn, the masters who gave the prizes, the stewards, and the ladies.

We are happy to state, with the exception of a number of the runners going to grass rather heavily, no accident occurred.

CAVALRY LANDING IN THE CRIMEA.

Orders were given to land cavalry. For this purpose it was desirable to approach the beach as close as possible, and signal was made to the cavalry steamers to do so. The Himalaya in a few minutes ran in so far that she lay inside every ship in our fleet with the exception of the little Spitfire, and immediately commenced discharging her enormous cargo of 390 horses and nearly 700 men. The attendance of cutters, launches, paddle-box boats, and horse-docks from the navy was prompt, and the disembarkation commenced soon after noon. This steamer alone has carried exactly the number of horses which were stowed away in thirteen French horse transports! The Sinla, the Trent, and the Jason also set to work with energy and activity to discharge their living cargoes, and the seamen of the Royal and mercantile marine rivalled each other in their efforts. Never did men work so hard, so cheerfully, or so well. The horses, too, are now so acclimated to ship life—they are so accustomed to an existence of unstable equilibrium in slings, and to rapid ascents and descents from the tight ropes, that they are comparatively docile. Besides this they are very tired from standing for fourteen days in one narrow box, are rather thin and sickly, and must be glad of change of air and position. The horses from the Himalaya came out marvellously well, and many of the officers and men have been restored to health by the influence of the sea voyage and good living. In the details of the arrangements for landing horses the paddlebox boats and flats are pulled by launches and cutters, under the command of naval officers, up to the ship to be discharged. A certain number of the men get upon these horse-flats, and their horses are lowered in order, one after the other, to the number of twelve or fourteen to each large flat, and of six or eight to each paddlebox boat (the latter being provided with temporary floorings for the reception of the horses). The troopers not required to hold the horses are stowed away in the row-boats, and the little flotilla sets off on its voyage to land. It generally happens that some smart, active, little tug, commanded by a naval officer, rushes down on them ere they have gone far—"makes fast"—adds them to a string of some six or eight other boats, and flutters off to the beach, where she leaves them to make the best of their way from the edge of the surf to terra firma. Arrived in the surf, Jack leaps into the water, and by hauling, shoving, thumping, and kicking, manages to "start" the horses down the inclined plane of planks half resting on the beach, half floating on the breakers, and to do the work of half-a-dozen soldiers in his own wild quaint style. If the greatest care is not taken the floats will tilt over when they touch the ground, and no skill can prevent such a catastrophe at times. It was thus that some horses were lost, and the wonder is, when one stands on the sand and sees the violence of the billows, that many more accidents of the kind are not occurring momentarily. Lord Cardigan and his staff landed from the Himalaya at six o'clock on the Friday evening. Lord Lucan also disembarked the same evening. The whole of the English cavalry out here—with a Lieutenant-General to command it, and a Major-General second in command—with a large staff, and a divisional and of brigades, with quartermasters-general and adjutants-general, with staff surgeons, with aides-de-camp, majors of brigade, and commissariat officers attached, does not muster more than 1,000 sabres!

CRICKET.

J. B.—We are very glad you at last acknowledge that the fault is really traceable to your own Secretary, and not to THE FIELD. Your complaint is but one of many we have undeservedly had to endure "for a season." But we shall always take care that "the saddle be ultimately placed on the right horse."

H.—Out, according to the rules of M. C. C.

MISCELLANEOUS.

N. O. (Manchester).—The Turkish language is not known to "the masses" in Circassia.

Z.—We believe it is quite true that the band of the French Guides is about to perform at the Crystal Palace.

Fides (Clathorn).—The following is the cause of the governor of Eupatoria having been made prisoner. He at the very first surrendered the town, and placed all its stores of flour and provisions at the service of the allies in consideration of the place being spared, but directly the flag of truce had departed he gave orders for all the granaries to be fired, and only the hap-hazard return of a party of our men prevented the order from being executed. For this he was made prisoner, with the postmaster of the town, who was also concerned in it. Such treachery deserves punishment, and they should be the very last prisoners exchanged.

Inquirer (Turkhan).—The electric line begins at Cronstadt, in Transylvania, and then continues, without interruption, through Vienna, ou to Paris.

S. Mucknald.—In our next.

MASONIC.

"Z.—It was on the 21st of January, 1853, at the installation of Br. W. J. Newton, that Br. Jevanje Prestorje, of Lodge 120, Industry and Perseverance, Calcutta, visited the Globe Lodge. The proceedings of that meeting were admirably reported in the Era, at the time; we give you an extract of the excellent speech made by our Indian Brother upon the occasion, who said, "he could not feel otherwise than grateful for the very kind manner in which he had been received by his Masonic Brethren in this country, having come amongst them a stranger from a distance of 10,000 miles. The Great Architect of the Universe—who had made the heavens and the earth, who had divided the light from the dark—had happily implanted in the heart of man those noble principles of fraternity and charity on which this order was founded. He could assure the Brethren, that the reception he had met with would never be effaced from his memory until it pleased the Most High to call him to that bounte from whence no traveller returns."

8. S.—No. They must be proposed by one member and seconded by another, who are responsible for the respectability of the parties they promote.

P. T.—It was Br. Watson, of the Freemason's Tavern, who rescued the Globe Lodge from being disfranchised. It had nearly become extinct when Br. Watson came to its aid; and, with the assistance of able coadjutors, succeeded in paying off a large debt due from that Lodge, and raised it to a position second to none in the craft.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1854.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A GLORIOUS victory, a heavy loss, a series of successful operations, and the investment of a grand fortress. Thus much is certain. But the history of the week—home—is a strange one. Scarcely were our remarks of Saturday last in the hands of our readers when the news which we had been anticipating arrived. We learned that the forces of the Allies—whose brilliant landing had been described—had marched towards Sebastopol; that the Russians had placed themselves very advantageously on the heights of the river Alma, and had there awaited the attack of the foe. Battle had been given, everything yielded before the resolute energy of the English and the indomitable fire of the French troops, and the Russians, completely routed, were falling back upon their last and greatest stronghold. There were glorious tidings. But, almost concurrently, and from various quarters at once came news, stated to have been brought to Omar Pasha by a Tatar, that the Allies had followed up their blow; had assailed Sebastopol by land and by sea, and with such success, that, after a sanguinary struggle, Fort Alexander and Fort Constantine had been taken; that six of the ships of the line had been sunk; and that Meshchikoff had been allowed a brief interval to consider his course, and to behold the French and English flags waving from the church of St Vladimir. The news was startling, but from so many directions—including "Sebastopol est prise!" from the Emperor of France—came confirmation of it, that it was impossible to refuse belief, although no official information on the subject had arrived, and though calm calculation showed the gravest obstacles in the way of the rapid triumph that was reported. England accepted the tidings with exultation. The "Fall of Sebastopol" headed the journalist's columns; and now that it is clear that the statement was premature, there is a sensation of damp and disappointment all over the land, although, in reality, our feeling ought to be that of joy and thankfulness for the victory at the Alma. The Sebastopol news has been widely spread, and its contradiction has only begun to follow it. We read in the Court Circular of the 4th, that an express had that day arrived at Balmoral, bringing the telegraphic despatch announcing the fall of the fortress, and the less welcome tidings, that the fortress has yet to fall, cannot have reached her Majesty at the hour at which we write.

The state of operations in the Crimea, as far as we have them with certainty, is now this:—The Russians were completely defeated at Alma, where, unhappily, the English have lost, it is said, 2,000 men; the French not so many, but General Bonet is among the slain. Having routed the enemy, the Allies proceeded, and forced all the lines around Sebastopol, and made their way across the Crimea down to the beautiful bay of Bala Clava, which is on the south coast, and about seven miles from Sebastopol. This place, which has every advantage for the landing of stores and the keeping up communications with Constantinople and Varna, has been selected as the base of operations, and here the Allies were on the 28th September. The rest has yet to be told.

We repeat, that but for the untoward circumstance of great news, but false, arriving to supersede the interest of other great news which was true, England would at this moment be in a state of high exultation ; for though we have no specific details of the Alma affair, and the Duke of Newcastle signifies that these cannot be expected until Monday next, we have enough to be aware that the battle was a brilliant one, and that the French and English, for the first time fighting side by side, nobly vindicated both the honour of each country and the cordial union between the forces. We hear rumours that the gallantry of the French came, at no unseasonable time, to the aid of a portion of our own force, which found more obstinate resistance, and which is stated to have suffered most ; but to these rumours we are not justified in attaching any weight. The subsequent successful movements, which finally brought the Allies down to the best conceivable point for commencing the attack, are subjects for congratulation. It is, of course, possible that, after all, the coup de main of which we heard may have been attempted, and that victory may have crowned it ; but we are much more induced to believe that Sebastopol will be taken in regular form. It should be added that the Russians are stated to have destroyed Anapa, the key of Circassia, and that the garrison there was marching to the aid of Prince Menschikoff, who is said to have but 20,000 men. Everything, therefore, promises well, and we look for the details of the battle of Alma, and can bide our time for the tidings that the grand and final blow has been struck.

No other news than that of war is cared for, or is worth writing about. As mere matters of record, we may note that the Portsmouth investigation was protracted to great length, but has closed, and the charges against Lieutenants Knight and Seymour are dismissed—as could not fail to be the case, unless the mayor's court had been infected with the spirit of a court-martial. Such a tribunal, however, has been demanded by Lieutenant Knight, and it is to be hoped that it will take a warning from the conduct of the Windsor inquisition. The Duke of Cleveland and Colonel Garrett have exchanged some angry letters, but with no great result, and no great accession of ornament to our repertoire of ducal and military literature. A new Lord Mayor appears above the horizon on Monday, in the person of Mr. Moon, and, it is to be wished that he would make his inauguration notable by putting an end to the ludicrous folly called the Show, which ought to follow that other eminent civic institution, Bartholomew Fair. Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton has been making an elegant address to his supporters in Hertfordshire, and complimenting the farmers upon their really taking almost as intelligent an interest in general topics as if they lived in towns. The Scottish grievance-mongers have been holding another gathering, the Duke of Montrose, and Lord Eglinton being the principal speakers, and, talking, went amusingly over the wrongs of their ill-used country. Except that the glorious sunshine which we have so long enjoyed, appears to be changing in favour of a less exhilarating, though equally desirable weather, there is nothing to add. "Wars, and rumours of wars," are the newspaper staple, for the hour.

Cedat armis toga.

THE STULTZ AT BOMARSUND.—At this moment Bomarsund belongs to a tailor. Sic transit gloria mundi! General Baraguay made a present of the ruined fortress to a tailor named Claes Berggren, and this person is now selling bricks, &c., from the ruins to any one who will buy. Berggren had served the French general as interpreter.

OCTOBER: The eighth month in the year of Romulus, as its name imports, and the tenth in the year of Numa, 713 B.C. From this time October has still retained its first name, in spite of all the different appellations which the senate and Roman emperors would have given it. The senate ordered it to be called Faustinus, in honour of Faustina, the wife of Antonius the emperor; Commodus would have had it bear the name of Invictus; and Domitian caused it to be denominated Domitianus, after his own name. October was sacred to Mars.

ARRIVAL OF AN AIDE-DE-CAMP FROM LORD RAGLAN.

LORD BURGHES, senior aide-de-camp to Lord Raglan, who arrived at Marseilles during Thursday night in the Fury, brings home the detailed despatches relating to the battle of Alma, with the list of casualties. His lordship cannot be expected to arrive in town before late to-night or Sunday morning.

THE NEW STAMP ACT.

On Wednesday next the new Stamp Act, making some important alterations, principally relating to bills of exchange and promissory notes, will take effect. Bills drawn out of the United Kingdom are to be denoted by adhesive stamps, and not to be negotiated without such stamps being affixed. With regard to bankers' drafts, by the present law drafts drawn on bankers within fifteen miles are exempted from duty, but by this act a draft cannot be remitted or sent beyond fifteen miles unless duly stamped, or be received in payment or as a security, or otherwise circulated, under a penalty of £50. All bank notes, other than the Bank of England, are to be liable to duty. There is a clause repealing the exemption from receipt stamp duty of letters by the general post, acknowledging the arrival of bills, notes, or other securities for money. Receipts for money paid to the crown are to be exempted from stamp duty. Some alterations are made with respect to stamps on conveyances of property. The duty on pawnbrokers' licenses in Dublin is reduced from £15 to £7. 10s. All contracts to serve as artificers, servants, &c., in the colonies are to be exempted from duty, as also public maps and documents referred to in deeds or writings. Leases for a period less than a year are to be chargeable with duty on the rent received. In order to encourage the purchase of stamps, persons buying stamps not exceeding one shilling duty, are to be allowed at the rate of 7½ per cent. on £5 worth and upwards. No charge is to be made for the paper on notes and bills where the same does not exceed the duty of 1s. An allowance is to be made up to the 5th April next for stamps rendered useless by this act. All instruments liable to stamp duty are to be admitted in evidence in criminal proceedings, although not properly stamped. The new duties on inland bills of exchange and promissory notes payable other than on demand, commence at 1d., where the amount does not exceed £5. Not exceeding £10, the duty will be 2d.; not exceeding £25, 3d.; not exceeding £50, 6d.; not exceeding £75, 9d.; and not exceeding £100, 1s. The next stamp is 2s. for not exceeding £200. It is erroneously supposed that the new duty will be payable on the 10th inst., but the words of the act are "from and after the 10th October," making it Wednesday next.

Home News.

THE COURT.

There is little in the way of Court news to chronicle, as her Majesty and the other illustrious members of the royal family are still enjoying the rural retirement of Balmoral. The Prince Consort during the week has been out frequently deer-stalking. Her Majesty has accompanied him a great part of the way on his journey to the forest, and has joined him on his return to the Palace. On Tuesday her Majesty the Queen and the Prince remained at Alt na Guisach.

An express arrived at Balmoral at an early hour in the morning, bringing the telegraphic despatch announcing the report of the fall of Sebastopol. It was immediately forwarded to the Shiel.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and Prince Alfred, attended by Mr. Gibbs, ascended to the summit of Lochnagar.

The Princess Royal and Princess Alice, attended by Miss Hildyard, drove to Loch Muich.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

His Excellency Admiral Virgin is about to close his sojourn in this country as representative of his Majesty the King of Sweden, and only awaits the return of her Majesty to the south to present his letters of recall.

His Excellency Baron Bentinck has arrived at the residence of the Netherlands Legation, in Lowndes-square, from Scotland, where, we regret to learn, his Excellency has recently met with an accident.

His Excellency Count Kielmansegg and the Countess Helen Kielmansegg, have arrived at Hanover on a visit to the royal family. The count and countess have derived much advantage to their health from residing on his excellency's estate in Holstein. His excellency may be expected in London about the middle of the ensuing week to resume his diplomatic duties.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter, and the Lady Mary Cecil, who arrived in Grosvenor-square early in the week from Burghley House, have since left town for Brighton.

Lady Raglan and the Hon. Misses Somerset, who have been on a tour of the German Spas, are expected to arrive in Great St. Andrew-street early in the ensuing week, for the season.

Lord and Lady Harry Vane have arrived in Grosvenor-place, from Germany, en route to Lord Rosebery's, Dalmeny Park, Linlithgow, N.B., where her ladyship's youthful family had previously arrived from London.

Lord Ernest Vane Tempest has left London, to join his noble mother at Garron Tower, co. Antrim.

The Earl and Countess Amherst have returned to Knowle Park, near Sevenoaks, for the winter, after a residence of some months at Broadstairs. Viscount and Lady Sarah Holmesdale and family are residing at Montreal, in the same locality.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mrs. Gladstone left Worsley Hall, the seat of the Earl and Countess of Ellesmere, on Monday, for Hawarden Castle, Cheshire.

Lord Forester is surrounded by a select party at Willey Park, Shropshire. This week there have been several additions to the circle, to commence pheasant shooting.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Huntly and family have returned to Orton Longueville, from Aboyne Castle, the noble marquis's seat in the Highlands.

The Countess of Jersey and Lady Clementina Villiers have joined the noble earl at Middleton Park, near Bicester, from the Hon. Frederick and Lady Elizabeth Villiers' seat in Northamptonshire.

The Earl Cadogan and the Ladies Augusta and Honoria Cadogan have left Lowndes-street for Brighton, where the noble and gallant earl proposes to pass the autumn.

Viscount and Viscountess Duncan have arrived at Camperdown House, on a visit to the Earl and Countess of Camperdown and Lady Elizabeth Duncan, from visiting Lady Panmure at Bearhill, Forfar.

Lord and Lady Dynevor have arrived in town from a tour of the German Spas, and shortly leave for the family seat in Gloucestershire.

We regret to announce the death of the Countess of Hopetoun, who died on Sunday last, at Edinburgh. The deceased countess, who was daughter of the late Lord Macdonald, married John, late Earl of Hopetoun, 4th June, 1826, and by him, who died 8th April, 1843, leaves an only son, the present earl.

METROPOLIS.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (From the Weekly Return of the Registrar-General).—Cholera is now rapidly declining in London, and the deaths by it have fallen from 2,050 in the first week to 754 in the last week of September. The present epidemic eruption began later than the eruption of 1849, and it has latterly been more fatal; but the aggregate mortality will yet probably be less than it was in 1849; for the deaths by cholera in that year, down to September 29th, were 13,093; while the deaths by the present epidemic, down to September the 30th, have been 9,707. Yet the loss of nearly 10,000, or, including the deaths by diarrhoea, of 12,000 lives, within a few weeks, in the chief city of the empire, is an appalling fact, demanding the strict investigation into all its details which the Board of Health has directed to be instituted. Is London to continue every five years to be attacked by pestilence, and to lose so many thousands of its inhabitants? Cannot the conditions in which disease is fatal be determined, and cannot they be removed?

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY'S IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.—On Wednesday Mr. Payne held an inquest at the Queen's Prison, on the body of Emma Davidson, otherwise Sarah Hawkins, aged fifty-seven, who died in the prison on Monday last, after an illness of some months' duration. The deceased was somewhat of an eccentric character, and had been in confinement since 1829, having made a solemn vow when arrested that she would "live and die" in prison, as she considered the claim against her to be unjust. She was in receipt of an income of about £100 a year, regularly paid to her out of property of which she was in possession when first arrested, under the provisions of an act now abolished. Deceased had died of cancer of the stomach, and the coroner explained to the jury that although there was no doubt, according to the evidence, that the deceased had died a natural death, according to the law, which was extremely old, the coroner was bound to hold an inquest upon all persons who died in prison. In former times it was of more importance than at the present time, but still it was a protection to persons in custody and the public that the enquiry should take place, that it might be ascertained that persons who died in prison had not come to their death by any improper and unlawful treatment by any person in whose custody they might be placed. The jury expressed themselves satisfied, and returned a verdict "That the deceased had died from natural causes."

DEATH OF MR. JOHN MOORE, THE PUBLISHER.—We regret to announce the decease, on Monday last, of Mr. John Moore, of St. Martin's-lane, the well-known publisher of Turf Illustrations, who died at the age of fifty-nine, of choleraic diarrhoea. Mr. Moore's gallery of racing celebrities was a collection for the last 30 years of all the winners of the St. Leger, Derby, and Oaks, and other great stakes. The late Mr. Moore had excellent taste, and has done much for art improvement, in the prints he produced of field sports and natural amusements. Through the patronage of the late Duke of Orleans, the turf in France was much improved, owing to the suggestions of Mr. Moore.

THEATRE ROYAL ADELPHI.

(See page 937.)

We this week give a view of the interior of the Adelphi Theatre, for the purpose of drawing attention to the very charming ensemble of its decorations. It is, of course, quite impossible in a wood engraving to give anything like contrast of colour, but enough can be given from which to form an idea of its simple elegance.

The dome is surrounded by a graceful balustrade on which Cupids—equi-distant—festoon wreaths of flowers, the tender tinted sky above giving light and space to the whole. The ground of proscenium, dress, and upper circles is white, relieved with gold mouldings, a rich gold scroll running round the upper circle. The front of the dress circle is extremely pleasing, gold scrolls of the Louis-the-Fourteenth style form panels, the ground of which is turquoise blue, enclosing cameos of Cupids, white on blue ground. Similar panels occupy the fronts of proscenium boxes, the centre of which on either side display the royal initials.

The curtains of private boxes are of crimson damask, the cushions round dress and upper circles, seats, and stalls, being covered with the same material. The interior of boxes and lobbies is hung with crimson flock paper, being a rich contrast to the more brilliant ornamentation. The act drop is charmingly painted, harmonising with the general decoration, and much less obtrusive in character than is generally the case.

Great praise is due to whoever designed an interior, which, for good taste, may fairly compete with any of its metropolitan rivals.

In the course of the performances on Saturday evening, Mr. Leigh Murray, the stage-manager, announced to a house crowded to the ceiling the victory obtained by the allied armies in the East. The intelligence was hailed with acclamations loud and hearty, and it was some time ere the enthusiasm subsided sufficient to permit the amusements of the evening to proceed.

Next week we shall have presented us here two revivals—on Monday "The Station House," and on Thursday "Capers and Coronets," in both of which Mr. Morris Barnett, who is now fulfilling a re-engagement, will take a principal part. A new drama, from the experienced and attractive pen of Tom Parry, Esq., has been read, and is now in active rehearsal. It is a regular Adelphi piece, in which each member of the company has a good part. Kealey, Paul Bedford, and Rogers have been admirably suited with characters, so that the novelty will lack nothing in the way of humour, while among the ladies we believe Mrs. Kealey has an effective role to sustain.

DRURY-LANE.—The regular dramatic season was resumed here on Monday, when Mr. G. V. Brooke appeared in "Virginius," being the first of a series of seven performances previous to his departure for Australia. We have before recorded our opinion that Virginius is one of the best of Mr. Brooke's impersonations, and his performance last night fully confirmed this impression. The principal scenes were rendered with great dramatic power and manly pathos, and their effect was such as to draw forth the most vehement applause from a very crowded house—indeed Mr. Brooke's reception throughout the play, and his recall after the last scene, sufficiently testified that his popularity is not yet on the wane. The play was fairly acted throughout—Mr. George Bennett being the Appius Claudius; Mr. A. Younge, Dentatus; Mr. Belton, Idolus; and Miss Cathcart, Virginia. After the play, the farce of the "Spitalfields Weaver" introduced Mr. Wright to a Drury-lane audience, with whom this piquant comedian appears likely to become as great a favourite as he was with the frequenters of the Adelphi—for assuredly he never raised more frequent or hearty peals of laughter than greeted his performance last night. The house was filled in every part, and the display in front of the curtain, of the national banners of England, France, and Turkey, and the performance by the orchestra of some national airs, in allusion to the stirring news of the day, was warmly received by the assembled crowd.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Another attempt to establish the drama in the land of clubs and loungers was made on Monday night by the opening of this theatre with a regular dramatic company. It would be invidious to draw comparisons between this and former efforts of a similar nature, for every struggle in so good a cause is worthy at least of sympathy, if not of praise. Mrs. Seymour, an accomplished actress and charming lady, has unfurled her banner in the neighbourhood of St. James's-square; and on Monday night commenced her campaign with a new five-act drama, entitled "The King's Rival," from the joint pens of Messrs. Tom Taylor and Reade; and a new farce, by Mr. Selby, called "My Friend the Major." The drama was, perhaps, not so happy a selection on the part of the management as could be wished for an inaugural attempt, nor was it so effective in its construction as the previous emanations from the same authors. The period of the play is the time of Charles the Second, the mere mention of whose name dramatically is sufficient to throw a damper on the interest of any piece. One goes to the theatre prepared, on the mention of the Second Charles, to see some loose intrigue coloured up to give it an air of romance, and it is not much a matter of difficulty to predicate what will be the denouement. To this class belongs the "King's Rival," for although it is nervous and bold in its dialogue, the old incidents are spun out to a much greater length than is necessary. The heroine of the piece is Frances Stewart, Maid of Honour to the Queen, in love with the Duke of Richmond, who, influenced by the Court scandal concerning Frances and the king, repudiates her. In his rage he joins a treacherous party headed by a Major Wildman, and so falls into the power of the king, who has become violently jealous of him as the successful lover of Stewart. Merry Nell Gwynne, however, arrives in the nick of time, and not only causes the lovers to be married, but also obtains the pardon of the king for Richmond, and a promise to abandon any future attempts upon his wife's maid of honour. This is but an outline of the leading feature in the piece, but it is sufficient to convey an idea of the class of dramas to which "The King's Rival" appertains. The five long acts threaded upon this slight incident, lasted until nearly midnight. One part of the drama received certainly merited censure—namely, a scene representing Spring Gardens, in which the rebel Wildman is struck with the plague—a loathsome incident, which was not tolerated by the audience. The characters were well portrayed by Mr. George Vandenhuff (The King), Mr. Mead (Richmond), Mr. Stuart (Wildman), Miss Glyn (Frances Stewart), and Mrs. Seymour (Nell Gwynne). Although the farce came late in the evening, it put the house in a good humour, by keeping up a constant roar of laughter.

BIRMINGHAM.—The engagement here of Madame Celeste and Mr. Webster has proved the most beneficial to the theatre for many years past. The houses have been crowded nightly, and the performances received with the most rapturous applause. Madame Celeste and Mr. Webster have just left the city, much to the regret of the play-going public; but their departure was imperative, owing to their having to appear in Edinburgh on Monday, under an engagement for that and eleven more nights.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—THE WIDOWS AND ORPHANS OF SOLDIERS.—Mr. Pepper, the managing director of this institution, is about to set a laudable example to the charitably disposed by devoting the receipts on the evening of Thursday, the 12th instant, to the assistance of the widows and orphans of the brave men who have lost their lives in the present campaign in the East. This benevolent project is certainly well deserving of support, and there can be little doubt that it will meet with a cordial response from the public, when they are informed that the subject of the war derives additional interest at this establishment, from the fact that several objects are now daily exhibited which have special reference to it. Amongst these is a model of Sebastopol, ingeniously and skilfully executed by Sergeant Falkland and Corporal Thomas, and a picture of the same place in the Dissolving Views; together with representations of some of the most interesting localities which have become associated with the achievements of the allied forces. In addition to these attractions, it may be stated, that Mr. Pepper is now lecturing on the "Munitions of War."

ROYAL PANOPTICON OF SCIENCE AND ART.—This institution was re-opened on Monday, having during the recess, undergone considerable revision and re-arrangement under new management. A carefully-prepared and comprehensive programme guides the visitor to the various objects of interest, and instructs him as to the hours fixed for the lectures and musical performances. The most interesting addition to the attractions of the Panopticon is a series of panoramic and dioramic views of Verona, painted on glass, and displayed by means of a large lens on a gigantic canvas. The subjects comprise a general view of the town and environs, the Porch of the Cathedral, the Piazza delle Erbe, the Tomb of the Scaligers, and the exterior and interior of the Church of San Zenone. The paintings, which are admirably executed, and by Mr. Thomas Clare, and Messrs. Carpenter and Westley. In the first view, a little stranger light is desirable, in order to bring out the details more clearly. After these views a series of chromotropic effects was exhibited, in which an almost endless variety of singularly-beautiful figures was produced. As a termination to this exhibition, during which the hall is darkened, the fountain in the centre was set in action, and the stream of water rendered luminous by means of optical apparatus. Some extraordinary and beautiful effects were thus produced, the fluid appearing now like a liquid stream of fire, and again resembling a sparkling shower of silver. Loud and prolonged applause greeted this, as well as the whole series of optical displays. Music forms an important feature in the programme, the gigantic organ (one of the finest in the country) being exhibited at frequent intervals during the day by Mr. Best, the organist to the institution. This gentleman—an accomplished master of his instrument—performs selections of classical and popular music, varied and contrasted so as to suit all tastes, yet never descending so low as to degrade the "king of instruments." Other musical attractions are offered in the performances of the Messrs. Distins on the flugel horns, and some glee and madrigals by a vocal quartette. Amusement and instruction are so blended in this exhibition that no visitor can fail to find some source of gratification and improvement; and we hail the re-opening of the Panopticon as an addition to the sources of rational enjoyment and mental improvement for the people.

MR. COTTON'S ENTERTAINMENT.—One end of the room in Newman-street Oxford-street, once known as Mr. Benjamin West's gallery, and now called the Philharmonic, has been converted into a resemblance of the quarter-deck of Nelson's flag-ship, the Victory. The capstan, which appears in the foreground, serves as a rostrum for Mr. Charles Cotton, who, being ushered in by the popular air of "The Girl I left behind me," ascends this post of honour, gives utterance to a brief account of Nelson's glorious career, and sings no less than thirteen spirit-stirring songs,—including some of the most popular compositions of Dibdin, as well as certain novelties, written with a view to the present day. While all this is going on behind the capstan, the back scene occasionally opens and discovers a series of pictures representing various incidents of Nelson's life. At last, when the discourse has reached its termination, the quarter-deck flies to pieces, and discovers a huge pair of vessels, English and French, largely symbolising the Western alliance. The pictures are of the most various degrees of merit, some of the views, for instance, the towing of the Victory into Gibraltar, and the Battle of the Nile, with a dioramic effect, being very good specimens of scene-painting. But the great features of the entertainment are the singing of Mr. Charles Cotton and the general fitting up of the room, with its imposing quarter-deck and its complement of flags on each side. The vigour and pathos of old Dibdin are alike appreciated by Mr. Cotton, and that lyrical compound of sentiment and reckless valour which is known as the British "sea song" could hardly have a more effective interpreter. To use a vulgar but very intelligible expression, there is something "plucky" about the entertainment, which tells admirably at the present time.—The first performance took place on Monday.

TURKISH MUSEUM.—Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, with her Royal Highness Princess Mary, honoured the Turkish Exhibition, Hyde-park-corner, with their august presence, attended by Baron Knesebeck and Major Parviz, on Saturday, the 30th Sept. Their royal highnesses were highly pleased.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE DIRECTOR OF THE CRYSTAL PALACE BAND.—On Thursday week an equally elegant and appropriate testimonial was presented to the director of the Crystal Palace band, by the gentlemen who have, under his guidance, contributed so much to the gratification of the visitors to the wonderful establishment at Sydenham. This testimonial, consisting of a baton of silver richly chased and gilt, was designed and manufactured at Messrs. Lambert and Rawlings, of Coventry-street; and it reposes in a case lined and covered with rich Genoa velvet, bearing on a plate of gilt silver the following inscription:—"This baton was presented by the members of the Crystal Palace Band to Henry Schallehn, Esq., their director, as a testimonial of regard and esteem, September, 1854." Mr. Schallehn was for many years musical director of the band to some of the most distinguished regiments in our army; and he last served in that capacity with the 17th Lancers, from which gallant regiment he passed into the service of the Crystal Palace Company. In this new sphere of action Mr. Schallehn's well-known high professional qualities speedily gathered around him an assemblage of men eminently calculated to form, under his guidance, a band in all respects worthy of the establishment with which it would be associated. Already the Crystal Palace band, in number amounting to sixty performers, has attained to a deservedly distinguished celebrity. In the testimonial, the presentation of which we now record, the members of the band have gracefully expressed their consciousness of the value of Mr. Schallehn's scientific and skilful guidance and judicious combinations, and also their deep sense of his unwearied attention and ever-ready courtesy. It will not be out of place for us here to add that, in addition to the usual programme of the day's musical performance, the Crystal Palace band now give our own national anthem, with the French national air, "Partant pour la Syrie," concluding with "Rule Britannia," in a style well suited to the spirit of the time, and which alone would well repay a trip to the Sydenham Palace.

AUSTRALIA.—Mr. Coppin, the Australian manager and comedian, in addition to the engagement of Mr. G. V. Brooke, Miss Cathcart, Mr. R. Younge, and Mr. Hair, for his new iron theatre in Melbourne, has entered into an arrangement with Mr. Jacobs, the original wizard, ventriloquist, and improvisatore, for twelve months. This talented company take their departure by the new steamship Pacific, Captain W. G. Thompson, in November next. A building is in course of erection at Melbourne for the reception and preparatory exhibition of the articles to be transmitted to the Paris Exhibition.

PROVINCIAL.

SECOND ESCAPE OF THE BURGLAR RALPH FROM LINCOLN CASTLE.—Joseph Ralph, who was convicted at the last Lincoln Assizes of breaking into the Grimsby Bank, and sentenced to be transported for twenty years, has a second time made his escape from the county prison. He is the man who effected an egress from the same prison in an ingenious manner on the night of the 27th of July last. He was taken on board the Hessio and Barton steamer, after a most determined resistance, having seriously stalled his captor. When brought to Lincoln he was put in irons, and the utmost vigilance was used. However, early on the morning of Tuesday it was discovered that Ralph had again outwitted his gaolers by the most ingenious methods. It appears that there are two keys to the cell in which he was confined, one kept by the turnkey and the other by the chaplain of the prison. The chaplain when visiting the prisoners frequently placed his key on the bench. Ralph observed this and made a drawing of it. A small gas light burnt in the cell, which was also furnished with a pewter mug, out of which the prisoner drank. From masticated bread he made a model, and melted the pewter mug into it. This formed the key. The door of the cell had a wicket about the centre within reach of the lock outside. This small wicket closed with a spring. The night before Ralph intercepted the spring, so that it was left ready for him to introduce the key he had made into the lock, to which there was only a key-hole on the outer side. This he did successfully, proceeded to the kitchen, stole some clothing belonging to the cook, passed some iron gates, drew the bolt and shot the lock of the principal entrance, and reached the Castle-yard. This is enclosed by a mound and high wall, but although he was ironed he managed to get into a small building and obtained a ladder, by which he got on the Castle-wall. On his escape becoming known, the greatest excitement prevailed throughout the city. Since his former feat the magistrates have remarked on the strict surveillance under which he was kept, and Mr. L. P. Fyche, reminded the prisoner only a day or two since that "they had him safe," to which Ralph rejoined that he didn't know that. Capt. Nicholson, the governor of the Castle, is away from Lincoln. The police were immediately sent to all parts of the county in pursuit, but up to the present time Ralph has eluded the utmost efforts to discover his whereabouts.

WIGAN ELECTION.—Both parties have worked hard for victory, but, after a very close contest, the election has terminated in favour of Mr. Acton. The numbers at the close of the poll were:—Acton, 339; Powell, 334: majority for Acton, 5.

THE CHOLERA AT OXFORD.—The returns of the last few days to the Board of Health of this prevailing epidemic prove, we regret to say, that the disease has not decreased since our last report. During the week ending Wednesday, the 4th inst., 17 fatal cases of cholera have been reported, and 1 of diarrhoea, and, although the disorder has been chiefly confined to low districts, where filth and poverty prevail to a great extent, yet there has been several cases of persons in good circumstances, living in some of the principal streets of this city, who have fallen victims to this mysterious disease. Amongst the latter may be mentioned the name of a gentleman, well known to the sporting world, residing in one of the healthiest parts of this city, viz, Mr. Jones, farrier, who was up to Monday in his usual state of health; on the evening of that day he was unwell with premonitory symptoms of cholera. The best medical aid that Oxford could produce was unavailing, for on the evening of Tuesday he was a corpse, and on the following morning his remains were consigned to the grave. We understand that unless this dreadful malady subsides in a few days, it will be a matter of grave consideration with the authorities of the university, as to the expediency of postponing the meeting of the members of the various colleges a fortnight longer than was intended. The returns for Tuesday, October 3rd, were as follows:—New Cases: Diarrhoea, 111; choleraic-diarrhoea, 5; cholera, 4.—Old Cases: Diarrhoea, 97; choleraic-diarrhoea, 8; cholera, 8.—Deaths, cholera, 3; diarrhoea, 1.

SCOTLAND.

CUTTING THE GLASGOW TELEGRAPH.—The wires of the magnetic telegraph communicating with Ireland, Liverpool, and Glasgow were maliciously cut on Tuesday last, about twenty miles from Carlisle, on the road to Penrith. The Company are using the utmost endeavours to trace the guilty parties who have committed such an atrocious outrage, and great hopes are entertained that they will meet with success.—Glasgow Chronicle.

HERRING TRADE.—The total quantity taken here last week would be from 800 to 1,000 crans, and might add about a cran to the general average. The total average of the 920 boats employed in this district during the season may now, therefore, be stated at 105 crans per boat. The fish caught on Saturday were rather inferior in quality to those of the previous days, and the price of fresh herrings ranged during the week from 18s. to 16s. per cran, which latter figure was the price obtained for Saturday's fish. The quantity of cod-fish taken was also very considerable, and would make a valuable addition to the fisherman's gains for the week. Our local herring-market, which for some time past has been in a very dormant state, exhibits some signs of revival. At Fraserburg the prices continued up to Saturday last at 22s. 6d.; for full crown brands, and 17s. 6d. for spents.—John o' Great Journal.

IRELAND.

DUBLIN.—BALINASLOE OCTOBER FAIR.—The great sheep fair opened on Wednesday, and closed on Thursday evening. From the accounts published, it would appear that the favourable anticipations of the graziers have been to some extent fulfilled, but it seems that a check, though a slight one, was given to speculation by the nature of the recent intelligence from the East, indicating, as it did, the probable termination of the war at an earlier period than was expected by the most sanguine but a few days previous to the announced success of the allies in the Crimea. The correspondent of the Freeman's Journal reports as follows:—"The sheep fair commenced this day, and in point of numbers, has fully equalled my anticipations. In the opinion of most good judges there are several thousand more sheep here than last year. I myself consider the fair to be a good deal larger, but it is quite impossible to say by how much. The gaps were not opened this morning so early as usual, and consequently it was not until an advanced hour in the morning that the whole of the sheep were in the park. In consequence of the anticipations of a fall in the price of stock, consequent on the news from the East—which I think has been in some measure fulfilled, but certainly not nearly to the extent to which it was supposed—the fair remained dull, and business was very slack for some hours this morning. About nine o'clock, however, things began to assume a brisker appearance, and in less than an hour from that time some £40,000 or £50,000 worth of stock changed hands. The 'croakers' about low prices have been greatly disappointed, while, at the same time, a considerable decrease has taken place in the value of certain descriptions of stock. The demand for good prime wethers was exceedingly good and brisk, and this class brought fully the prices of last year, which were very high, and probably were a shade higher. There will not remain a single sheep of this class unsold. Second class wethers have been also in good demand at probably 1s. under last year. The great drop, and the class in which the greatest depreciation has taken place is ewes. Light, poor ewes are quite unsaleable, and middle class are 3s. to 4s. under last year's quotations. The demand for prime ones was, however, very brisk. There can be no doubt that beef and mutton are at present very high, and the fall will be hailed with satisfaction, if not by stockmasters, certainly by housekeepers. I do not think there were quite as many of first-rate top lot sheep in the fair this time as I have seen on former occasions. This I attribute to the fact, that latterly the sheep farmers in this country have been in the habit of sending up some of their best stock occasionally to Smithfield."

Foreign Intelligence.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday, October 6.

We have but one subject in Paris this week—Sebastopol. The cannon of the Invalides have been kept loaded since Saturday until the present hour I write, in order to thunder forth the intelligence to the capital; and the anxiety which prevails on the subject is indescribable. Meanwhile, the only certain news known is that which plunges hundreds of families into the deepest distress, relative to the dreadful losses experienced in the conflict by the allies, and which report, as usual, exaggerates to an excess altogether beyond probability. On Monday night, however, notwithstanding the obstinate silence of the Invalides, the hotel of Mme. Agudo, in the Place Vendôme, and a few others were brilliantly illuminated. On Wednesday morning, while "expectation stood on tiptoe," intense anxiety was manifested at the Bourse, when a voice in the gallery cried out "Écoutez! Le canon des Invalides!" A moment of silence followed; all listened, when sure enough the booming of cannon was distinctly heard. At this an enthusiastic shout burst from the entire assemblage, which was repeated again and again, mingled with cries of Vive l'Empereur! Vive les Anglais! This exciting scene, which lasted full ten minutes, was a genuine picture of French enthusiasm. At the end of that time, as the fire had ceased long before the customary 100 discharges, doubts began to arise and the truth was ascertained. Some accidental variation in the wind had borne the report of the artillery from Vincennes to this part of Paris, and hence the mistake. The disappointment was terrible; but still the accounts received, though not official, left so little doubt of the truth, that it was only a demonstration a little in advance.

The bribery system of the theatrical, or rather musical critic of one of the great Parisian journals, still continues the foremost topic in the Chronique Scandaleuse of the day. You are already aware, that this individual was dismissed from his post for his shameless conduct, but reinstated on the "recommendation" of one of his patrons. This personage—thus influential with the journal in question—is not named by the Figaro, the only Paris paper which has had the courage and honesty to denounce this infamous system as it merits. It has vigorously returned to the subject this week, and wields the lash on the back of the culprit with well-deserved severity. Figaro concludes his stinging article with a portrait of the offender, under the then disguise of the name of the well-known Italian libelist, and "something worse," Arcin, of the sixteenth century. He writes:—

"Arcin was a tall, stout, square-shouldered ruffian, with an insolent cynical eye, and the oblique glance of a fellow who cheats at cards. A large sensuous mouth, with a smile of self-satisfied conceit, and condescending patronage. Alike courted and despised, he exercised on all around him the fascinations of the snake. As for the rest, quite devoid of any illusion as to his personal worth, and looking to nothing but the emoluments of his dirty trade. Spiteful as a woman, cowardly as a lazzarone, he was, where his selfish interests were concerned, replete with sagacity, and speculated on the secret infirmities and weaknesses of his patrons, as a ploughman cultivates his field, with the hopes of an abundant harvest. More than once convicted of carrying on an infamous trade, relying confidently on the support of creatures as vile as himself; he cared not for the indignation of honest men, and when the storm his conduct had raised seemed to threaten danger, a plenary indulgence of one of his patrons, Pope Paul III., shielded him from the punishment he had so richly earned."

Our contemporary adds that all journalists of the present day are not modelled on this picture. Dieu merci! it is but an exception. The most curious part of the affair is, that the individual in question still writes his articles with the same easy nonchalance, and perambulates the Boulevards and public places with the same imperturbable assurance as though he had come out les mains nettes of all the mire this affair has cast upon him.

The Italian Opera opened on Tuesday with "Semiramide," in which Madame Bosio, notwithstanding a rather thin organ, came out brilliantly, as did Madame Bardi-Mancini, the new contralto, who, though wanting in the finish required in all Rossini's operas, sings well, and with a sentiment of music that is worth a hundred mere executants. The other débütant, M. Cassier, possesses an excellent voice and good style; he is probably the best Assur we have heard since Tambruni. The house was well attended; but the subscribers are, it is said, less numerous than last year. The opening of the Italians is considered the commencement of the musical season here, and musicians begin to congregate. Among the late arrivals are Meyerbeer, Verdi, Berlioz, and a host of instrumentalists. The Grand Opera is not doing well; hopes are entertained of Gounod's opera, "La Nonne Sanglante," which I shall be happy to see realised. The first night is at present fixed for Monday. The Vaudeville has had a terrible tumble with a little piece called "Le Calicot du Pot Cassé." It was highly seasoned with what they call gaucherie—what we should call gross indecencies; and though the Vaudeville audiences are the reverse of straightforward about such matters, this went a little too far, and was, in consequence, unmercifully condemned. The Variétés has got a one-act affair, the idea of which is good, called "La Sangsue." An avuncular old fellow has bought an insurance policy on the life of an old scamp who continues to keep him in constant hot water, and extract a handsome revenue out of him by threatening to commit suicide. This notion is very poorly worked out, but is intrinsically humorous enough to create a laugh, and was therefore successful.

A few days ago three young men, dressed in the height of fashion, presented themselves before the well-known Doctor Veron. After the usual preliminaries they informed the worthy doctor that they were about to publish, as a journal, a "historical gallery of contemporary celebrities," and that knowing his liberal tendency to assist unknown talent, they solicited the amount of a year's subscription in advance. They had the less reluctance in making this application, as they deemed the name of "Louis Veron," a most appropriate one to commence the series of their literary photographs. The worthy doctor who, as is well known, has a peculiar objection to be daguerrotyped, especially after the flattering unctious he has administered to his amour propre in his own memoirs, declined the dangerous honour, and when these ingenious literary pirates left M. Veron, they carried with them the price of two years' subscription. Not content with this, they have three or four times repeated their visit, and each time with the same good success as the first. On the last occasion of his paying black-mail the doctor, however, expressed a desire to know, whether the journal had appeared. "Not yet," replied his interlocutors, with a significant look, "but it shall see the light as soon as your subscriptions cease."

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

FRENCH POLICE.—(From Galignani's Messenger).—Immense sensation has been caused in the department of the Loire-et-Cher by a most frightful murder and attempted suicide, committed under most extraordinary circumstances.—As a gentleman of St. Laurent des Eaux was, four days ago, driving in a carriage towards Hippocrene with his wife and mother-in-law, he was astonished to find three persons lying across the road. He at first thought they were drunk, but on alighting from his carriage he was horrified on finding a girl bathed in blood, with seven wounds in different parts of her person, and by her side two corpses frightfully disfigured. The girl, whom he recognised as Aurélie Dabois, daughter of his gardener, was still breathing, and she, in a faint voice, demanded his assistance. Fortunately some persons came up at the moment, and he, with their help, conveyed the girl and the two corpses to the nearest farmhouse. Medical assistance was immediately procured for Aurélie, and after a while she recovered sufficiently to be able to make a statement to this effect:—For about six months she had been annoyed by the addresses of a man named Anatole B—, shepherd in the farm on which she was employed, but she had constantly rejected them. On the day in question she once more most decidedly repulsed his advances. Thereupon he said, "I know that you are about to stand godmother with Jean Bonquin as godfather at a christening; but this is your last day and mine also!" And, so saying, he produced a pistol and two balls. "One of these balls," he added, "is for you—the other for me." The young woman attached no great importance to this threat. At about half-past one o'clock she left to go to church with Jean Bonquin to be present at the christening. As they were on their way the girl told her companion of what Anatole had threatened. All at once this man jumped up from a ditch by the road-side, apparently in a state of great fury. Rushing towards Bonquin, he cried, "you must leave me that woman!" and before Bonquin could answer, discharged a pistol right in his face. Bonquin's face was dreadfully mutilated, and he fell senseless to the ground. Anatole then seized the girl, threw her down, and attempted to do her violence; but she made a most energetic resistance. Irritated by this, he drew a poignard-knife from his pocket and wounded her in the throat. The sight of blood appeared to madden him, and he stabbed her six times in the side and abdomen, but fortunately the wounds were not deep. The girl had presence of mind to know that if she continued her resistance he would kill her outright, and she remained motionless as if dead. Deceived by this, he left her, and going to Bonquin, who was not quite dead, produced a bottle of vitriol and poured it over him; then he piled on him a quantity of straw, which he had taken the precaution to bring with him, and set the straw on fire. To use the girl's expression, "he burned the man as a pig is singed." The sensation of burning gave some vitality to Bonquin, and he uttered loud cries. Thereupon Anatole reloaded his pistol and discharged it at him, causing instant death. After this the murderer cut his own throat with his knife, but death not being caused thereby, he, with wonderful self-possession, reloaded the pistol and blew out his brains. In the pocket of the murderer was found a letter, in which he announced his intention of murdering the girl and Bonquin, and then committing suicide. The wounds of the girl turned out to be not so serious as was at first supposed, and confident hopes of her recovery are entertained.

A KING'S WILL.—The following extract from the will of the late King of Saxony has been published in the official journal of Dresden, by order of his present Majesty King John:—"In the name of the most Holy Trinity. In the first place, I thank my beloved wife for the affection with which she has embellished my existence by sparing no days of sadness, and preparing for me the most delightful hours which I have ever enjoyed in this world. I also thank my dear brothers and sisters, my sisters-in-law, my brothers-in-law, my nephews, my nieces, and my other relatives, for the constant affection which they have constantly displayed towards me. I also thank my faithful servants, particularly my Ministers, who have lent me their co-operation with so much fidelity, and those who have been near me all my life for the attachment they have always shown towards me. I cordially take leave of them all; may God reward them for what they have done for me, and may they pardon me if ever I have offended any one of them in any way. I also bid adieu to all my subjects—the Saxons, whom I have loved so well; may they retain the remembrance of me in their hearts! I recommend them, as my children, to the solicitude of my successor. I heartily pardon all those who have afflicted or offended me during my life. May God pardon those who have done so intentionally, and may they admit their faults," &c.

LADIES' BONDS.—The Detroit Advertiser says:—"Quite a large portion of the ladies in this city make their own boots. When visiting a lady of town, it is a very common thing to find her busy with last,awl, waxed ends, pinners, and all the accoutrements which comprise the kit of the boot-maker. Two or three pairs of boots may be made in a day, and about two dollars hastened on each pair. In most cases, however, it is fashion rather than economy which induces the employment. The result is, that the fair sex of Detroit will soon be proverbial for wearing the most elegant boots and having the prettiest feet in the Union. The ladies of New York and Boston, and other eastern cities, must look to their laurels."

COLONIAL.

CANADA.—The following is given as the list of members forming the Canadian Ministry:—Upper Canadians: Sir Allan M'Nair, President of the Council; William Cayley, Inspector-General; John A. Macdonald, Attorney-General, west; Henry Smith, Solicitor-General, west; Robert Spence, Postmaster-General; John Ross, Speaker, Legislative Council.—Lower Canadians: N. A. Morin, Commissioner of Crown Lands; E. P. Tache, Receiver-General; Jean Chabot, Commissioner of Public Works; L. T. Drummond, Attorney-General; P. J. O. Chaveau, Provincial Secretary; Dunlop Ross, Secretary.—On the 13th Mr. Morin announced that the Government measures would be introduced in the following order, viz., debate on the addresses, Reciprocity Treaty Ratification, Clergy Reserves Secularisation, Seigneurial Tenure Commutation, Elective Legislature, Municipal Improvement in Lower Canada, Reduction of Tariff, and School Bill.

AUSTRALIANA.

TILBURY FORT, ESSEX.—A company with a capital of £25,000, in £5 shares, is proposed for building an Emigrants' Home at Tilbury, opposite Gravesend, at the terminus of the railway. It is stated that an establishment affording every needful accommodation and comfort for 661 individuals can be erected for £20,000, and that respectable persons have offered to lease such an institution at 7 per cent on the outlay. Similar projects are referred to as having been carried out with great success at Hamburg and Bremen, and it is evidently only by this means that emigrants can be protected from the chief troubles and expenses as well as the serious deceptions to which they are at present exposed. The undertaking was suggested by Mrs. Chisholm to Mr. Samuel Sidney, by whom it will be managed, and the following is given as a practical example of the plan:—"A man in Aberdeen, with a wife and five children, could ascertain before breaking up his home the exact expense of travelling to London, staying a week or more in the 'Home,' and of his passage to Australia. He could in one payment clear all his expenses up to the time he had settled all his family on board ship, and by another payment clear his passage-money to any colony. By arrangement he would enter a second-class carriage at Aberdeen, which would gather fresh recruits (bound to sail about the same time as himself) at Montrose, Dundee, Perth, Stirling, Edinburgh, Berwick, Newcastle, Durham, York, Leeds, Sheffield, Lincoln, Nottingham, Leicester, Derby, &c.; and so, without changing carriage or unloading luggage, the whole party would be conveyed straight to the 'Home' at Tilbury. There, for moderate fees, the women could wash and dry their clothes for the voyage—the men could pack under the advice of an experienced packer. A choice of half a dozen good ships (without any attempt at monopoly) would be advertised on the walls."

The October number of the Art Journal (G. Virtue and Co.) is particularly rich. We have "Job and his Friends," painted by P. F. Poole, engraved by H. Bourne, one of the finest and most poetical compositions ever produced by a British artist; Lane's "Summer Gift," from the Vernon Gallery, engraved by C. H. Jones; "Morton, the Dramatist," from the same collection, painted by Sir M. A. Shee, engraved by T. W. Hunt; and an exquisite drawing of Autumn, by Miss M. E. Dean. In the literary department—the second part of "A Walk through the Studios of Rome," by "Harmony and Contrast of Colours," by Professor Hunt; "Wood-engraving and Wood-carving," illustrated; "The Domestic Manners of the English during the Middle Ages," by T. Wright, F.S.A., illustrated; and many other most valuable contributions. It is indeed most gratifying to find the Art Journal, one of our most beautiful serials, thus keeping up its reputation, and not flagging in any one point of importance to lovers of art.

The English Cyclopædia (Bradbury and Evans) still increases in value and importance. The present part is devoted to natural history and geography; in the former department, including the hyæna, hyæna, hystrix, cicada, iguana, infusoria, and uscula. The geographical portion is equally valuable.

The Newcombes. By THACKERAY. Illustrated by R. Doyle. Bradbury and Evans.

Clive Newcombe having wandered through the world of art returns to Pall-mall, and is in trouble at Lady Fareham's ball. The interest increases, and we think this one of the very best numbers of this work.

Fenn's Compendium of the English and Foreign Funds. Fourth Edition. Revised and corrected by HENRY AYRES. Effingham Wilson.

A very important volume to a commercial nation. This will more readily be allowed when we state that it contains the best information on debts and revenues of all nations, banks, railways, mines, principal joint-stock companies, and forms an epitome of the various objects of investment and speculation which are negotiable in London, together with a variety of explanatory tables on the public debt, stocks, banks, &c., and laws and regulations of the Stock Exchange. No question can be of greater import than the financial condition of a state; it is joined with the social, moral, and religious welfare of its people; nor will a fruitful soil or genial climate compensate for mismanagement of funds produced by the labour and skill of its population. The present is a most remarkable epoch in the financial condition of Europe. The amount of public debts, given in these pages, are of astonishing magnitude; and the fact, that scarcely a Government is able to meet its expenditure from the usual sources of taxation, proves there must be something radically wrong in the political economy of such states, when wealth, produced by labour, skill, and enterprise, has increased a thousandfold.

Instructions to Young Sportsmen in all that relates to Guns and Shooting. By Lieut.-Colonel P. HAWKER. Tenth Edition, with Explanatory Plates and Woodcuts. Edited by Major P. W. HAWKER. Longman, Brown, Green, and Longmans.

In this tenth edition of a truly standard work, Major Hawker has availed himself of numerous memoranda and notes left in the handwriting of his late father; and in making the necessary alterations and additions, has most admirably adhered to the plan which he believes would have been adopted by the author had he lived to fulfil his intention of bringing out the present edition.

The History of Russia. By JONATHAN DUNCAN, B.A. Herbert Ingram and Co., and W. S. Orr and Co.

This work is most opportunely published. The war has called into existence many other books on the subject, but none embracing the whole history of Russia. If we wish to learn anything of the policy of that country, something more is required than narratives of any particular period, however good or interesting they may be.

This work embraces the history of the empire, from its foundation by Rourik, to the close of the Hungarian war. The whole of the first volume, with the exception of the first chapter, is a translation from "Rabbe's History of Russia," justly considered a model of judicious condensation. For the second volume, we must thank Mr. Duncan's industry and talent. He has had a most difficult task; for, perhaps, the history of no country is less known than that of Russia, and the prevalent errors arising from the interested praise of other authors is removed in these volumes. "The reigns of Peter the Great, and Catherine the Second, are given at greater length than those of their predecessors, because they chiefly brought Russia within the sphere of European diplomacy, and of international law;" but ample light is thrown on the conquests over the Russians by the Tatars; Ivan the Terrible; and the imposture of the false Demetrius. The account given of the habits and customs of the people, is most interesting, and the author has secured an unbroken continuity of narrative on the subjects of serfdom and landed tenure, the church, the nobility, trade, laws, the Caucasus, and the trans-Caucasian provinces. The work is embellished with maps and numerous illustrations.

FINE ARTS.

Messrs. Ackermann, the publishers, of 96, Strand, will shortly publish an engraving from a very admirable picture, painted by Thomas Barrett, Esq. The subject is, Wells mounting Virago, for the Great Metropolitan Stakes at Epsom, April 6th, 1854. We have never seen any picture of its class which has pleased us so much. Virago is a life-like portrait, beautifully drawn and painted; full of life and energy; and Wells sits the mare as a jockey should, "eager for the coming fray." The portraits of the veteran J. B. Day, and the groom Goter are equally good. The background is well painted, and the accessories well composed. Altogether, we congratulate Mr. Barrett on his great success, Messrs. Ackermann, on publishing such a work, and, the sporting public on the opportunity of possessing one of the most truthful of sporting pictures.

Bits and Spurs.

FISH AS A DIET.—The charge so generally brought against fish by the Medical Board, as predisposing cholera, appears to have received a most signal refutation from the statistics and data of those places where a piscatorial diet is the sole food of the people. Amongst the poorer class of Jews, also, who subsist almost wholly upon fish, few or no cases have occurred; and inquiries at Billingsgate, where the food of thousands of persons employed afloat and ashore includes large quantities of fish, give a like result. At the Queen's Arms, Cheapside, likewise, where two extensive dinners each day, composed of the fish of the season, are provided, and some hundreds of persons refeed, not an instance of the loss of a regular customer is traceable. Perhaps it may be said that Mr. Simpson's celebrated punch has proved an efficient antidote. The fact of the complete immunity of the consumers of fish from illness has occasioned a reaction in the fish markets, where the demand for the last few days is far above the supply.

A MODEL SPEECH.—We commend the following pertinent speech to some, who are troubled with long-windedness in several localities this side of Maine:—Geo. W. Snow, having been unanimously re-elected city clerk of Bangor, made a speech to the electors. He said:—"Gentlemen,—You have given me all your votes, and I give you all my thanks. I accept the office and wish you to accept the thanks." It is understood that both parties were satisfied, and nobody yawned over the speech.

THE POULTRY NUISANCE AT CHELTENHAM.—Several correspondents have complained lately of the practice of keeping poultry within the precincts of the town, whereby the rest of her Majesty's subjects is broken by "the cock's shrill claxon," at most unreasonable hours in the morning. One correspondent wishes to know whether this "poultry nuisance" is not one of those falling within the jurisdiction of the New Town Act? Another suggests that the parties offending should themselves have the full benefit of the "early rising movement," by being compelled to keep the wakeful hipids in their own bed-rooms!—Cheltenham Examiner.

ABANDONMENT OF THE ERICSSON CALORIC PROJECT.—The caloric engine invented by Captain Ericsson has been finally abandoned, and is to be taken out of the ship bearing his name, steam boilers being substituted.—North American.

A FACT FOR THE GREEKS.—"I beheld," says Mr. Eton, in his "Survey of the Turkish Empire," "the expulsion of 75,000 Greek Christians from the Crimea by the Russians, nearly the whole of whom, exhausted by fatigue, worn out by hunger and privation, perished on the barren steppe formerly inhabited by the Nogay Tatars."

RETURN OF THE MORMONS EASTWARD.—A Western paper says that a few days since a train, composed of nine waggons and fifty persons, crossed the Missouri eastwardly in search of a new home. They had left the Salt Lake City on account of the oppression and immorality of their church.—New York Herald.

The following report was unanimously passed at a General Committee Meeting, on the 3rd of October, 1851.

The Right Hon. the Earl of EFFINGHAM in the chair:—

This Association originated at the National Club, on the 24th of February, 1851, and was joined on the 25th of February by a deputation from the Army and Navy Club.

It was formally instituted at a public meeting held in Willis's Rooms, on the 7th of March, 1851, (the late deeply-lamented General Sir Peregrine Maitland, G.C.B. in the chair), and has now completed the first half-year of its operations.

The vast amount of undeserved misery that this Association has been the means of alleviating during the past six months induces the Committee to make a half-yearly report of their proceedings; and this, not only to show that the noble effort made by the country on behalf of the silent sufferers has not been a fruitless one; but also to direct public attention to the urgent and absolute necessity for the establishment of some permanent national provision for the wives and families, widows and orphans, of our soldiers.

Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on the subject, the fact still remains in all its saddest, that for the wife and family, widow and orphan, of our best-behaved soldiers, whether non-commissioned officer or private, no provision whatever is made. Nothing but private charity keeps them from pauperism when their husbands and fathers are taken away.

The marriage of these good men is fully permitted by military authority; it is even granted as a reward for good conduct, and yet, should they be ordered to the seat of war, or die in the service of their country, their families are cast aside in utter destitution and desolation.

To prove that this is no over-statement, the Committee have selected a few cases out of hundreds, all of which are those of wives of non-commissioned officers and privates, who, having been married with military sanction and approval, had been placed on the strength of the regiment.

Case 490, Mrs. B.—Wife of a sergeant of the 35th, married with leave. Left destitute with six children after she had spent the small sum her husband left for her. Five of her children provided for; the sixth being an infant, and the mother being weakly, she received a weekly allowance of 5s. until she obtained work as a washerwoman, for which the Association furnished the means, and she now earns her own livelihood, assisted by her two boys, aged 12 and 13, for whom situations as pages have been found.

Mrs. E. F., 58th Hussars.—A most respectable person, married with leave, in delicate health. Left destitute, with six children. Earns a little by washing, for which a donation of £2 was granted. A weekly allowance of 7s.

Case 439, Mrs. W. H. R.—Wife of a private, 13th Light Dragoons. Married with leave. Left destitute with four children. A most respectable person. A situation as cook obtained for her, and all her children provided for.

Case 73, Mrs. S. J. G.—Wife of a sergeant in the 21st Regiment. Married with leave. Left destitute with four children, and expecting her confinement. A weekly allowance of 5s. in addition to the parish out-door relief of 3s. a week and four loaves.

Case 460, Mrs. W.—Wife of a lance-sergeant in the 6th Dragoons. Married with leave. Left destitute with three children, and expecting her confinement. A weekly allowance till she became a widow, when she was granted £50, and one of her three children provided for by the Birmingham Local Committee.

Case 493, Mrs. E. H.—Wife of a private in the 3rd Regiment. Married with leave. Left destitute with four children. One child provided for, and a weekly allowance of 7s. a week.

Case 34, Mrs. A. F.—Wife of a private in the 77th Regiment. Married with leave. Left destitute with five children. A weekly allowance of 10s.

Case 433, 3rd Regiment.—Mrs. A., the wife of a sergeant. Married with leave. Left destitute with four children. Has been provided with a situation at £14 a year, and all her children taken care of by the Association.

Mrs. E. F., 63d Regiment. Married with leave. Sixteen years wife of a private. Left destitute with five children. A weekly allowance of 7s.

Mrs. E. T., 46th Regiment.—Married with leave. Left destitute with five children under 10 years of age, unable to leave her infant. A weekly allowance of 7s.

Mrs. T. L., 25th Regiment.—Married with leave. Wife of a sergeant. Left with five children. Her husband left her some little money and his watch, to part with in ease of need. The watch had been parted with when this Association helped her out of all her troubles, and she regularly receives money from her husband.

Mrs. E. B., case 321.—Wife of a private, 34th Regiment. Married with leave. Left perfectly destitute with five children. The two youngest twins born since her husband left. In very bad health since her confinement. A weekly allowance of 12s.

Cases Nos 406, 407, 408.—The wives of privates of the 55th. All married with leave. Left destitute with 10 children. A weekly allowance to each.

Case No 968, Mrs. C. B.—Wife of a private, Royal Artillery. Married with leave. Left destitute with six children in great distress. A weekly allowance granted.

Case 971, Mrs. A. C.—Wife of a sergeant of the 38th Regiment. Married with leave. Left destitute with six children. A weekly allowance of 12s.

Case 592, Mrs. T.—Wife of a sergeant of the 11th Hussars. Married with leave. Left with six children. Eldest daughter provided with a situation, and a weekly allowance of 10s. to her mother.

This dreary catalogue of destitution might be continued almost to an endless extent, and all the harrowing details accompanying each case might be given; but the Committee are satisfied that a simple statement of these facts is more than sufficient to prove the need for, and the reality of, their work. It is true that the parish of the soldier may be compelled to support his wife and family; but the Committee would ask whether the workhouse is a fitting place for the families of men who can write such letters as the following?—

"Sir, I sincerely trust that I may not offend you by the liberty I take in addressing you; but, having heard of your kindness to the wives and children of soldiers now serving in Turkey, I am induced to request your kind assistance on behalf of my little daughter. By the last mail from England I received the melancholy intelligence of my wife's death, which occurred on the 9th of August, leaving my little girl entirely unprotected for, &c.; I therefore humbly hope that you will kindly cause inquiries to be made, so that my child may not be left entirely unprotected or uncared for. I will most gladly contribute, as far as my means will admit, to defray any expense which may arise in placing her in any establishment which you select. We expect to embark for Selam on the morrow, consequently I feel very anxious that some steps may be immediately taken to provide for her."

"I remain, Sir, most respectfully, "G. H., Sergeant."

"To Major the Hon. H. L. Powys, 60th Reg. Rifles, Hon. Sec."

The wife and child of this non-commissioned officer were entirely supported by the Association until his wife died of cholera, in London. His daughter is now comfortably settled at the Industrial School at Birmingham, at the expense of the Association, and when thoroughly trained and educated, will be provided with a situation by the managers of the Industrial School.

"Devno, in Turkey, July, 1851."

"My Dearest Mary—I know you will be glad to have this letter from your dear father. I hope and pray, Almighty God, that you and your dear little sister are quite well and happy and comfortable. Give dear Fanny and dear little Margaret my very best and fondest love, with many kisses also to your little companions. I have not been yet where the 38th Regiment is. When I see the Regiment I will be sure to go and see their lathers. I hope you are well and happy altogether, and love each other, and be kind to one another. But, my dear child, you must look out and see to your youngest sister, for she is but a baby yet, and may God bless you all and keep you under His Almighty wings, always is the daily prayer of your loving father. Be kind to your dear sister Fanny, kiss her for me, tell her I send my very best love to her, and she is to learn all she can till I come home, which I trust, please God, won't be long. I hope you are all good children, and do what you can to assist Mrs. B., who will, I know, be very kind and good to you. I hope she is quite well. Give her my best respects. I hope you love and obey your teachers. You must write to me, my dear Mary, &c. We are all in a very large camp. I dare say 10,000 men. We all sleep in the open air. There are no cloaks and no blanket to cover us. There are no beds but only straw for rails. We all went to a little valley yesterday, and heard Divine service, and very many of us received the Sacrament of our Lord Jesus Christ afterwards. Oh! my dear child, never forget your prayers, and be a good child, and you will have God for your father and friend for ever. Pray for your dear sister; pray for your father; and God will hear you. He will bless and keep us always, and bring us to Heaven at last, for Jesus Christ's sake. And now, my darlings, good bye, and may God bless and take care of you all, is the prayer of your loving father, "T. D."

Letter addressed to the Honorary Secretary of the Dublin Association:—

"September 2, 1851."

"Sir,—Only for the relief I received weekly from you, I would have been obliged to go into the workhouse, with my two children, which would have been worse than death to me; for if we were dead, our miserable existence would be ended here. I could not have maintained myself and children only for it, though I worked day and night to do so, and tried every means in my power, yet I found it was impossible. I was making shirts for Gilmans, in Molesworth-street, at 5s. per dozen, and I could not complete the dozen in a week; so I had not had that relief, what should I have done? I never received any money from my husband since I left him, nor had no one to ask me or my children to have a meal of victuals since I lost my only friend—my dear husband. And now, through your kindness and interest, I have got a situation; and if you did not still allow me a little to pay for my children, I should not be able to remain in it, as I have not enough wages to pay for them and clothe myself and them."

"I hope God will reward every one who has so kindly helped the poor soldier's wife and child; for most of us have been thrown out of a comfortable home to face a frowning world. I hope the Lord will reward you also, Sir, for the kind interest you have taken in the soldier's wives, &c."

"Mrs. J."

band, insisted on repaying a sovereign to the Association, saying at the same time, "That there was many a poor soldier's wife who needed it more than she did." More than 200 have been placed in situations as housemaids, cooks, nurses, washerwomen, &c., and, generally, have given satisfaction; one of them writes thus to the Inspecting Officer:—

"Sir,—According to promise, I now let you know how I am getting on. I never was so happy in all my life. I have indeed a kind master and mistress; they look to my comfort in every way. I might well say it is equal to my own home. I only wish to God that more of the women were so well provided for as I am, Sir. With you return the Association thanks in my name, for their kindness to me and my child; also for the 10s. I have received, with which I have bought some clothes. I hope that I will keep my situation a long time. The lady seems to like me very well, and she says that anything in her power she will do to promote my comfort. With my sincere thanks to you for your kindness."

Your obedient servant, E. D."

Many women, widows of Navy Seamen and Canada, on being provided a passage by Government to their own country, have been granted a donation of £3 each, to provide them with comforts for themselves and children during the voyage. To 17 women of different regiments, all married with leave, the Association has been thus beneficial.

On the 26th of June information was received from the Portsmouth Local Committee, that 31 women and 72 children would be forwarded to London, on their way to their husbands' purses, from Malta, from whence they had been ordered home, their regiments having gone on to Turkey.

The Inspecting Officer of the Association was immediately ordered to the Waterloo Station, where, having with difficulty got them all together, he took them to the Pay Office in Westminster, where they were to receive passage warrants for their different destinations. But they were unable to proceed till the next day; and this would have been left utter strangers in the streets of Westminster, searching in vain for lodgings, which, with the small Government allowance granted for that purpose, they were unable to pay for. Respectable lodgings were found for them all, and their children; and the next day they were despatched to their destinations, with a small donation for travelling expenses. It is needless to add, that all these women were married with leave, and many of them most respectable wives of non-commissioned officers.

Upwards of 3,500 women and 7,000 children have been kept from actual want during the last six months, the greater part of whom still remain claimants on the Association, especially those who have become widows and orphans. This has been done by the outlay during the past six months of £9,174, in weekly payments, both by the Central Committee and the 75 Local Committees.

Besides these 16,500 women and children, fresh applications are made almost daily to the office, thus showing that the number of women and children left behind is much greater than the public were led to suppose by the Parliamentary return called for in both Houses of Parliament. This, however, is accounted for, by showing the inaccuracy of the Parliamentary Return, as follows:—

3rd Regiment—Parliamentary Return.—No. of Women and Children, 170.

63rd Regiment.—Association Return.—No. of Women and Children, 245.

The Association's return was received during the same month that the Parliamentary return was given, and as it contained the name of every woman, and the number and ages of every child, and was signed by the Colonel commanding the regiment, it may very fairly be considered to have been the most accurate one. If there be such a discrepancy in the returns of one regiment, what must there be in all?

MARRIAGE WITHOUT LEAVE.

It is a curious fact that has been brought to light by the practical experience of this Association, that, without exception, those soldiers who have married with leave, or whose wives were admitted into barracks, and recognised by the Government, have left the largest families, and, in consequence, are by far the most deserving of consideration.

To these persons the Association has been of the greatest benefit; while, at the same time, amongst those women married without leave, much misery has been found to exist, which the Association has not refrained from alleviating.

The Committee, however, regret to find, that notwithstanding all the positive and practical good that has been effected by the Association, there still remain in the minds of some military men strong objections to its operations; it is still urged that undue encouragement is put on to marriage without leave, and that large numbers have thus married since the institution of the Association, to the operation of the Association had afforded such encouragement, surely evidence of it would have appeared from a number of applications for relief on the part of women who had married in anticipation of it. Only one application has been made at this office by the wife of a soldier whose marriage certificate was dated in 1854; so that the objection would appear to be entirely groundless; and it might be considered almost needless to say more in answer to it. But the Committee have it to show, that, whilst they have contemplated those cases as entitled to relief, who, not being already sanctioned by Government, or acknowledged by commanding officers, they have made a rule (No. 3), and have taken all the means in their power to give it publicity, which puts it out of their power to relieve any who may have married calculating on assistance from them; thus taking into consideration and providing against a contingency which might have arisen, but which has not occurred.

The following are the rules with reference to this subject:—

1. No soldier's wife is entitled to relief whose name has not entered in the regimental return, which, though it contains the names of all women whether married with or without leave, is yet signed by the Colonel commanding the regiment, and thus they are partially acknowledged.

2. The Government makes no difference between these women, and the passages of all are equally defrayed to the parishes of their husbands.

3. The rules for the relief of soldiers' wives married without leave is only retrospective; for no soldier who has married without leave since July, 1851, will be entitled to relief for his wife.

On the 17th July, 1851, at the largest Meeting ever held by the General Committee (General the Earl of Beauchamp in the chair), it was unanimously resolved:—

"That from and after the date of this resolution, the 17th July, 1851, no wife or widow be entitled to a donation or pension who shall have married a soldier without leave, whether they belong to regiments on active service or to regiments now under orders of readiness for active service, provided that such orders of readiness were received subsequently to the formation of this Association, on the 7th March, 1851."

As the Government, the officers commanding regiments, and the Association have found it

* One commanding officer who could not find amongst his soldiers' wives married with leave a sufficient number willing to embark with their husbands, and leave their families behind, were permitted by authority to complete the number by selections from the childless women married without leave, living out of barracks.

absolutely necessary to countenance, to a certain extent, marriage without leave, and as it appears from the returns of the married men of the thirty regiments of the line, and the ten regiments of Cavalry, that a large proportion of them in each regiment, are married without leave, it becomes a serious question how far the treatment hitherto carried towards wives of soldiers has been successful in the prevention of matrimony. It is evident that, in spite of all the certain misery entailed upon them, soldiers will marry, and can find respectable women to marry them; it is also evident from the universal sympathy shown to their wives and families on the present occasion, that the country would gladly relieve them effectually; the Committee would, therefore, direct particular attention to the concluding remarks at the end of this report, in hopes that some practical measure may be decided upon as speedily as possible, to prevent the recurrence of so much unmerited misery and destitution.

COLLECTIONS ON THE DAY OF HUMILIATION.

Thousands upon thousands of Her Majesty's loyal subjects joyfully followed her most gracious example on this day, and poured in of their abundance for the support of an Association which their beloved Queen and her Royal Highness Prince Albert had honoured with their joint patronage from its first commencement.

And it not been for the noble contributions made on the Day of Humiliation, this Association would have been totally unable to grapple effectually with the dire distress and destitution brought to light by its operations.

All the great religious communities in the kingdom, except the Roman Catholic, unanimously joined on that day to help the soldier's wife and child.

As the Church of England especially this Association is indebted for considerably more than two-thirds of the total amount collected. The Wesleyan body also contributed largely and generously; the deists, too, joined manfully in this national effort by having collections in their synagogues. The Committee remark with much pleasure that these astonishing collections were quite voluntary. No Queen's letter was issued, and never was any public subscription so heartily assisted by the poor man's penny. In numberless congregational collections more than one pound's worth of helplessness was given. Even the prisoners in a large Government prison put their names down for a subscription of more than £20. The total amount collected on that day would have been even greater had not many of the soldiers' wives. Of these collections the Committee had the pleasure of paying over one-third to the Association for the widows of sailors and marines.

The Committee would point out most emphatically that, notwithstanding the remarkable exception in the Fast Day Collections, no religious distinction whatever is made in the distribution of this noble charity, the recipients are not even asked to wince religion they belong.

OTHER COLLECTIONS.

At the head of these stands the county of York. The Yorkshire Association (with His Grace the Archbishop as patron and all nobility and gentry of the county as patrons and liberal subscribers) has remitted to the Central Association the large sum of £5,000. The press has very considerably and effectually aided the cause of the soldier's family, but no paper, either of daily or weekly circulation, has so practically assisted these poor people as the "London Journal." The editor of that paper, by the weekly issue of 12 supplements, at one halfpenny each, has realised the surprising sum of £1,274, which has been paid in weekly instalments of £120. Nothing proves so unambiguously as this does the sympathy of the poor, as the purchase of the supplement was not compulsory on the subscribers to the paper.

Subscriptions have been received from all parts of the world; from Panama, India, Bombay, Quebec, Nova Scotia, St. John's, New Brunswick, Brussels, Pau, Lausanne, Bonn, Paris, Calcutta, Ceylon, Montreal, Boulogne, the Black Sea Fleet, Bermuda, Fredrikstad, New Brunswick, &c.

The generous sympathy of the Navy for the wives of the Army has been very gratifying; indeed the first person who, by an able letter in the Times, raised the public to a sense of their neglect of the soldier's wife, was "A Naval Officer."

But of all the subscriptions, perhaps the most touching was that of the Chelsea Pensioners. One old veteran in paying his penny was heard to remark, "Had there been such an Association in my day, when I was away at the wars, my poor old woman would not have died in the workhouse."

Several bodies of men of the working classes have agreed to send in weekly penny contributions. The men of Price's Patent Candle Factory, and the men of the Crewe Locomotive Department, have already paid in considerable sums collected in this way.

From several large towns considerable amounts have been remitted, from Walsall, Cheltenham, &c.; and the town of Walsall has exceeded them all by several hundred pounds.

THE RAILWAY COMPANIES—LYING-IN

No universal has been the sympathy displayed towards the poor people whom this Association has taken by the hand, that all the great lines of railway have been made free to the soldier's child, particularly the London and North-Western, and the Portsmouth line, where not only have the children been carried free of expense, but the extra weight of baggage of their poor mothers has not been charged for, an example which the Committee earnestly trust all the Railway Companies will universally follow.

Two lying-in hospitals in London—the British Hospital, in Endell-street, and the Queen Charlotte's—most generously opened their doors to the soldier's wife. Many a poor woman has had recourse for thankfulness for the care taken of her at the British Lying-in Hospital in Endell-street.

Music, poetry, and the fine arts have all been enlisted in this good cause. One simple poem by a child realised nearly £20 for the Association; and the admirable sketch by George Thomas, Esq., of the soldier's "Separation from his Family," presented by that gentleman to the Committee of the Bath Fancy Fair, has done good service to the cause, representing so truthfully as it does the reality of the distress which this Association is so effectually mitigating.

LOCAL COMMITTEES.

The assistance and practical working of the 78 local committees all over the kingdom has been most valuable. To the clergy of the Church of England, the staff-officers of pensions, the garrison chaplains, the local magistrates, and other benevolent persons, the committee desire most cordially to tender their hearty thanks. Had it not been for the indefatigable exertions of the Senior Garrison Chaplain of Dublin, the Rev. Charles Hort, upwards of 40 women and 80 children would now have been the number who were working in Ireland no out-door relief is granted, the staff-officers in the several districts have proved themselves worthy of the profession to which they are so honourable; one fine fellow, on being offered remuneration for the great trouble he had taken in relieving the poor soldiers' wives in his district, exclaimed, "God forbid that I should take any payment for helping my comrades' wives and families in their distress." A perfectly organised system is now established by means of the Local Committees throughout the Kingdom, quarterly statements are regularly transmitted, showing the number of women and children, and the expenditure, and regiments that began regrettably to distribute their own funds have cordially handed over the balance of their funds to the Association, being satisfied with its working, and perfectly content to abide by its rules and regulations.

It is necessary to state, however, that the Association has not been permitted to relieve any but the widows and orphans of the Foot Guards, the officers commanding those regiments having funds of their own for the relief of the wives and families of their men, and not wishing to burden the Association.

Extract from the Report of the Limerick Local Committee:—

"Limerick, August 28, 1854.

"We have 17 women married with leave on our list. It appears that the women married with leave have the heavier families.

"It is incontrovertible that the major part of the women relieved by this Committee would, ere this, have been in the workhouse if they had not been aided.

"We can safely declare our conscientious belief that the women on our list, 81 in number, have shown themselves deserving of the relief administered to them. We have never received a single complaint against one of them. They have universally manifested a desire to obtain work. Several of them have obtained situations as wet nurses, a great fact in proof of the decent, healthy, and well-conditioned state of these individuals. Many are working at the shirt business for a mere trifle, to earn which they must labour all day; and several are learning the trade of shirtmaking without wages, in hopes of being able to assist themselves. Upon a fair review of their conduct and high general appearance, we can safely say that the women relieved by our Committee are creditable to the army. Even with the relief they receive, their position is far too trying a one to be anything but a warning. Instead of an attraction, to other females to enter into the same state; and we adventurously give it as our opinion that the operations of this Committee are not calculated to create the mischief, which some imagine is likely to result from the charity and sympathy which have been evinced by the British public for this most unhappy class of women, suddenly deprived of the help of their husbands.

"R. P. DOUGLASS, Colonel, Asst. Adjt. Gen., Chairman of Committee."

Extract from the Manchester and Salford Local Committee:—

"Salford Barracks, 29th August.

"I send you a statement of a few cases, which strike me as being unusually distressing. There are many nearly as bad, 140 in number. Very few of the women who have young children (and the children are nearly all too young to work) can earn anything worth noting, 5s or 3s a week at the most. Of course, those who enjoyed the privileges of living in barracks, &c., as being married with leave, are in the worst circumstances, and they suffer severely. They lose the lodging and the advantages of fuel, company's and officers' washing, say 5s, or 1s, a week, and the assistance of their husbands' pay. Looking here of a very indifferent sort costs them 2s, and 3s a week, and they will be far worse lodged than when in barracks. I send you the cases of four women, all married with leave, one with six children, another five, another four, another three; there are many others married with leave having two or three children nearly as destitute. There is no employment that they are capable of, inasmuch as they are all young children for whom care they must pay if they leave them at home and seek employment elsewhere.

"A. F. BORN, Major and Staff Officer."

Extract from the Report of the Woolwich Local Committee:—

"Woolwich Rectory, 4th Sept., 1854.

"The women were left in very many cases, I am sure, I may say in almost all, without any means for themselves and their children. Many were on the eve of confinement. Their only resource would have been to become paupers on the parish, and their only asylum would have been the workhouse. A generous provision on the part of a grateful country for the wives and families of those on whom they depended, under God, for a successful issue of the war in which we have been compelled to engage has prevented this. But suppose this had not been the case—how hardly would the maintenance of so many have pressed upon the poor-rate payers; and in many instances how unfairly. Take Woolwich for instance, and the case would be similar with respect to all garrison towns. We have upwards of 200 women, besides their children, to be maintained somehow. I think it quite possible that the burden would have been left so heavily, that a memorial might have been sent to the Government; but however this might be, the expense would have been unfairly thrown upon parishes such as our own; but this is a trifling matter when compared with the pauperisation of respectable wives of soldiers of our army.

"HENRY BROWN, Rector of Woolwich."

Extract from the Report of the Dublin Local Committee:—

"September 4, 1854.

"I find that since the 1st of July to the 2nd inst. I have made about 3,400 payments (in small sums, varying from 1s. to £1. 5s.) to about 400 women (soldiers' wives). We have granted several women free passages to their friends and relatives, released clothes from pawn-offices for women going into situations, set up numbers in a small way of business, delayed the funeral expense of a few children, and in numberless other ways have been the means of conferring substantial benefits upon these poor people, &c. Had it not been for the small weekly payments, the majority would have been in the poor-house. Many women, although they only received 3s. 6d. a week, were thus kept going, and encouraged to work for themselves, &c.

"CHARLES FLOTT, Senior Garrison Chaplain, and Honorary Secretary to Committee."

Extract from the Report of another Local Committee:—

"We have hardly relieved any that were not married with leave and on the strength. By the timely aid rendered by your Society much distress was of course prevented, as, as soon as they were left, your excellent Society took them by the hand. But timely as this aid was offered, it was not before, in many cases, the poor creatures had parted with nearly everything, even in two cases to their wedding-rings. What would have been the condition of these poor creatures if no such society as yours had existed? Many of them, far too high-spirited to have become the inmates of a workhouse, would have been plunged into a state of misery fearful to contemplate. But even as it is, much misery is to be found. A poor delicate creature with two children, married with leave, to whom your Society grants a weekly allowance, has been compelled to part with her furniture. So distressing is this woman's case, and so respectable a character does she appear to be, that some of the other women have helped her out of their own small pittance, &c. Every day I feel more thankful for the good your Society is doing; upwards of 30 are receiving help from you at this place. I only wish those who have contributed large sums to your Society could witness the gratitude of these poor women for the help they receive; they would indeed feel more than repaid for all they have done."

SOLDIERS' WIVES AT VARNA.

Mr. Ray, formerly the active and intelligent Inspecting Officer of this Association, writes from Varna to the following effect:—

"Varna, August 4, 1854.

"Sir,—I beg to draw your attention to the condition of the poor women here. Many of them have died, and others are dying; others who are in a state of convalescence, are not able to proceed further with their regiments, and the men are expected to leave this in about 14 days; and these poor creatures, emaciated and dried with the sun, will be left in a foreign land without any protection or home whatever. What I thought of was, to provide a house and food for such as have none; most of them have blankets, but to those who have not I would propose lending them some, and to encourage those who are able to get about to wait on the sick, cook, and wash. If your Committee is pleased to approve of this plan, I shall be most happy to superintend the whole matter, and I am quite sure it would relieve many a poor man of intense anxiety. The cold weather will be soon setting in, then what will these poor women do? If the ladies in England would send us a little flannel, a few blankets, and left-off garters, they would be rendering us a great service, &c. The great work that is going on for the wives and families of the soldiers by means of the Association in which you take so prominent and energetic a part, causes abundant joy to the husbands and fathers here; and when I remind them of what is doing, they seemed overjoyed, and many thanks are expressed both to yourself, and the Committee, and benevolent friends, for the sympathy shown them. Many are now dying from cholera and fevers, and doubtless many who are cared for by your Association are really widows, but news of the fact may not have reached them. They have not yet entered the field, but every day the order for embarkation for the Crimea is expected, where doubtless many will fall, and these poor fellows have their eyes upon your Association to protect their wives and children. I am happy to say I have been well received by the men generally; to point them to the 'Lamb of God' that taketh away the sins of the world, is my ostensible work, and to tell them of the great work going on in England for the good of those they left behind, is in perfect keeping, &c. should immediately be sent to Varna, and the sum of £100 should be granted for the use of these women. On the 1st September grants to the amount of £41 were sent by steam to Constantinople, addressed to the care of the Consular-General, who was requested to use his discretion in forwarding them to Varna. A bill of exchange for £100 was also sent to the same authority, with instructions and authority to Mr. Ray to act as the almoner of the Association.

Private letters received by the Committee fully corroborate the fact of the distress of these poor women, for though they receive what are called rations, no other female comforts can be provided for them.

"CANCY, near Varna, August 24, 1854.

"Dear Sir,—I am dated August 5, came to land on the 16th. I have received all your letters except one. You did tell me, my dear, that 7s. a week was what you received from the Association; and although that is a mere trifle in a place like London, yet we ought to be very thankful for it. You say you deeply regret you did not go with me; indeed, my dear wife, much as I desire to be with you, I think it one of the most providential things ever happened for you to be where you are, instead of being here: hardly as you are now, you would be utterly miserable here. We have lost already two married men of cholera. I sleep in the staff tent ever since I got better of the cholera. Every thing is enormously high here; a mouthful of white bread and cheese for supper costs 5d. One thing lately we can always get, a pint of ale for 2d., or porter 1d.; in fact, it is the only thing we relish; for the bread is very bad, and we get nothing but the nasty beef, which we cannot eat, but boil down and make soup of. I get, as I said before, 1s. 10d. a day pay. Out of this, 4d. is stopped for rations, and 2d. a day for mess money; so that by the time I pay for something fit to eat, there is not much left; still I shall, please God, send you all I can, &c. The women here have no way of making money by washing, the water is too far off, &c.

"I am sorry to say I have been very ill, and as it is for the best for me to let you know the whole truth, I must inform you that I have had the cholera; I was very bad when it lasted, but thank God of all goodness for his great mercy, He has restored me. The doctors have been very kind indeed to me; everything I could wish for was got for me; almost all the officers and the colonel came to me and inquired about me constantly. Poor L. M. J. M., and E., and Mrs. L., have all died since my last; also J. R. and S. F. Indeed, my dearest wife, I rely in perfect confidence in my Redeemer, and feel myself quite unworthy of my mercy; and, during the worst of my illness, I felt humbled before Him in whom alone my salvation is sure.

"Your ever loving husband, E. R."

The wife of the writer of this letter (a most excellent non-commissioned officer) was left nearly destitute with five young children. She bears a most irreproachable character, and is most anxious to exert herself to obtain her own livelihood; but what can she do with five young children? Her two eldest girls are entirely provided for by the Association, and she receives a weekly allowance of 7s.

The Committee perceive with pleasure that the authorities are gradually sending them home from the East. Three arrivals of soldiers' families have already been brought before the Committee, for no sooner do they land than they apply to the Association, and it is needless to add how readily their application is always responded to.

WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.

The first efforts of this Association were limited to the immediate relief of the wives of the soldiers ordered on active service, who, in consequence of their having families, were left behind utterly destitute of all means of existence save the temporary out-door parish relief. Since that time the spread and the pestilence have too fatally done their sad work, and many of these poor people have become more hopelessly destitute by the death of their husbands.

The Committee, however, encouraged by the magnificent contributions received from all parts of the world, have found themselves in a position to make the following scale of donations for widows, which is the same that was adopted by the administrators of the Waterloo Fund, in 1815:—

Unanimously resolved:—That relief in the shape of a donation not exceeding the undermentioned sums, be for the same as agreed to by the Waterloo Committee on the 25th of June, 1815, be adopted as a scale for the widows of non-commissioned officers and soldiers now serving against Russia.

"A pension may be granted in the place of the whole or part of such donation, should it appear expedient to the Committee."

Scale of Donation for Widows with Children Dependent for Support.

Rank.	One.	Two.	Three.	Four.	Five.	Six.	Seven.	Eight.
Regt. Maj.	£ 80	100	120	140	160	180	200	220
Sergeant.	40	60	80	100	120	140	160	180

Drummer.	15	20	25	30	35	40	45	50
Private.	10	15	20	25	30	35	40	45

Of Widows the Association has already sixty-four in their books, and of Orphans, 108.

The following letter shows that for the widows of those brave men who perished with their Colonel in the Europa transport, ample provision was made and that the measures adopted for their relief have fully satisfied the officer commanding the depot of the Eniskilling:—

"Canterbury Barracks, July 13, 1854.

"Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge, with many thanks, the receipt of your memorandum, detailing the amount of the donation granted by the Association, of which you are the Honorary Secretary, to the widows and orphans of the five non-commissioned officers and men of the Eniskilling Dragoons, who were lost in the Europa transport.

"The ready and liberal aid thus sent to their relief will, I trust, be effectual to alleviate, in some degree, their distress; and it marks, too, in a way for which I am most grateful, how deeply the Committee of your admirable Association appreciate the bravery and noble conduct of those who stood by their colour to the last.

"Sure I am, from private accounts which I have received, that had all on board done their duty as manfully as those who perished, there would not have been a life lost in the Europa.

"I have not failed to communicate to the officer commanding the Regiment in Turkey the liberality with which the Association have met my application for assistance to the surviving families by a grant of £415.

"I am glad, too, to express my sense of the admirable arrangements of the Society, by which the distribution of this sum has been entrusted to persons best able to judge of the most judicious means of administering, in each individual case, to the permanent relief of the sufferers.

"I have the honour to be, Sir, Your obedient servant,

"F. W. FITZ-NGRAM, Captain,

"Commanding Depot, Eniskilling Dragoons.

"Major Hen. H. L. POCYS, Hon. Sec."

Case 1,540, W. T.—A boy of the 33rd Regiment, whose father and mother both died of cholera in Turkey; a most distressing case. A weekly allowance granted for the orphan's grandfather, with whom the boy was left.

For the five widows and children of the 6th Eniskilling, annuities have been purchased, large sums having been subscribed for them in addition to the grant from this Association; the amount will render them independent for their lives.

For the other widows, donations, varying from £5 to £10, have been granted immediately on the receipt of official notifications of their husbands' deaths.

Most of them were already on the books of the Association, and had been receiving relief for some time: it is proposed to grant them an annual pension as long as they remain widows, and the resources of the Association continue available.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

Effectually to prevent the recurrence of such distressing scenes as those which gave rise to the formation of this Association, the Committee have had in consideration a plan which it is hoped might tend materially to raise the condition of the soldier's wife, and secure a provision for the soldier's widow.

As there is no probability, under existing circumstances, of so raising the pay of the soldier as to enable him when married to apportion a sufficient share of it to his family while he is on active service, the Committee are of opinion, that a National Fund should be established, of which the invested capital of this Association shall be the foundation, and to which the public and the soldier shall be invited to subscribe annually.

This fund to provide pensions for widows and orphans, as well as temporary assistance to wife and family, who, having become subscribers, may be ordered on active service.

The exact subscription which the soldiers would be called upon to pay, must depend on the amount of public support the National Fund may receive; it must be always a very small sum from the soldier; but the Committee are convinced that the country will approve of this proposed attempt to encourage habits of obedience and prudent foresight amongst the married soldiers of the British Army.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.

THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Peat Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at £4 per ton, and, in quantities less than half a ton, at 5s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Termini of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 26, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seedsmen, Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

TEETH.—By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.—Newly-invented and Patented application of Chemically-prepared White India-rubber in the construction of Artificial Teeth, Gums, and Palates.—Mr. PHILIP MOSLEY, Surgeon-Dentist, 61, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.—A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of CHEMICALLY-PREPARED WHITE INDIA-RUBBER as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features, as the following:—All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied; a natural elasticity, inhering wholly unobtainable, and a fit perfect with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the Chemically-prepared White India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 61, Lower Grosvenor-street, London; 22, Gay-street, Bath; 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dux, of Bournemouth, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 34 in. long, 24 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

[GRATIS.]

THE FIELD OF WAR.

THE NEXT MAIL TO THE BLACK SEA.

Notices have been posted at the Dockyard-gates, Woolwich, that letters for the Black Sea will be dispatched by her Majesty's paddle-wheel steam-vessel Gladiator on the 10th of October inst., from Portsmouth. Letters for seamen and marines and boys serving in the Black Sea will be forwarded by this opportunity if posted in time and marked, "By her Majesty's steam-vessel Gladiator." The postage of 1d. must be paid on the letter at the time of posting it.

INVASION OF THE CRIMEA.

THE ARMY AT SEA.

ADVANCE OF THE FLEET FROM THE DANUBE TO THE CRIMEA.

BALTSCHIK ANCHORAGE, BELOW THE DANUBE.—On the 5th of Sept. in early morning, the Agamemnon fired a gun and made signal to weigh, and before seven o'clock ships and transports had all found and taken their proper positions for the march. I say "march," owing to the appearance of the whole when the divisions were formed in long lines, steadily advancing through the smooth water with all the precision of the movements of a battalion. The weather was beautiful, and favourable as the most implicit believers in augury could wish. The fleet was innermost; then came the Light Division—first, second, third, fourth—cavalry, and provision ships; and this order has been invariably observed. At two o'clock passed Cape Kaliakri.

Sept. 8.—Weather all could be wished. At noon distance from Cape Turkan 118 miles.

Sept. 9.—The white lighthouse upon the little island of Fidonisi (off the Danube) was visible this morning. Towards evening the third division lost distance terribly, owing to the Cyclops, their leader, which did not appear quite adequate for towing so much weight. The Tyemonth assisted her off. The Agamemnon and Caradoc, the latter having on board Lord Raglan and the Duke of Cambridge, leave the fleet to reconnoitre off Sebastopol. We learn by signal that Marshal St. Arnaud is seriously ill.

Sept. 10.—Anchor, shortly after eight o'clock a.m., in twenty-three fathoms' water, and wait intelligence of the French fleet. Only those who are present can form an idea of the wonderful appearance of this immense assembly of ships, anchored out of sight of land.

Sept. 11.—The Agamemnon and Caradoc return to the fleet at 6.30 a.m.; the Sampson also joins. At 11.30 the armada was again on its way. The Highflyer, with Apollo (39th Regiment in tow), leads the third division instead of the Cyclops, which brings up the rear.

Sept. 12.—At noon Eupatoria Point (Crimea) was distant seventeen miles north-east. At 5 p.m. anchor, Eupatoria Point at twelve miles south-east of the squadrons.

Sept. 13.—Under weigh again 7 a.m. The whole anchor at 3 p.m. in front of Eupatoria.

The weather has been generally fine, a few showers during the night and a very heavy hailstorm on the morning of the 12th forming the only exceptions. The water has been perfectly smooth during the whole trip, and the weather is now like our fine days at the end of November in England—cold, though sunny, and strongly indicative of winter. The troops are to land without their knapsacks, carrying with them their great-coats and a blanket, which latter will contain a complete change of clothing. To-morrow early the debarkation will commence. Marshal St. Arnaud is seriously ill, and General Caurobert (a great favourite with the French) is next in command. The united army of English, French, and Turks, here does not exceed 60,000 men; no doubt there is plenty of work for them, but there is also no doubt but they will do it well. Admiral Lyons is entrusted with the sole charge of the proceedings and arrangements concerning the transports. Printed instructions have been issued to each ship, referring to the duties of each on landing the troops, and the whole appears to be admirably designed.

DIVISIONS OF THE FLEET.

The transport fleet was divided into five divisions, to correspond with the four divisions of infantry and the division of cavalry. Exclusive of the steam-tugs Shark, Varna, Circassia, Danube, Brenda, Minna, Pigmy, the fleet consisted of the following vessels, placed in the order in which they sailed:—The Light Division, Lieutenant-General Sir G. Brown, K.C.B., K.H., commanding (on board the Agamemnon.) Steamer Emperor, with Brigadier-General Codrington and 500 of the 7th Fusiliers on board, Captain Macdonell, A.D.C., Colonel Sullivan, Deputy-Adjutant-General, Captain Halliwell, and Colonel Airey, Assistant-Quartermaster-General, &c., towing the Monarch and Harkaway, with portions of the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade and portions of other regiments, Commissariat officers, &c., on board; the Victoria, with remainder of 7th and 23rd Fusiliers on board, towing the Engineer stores and the Royal Horse Artillery in the Talavera and Negotiator; the Andes, with the 33rd Regiment on board, towing the Mary Anna and Calliope, with Royal Artillery on board; the Negera, with the 77th Regiment on board, towing the Echuana and the Pride of the Ocean, with Royal Artillery on board; her Majesty's steamer Fury, with staff, &c., on board, towing the Orient, with the 88th Regiment on board; and the Courier, with the 19th Regiment on board.

The 1st Division, commanded by the Duke of Cambridge, K.G.—The Tonning, with staff, &c., on board, towing Her Majesty and the City of Carlisle, with detachments of regiments and the Royal Artillery; the Simoon, with the Coldstream Guards on board, towing the Palmerston and Edendale, with Royal Artillery; the Kangaroo, with Scots

Fusilier Guards on board, towing the Arnotdale and Caduceus, with the 93rd Regiment on board; the Emen, with the 42nd Regiment on board, towing the Dunbar and the Wilson Kennedy, with the reserve ammunition on board.

The 2nd Division, commanded by Lieutenant-General Sir De Lucy Evans, K.C.B.—The City of London, with headquarters, Lieutenant-Colonel Wilbraham, Deputy-Adjutant-General, Captain Lane Fox, Captain Herbert (Quartermaster-General's department), Captain Thompson, Captain Allix, Captain Gibbons, Captain Boyle, A.D.C.'s, Mr. Power, Acting-Assistant-Commissary-General, Major Emen, and 500 officers and men of the 41st Regiment on board, towing the Paula and Sutlej, with Royal Artillery and portions of the 95th Regiment on board; the Melbourne, with band-quarters of the 41st and 45th Regiments on board, towing the Maori and Eveline, with part of the 95th Regiment and Royal Artillery on board; the Hydaspes, with Brigadier-General Adams and staff and 49th Regiment on board, towing the Sultana and Sir R. Sale, with parts of the 95th Regiment and Royal Artillery on board; the Vulcan, with Brigadier-General Pennefather and staff and the 30th Regiment on board, towing the Timandra, with the 55th Regiment on board; and the Rip van Winkle, with the reserve ammunition and Sappers and Miners on board.

The 3rd Division, commanded by Sir R. England, K.C.B. (on board the Arthur the Great).—The Cyclops, towing the Mary Anne and Asia, with portions of the 28th Regiment and 50th on board; the Tyemonth, with the 14th Regiment on board; the Cottingham, towing the Glenalough and William Jackson, with ditto, ditto on board; the Cunbria, with the 68th Regiment on board, towing the Deva and Escount, with portions of the 50th and 4th on board (the 68th, however, are to go into the 4th Division); the Melway, with siege train on board, towing the Arthur the Great, with head-quarters, staff, and the Royals on board, and the Earl of Shaftesbury, with a grand reserve ammunition on shore; the Highflyer, towing the Apollo, with the 38th Regiment on board.

The 4th Division, commanded by Sir George Cathcart.—The Orinoco, with the Rifle Brigade, 1st battalion, on board, towing the Pedestrian and Bodley, with Royal Artillery &c., on board; the Colombo, with the 20th Regiment on board, towing the Shooting Star and War Cloud, with reserve ammunition and Royal Artillery on board; the Avon, with the 63rd Regiment on board, towing the Negotiator and Arabia, with reserve ammunition on board; the Golden Fleece, with the 21st Regiment on board, towing the Georgiana and the Ganges, with the Artillery staff horses on board. The Harbinger, with head-quarters on board, towing the John Mesterman, with medical stores on board.

The Cavalry, or Fifth Division, commanded by Major-General the Earl of Lucan.—The Simla, with the 4th Light Dragoons on board, towing the Pyrenees and Kenilworth, with the Royal Horse Artillery; the Himalaya, with Major-General Lord Cardigan and staff, the greater portion of the 8th Hussars and 17th Lancers on board, towing two transports, with Royal Artillery on board; the Trent, with portions of cavalry regiments on board, towing the London and Cornwall, with the Royal Horse Artillery and Engineers' stores on board; the Jason, with the 11th Hussars on board, towing the Lady M'Naughten and another transport, with engineers' stores on board.

The Siege Train, on board the Australia, towing the Meliora and Resolute, with grand reserve magazines. The Sydney, towing the Gertrude and Star of the South, with battering train on board.

THE ALLIES VICTORIOUS.

DEFEAT OF THE RUSSIANS—SURRENDER OF EUPATORIA—BATTLE ON THE ALMA—AND FALL OF SEBASTOPOL.

ARRIVAL OF THE ALLIES IN THE CRIMEA.

SEPTEMBER 13.

Lord Raglan to the Duke of Newcastle.

Crimea, Camp above Old Fort Bay, Sept. 18, 1854.

MY LORD DUKE—I do myself the honour to acquaint your Grace that the combined fleets and their convoys appeared in the Bay of Eupatoria on the 13th inst., and in the course of the following night proceeded some miles to the southward, where the allied armies commenced disembarking early in the morning of the 14th—the French in the bay below Old Fort, the English in the next bay nearer to Eupatoria—and before dark the whole of the British infantry, and some artillery, and most of the French troops were on shore.

Shortly before dark, the weather unfortunately changed, and became hazardous to attempt to continue landing either troops or guns.

The surf on the beach impeded the operation the following morning; and since, on more than one occasion; but, thanks to the great exertions of the navy, under the able and active superintendence of Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons, who was charged with the whole arrangement, every obstacle has been overcome, and I am now enabled to report to your Grace that the disembarkations have been completed.

I should not do justice to my own feelings, or to those of the troops I have the honour to command, if I did not prominently bring to the knowledge of your Grace the deep sense entertained by all of the invaluable services rendered by her Majesty's navy.

The spirit by which both officers and men were animated made them regardless of danger, of fatigue, and indeed of every consideration but that of performing an arduous and important duty; and that duty they discharged to the admiration of all who had the good fortune to witness their unceasing efforts to land horses and carriages, with the utmost expedition and safety, under frequently the most trying circumstances.—I have, &c. (Signed) RAGLAN.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c. &c. &c.

SURRENDER OF EUPATORIA.

September 13.

At 5 a.m. this morning all the fleet weighed anchor and stood along the shore of Kalamita Bay towards Eupatoria; yet it was near ten o'clock before all the vessels were in motion, as many of them had anchored in fifty fathoms' water, and were consequently a long time in getting in their cables. All the shipping were collected into one dense mass, with the English line-of-battle ships leading, and the French and Turkish fleets on the off-shore side, with a flying squadron of sailing and steam frigates in advance of all. In this order the whole fleet advanced for some hours, passing along a shore which seemed flat, marshy, and unhealthy. It seemed literally covered with cattle, and stacked upon stacks of hay and barley.

Towards mid-day we approached Eupatoria Point, a long, low, sandy spit of land, which runs off far into the sea, and the Spitfire, Captain Sprutt, was signalled to go ahead and sound. She did so, and reported the water "shoal and dangerous, bottom rocky, with sounding varying from three to nine fathoms." All vessels were accordingly ordered to give a wide berth to the point, while the Agamemnon, Sampson, and Caradoc went forward round the cape to reconnoitre the town of Eupatoria. By three o'clock the whole fleet was well in the bay, though anchored about five miles from shore, until the Spitfire reconnoitred and ascertained the depth of water. As the fleet took up its moorings a small coasting vessel, of about 50 tons, very coolly run up the Russian flag—a piece of impudence of which it is needless to say we took no notice. The Spitfire was close in to shore, and as we approached it was easy to see our movements were watched with intense interest by the good citizens of Eupatoria. The town itself is situated in a little nook of land under the point to which it gives its name. The whole shore is low and marshy, apparently not rising more than four or five feet above the level of the sea. To the south the whole coast is covered with multitudes of windmills, which speak well for our supplies. Between the windmills and the shore are also immense stacks of wheat appears to be wheat and hay. Altogether our way seems to have fallen in pleasant places. To the north of the stacks comes the town. Like all other little seaports, it has its dirty and its clean parts. The former belong to the Turks, though, as far as I am able to judge, the houses here appear far cleaner than any belonging to the same class in Turkey Proper. In this quarter of the town I was disgusted to perceive one or two humdrum mosques and many of the tall minarets, which since my sojourn in the East have become hateful "to mine eyes." But both mosques and minarets were beautifully clean, and evidently kept in thorough and perfect repair. The Russians, so far from interfering with the faith of their subjects, appear to have fostered it; for even in Constantinople some of the mosques are neglected, and out of it, in what may be called the rural districts, the majority appear at a little distance to be little more than dirty ruins.

But it seems quite the reverse at Eupatoria. The more northerly and fashionable quarter of the town was a consolation to see. No one (says the correspondent of the Morning Herald) can appreciate what a comfort it is to see Christian townships until they have dwelt long in the East. All this part of the town was like the best neighbourhoods of Milton and Gravesend—one locale, indeed, bears a strong resemblance to the Marine Parade at Brighton. As the Spitfire came close in the people flocked out by thousands. Even the Turkish population (I suppose from long residence with the Russians) seemed to have shaken off their hereditary nonchalance, and manifested the lively interest they took in our proceedings by looking out of window and in one or two instances coming to the doors of their houses. Four or five hundred Russian soldiers, in their long grey coats and caps, also sauntered along the shore, laughing and talking to one another, and throwing pebbles in the water. These fellows occasionally stopped to gaze in astonishment at the fleet—and well they might—for by this time the sea was black with them. The Spitfire continued surveying, sounding, and scrutinising the shore, keeping a sharp lookout for batteries at the same time, for we were entirely unsupported, the rest of the vessels being more than four miles off. As we came closer in, we had an opportunity of seeing the superiority, and in a manner the opulence of the town—the third in the Crimea. The houses were large and spacious. All were faced with or built of stone—had many windows in their fronts, which opening to the floor led into balconies overlooking the sea. One building, which evidently belonged to the governor of the town, or some other influential personage, was in truth a fine palace with a stately portico, like that of Covent Garden Theatre. There were many others of less pretensions to beauty but equally large and spacious. Further in shore the houses of this Russian quarter appeared equally good, but the shore was too level to permit our seeing the whole extent of the town. To the north of all some fine edifices, in the form of streets and squares, were being built—this speaks well for the prosperity of the place. On Eupatoria Point at the end close to the town is a fine pier of timber, strongly and handsomely built. Near to this are the quarantine buildings and barracks, with a large old fort. The latter mounts no guns, nor did its small garrison of soldiers evince anything but curiosity as we approached it. Satisfied on this head, the Spitfire returned, and moved easily past the town within a quarter of a mile of the beach, to which the people flocked, thinking we were going to communicate. As we passed the Russian quarter, drifting very slowly, and sounding every minute, we had ample time and opportunity to admire the handsome gardens and houses which are near the sea. The balconies of the latter were crowded with ladies and gentlemen—Russians, of course—who, sitting in chairs, were laughing, chatting, and talking with a sans froid and à la grande humeur which we were certainly at a loss to understand.

Some of the gentlemen were in uniform, but the majority were in the plain morning dress of London or Parisian society. The ladies were handsomely dressed, nearly all of them, however, in that peculiar mélange of costume which obtains so much at this time of the year at St. Germain, Boulogne, or Margate. Some of them were eating eel or fruit, pointing out the colossal line of battle ships, thirty-seven of which were now in the bay, and occasionally laughing immoderately. The invasion evidently had no terrors for them; however, if they and the inhabitants generally like it, of course it is no business of ours; on the contrary, it is rather a pleasure to invade people who take it so quietly. They evidently were at a loss to understand the movements of the Spitfire, though in no dread of her; the singular little instruments in the officers' hands for surveying; the eccentric turns which the vessel took for the purpose of getting angles; the number of men in the cabins sounding every minute, and singing out each time their monotonous cry "half seven, shell," surprised, and I think so, amused the worthy Eupatorians. As we passed under the governor's house (I presume so) five or six ladies and gentlemen on horseback were talking to the party in the balcony, and all seemed in the best of spirits and wrapped in astonishment at the enormous extent of the fleet. At this part of the town, also, were carts, precisely like our butchers carts in England, driving up and down the streets one or two private carriages, and about a dozen bathing-machines upon the beach.

After reconnoitring the whole shore, the Spitfire signalled the results of her observations to the flag-ship, and in a few minutes after the Caradoc hoisted a flag of truce, and stood in towards the town. To enforce upon the enemy the value of the maxim that "discretion is the better part of valor," the steam-frigates Vary, Retribution, Sidon, Samson, and Trihuue accompanied the Caradoc. As the latter vessel approached the shore with a white gun-room table-cloth flying at the mast-head, the Eupatorians flocked down to the pier in thousands. Turks, Greeks, and Russians made an indiscriminate rush, and swarmed about the pier and landing-place like bees. I have not yet had time to ascertain what took place at the interview between the authorities of Eupatoria and our flag of truce, but the conversation must have been brief in the extreme, for what could poor Eupatoria do but surrender at discretion. After a delay of five minutes the Caradoc returned, and all our vessels proceeded to anchor for the night off the enemy's coast. A signal has just been made "opportunity for letters to England!"—so I must wind up this unreasonably long despatch. Suffice to say, we have taken Eupatoria not only without firing a cartridge or losing a man, but as if we were conferring a positive obligation upon the inhabitants in condescending to summons their town first, in the ever-to-be-remembered invasion of the Crimea in 1854.

P.S.—Eupatoria surrendered at discretion, and placed all its stores of flour, corn, cattle, &c. at the disposal of the allies. Two thousand Turks, one thousand Zouaves, and the 20th Regiment disembark and take possession of the town at day-break. Captain Brock, R.N., is appointed Governor.

STORMING OF THE RUSSIAN INTRENCHED CAMP (From the London Gazette Extraordinary of Saturday, September 30, 1854.)

War Department, September 30, 1854.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has this day received a letter, of which the following is a copy, addressed to his Grace, by direction of the Earl of Clarendon, accompanied by a telegraphic despatch from Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, of which a copy is also subjoined:—

Foreign-office, September 30, 1854.

"SIR,—I am directed by the Earl of Clarendon to transmit to you, for the information of the Duke of Newcastle, a copy of a telegraphic despatch from Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, dated Constantinople, September 23, and forwarded by her Majesty's Consul-General at Belgrade, under date September 30, 7 a.m., containing intelligence of the storming, by the allied forces, of the entrenched camp of the Russian army, on the heights of the Alma, in the afternoon of the 20th instant.

I am, &c.,

E. HAMMOND.

"Colonel Mundy, &c. &c. &c."

Copy of a Telegraphic Despatch from Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe to the Earl of Clarendon, dated Constantinople, September 23, 1854, and transmitted by her Majesty's Consul-General at Belgrade, under date September 30, 7 a.m.

The entrenched camp of the Russians, containing 50,000 men, with a numerous cavalry and artillery, on the heights of the river Alma, was attacked on the 20th inst., at 1 p.m., by the allied troops, and carried by the bayonet at half-past three, with a loss on our side of about 1,400 killed and wounded, and an equal loss on the side of the French. The Russian army was forced to put itself in full retreat.

LISTS OF KILLED AND WOUNDED.

In order, as early as possible, to relieve the minds of the relatives of soldiers now serving in the expedition against Sebastopol, the Secretary-at-War will cause to be inserted in the London Gazette the names of such non-commissioned officers and soldiers, as well as of officers, who may fall in action, as soon as the returns shall have been received from the army. Until these returns have been received no information can be given.

[These names will also appear in THE FIELD.]

The return of the casualties in the first action cannot possibly be received before the 6th instant.

By order of the Secretary-at-War.

War-office, October 2, 1854.

The Duke of Newcastle feels it his duty, in publishing this telegraphic despatch, to caution the public against expecting any details for several days.

He fears none can be received before Friday the 6th of October.

Everything which is received by the Government will be published immediately.

War Department, September 30, 1854.

(From the London Gazette Extraordinary of Sunday, Oct. 1)
War Department, October 1, 1854.

The Duke of Newcastle has this day received a telegraphic despatch from General Lord Raglan, G.C.B., of which the following is a translation:—

Copy of a Telegraphic Despatch from General Lord Raglan to the Duke of Newcastle, transmitted through Belgrade (not dated, but evidently written from the Crimea on the 21st September).

"The allied armies yesterday attacked the position of the enemy on the heights above the Alma, and carried it after a desperate battle, about an hour and a half before sunset.

Nothing could surpass the bravery and excellent conduct of the troops. The position was very formidable, and defended by a numerous artillery of heavy calibre. Our loss, I regret to add, is very considerable; but no general officer has been wounded. The main body of the army of the enemy was estimated from 45,000 to 50,000 infantry. A few prisoners, amongst whom are two general officers, and two guns, have been taken by the English army.

(Signed)

"RAGLAN."

THE FIRST FRENCH DESPATCH TOUCHING THE BATTLE OF ALMA.

The Moniteur gives the following despatch from Marshal St. Armand to the Marshal Minister-at-War:—

"Evrouard on the Alma, September 20th.

"We met the enemy to-day on the Alma.

"The woody ravine through which the river runs, studded with houses, passable only at three points, and having very steep slopes on the left bank, was occupied by the enemy in great force.

"These slopes were strongly intrenched, and covered by a powerful artillery.

"The allied armies attacked these difficult positions with unparalleled vigour.

"Our soldiers advanced to the assault with cries of 'Fire! Empereur!' and carried all that was before them.

"The battle lasted four hours, and our loss was 1,400 killed and wounded.

"I am as yet ignorant of the loss sustained by the English troops, who fought valiantly against an obstinate resistance."

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE ABOVE DESPATCHES TO THE CITIZENS OF LONDON BY PROCLAMATION AT THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, on receiving from the Duke of Newcastle, on Saturday night, the above important intelligence of the victory of the allied armies over the Russians on the Alma, at once proceeded to make known the glorious news to his fellow-citizens, by proclaiming the fact in front of the Royal Exchange. The letter accompanying the copy of the Extraordinary Gazette, was dated "5 p.m., Downing-street," and the intelligence did not reach the Mansion-house until after nine o'clock. The Lord Mayor, hastily summoning two or three members of his household, immediately left the Mansion-house. His lordship first proceeded to the London Tavern, where the leading members of the corporation were partaking the hospitalities of the new sheriffs of London and Middlesex, and here his lordship, amid the cheers of the company, announced the gratifying intelligence to the assembled guests. The Lord Mayor then, accompanied by Mr. Alderman Wire, Mr. Millard, and several other influential gentlemen, proceeded to the Royal Exchange for the purpose of more publicly proclaiming the news. The civic trumpeter having sounded several times, a crowd of eager spectators soon surrounded the group, upon whose identity a flickering light was thrown by the bull's-eyes of half a dozen policemen's lanterns.

The Lord Mayor, speaking from an elevated position under the portico, said—"Fellow-citizens and gentlemen, I have to announce to you the intelligence of a splendid victory obtained by the allied forces over the Russians in the Crimea. (Loud cheers.) Before I commence reading to you the despatches which I have received on this subject, and in order to give a little more time for our fellow-citizens to assemble, I beg to propose that we give, on this memorable occasion, three good and hearty cheers for our Queen."

This appeal caught the spirit of all present admirably, and her Majesty's name was greeted with three times three good cheers, which might have been heard in St. Paul's Churchyard. A call for a similar compliment to the Emperor Napoleon by a person in the crowd was readily responded to, and his Imperial Majesty's name in the heart of the city of London elicited manifestations as cordial and enthusiastic as could have greeted it in the centre of his own capital.

The crowd in front of the Exchange had by this time increased to some 500 persons, and the Lord Mayor again proceeded to address them. He said—"Fellow-citizens—I have this night received a most important despatch from his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, her Majesty's Minister of War, conveying intelligence of a great victory obtained by the allied forces over the Russians in the Crimea. (Loud cheers.) Permit me to say that I feel my present a most delightful duty. Some few months since it fell to my lot, as the chief magistrate of this city, to announce to you that war had been proclaimed between this country and Russia. I have now the great satisfaction of making known to you that the allied forces have taken the first step towards reducing that barbaric power against which they are engaged within reasonable limits. (Cheers.) I cannot help adding that I feel the interests of humanity and the happiness of the whole human race are all deeply concerned in this victory. (Renewed cheering, and cries of "Bravo, Sidney!") I will now read to you the letter with which I have been honoured by the Duke of Newcastle. The Lord Mayor here read the letter and the accompanying telegraphic message, as it appeared in the Extraordinary Gazette, published on Saturday night. The important passages were received with immense cheering by the crowd, amongst whom great excitement prevailed. Having gone through the communication, the Lord Mayor said:—"Gentlemen, I thank you for your attendance. I cannot but feel proud of this opportunity of addressing my fellow-citizens—the representatives of the freest city in the world—upon an occasion of such vast interest. (Cheers.) I believe this victory will do more to promote the civilisation and happiness of the world than anything which has occurred in Europe during the last fifty years." (Loud cheers.) The proceedings terminated by the Lord Mayor's proposing "nine times nine hearty cheers for the brave, the bold, and the patriotic men who have left our shores to fight the battles and maintain the honour of their country."

This sentiment was received with a deafening burst of acclamations, and was followed by three good cheers for "The French—our Allies."

The Lord Mayor now retired amid the applause of the crowd, having previously announced his intention of publishing immediately the glorious intelligence throughout every quarter of the metropolis.

Letter received by the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor of London.

MY LORD,—Your valuable communication to the public of the news of the victory in the Crimea, printed on unstamped paper, induces us respectfully to warn you that a similar sheet, if published by your lordship before the expiration of twenty-six days, would be a breach of the newspaper act, which, under a penalty of twenty pounds per copy, forbids any unstamped "paper containing news, to be dispersed and made public" oftener than once during that interval. The Board of Inland Revenue are already sorely puzzled in the performance of their duty; if they neglect to notice illegal publications, the stamped press complain that unfair competition is permitted; if, on the contrary, they threaten to take proceedings, the Attorney-General refuses to prosecute. Do not, my Lord, drive Mr. Timm to desperation, by making him feel it to be his duty bootlessly to threaten the Lord Mayor of London with a prosecution for defrauding the revenue. Let, then, your Chamberlain publish the next despatch; and, should one be wanted weekly, let the two Sheriffs take their turns: with the co-operation of the twenty-five Aldermen, the public might even be furnished with unstamped news every day, and thus reconcile the most active public usefulness with the newspaper act. We remain your Lordship's obedient servants,

J. ALFRED NOVELLO, Treasurer,

RICHARD MOORE, Chairman,

C. DOBSON COLLET, Secretary,

Of the Association for Promoting the Repeal of the Taxes on Knowledge.

10, Ampton-place, Gray's Inn-road,
Oct. 1st, 1854.

THE SALUTE IN ST. JAMES'S.—At six o'clock on Monday morning the inhabitants of London were aroused from their slumbers to find that the happy news of victory was not all a dream. From the Tower at the East end, and from St. James's park at the west, the cannons' roar announced the joyful fact that success attended our arms. By direction of Lord Hardinge, 25 guns were fired in St. James's park, and as the Horse-guards clock commenced striking the hour of six, the first report was heard over the metropolis. Dark, foggy, and cold as London was at that hour, hundreds of people left their comfortable homes and made their way to the Park; some in the expectation of hearing fresh news, others to communicate what they knew, to comment on the past and speculate on the future. The guns were fired in the Park to acknowledge the official communications received by the Commander-in-Chief from the Government. The subjects to be discussed were of too exciting a nature to allow the people to disperse, and the crowd increased during the whole of the morning. At twelve o'clock the guns were again fired.

THE LANDING IN THE CRIMEA.

Captains Ducrest and King, of the Sanspareil and Leander, and Commanders Heath and Hillyar, of the Niger and Agamemnon, had the direction of the landing. Everything was done from the orders received from the Agamemnon, which directed the whole disembarkation.

The first Englishman who had the honour of landing in the Crimea was Mr. E. Ball, R.N., who left the Circassian tug for the purpose of running a hawser ashore. Shortly afterwards the French frigates, which ran close in shore to the south of the bay, began to disembark their men. Nearly 5,000 French were landed, and had their skirmishers out all over the country, before an English soldier was disembarked.

From the time the landing was fairly commenced, it never slackened or ceased for one moment until eight or nine o'clock at night, by which time nearly 30,000 men, 800 or 900 horses, and sixteen pieces of artillery were ashore. The French at the same time landed about 23,000 men, with a proportionate amount of guns and horses. The Turks landed more to the south, and nearer to Sebastopol than any. Out here (says a correspondent) it is infra dig. to pay attention to the movements of our Mahometan allies, though in their quiet way they do a deal of work. Yes; the much-abused Turks remain quietly in their well-ordered camp, and live contentedly on the slender rations supplied from their fleet. Their appearance here is very acceptable to the large Mussulman population, and they are very proud of serving on equal terms with their French and English allies. As prices are at present, eggs are twenty-five for 6d.; a good fowl costs 5s. or 6d.; a turkey can be had for 1s. 6d.; a sheep is readily exchanged for a Turkish piece of six piastres, or 1s. Such is the account brought to us from the officers of a foraging party, who ventured a few miles into the interior to one of the native villages. The inhabitants part with supplies readily.

The first of our men landed was about two companies of a line regiment of the Light Division. The Rifles, who should have preceded them, followed almost immediately afterwards. The Countess of Errol accompanied her husband, and landed with him even here. Her ladyship is, I think, the only lady who is now with the army, the others having been compelled by sickness to return to England. It is a singular fact, but one which appeared well known to the Europeans at Varna, that no Englishwoman can reside long in Bulgaria; certainly our experience seems to have proved the truth of the maxim.

Before a thousand of our men had well landed the weather, which had hitherto been beautiful, became suddenly overcast; the water was still a deal calm, but a heavy, continuous rain set in, sufficient to damp the energies, mental and bodily, of the most robust. I may as well mention here that this weather continued without a moment's intermission from about one o'clock on the day of landing until four the following morning.

The instant the brigade of Rifles was landed, the men broke up, and spreading themselves out over a considerable extent of country, advanced inland, followed in due time by the rest of the Light Division. Though every precaution was thus adopted against the possibility of a surprise, yet it soon became evident, even to the most incredulous, that our landing was to be unopposed. The Grenade and Highlanders, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Divisions, followed in their order, though before the latter were ashore, three hours of a dark wet night were already spent.

Sir George Brown and Brigadier-General Airey and Ball landed with the Right Division. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, with the other generals of division, landed also. The latter was much cheered by the men as he rode along the lines, as drenched and cold-looking as if he had swum ashore. The men were put on shore without other knapsacks or tents. Each carried his bed and blanket, three days' provisions of salt beef and biscuit, and two days' water. All officers, no matter what their rank, were not allowed to carry more, nor permitted to take less. When about 10,000 men were landed, the Light Division moved to the south, and took possession of the north portion of the high land on which Staro Ouklepnia formerly existed. The French, who landed lower down, already occupied the southern portion. Our allies had the tri-colour flying, decidedly the most martial-looking flag in the world. The English had their colours in cases, which made them look precisely like bed-posts.

The rapidity with which the landing was effected was almost entirely owing to the steam-tugs, which were brought up for the purpose from Constantinople. Two of these, the Minna and Brenda, which only drew three feet water, landed a complete regiment at each trip. The others towed the artillery and horses ashore with considerable swiftness.

The ground on which we landed was a mere marsh. The higher locality of Staros Oukelenie is soft, tenacious clay, into which one sunk, at every step, up to the ankles. However eligible for disembarking troops, Kalamita Bay, as a sleeping-place, has not one solitary recommendation; yet on its shores, without a rug to shelter them from a regular tempest, some 30,000 English had to pass the night. The French soldiers, who carry their own tents amongst them, were pretty well off; so were the Turks. Our poor fellows had only their endurance, a blanket, and great-coat, to oppose to a tropical storm of about sixteen hours' duration.

About six o'clock some 100 barrels of ammunition for artillery and small arms were landed, and carefully covered over with tarpaulins, and they were the only objects on the beach that night which did not get saturated. After that, and before it grew quite dark, in case of a night surprise, the forces were got into a defensive attitude. The Light Division was advanced, out-lying picquets were posted in all directions, while the main body drew up in regiments and divisions, then piled arms, and lay down upon the wet ground beside them to pass the weary night as they best could. All the rubbish that could be found was collected into heaps, and some huge fires made, which hissed and struggled with the rain, casting a faint dull glare, like the light of a foggy morn. At eight o'clock the rain was falling in torrents, while a cold fierce wind blew in from the sea, which seemed to penetrate to the very bone. Many who had no duties to perform, but merely landed to see the place, would gladly have returned again on shipboard, but that was out of the question, the surf on the beach was tremendous. Those who feared drowning at sea less than getting wet on shore tried to launch their boats, but in vain; none got six feet from the shore without being capsized, and with their crews cast back again high, though not dry, upon the beach. Some boats with stores, which were trying to disembark, were not only thrown on shore, but from the weight in them completely smashed to pieces. Five or six fine large ten and twelve-ton boats were thus destroyed, though fortunately no one was drowned.

The majority of the divisions moved about four miles inland, only the 4th, recently arrived from England, remained close to the sea. Each brigade, as it arrived at its appointed station, sent out its picquet; and the remainder huddled themselves together in their coats and blankets, and so sitting, or lying almost, in pools of water, passed the night. Sleep was out of the question, for the rain and wind seemed to be striving for the mastery. By eleven o'clock the fires on the beach were completely extinguished. The regiments further inland had none, for there not a vestige of wood is to be had. The country, in fact, is a mere marsh; and, for a space of thirty or forty miles, not even a shrub is to be seen. What added to the misery of the scene was, that some of our poor fellows were attacked in the night with cholera, and died upon the bare ground in the course of two or three hours. For these unfortunates there was neither shelter, warmth, nor even light, so the terrible disease had its own way in a very short time. The knowledge of these latter facts added to the gloom of the rest of the men, who, numbed and weary, waited in bitter silence, more expressive than murmurs, for the break of day. Fortunately, at about two o'clock the wind lulled, and at four the weather cleared up and became dry and calm. It was not light until about five o'clock, and from that till eight was perhaps the worst time for all, for we were all saturated, and the raw keen morning air was even worse than the rain. After that the sun came up hot, and the men—leaving their coats, great-coats, and blankets to dry—began scouring the country. The village of Fourla, about three miles distant from the camp, first attracted their attention. Fourla contains about 4000 inhabitants. In its general features it is very like the villages of Turkey, with this one essential difference—it is clean. The houses are neatly thatched and whitewashed, and the people altogether have an air of comfort and independence about them very, very different from the dejected, sullen, ragged, and truly miserable peasantry under the dominion of the Grand Seigneur. Here all were well, and some even gaily dressed in the Turkish and Armenian costume. None wore the turban or the fez, but, in its stead, the round black lamb's-wool cap like the Cossacks, and not unlike those worn in Bulgaria. In the village was an abundant supply of fowls and cattle, also two Cossack soldiers, whom our men took charge of and brought in. These Cossacks had evidently been to the village for the purpose of warning the people to give or sell us nothing, for their manner was distant and suspicious, and they declined entering into any bargain. However, we were in an enemy's country now, and have turned over a new leaf, for the inhabitants of Fourla were informed that if they declined to sell, we would take what was wanted for nothing. This announcement instantly aroused them to a sense of their own interests, and a quantity of cattle and poultry were brought by the commissaries and officers at reasonable prices. At the same time, to prevent the commission of outrages, orders were issued not to leave the line, unless in companies and under the charge of officers. No doubt this order was hastened by the fact that ten of the French were cut off and made prisoners by a party of Cossacks a few hours after our allies had landed.

After leaving Fourla I came down to the beach, distant from the village about seven miles. On the way I found all our men busily engaged in searching for wood and water, which were not to be had, and the want of which began to be severely felt. The very salt beef and biscuit on which they are living make the absence of the latter an intolerable evil. Large parties of men have to be dispatched twice a day for the purpose of procuring in their canteens a small supply of liquid, so foul and brackish that even the horses refuse to touch it until compelled by the most severe thirst. Fourla is the only place where water, such as I have described, is to be had. The troops nearer the sea receive one quart per diem from the ships. Under these circumstances I need hardly say that no one can afford to wash; so that with no toilet, and sleeping on the muddy ground, we are about as dirty a set of invaders as it would be easy to see.

A most extraordinary occurrence, which deserves severe censure, took place on the Friday. Signal was made from the Emperor for all ships to send their sick on board the Kangaroo. In the course of the day the last-named ship was surrounded by hundreds of boats laden with sick men, and the vessel was speedily crowded to suffocation. Before evening she had about 1,500 invalids in all stages of suffering on board. The scene is described as appalling—in fact, too frightful for the details to be dwelt upon. When the time for sailing arrived the Kangaroo hoisted the signal in reply to orders to proceed, "It is a dangerous experiment." The Emperor then signalled, "What do you mean?" The reply was, "The ship is unmanageable." All the day she was lying with the signal up, "Send boats to assistance," and at last orders were given to transfer some of her melancholy freight to other vessels also proceeding to Constantinople. Many deaths occurred on board—many miserable scenes took place, but there is, alas! no use in describing them. It is clear, however, that neither afloat nor on shore is the medical staff nearly sufficient. I myself saw men dying on the beach, on the line of march, and in bivouac, without any medical assistance; and this within hail of a fleet of 500 sail, and within sight of headquarters! We want more surgeons, both in the fleet and in the army. Often—too often—medical aid cannot be had at all; and it frequently comes too late.

THE LANDING PLACE.

The shore was an extraordinary scene of bustle and excitement. Hundreds of launches, pinnaces, and cutters from the men-of-war were coming in every moment laden deep with bags of biscuit and beef, or hay, and buckets of fresh water. As they came in, sailors with life-belts on jumped overboard, and with a hawser, struggled through the surf to land as they best could. Three-fourths of the men near the shore were as naked as they were born, having stripped off all their clothes, and left them on the sand to dry. Some were bathing in the sea, others, who seemed to like the excitement of the scene and the freedom of "undress," were galloping up and down the shore like savages. Many were ill from cold and exposure, and lay about with a quiet listless indifference, pitiable to behold. A large crowd was gathered round the great water tub, clamouring fiercely for a drink, while others wandered up and down, eagerly searching among the stones and sand for sufficient rubbish of any sort with which to make a fire. Every now and then men would arrive from other divisions further inland, with alarming accounts of the approach of Russians, or their defeat and capture, and such news would for a time absorb all interest, and lead to discussion regarding the length of time necessary to take Sebastopol, for none of the men have the faintest doubt but that we will take it, and that speedily. The Duke—the very idol of the soldiers and officers on here, rather thinner than formerly, but all sunburnt and hearty—was busy as a bee cheering up the men, and toiling knee-deep through mud and sand, trying to make all comfortable. Commissaries were looking after the landing of supplies, artillery officers the guns and ammunition, and officers, English and French, naval and military, of all ranks and varieties, were galloping, shooting, and gesticulating to working parties, amid a ceaseless roar from the sea, which alone was enough to deafen every one. Yet amid all this, guns, waggons, artillery, horses, cows, casks of rum and cartridges, cases of shell and bags of biscuit, trusses of hay and sacks of flour, beakers of water and hogsheds of beef, officers' luggage, rope, trenching tools, ambulances, light carts, tents, hospital stretchers, bags of rice and coffee, boxes of spare ammunition, saddles and harness, medicine chests and cots, spars and camp-kettles, bales of clothes, and, in fact, all the indispensable necessities for a large force, were being deposited every minute all along the shore for a distance of nearly three miles. Such a scene of hurry, excitement, bustle, and confusion I never witnessed, and probably shall never witness again. Every one was busy, and every one looked after themselves. Those that did not went to the wall.

FIRST GLIMPSE AT THE COSSACKS.

In our fleet the whole labour and responsibility of the disembarkation rested with Sir E. Lyons. The Admiral remained aloof, and took no share in the proceedings of the day. About nine o'clock one black ball was run up to the fore of the Agamemnon, and a gun was fired to enforce attention to the signal. This meant, "Divisions of boats to assemble round ships, for which they are told off, to disembark infantry and artillery." There was, as I have said, no enemy in sight, but long before the French had landed their first boat's cargo the figure of a mounted officer, followed by three Cossacks, had fallen within the scope of many a glass. The Russian was within about 1,100 yards of us, and through a good telescope we could watch his every action. He rode slowly along by the edge of the cliff, apparently noting the number and disposition of the fleet, and taking notes with great calmness in a memorandum-book. He wore a dark green frock-coat, with a little silver lace, a cap of the same colour, a sash round his waist, and long leather boots. His horse, a fine bay charger, was a strange contrast to the shaggy rough little steeds of his followers. There they were, "the Cossacks," at last!—stout compact-looking fellows, with sheep-skin caps, unsmooth clothing of indiscriminate cut, high saddles, and little fiery ponies, which carried them with wonderful ease and strength. Each of these Cossacks carried a thick lance of some fifteen feet in length, and a heavy-looking sabre. At times they took rapid turns by the edge of the cliff in front of us—now to the left, now to the rear, of their officer, and occasionally they dipped out of sight, over the hill, altogether. Then they came back, flourishing their lances, and pointed to the accumulating masses of the French, on their right, not more than half a mile from them, on the shore, or scampered over the hill to report progress as to the lines of English boats advancing to the beach. Their officer behaved very well. He remained for an hour within range of a Minié rifle, and when the Highflyer stood in close to shore, while he was coolly making a sketch in his portfolio of our appearance, we all expected they were going to drop a shell over himself and his little party. We were glad our expectations were not realised, if it were only on the chance of the sketch being tolerably good, so that the Czar might really see what our armada was like.

Meantime the English boats were nearing the shore, not in the order of the programme, but in irregular groups; a company of a regiment of the Light Division, the 7th Fusiliers, under Lieutenant-Colonel Yew, I think, landed first on the beach to the left of the cliffs; then came a company of the 2nd Battalion of the Rifle Brigade, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Lawrence; a small boat from the Britannia, commanded by Lieutenant Vesey, had, however, preceded the Fusiliers, and disembarked some men on the beach, who went down into the hollow at the foot of the cliffs. The Russian continued his sketching. Suddenly a Cossack crouched down and pointed with his lance to the ascent of the cliff. The officer turned and looked in the direction. We looked too, but a cocked hat rose above the horizon. Another figure, with a similar head-dress, came also in view. The first was Sir George Brown, on foot; the second we made out to be Quartermaster-General Airey.

The scene was exciting. It was evident the Russians and the Cossacks saw Sir George, but that he did not see them. A picket of Fusiliers and Riflemen followed the General at a considerable interval. The Russian got on his horse, the Cossacks followed his example, and one of them cantered to the left to see that the French were not cutting off their retreat, while the others stooped over their saddle-bows and rode stealthily, with lowered lances, towards the Englishman.

Sir George was in danger, but he did not know it. Neither did the Russians see the picket advancing towards the brow of the hill. Sir George was busy scanning the country, and pointing out various spots to the quartermaster-general. Suddenly they turn, and slowly descend the hill—the gold sash disappears, the cocked hat is eclipsed. Cossacks and officer dismount, and steal along by the side of their horses. They, too, are hid from sight in a short time, and on the brow of the cliff appears a string of native carts. In about five minutes two or three tiny puffs of smoke rise over the cliff, and presently the faint cracks of a rifle are audible to the men in the nearest ships. In a few minutes more the Cossacks are visible, dying like the wind on the road towards Sebastopol, and crossing close to the left of the French lines of skirmishers.

Another account says:

"When we landed we heard that Sir George Brown had a narrow escape of being taken prisoner. He was the first to land, and pushed on without sending vintettes or men in front, though he took the precaution, very fortunately, to bring up a few soldiers with him. The Cossacks, who had been dodging him, made a dash when they were within less than a hundred yards. The General had to run, and was only saved from capture by the fire of the Fusiliers. The Cossacks bolted. The first blood spilt in this campaign was that of a poor boy, an arabee, who was wounded in the foot by the volley which dislodged them."

Saturday, September 16.

The disembarkation of cavalry and artillery continues. Lord Cardigan started on a reconnaissance this morning, with a portion of the 5th Russian, 13th Light Dragoons, 250 Rifles of the 1st Battalion, and two Horse-Artillery guns. They went twenty-five miles, saw no Cossacks, returned very much fatigued, and suffered severely from want of water. The horses had nothing to drink from the time they left the ships till Sunday morning—more than thirty hours.

THE FIRST NIGHT ASHORE.

Sunday, September 16.

Few of us will ever forget that night. Scarcely were 27,000 Englishmen more misadvised. The beach was almost cleared, the troops had marched off to their several quarters, the Light Division about six miles in advance, the 1st Division two miles nearer the shore, the 2nd Division on the cliffs and hills, and a part of the 3rd Division on the slope of the hill. No tents were sent on shore, partly because there had been no time to land them, partly because there was no certainty of our being able to find carriage for them. Towards night the sky looked very black and lowering; the wind rose, and the rain fell. The showers increased in violence about midnight, and early in the morning the water fell in drenching sheets, which pierced through the blankets and great-coats of the homeless and tentless soldiers. It was their first bivouac—a hard trial enough in all conscience, worse than all their experiences of Bulgaria or Gallipoli, for there they had their tents, and now they learned to value their canvas coverings at their true worth. Imagine all these old generals and young lords and gentlemen exposed hour after hour to the violence of pitiless storms, with no bed but the reeking puddle under the saturated blankets or bits of useless waterproof wrappers, and the twenty odd thousand of poor fellows who could not get "dry bits" of ground, and had to sleep, or try to sleep, in little holes or watercourses—no fire to cheer them, no hot gruel, and the prospect of no breakfast; imagine this, and add to it that the nice "change of linen" had become a wet abomination, which weighed the poor men's kits down, and you will admit that this "sensation" was of rather a violent character, particularly as it came after all the luxuries of a dry ship stowage. Sir George Brown slept under a cart tilted over. The Duke had some similar contrivance. Sir D. L. Evans was the only general whose staff had been careful enough to provide him with a tent. In one respect the rain was of service; it gave them a temporary supply of water, but then it put a fire out of the question, even if the men could have scraped up wood to make it. The country is, however, quite destitute of timber.

FRENCH ATTACK AT THE MOUTH OF THE RIVER ALMA.

When some of the large French war-steamer had landed their troops, a few of the heaviest armed continued slowly steaming south, reconnoitring the coast towards Sebastopol. They had only proceeded a few miles when they came abreast of Alma; the little town and river where, after leaving Engharator, it was originally proposed to land the men, and where a Russian force of some 10,000 or 12,000 men was encamped on the hills above it. As the French steamers slowly steamed in to within 600 yards of the shore the Russians most unwisely advanced as if to meet them on the beach in masses of battalions. Not content with this display of courage the enemy brought up some thirty or forty light field-pieces, and commenced firing on the frigates, which were completely within range, but against which they might as well have used pea-shooters as six-pounder guns. The French, who took the matter very coolly—as they well might replied with murderous volleys from 56 to 65-pounders, shot and shell. In a second the Russians were convinced of their error and commenced a retreat; but the French continued their firing while in range, and as a parting benediction all the frigates engaged gave a general broadside. The French had not a single man killed, and I believe not even wounded. The Russians left both disabled guns and ammunition carriages, with a number of killed upon the ground from which they were foolish enough to engage the frigates.

FURTHER DESPATCHES RECEIVED IN LONDON ON WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY.

Berlin, Tuesday, October 3.

A telegraphic despatch has been received here direct from St. Petersburg. It says that Prince Menschikoff has telegraphed, under date of September 26, that he has withdrawn his troops, unmolested, from before Sebastopol towards Baktshi-Serai. There he will await reinforcements from Kertsch and Perckop. He adds that Sebastopol had not been attacked up to the 26th September. [Despatches from Prussia are too Russian to be over-true.—Ed.]

Vienna, Tuesday, October 3.

Several private despatches received here to-day confirm intelligence received from various quarters relative to the fall of Sebastopol. No official confirmation, however, has yet reached us, but an official despatch from St. Petersburg, dated the 1st inst., stating that advices from Prince Menschikoff of the 26th (?) made no mention of disastrous events, causes some anxiety here. [Prince Menschikoff's despatch to St. Petersburg is doubtless dated the 20th, not the 26th, for his last despatch was eleven days en route.]

The Vienna papers publish the following:—"Five hours after the bombardment, Fort Constantine blew up; 10,000 Russians were buried in its ruins. Prince Menschikoff fled to Fort Alexander, where 18,000 Russians shortly surrendered. The allied fleets simultaneously destroyed the outer harbour, forts, and vanguard of the Russian fleet. Prince Menschikoff is reported to have unconditionally surrendered on the evening of September 26th."

The Moniteur (Paris) contains a despatch from Bucharest announcing the fall of Sebastopol, and adds that it had been forwarded to the French Government from Vienna by M. de Buol, who ordered M. de Hubner to congratulate the French Government, in the name of the Emperor of Austria, "on the glorious success which had attended the French arms in the Crimea."

We have received from a correspondent at Vienna, by Submarine and European Telegraph, the following despatch:—"On the 23rd Fort Constantine was destroyed by the allies, and Fort Alexander taken. On the 24th all the redoubts and forts around Sebastopol, all the batteries, and the arsenal, were in the hands of the allies. The flags of the allies were hoisted on the tower of the Church of St. Vladimir. It is believed that the day on which Prince Menschikoff surrendered at discretion was the 26th. It is said that the remainder of the Russian fleet is safe in the hands of the allies."

This glorious intelligence is thus confirmed by way of Paris:—"A private telegraphic despatch states that at the end of a second battle gained by the allies they bombarded Fort Constantine, the Citadel, and the fleet, all of which surrendered. The Russians have lost 18,000 men in killed and wounded, and 2,000 prisoners. Six ships of the line and Fort Constantine have been destroyed."

RUMOUR OF THE FALL OF SEBASTOPOL.

The Turkish Minister presents his compliments to the Editor, and begs to transmit to him herewith a telegraphic despatch which he has received to-day from the Turkish Ambassador at Vienna, and which is an unquestionable confirmation of the fall of Sebastopol.

Bryanston-square, October 2.

VIENNA, October 2.

"The French Embassy and the Austrian Government have received from Bucharest, under date 6 p.m., Sept. 30, the following telegraphic despatch:—

"To-day, at noon, a Tatar arrived from Constantinople with despatches for Omar Pasha; his Highness being at Silistria, the despatches had to be forwarded to him at that place.

"The Tatar announces the capture of Sebastopol; 18,000 Russians were killed and wounded, 22,000 made prisoners; Fort Constantine was destroyed, and other forts, mounting 200 guns, taken.

"Of the Russian fleet, six sail of the line were sunk, and Prince Menschikoff had retired to the bottom of the bay with the remaining vessels, declaring that he would burn them if the attack continued.

"The allied commanders had given him six hours to consider, inviting him, at the same time, to surrender, for the sake of humanity.

"A French general and three Russian generals, all wounded, have arrived at Constantinople, which city was to be illuminated for ten days.

"We expect to-morrow the official report of the above intelligence from Omar Pasha."

MISCELLANEOUS INCIDENTS AND MEMORANDA.

CAMP, NEAR THE SALT LAKES, CRIMEA, Sept. 18.—A French sentry challenged a passer-by about two hours after tattoo, on the evening of the 16th—no answer; the challenge was repeated, and the sentry then fired. It turned out to be a French sergeant, who, for some unexplained reason, had not replied to the challenge. He was shot dead. The report caused an alarm in the French camp. It spread like wildfire through the light division, and on to the Guards' camp, and there was a general rush to arms. The night was quite dark, and the general impression was that the Cossacks were among us. They had been seen in the neighbourhood of the camp by the outposts the same evening, and were burning forage. A whole village was destroyed by them a short distance in advance of us. An hour or two before the alarm, the tents of some of the regiments of the Light Division (English) had arrived, and might have come on before a proper arrangement of the arms, &c., could be made, so that there was some confusion in consequence of the sudden alarm. It was a useful lesson, however.

WE HAVE HEARD OF A DASHING THING done by some of the 7th and the Rifles (English), who were among the earliest arrivals. On reaching the rising ground they observed five Russian bullock-waggons, guarded by some Cossacks, in the distance; they immediately gave chase, and the enemy at once fled without striking a blow; on looking round they saw a dozen more at a small distance, which they captured in like manner, making in all eighty-four waggons, containing flour, 160 oxen, and six camels. These spolia prima of the war were probably the baggage-waggons of the Russians retreating on Sebastopol.

DURING THE DISEMBARKATION the barren and desolate beach, inhabited but a short time before only by the sea-gull and wild-fowl, was swarming with life. From one extremity to the other bayonets glistened, and red coats and brass-mounted shakos gleamed in solid masses. The air was filled with our English speech, and the hum of voices mingled with loud notes of command, cries of comrades to each other, the familiar address of "Bill" to "Tom," or of "Pat" to "Sandy," and an occasional shout of laughter. Very amusing was it to watch the loading and unloading of the boats. A gig or cutter, pulled by eight or twelve sailors, with a paddle-box boat, flat, or Turkish pinnace in tow (the latter purchased for the service), would come up alongside a steamer or transport in which troops were ready for disembarkation. The officers of each company first descended, each man in full dress. Over his shoulder was slung his haversack, containing what had been, ere it underwent the usual process of cooking, 4½ lb. of salt meat, and a bulky mass of biscuit of the same weight. This was his ration for three days. Besides this each officer carried his great-coat, rolled up and fastened in a hoop round his body, a wooden canteen to hold water, a small ration of spirits, whatever change of under-clothing he could manage to stow away, his forage cap, and, in most instances, a revolver. Each private carried his blanket and great-coat strapped up into a kind of knapsack, inside which was a pair of boots, a pair of socks, a shirt, and at the request of the men themselves, a forage cap; he also carried his water canteen, and the same rations as the officer, a portion of the mess cooking apparatus, firelock and bayonet of course, cartouch box and fifty rounds of ball cartridge for Minié, sixty rounds for smooth-bore arms. As each man came creeping down the ladder Jack helped him along tenderly from rung to rung till he was safe in the boat, took his firelock and stowed it away, removed his knapsack and packed it snugly under the seat, patted him on the back, and told him "not to be afeard on the water; 'treated 'the sojer,' in fact, in a very kind and tender way, as though he were a large but not very sagacious 'pet,' who was not to be frightened or lost sight of on any account, and did it all so quickly that the large paddle-box boats, containing 100 men, were filled in five minutes. Then the latter took the paddle-box in tow, leaving her, however, in charge of a careful coxswain, and the same attention was paid to getting the 'sojer' on shore that was evinced in getting him into the boat, the sailors (half or wholly naked in the surf) standing by at the bows, and handing each man and his accoutrements down the plank to the shingle, for fear 'he'd fall off and hurt himself.' Never did men work better than our blue-jackets; especially valuable were they with horses and artillery, and their delight at having a horse to hold and to pat all to themselves was excessive. When the gun-carriages stuck fast in the shingle, half a dozen herculean seamen rushed at the wheels, and, with a 'give way, my lads—all together,' soon spoked it out with a run, and landed it on the hard sand. No praise can do justice to the willing labour of these fine fellows. They never relaxed their efforts as long as man or horse of the expedition remained to be landed, and many of them, officers as well as men, were twenty-four hours in their boats.

TWO OF LORD RAGLAN'S HORSES were lost in attempting to land them, and a transport boat which carried Colonel Bell's (of the 1st Royals) luggage and horse was upset, and not only did the gallant veteran lose his kit, but his groom also, melancholy to relate, lost his life in the surf; it is supposed his head was dashed against the boat. One night's exposure told hard on the men, as was shown by the increased sick lists, and one or two yawning graves, the first, but I fear not to be the last, in the Crimea. The day was marked both by a mishap and a piece of good luck on the part of our allies, for nine Zouaves out of a large straggling party on a marauding expedition were captured by a band of Cossacks, who fell suddenly on them; this was compensated by the seizure by the Spahis of a travelling party, apparently a Russian gentleman's family, who were proceeding with an escort of soldiers towards Sebastopol. Seventeen of the escort were captured with them; and the whole party formed a discourteous-looking centre of attraction opposite St. Arnaud's tent in the French camp.

THE PLACE SELECTED FOR DISEMBARKATION is just in the centre of the Bay of Kalamita, where any one possessing a good map of the Crimea will observe a small lake, the centre one of three, of which the most northern and the largest bears the name of Lake Sasik. At the southern extremity of this little sheet of water just mentioned—as yet unhonoured by a name, on a fine gravelly beach, which at about twenty yards from the water slopes into a grassy plain, which appears to extend to the base of mountain fastnesses, amongst which nestle Simferopol and Batehesarai, the fallen seats of Tartar royalty—there landed far the greater portion of the British army; the allies landed about two miles further to the southward, at the beach between the sea and the third lake.

ON THE 16TH OF SEPTEMBER our people made a most satisfactory capture on shore—provisions for a week for 7,000 men. It was on its way to Sebastopol, with an escort, when it was captured. The inhabitants are taken all a-hack by the English paying them for everything, and are beginning to get quite civil, and bring carts, fruit, &c., down here for sale.

FRAGMENTS FROM LOGS AND JOURNALS.

KAVARNA BAY, Sept. 6.—The fleet and troops are now all assembled here, and, from the number of men-of-war and transports at anchor in the bay and along the coast, a very formidable appearance is presented. We have just received notice that we sail to-morrow morning. The following is the list of transports conveying the regiments of the Light Division. These are to lead the way—to form in line along the coast, and the troops are to be disembarked before those of any other division. As soon as the troops are on shore, the transports will leave, and their places will be taken by the vessels of the Second Division, and so on until all are disembarked.

TRANSPORTS OF LIGHT DIVISION.—No. 60, Monarch, and No. 39, Harkaway, towed by steamer 67, Emperor (Capt. dead). No. 98, Talavera, and No. 89, Lord Raglan, towed by steamer 72, Victoria. No. 42, Mary Ann, and No. 43, Calliope, towed by steamer 100, Audes, No. 44, Echunga, and No. 21, Pride of the Ocean, towed by steamer Megera. No. 78, Orient, and No. 50, Courier, towed by steamer Fury.

The staff of the division, and head-quarters of the 7th Fusiliers, are on board the Emperor. The 88th, or Connaught Rangers, on board the Orient; and the 19th Regiment on board the Courier, are towed by the Fury—the vessel the name of which is already so familiar in connexion with its late daring entry into the harbour of Sebastopol. The weather is favourable, and the wind is in the right direction to carry us to the Crimea.

NEIGHBOURHOOD OF EUPATORIA.—Bullocks are driven in by the Tartars for sale in the camp. Water is the greatest desideratum, there being none within four miles (the lake is salt), and that very indifferent; the value of a bottle of pure water far exceeds that of a similar quantity of wine or spirits. Two or three Russian ladies travelling and several soldiers have been taken to-day; the former, I suppose, have been politely escorted to some village for security; but the capture that excites the greatest admiration is that of several dromedaries, fine, strong, aristocratic-looking brutes, who, treating the weight attached to them as nothing, appears as though they would say, "We are the fellows to drag your siege-train for you."

CRIMEA.—The following is a letter from an officer on board her Majesty's ship Himalaya, dated Kalamita Bay, September 17:—"Since I wrote you on the 4th inst., the expedition has taken its departure from Varna, and, as you may see from the date above, arrived at its long-expected destination. It sailed from Baltshik on the morning of the 7th inst., steering N.E. by E., with orders to rendezvous forty miles west of Cape Tarkan, and such a scene as this enormous and formidable flotilla, when under way and in the prescribed order of sailing, offered, no one, unless present, could realise. The renowned Spanish Armada is recorded to have been numerous; so it might, but in those days steamers of 3,550 tons and sailing ships of the same tonnage were not in existence, so that no comparison can be instituted between the two. Each division—viz., Light, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th—carried lights at the mizen-peak, corresponding to the number of their division; we were in the 5th, consequently carried five lights vertically, and at night, when every ship—say, 400 in number—was lighted up, the scene was of the most extraordinary and most interesting description. We experienced most lovely weather, gradually becoming cooler as we went north. On the 8th we were at sea; the Agamemnon and some steam-frigates, went down towards Sebastopol, and we passed the French and Turkish fleets, consisting of eighteen sail of the line and some six frigates. On the 9th anchored in twenty-six fathoms water, out of sight of land, but abreast of Cape Tarkan, forty miles west. On the 10th, Sunday, remained at anchor. On the morning of the 11th, the Agamemnon, &c., returned, and soon after signal was made to leave short, and prepare for sea. At noon weighed, and proceeded S.E. Signal, 'Re rendezvous thirty miles W. of Sebastopol.' At night again in sight of the French fleet, the appearance of which when lighted up was that of a huge town broken adrift and come to sea. On the 12th, early in the morning, made the land, and as we approached it, could see the villages and cattle quite plain, and, as is always the case, some saw numerous troops and parks of artillery drawn up ready to receive us; but all of which turned out to be large hay-rieks and quantities of corn in course of preparation for hoisting. We could imagine the terror of the peaceable inhabitants seeing such a force bearing down upon their yet undisturbed shores, putting one somewhat in mind of the cultivated parts of Sussex about Chichester. We had during the day a severe hailstorm, which we hoped would clear the atmosphere and take away from us the cholera, from which we suffered severely, losing four seamen and five soldiers. At 9 a.m. of the 13th got under way and proceeded as per signal S.E. into Kalamita Bay, and at 3.15 anchored off the town of Eupatoria (Koslof). This immense flotilla of men-of-war and transports looks from the shore, like the masses of shipping clustered on the Thames gathered to one point. At night, when their lanterns are hoisted, the whole looks like a populous city lighted as far as the eye can reach. All the vessels are drawn up in immense lines, with a front extending over nine miles, and with an unknown depth—for the rigging and sails of the distant transports belonging to the expedition being lost far below the horizon, and after we had anchored, stragglers arrived every hour for two or three days."

OUTPOST DUTY.—Sept. 16th.—The usual routine of the morning, and paraded in marching order at three o'clock. About 10 p.m. the pickets came running into the encampment, shouting that the Cossacks were upon us. As you may imagine, being so disturbed, a pretty scene of confusion ensued; although, I must say, a smarter turn-out could never be surpassed. You may depend upon it the men did not stand much on etiquette on such an occasion—some turned out with arms and accoutrements and shirts only, and others without trousers and boots. As soon as they got their arms they began to load, &c., without receiving orders from any one—acting on the old adage "Self-preservation is the best order." However, officers and men were at their posts, eager for a touch with the enemy; but after standing for a short time in uncertainty, it proved to be a false alarm, and we were ordered to lie down again, which we did, but fully accoutred, and in less than half an hour not a sound could be heard in the camp but the cry of "All's well" from the sentries.

ANXIETY AND EXCITEMENT IN THE METROPOLIS.

DESPATCHES PUBLISHED ON FRIDAY IN THE MORNING JOURNALS.

A placard was posted on the Bourse at Paris on Thursday, denying the truth of the intelligence as to the fall of Sebastopol, said to have been brought to Omar Pasha by a Tatar. This notification is as follows:—

VIENNA, October 4.

"THE MINISTER OF FRANCE TO THE MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

"The intelligence said to have been brought by a Tatar to Bucharest is contradicted by further advices from that city.

"It was an exaggeration of the battle on the Alma, and we are still without later intelligence from Constantinople than the 24th.

"The Austrian Consul at Odessa has telegraphed to his Government that the struggle had recommenced from the 25th to the 27th, on which day the allies were posted on the Belbek, ten versts from Sebastopol."

A further despatch from our correspondent at Paris states that it was asserted that the Russian intrenchments on the Belbek had been carried, after a third battle, and that the allied generals were preparing to lay siege to Sebastopol in regular form.

Our correspondent also informs us that the French Minister for Foreign Affairs has received a despatch identical with the one which appears in the Extraordinary Gazette.

We have since received the following most important despatch:—

"MARSEILLES, Thursday Evening.

"The Nil, which left Constantinople on the 25th, has arrived with despatches.

"The loss of the English at the battle of the Alma amounts to 2,000 men.

"That of the French is not so great.

"General Bonet is among the killed.

"Lord Burghersh, who left Malta in the Fury before the Nil, with despatches for the English Government, has not yet arrived.

THE BATTLE ON THE ALMA.

LATEST FROM THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.

We are requested to publish the following notification:—

"As no account has yet been received of the arrival at Marseilles of a steamer from Constantinople with the details of the battle on the heights of the Alma, the Duke of Newcastle thinks it right to make known that he fears the account of the casualties on that occasion cannot be published BEFORE MONDAY AT THE EARLIEST.

"War Department, October 5, 8 p. m."

THE GREAT SEBASTOPOL HOAX.

Last Saturday afternoon the Emperor of France announced (it was said) to his staff at a review that Sebastopol had fallen. His Majesty's words were, "Sebastopol est pris!" The Moniteur in confirmation, published the telegraphic despatch, dated Bucharest, Sept. 28, from the French consul in the capital of Wallachia, that such event had taken place. The Vienna press also gave insertion to a series of apparently confirmatory despatches, all dated the 28th ultimo. Later, the telegraphs gave the same news under date of the 30th, with remarks that the intelligence was brought to Varna by a steamer, which fell in with another steamer bound to Constantinople.

The bubble has now burst. The telegraphic despatch issued in the Extraordinary Gazette of last night, from Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, is dated Sept. 30th, at 9.30 p.m. In the note, signed "E. Hammond," from Lord Clarendon, it is stated that the despatch was forwarded from Bucharest by her Majesty's consul-general at half-past three o'clock the same day. This beats Gulliver! Only six hours from Bucharest to Constantinople!!! From Bucharest to Varna or Kustendji, by the ordinary road, is just upon 100 miles, and there is no regular conveyance, no relays of horses, nor no established post. From Kustendji to Constantinople is 220 miles, or at this time of the year 19 hours' good steaming; and the distance from Varna being 180 miles, the Banskoe would do well to go over the space in 15 hours. To test still further this Bucharest news, we must look at the place of disembarking the siege guns. The telegraph makes our ships land the siege guns at Balaklava, to drag through a mountain gorge, and over lofty hills at the south of Sebastopol, for siege purposes on the north.

However, this telegraph is valuable in other respects. It bears date the 30th September (at night), from Constantinople, so that the tale of the capture of Sebastopol on the 25th or 26th September is blown to the winds, for the Banskoe is declared to have left the Crimea on the evening of the 28th ultimo, two days after the reported capture of the Russian stronghold.

Further, it upsets the yarn of the steamer on the 26th or 27th (the day is doubtful) meeting the other steamer bound to Constantinople with the important news of the surrender of the forts of Sebastopol; for the despatch of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, though of the 30th September, is silent on the subject. It took about four days for our ambassador's despatch to reach Belgrade, in Servia, where the telegraph commences, yet we are to believe that a despatch from Bucharest to Constantinople was delivered in six hours! What a pity our agent at Bucharest did not give the name of some officers as voucher for his authority.

DESPATCHES RECEIVED IN LONDON ON FRIDAY EVENING, October 6.

(By Submarine Telegraph.)

"Marseilles, Friday.
"The Fury, which left Constantinople Sept. the 27th, has arrived here.

"Up to the 24th there had been no further fighting in the Crimea.

"The 23rd Regiment lost all its officers but three, of whom Captain Bell was the senior.

"Colonel Ainslie was killed in planting a standard on the heights of Alma.

"General Brown had a horse killed under him.

"The want of cavalry was much felt in the pursuit towards Sebastopol.

"Touching Sebastopol, it is confidently stated that the second line of defences has been carried. The place was commanded by the allies, who occupied the heights.

"The Russian naval division had made an unsuccessful endeavour to push out with fourteen sail."

"On the 19th of September there was a skirmish between English and Russian cavalry: six English were wounded, and twenty-five Russians killed."

"On the 25th of September, when within sight of Sebastopol, Lord Burghersh set out with a despatch. [He is expected to arrive in London to-day (Saturday).—Ed.]

"The Russians had sunk four of their vessels of the line at the entrance of the port.

"The English fleet before Sebastopol, was constantly firing shells and balls.

"The capture of Sebastopol is not confirmed. It is, however, invested.

"The Moniteur announces the occupation of Balaklava, of which the allies have already made a considerable place.

"The various columns of the army had to cross several rivers in succession, in order to turn the Gulf of Sebastopol, and enter the mountain country, before they could arrive at Balaklava.

"The siege artillery had been landed at Balaklava from the ships which were blockading Sebastopol—Balaklava being now included in the operations of the allied expedition.

"How the allied army gained this new position is not stated.

"Prince Menschikoff stood with only 20,000 men at Baktchi-Seraï, awaiting reinforcements.

WHEN WILL OFFICIAL NEWS ARRIVE?

The despatch of Lord Raglan the day after the battle of Alma reached London on Sunday, the 1st October, via Belgrade. This was ten full days. The despatch of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, also via Belgrade, reached London on the night of Saturday, 30th September, or over nine days. Suppose the batteries of Sebastopol were taken by the allies on the 26th of September, the official news could be brought to London by the night of the 5th of October, or early in the morning of Friday, the 6th. Thus, Sebastopol to Constantinople is 350 miles; supposing the steamer with despatches from Lord Raglan left Sebastopol on the night of the 26th of September, and performed twelve miles per hour under steam, this would bring her to Constantinople early in the morning of the 28th. If the same packet could be spared to proceed on to Varna, a distance of 180 miles, or to Kustendji, and performed the passage in fifteen or seventeen hours, this would bring her to her destination late the same night. Supposing couriers were ready to start on horse, the distance to Belgrade could be done in four days, as before, which would bring the despatch to Belgrade on the evening of the 2nd of October, and this intelligence might have been telegraphed to London early in the morning of Tuesday, the 3rd inst. But this presupposes no delays. All the telegraphs up to Wednesday purported to come via Bucharest. The Anglo-French authorities would not transmit their despatches in that roundabout manner. The British army left a depot at Varna, and it is not likely any official intelligence will be communicated through any other channel except Kustendji. All announcements coming from Vienna via Bucharest, or from any part of the left bank of the Danube, should be received with reserve.

FURTHER ACCOUNTS FROM THE CRIMEA.

(From the London Gazette Extraordinary of Thursday, Oct. 5.)

War Department, October 5, 1854.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has this day received a letter, of which the following is a copy, enclosing, by direction of the Earl of Clarendon, a copy of a telegraphic despatch from Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, her Majesty's ambassador at Constantinople:—

"Foreign Office, October 5, 1854, 10½ a.m.

"Sir,—I am directed by the Earl of Clarendon to transmit to you herewith, for the information of the Duke of Newcastle, a copy of a telegraphic despatch from Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, dated September 30, 9½ p.m., and purporting to have been forwarded from Bucharest by her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General, on September 30, 3½ p.m., and containing accounts from the Crimea.

"I am, &c., "E. HAMMOND."

"Colonel Mundy, &c. &c. &c." Translation of the exact copy of a telegraphic despatch, received October 5, 10 a.m., and transmitted by the agent of England in Wallachia, at Bucharest, the 30th of September, 1854, 3½ p.m.

LORD STRATFORD, CONSTANTINOPLE, TO LORD CLARENDON, MINISTER OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS, LONDON.

September 30, 1854, 9½ p.m.

The allied armies established their basis of operations at Balaklava on the morning of the 28th, and were preparing to march without delay upon Sebastopol. The Agamemnon and other vessels of war of the allies were in the port of Balaklava. There were facilities there for disembarking the battering-train.

It is stated that Prince Menschikoff was in the field at the head of 20,000 men, expecting reinforcements; that the fortified place of Anapa has been burned by the Russians; that its garrison was marching to the scene of action; and that a convoy of ammunition, escorted by Cossacks, had been taken and destroyed by the English detachment.

The Banskoe, bearer of this news, left the Crimea on the evening of the day before yesterday.

STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE.

THE AUTHORITIES FOR THE NEWS.

There is something unaccountable—says a contemporary on Thursday the 5th inst.—about the manner in which official intelligence respecting the alleged fall of Sebastopol hangs fire. A great many versions of the story have been published, but only two authorities for any of them have been named. One is the captain of a French steamer, which was hailed on leaving the Bosphorus from on board another French steamer, and told they were carrying the news of the fall of Sebastopol from the Crimea to Constantinople. This intelligence the master of the first steamer communicated at Varna, whence it was transmitted to Omar Pasha. The other source is the Tatar, who brought to Bucharest from Constantinople certain despatches, for Omar Pasha, which were sent after that chief to Silistria unopened. The details respecting the fall of Sebastopol which have been published were obtained from the Tatar. The Tatar's story and that of the master of the French steamer harmonise sufficiently to convince us that a steamer had arrived at Constantinople with news from Sebastopol. But how comes it that days after this news, picked up by a messenger carrying despatches and a master of a steamer who meets another by chance at sea, has been received, no authentic official intelligence has yet arrived? Instead of letters to the master of the house, we have only the gossip of the servants' hall and travellers' room in a coffee-house to warrant the existence of such letters, or the nature of their contents.

THE WOUNDED AT THE BATTLE OF THE ALMA.

Constantinople, September 25.

"The Vulcan has brought 320 wounded from the Crimea.

"The Andes brought 300.

"No general officers were hurt.

"The 7th, 23rd, and 33rd Regiments suffered most."

At the battle of the Alma, on the 20th of September, the Russians numbered 45,000 men, and 100 cannon. The English had 1,895 rank and file, 96 officers, 114 sergeants, and 23 drummers killed and wounded. The loss of the French was 1,400 men and 60 officers.

The allies had sent to Varna for cavalry.

Advices from Odessa of the 29th September state that fighting continued uninterruptedly in the Crimea from the 25th to the departure of the courier on the 27th. The allies were on the rivers Belbek and Merterewady, ten versts from Sebastopol. The English Levant steamer took 340 wounded Russians from Enpatoria to Odessa on the 28th. Six allied steamers had captured prizes off Odessa. The Turkish troops at Bucharest fired guns on the 2nd to celebrate the victory of the Alma.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

VIENNA, Wednesday.

"The Russian Embassy last night published a despatch of the 26th of September, in which it is said that Prince Menschikoff had met with no impediment in advancing from Sebastopol, along the road to Baktchi-Seraï, and that no attack had been made on Sebastopol. This intelligence was telegraphed from St. Petersburg on the 2nd. It is not doubted here that the despatch was forwarded by Menschikoff on the 20th, and not on the 26th. The journey from Sebastopol to St. Petersburg, via Moscow, takes seven days. It is now ten o'clock, and the Turkish Embassy has received no news from Omar Pasha confirming the taking of Sebastopol."

PARIS, Wednesday Evening.

"It is rumoured that Prince Menschikoff surrendered on condition of being allowed to retire."

The conflicting nature of the despatches kept both Paris and London in the most intense state of anxiety throughout Thursday.

HOME REJOICINGS FOR VICTORY.

BALMORAL, Oct. 2.—Yesterday morning the intelligence of the victory over the Russians on the Alma reached the Queen by electric telegraph and express messenger, causing the greatest joy to her Majesty.

WINDSOR.—The glorious intelligence of the defeat of the Russians by the allied armies was welcomed here by the ringing of the bells of the Chapel Royal of St. George, and St. John's Church, and the firing of a royal salute by the town bombardiers in the Bachelor's-acre. The 46th Regiment turned out, under the command of Colonel Barrett, and had a field-day in the Home-park, in honour of the occasion.

PLYMOUTH.—An order was received by telegraph from the Admiralty to fire a salute in honour of the great victory obtained over the Russian forces on the heights of Alma; accordingly, at noon the Impregnable, Royal William, and Calcutta thundered forth a royal salute of twenty-one guns, and all the ships in the harbour were dressed with flags.

PORTSMOUTH.—In pursuance of an order from the Admiralty to the Commander-in-Chief at this port, the whole of the men-of-war were dressed out in colours at noon, and some of them fired a salute in honour of the victory obtained by the allies in the Crimea. The vessels that saluted were the Victory, flag-ship, Illustrations, 42, in harbour; and the Powerful, 84 and the Cabotus, 80, at Spithead. The entire squadron at this port remained dressed in colours till sunset. Shortly after the ships had saluted, the garrison did the same from the batteries.

SOUTHAMPTON.—The utmost excitement prevailed in Southampton on Sunday, in consequence of the announcement of a great victory having been gained over the Russians by the English and French forces at Alma, in the Crimea. The newspaper offices in the town, and the telegraph office, where notices of the victory were posted, were crowded all day by persons reading the glorious news. The subject was alluded to rejoicingly in some of the places of worship. On Monday morning the railway terminus and the news-vendors' shops were crowded by persons anxious to purchase the London morning papers, and there was quite a scramble for them. The Southampton church bells rung merrily for the victory. Notices were issued also that grand performances of appropriate music, in honour of the victory, would take place at the theatre. The news of the battle at Alma, reached the Isle of Wight also on Sunday, and caused the greatest rejoicing there.

LEEDS.—The news of the victory of the allies at Alma, and the alleged fall of Sebastopol, have caused a degree of excitement in Leeds, unequalled, we believe, by any event since 1815. Extraordinaries of the local newspapers have been published, and the news has been read with almost unparalleled avidity. The report of the victory was announced both from the church and discussing pulpits, and the bells of the parish church rung a peal of joy immediately on receipt of the glad tidings.

BIRMINGHAM.—The glorious intelligence of the great victory on the Alma, and the report of a still greater triumph at Sebastopol, arrived here about ten o'clock on Sunday morning, and, within a few hours, it was the theme of rejoicing over the whole town. The announcement was immediately posted in front of some of the local newspaper-offices, and means were taken to convey the intelligence to some of the clergymen and ministers of the borough, so that in the evening it became the subject of many appropriate allusions.

COLCHESTER.—At Colchester the news of the victory by the allied armies occasioned general rejoicing, which was expressed by the ringing of merry peals on St. Peter's bells, and a perambulation of the town by the local band, playing martial airs, and escorted by a guard of honour, composed of the recruiting staff, who volunteered their assistance in the commemoration. The sanction (in his worship's absence) of the Mayor's deputy was also obtained for a large bonfire and pyrotechnic display in the evening. In the meantime a colossal effigy of the Czar was prepared, and a couple of scaffold poles, with chain and pulleys, were set up at the top of High-street to suspend the royal "gun." In the evening some thousands of persons were collected by the kindling of the bonfire; and about eight o'clock "the Emperor Nick" was brought out and hoisted by way of exhibition before committing him to the flames; but the figure instantly became a mark for the mimic artillery of the crowd, in the shape of Roman candles, squibs, &c., several of which "took effect" and at length set fire to the drapery, the flames gradually extending themselves till the conflagration was completed by a "dip" into the bonfire below, the burning mass being again drawn up amidst the shouts of the spectators. During the evening a number of rockets were fired, and there was a profuse expenditure of gunpowder in various shapes by way of celebrating the occasion.—Essex Standard.

SHELDON.—On Tuesday the harbour of Shields presented an interesting and imposing spectacle on the occasion of the rejoicing for the success of the armies of the allies in the Crimea. Flags of the following nations were seen floating on board vessels belonging to the respective countries, and moored in the same tiers with English and French ships:—Belgium, the Netherlands, the United States of America, Danish, Sardinian, Austrian, Portuguese, Swedish, Norwegian and the Hanse Towns. The only maritime flag that did not mingle in the general rejoicing was the Black Eagle of Prussia. The Prussian vessels in the harbour presented bare poles.

TORQUAY.—The news of the glorious victory on the Alma reached this town on Saturday evening, between seven and eight o'clock, and, although couched in very brief terms, so great was its import that it spread among the inhabitants with marvellous rapidity. Immediately on Captain Rodway, of the Torquay Rifle Corps, becoming aware of the circumstance, he called out the members of the gallant corps to do honour to the glorious event. The corps fired a feu de joie, and simultaneously the harbour was illuminated at six or seven different spots with brilliant crimson fire, producing one of the finest effects ever witnessed, the band playing the National Anthem. Three hearty cheers were then given by the Riflemen, joined by the multitude, for the Queen, the band repeating the National Anthem; and again for the Army and Navy, the band playing "Rule Britannia." Several villas, the most conspicuous of which was Waldron Castle, the residence of Lieutenant Dashwood, were illuminated, presenting a most imposing scene.—Torquay Recorder.

LEICESTER.—The glorious intelligence of the great victory over the Russians, and the capture of Sebastopol by the allied armies, reached this town in the after part of Sunday. When the papers arrived they were read with avidity and soon at a premium. Everybody was elated, and the congratulation and rejoicing became as general in the workshops of the operatives as in the highest commercial circles. The bells of St. Martin's and St. Mary's churches rang a merry peal—the first time on a similar occasion since the battle of Waterloo. Monday being the monthly pay-day of the pensioners, some hundreds of these veterans were assembled, and received the news with hearty cheers, parading the town headed by the Militia band, and the Militia and Yeomanry staffs, to the tune of "Cheer boys, cheer."

LIVERPOOL.—The greatest interest was excited on receipt of the advices from the Crimea reporting the victory of Alma. And announcing on very good advice the loss of Sebastopol. The bells of the parish churches (which, by the direction of the churchwardens, have remained silent for several months, owing to the refusal of the parishioners to pay a church rate of 3d. per pound) were suddenly re-invigorated, and sent forth merry peals. The national ensign was displayed over the official residence of the Mayor, and also floated over several of the mercantile establishments. The victory at Alma was also announced at the various churches.

EDINBURGH.—The city church bells were set ringing in honour of this great and glorious event. It is a matter of surprise that the Castle guns were not fired on the occasion, especially as it appears the Government considered it fitting to announce the victory to the citizens of London by a salute from the Tower guns at six o'clock in the morning. We hope when the official despatch of the capture of Sebastopol arrives that this will not be omitted.—North British Mail.

GLASGOW.—The favourable news from the seat of war has produced a most exhilarating influence upon all classes of the community. In the early part of Monday the city bells rang out a merry peal for upwards of two hours. Flags flaunted from the vessels in the harbour, and from various public buildings and private residences throughout the city and neighbourhood.

GREENOCK.—Of late the absorbing questions have been—"What news from the Crimea?" "Anything about Sebastopol?" and this great subject of public interest has thrown all others, public and private, into the shade. When yesterday's telegraph, therefore, brought the welcome official news that 50,000 Russians had been defeated in a pitched battle, and the non-official rumour that Sebastopol had fallen, popular excitement and enthusiasm were great. The Provost immediately gave orders for the flag to be hoisted at the mid staff, and the public bells to be rung from nine till noon. Well Park and St. Thomas church bells also assisted in the merry peal. The Provost caused the flag at his house, Roselhill, to be displayed—an example speedily followed by the Custom-house, Mansion-house, coffee-room, railway terminus, and other public buildings, and from numerous flag-staffs of private residences. The crowds of shipping in the harbours were decked with a gay profusion of colours, British, American, and continental (Prussian among the number), and the various steamers plying on the river made a full display of their bunting, and presented a most beautiful and exciting appearance. Similar demonstrations of public rejoicing took place over the whole country. Intimation of the news was sent by the provost to Captain Baillie, of her Majesty's ship Centaur, lying in the port, and in the absence of the gallant captain, his lieutenant in command intimated that without orders from the Admiralty he could not dress his ship nor fire a salute. In the evening a large party of gentlemen met at the White-hart hotel to celebrate the event; Mr. Walter Grieve in the chair.—Greenock Advertiser.

BELFAST.—As soon as the intelligence of the Crimean victories reached Belfast, flags were hoisted to the topmast high on all the vessels in the port.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

On Wednesday orders were read out to the Grenadier Guards, as also to the Coldstream and Fusiliers, to hold themselves ready to reinforce the service companies of their regiments now in the Crimea. It is spoken of as extremely probable, that the 1st battalion of Grenadier Guards will have its strength increased from the 2nd battalion to 1,000 bayonets, and proceed forthwith to the Crimea.

RUSSIAN PRIZES AND PRISONERS.

On Wednesday the Russian prize Dwina, taken by her Majesty's steamer Miranda at Litscha Fiord, in the White Sea, and the Nivardahl, prize to the Conflict and Cruiser, were taken into the West India Docks to be condemned by the Court of Admiralty, and sold for the benefit of their captors.

On Wednesday nearly 2,000 stand of arms, taken from the Russians at the capture of Bomarsund, were landed at the Tower and deposited in the armoury stores.

The Hanoverian galliot Reinhard, of Papenburg, Everard Bolvin late master and part owner, has arrived at Sheerness, from Memel, prize to the Conflict. The master reports that his vessel was chartered at London for Memel or Cronstadt, and he was to apply to the first English man-of-war he met to ascertain what ports were blockaded. He was taken on the 2nd of July last between Memel and Lebau, distant about fourteen miles English. She left Memel on the 15th of August last, and called at Frederickshaven and Christiansund for supplies. Mr. Mason, second master of the Conflict, came home as prize-master. The effects of the late Captain Foote are brought home by her in charge of Mr. Joseph Bastion. She proceeded for London.

SURRENDER OF EUTAFORIA.—When the allied fleet arrived, there was only one vessel in the roadstead—a Tartar sloop of 60 or 70 tons. The Tribune stood leisurely in as soon as the fleet anchored, till she was within half a mile of the town. A boat put off with four men, who pulled towards the sloop, got into her, and immediately hoisted a white flag; the first prize on the shore of the Crimea! All this time the people were gazing at us out of the windows, from the corners of the streets, and from the roofs of the houses.

MONDAY, October 9.—Domestic, 204, Falcon Tavern, Fetter-lane; Joppa, 223, (postponed from Monday, 2nd inst.), White Hart Hotel, Bishopsgate; Lodge of Confidence, 228, Anderson's Hotel.

TUESDAY, October 10.—St. John's, 196, Holly Bush, Hampstead; St. James Union, 211, Westmoreland Arms, George-street, Portman-square; Percy Lodge, 234, Ship and Turtle; Lodge of Israel, 247, St. James's-place, Albate; St. Michael Lodge, 255, George and Blue Boar; United Strength, 276, Gun Tavern, Fimlico; Chapter Jerusalem, 218, George and Vulture; Vitruvian Lodge, 103, White Hart, College-street, Lambeth; Eastern Star, 112, Wade's Arms, Poplar; Caledonian Lodge, 166, George and Vulture; Pilgrim Lodge, 289, Ship and Turtle; Zetland Lodge, 752, High-street, Kensington.

WEDNESDAY, October 11.—Com. R. Ben. Inst., at 3; Fidelity, 3, Freemasons' Tavern; Kent Lodge, 15, Three Tons Tavern, Southwark; Royal Athelstan, 19, George and Blue Boar; Royal Naval Lodge, 70, Radley's Hotel.

THURSDAY, October 12.—Quart. Gen. Court, Female School, Freemasons' Tavern, when five children will be elected, without ballot, the candidates not exceeding the vacancies; Lodge of Friendship, 248, George and Vulture; Polish Lodge, 778, Freemasons' Tavern.

FRIDAY, October 13.—Lodge of Union, 195, London Tavern.

ROBERT BURNS, 25.—The members of this most admirable lodge resumed their Masonic duties, at the Freemasons' Tavern, on Monday evening last. The initiates were Messrs. Richards, Langley, Ghdwin, and Caulcher; the ancient charge being mostly given by Br. Goring, P.M., who officiated, with his accustomed urbanity, for the W.M. Br. Paterson, who was unavoidably absent. The visitors were Brs. Jacobs, McDonald, Bignell, J.B. Warren, and Morbey. At the close of business the brethren adjourned to a refreshment; the W.M. having arrived, he presided with his usual ability. It is not our intention to notice generally the speeches given at these meetings; but a few observations made by Br. Watson, in returning thanks on behalf of the Past Master, we think interesting. He said, "It was a matter of no little congratulation—the character which that lodge had obtained in the craft for its working, and the progress it had made in the last few years. It is now fourteen years since they had obtained a chapter to the lodge, which was considered a matter of great surprise to the craft generally, as no such concession from the Grand Chapter had been made for thirty years, inasmuch as there were about twenty chapters then in existence, which was considered sufficient. But the members of the Burns Lodge, then numbering seventy-four, thought otherwise, applied for, and, with some difficulty, obtained the necessary warrant; since then most of the London lodges had followed the example." After a few further remarks, Br. Watson concluded. The evening passed most pleasantly, several songs being sung by Brs. Adams, G. F. Taylor, and the W.M. Br. Paterson, who gave "Burns's Farewell" and "Auld Lang Syne" with great taste. The wines and banquet were served by Brs. Watson, Coggin, and Bank's usual style of excellence.

OLD KING'S ARMS CHAPTER, 30.—The members of this chapter met after the recess on Monday last. The business being merely of a formal nature, the companions retired early to a most recherche banquet, and, after spending a delightful evening, separated at an early hour.

ALBION LODGE, 9.—This lodge commenced its season on Tuesday last. The only business of the evening was the raising of Br. Clarke to the sublime degree of a Master Mason, which was most ably performed by the W.M. Br. Kellick; after which the brethren partook of an excellent supper, &c.

ST. LUKE'S LODGE, 168.—The brethren of this lodge met, on Monday, October 2, at the Builders' Arms, Russell-street, Chelsea, for the purpose of installing brother Andover into the chair, which ceremony was most ably and efficiently done by Br. John Kellick, the retiring Master. We congratulate this lodge upon the strict Masonic system of working by the Masters and officers, which does them great credit. There were no less than seventeen installed Masters attended, which must be highly complimentary, and show the respect and esteem Brs. Kellick and Andover are held by the craft. The W.M., after appointing his officers, presented, in the name of the lodge, a most elegant and unique P.M. jewel to Br. Kellick, with a most appropriate speech, dilating upon the services he had rendered the lodge during the two years he had been W.M., trusting he should have the benefit of his advice and instruction during his year of office as W.M., having to follow so able a Master. Br. Kellick, in returning thanks, expressed his grateful thanks for the handsome jewel presented to him that night, which he trusted would be a heirloom in his family; and wished to impress upon his brethren, that he looked upon that jewel in a moral view as a reward for his exertions, and trusted that other brethren would, by their assiduity and attention to their offices, eventually have the same gratifying mark bestowed upon them. After voting sums of money from their relief fund to two deserving applicants having a claim upon the lodge, the brethren adjourned to a banquet, both members and visitors being well pleased with the ceremony and business of the evening. This lodge will well repay any brother visiting who requires instruction.

EGYPTIAN LODGE, 29.—The Lodge resumed its Masonic business on Thursday last, at the George and Blue Boar, on which occasion, our ever-ready, kind, and talented Br. Goring, officiated for the W.M. Br. Roughton, who was indisposed and left early. Br. Moore was passed to the 2nd degree, and Brs. Eve and Quendington were raised to the degree of Master Masons. It is scarcely necessary to add, that the duties of the W.M. were most efficiently performed. The brethren present, who numbered about thirty, afterwards partook of a most excellent banquet, at which Br. Todd presided, a word of praise is due to the catering of Br. Haines, the proprietor of the tavern, for his admirable entertainment. And the Brothers separated at an early hour delighted with their meeting.

We are credibly informed that the Right Hon. Earl of Zetland, Grand Master and Provincial Grand Master for the North and East Riding of Yorkshire, purposes holding a Provincial Grand Lodge at Beverley at the end of October.

THE HISTORY OF FREEMASONRY.

(To be continued from time to time.)

To the establishment of Freemasonry the world has been most indebted for those splendid specimens of architectural grandeur which abound in every clime where Masonry is known. Freemasonry, we are informed, was reduced to rules at the building of Solomon's Temple; and there is every reason to believe that some bond of union was necessary in such a congregated mass of workmen. The number of Masons employed in building the Temple was 83,000, 600 besides the men of burthen, not Freemasons, which amounted to 70,000 more.

The footstone of this mighty fabric was levelled in the fourth year of Solomon's reign, and the 180th year after the passage of the Hebrews through the Red Sea. The building commenced on Mount Moriah, on Monday, the second day of the month Zif, which answers to the 21st of our April, and it was finished in all parts in little more than seven years, on the eighth day of the month Bull, which answers to our 23rd day of October, being the seventh month of the sacred year, and the eleventh of Solomon's reign. Every piece of the edifice, whether timber, stone, or metal, was brought ready cut, framed, or polished to Jerusalem; so that no other tool was wanting, no other sound was heard, than what was necessary to join the several parts together. All the noise of the axe, hammer, and saw was confined to the forest of Lebanon and the quarries and plains of Zeredadib, that nothing might be heard among the Masons of Zion but harmony and peace. In this manner their descendant Freemasons in all their lodges banish discord, love and harmony being inseparable from their assemblies, alike open to the beggar and the king.

It is not necessary to enter into a detail of the establishment of Freemasonry by Solomon and his Deputy Grand Master, Hiram Abif, or the costly interchange of gifts between Solomon and the Tyrian monarch; we must, therefore, leave to those stupendous temples which consecrated the soils of Etruria, Ethiopia, Nineveh, Babylon, Thebes, Athens, and Jerusalem. All have fallen; Rome is one vast sepulchre—a huge sarcophagus of the mighty; the tomb of Cato, the grave of Cicero, the mansions of the Caesars—their amphitheatres, colosseums, are crumbled into dust. But the Eternal Mind which first sent forth the swallow and the bee to teach our fathers the rude elements of architecture, outlives the wreck of nations; urging its mysterious flight onwards, nothing can stop its irresistible progress, or mar its blessings to the human race.

The world at this time is covered with cities; never was architecture or Masonry known to have arrived at such a pinnacle of perfection—to such a boundless extent. The present course of civilisation is not to be thrust back or impeded; its path is fixed by Him who has appointed the "day-spring to know its place, and the outgoings of the morning to rejoice!"

. Correspondents upon Masonic matter are requested to mark their envelope "MASONIC."

LATEST FROM THE EAST.

"FIELD" OFFICE, Saturday Afternoon.

DEATH OF MARSHAL ST. ARNAUD.

The following extraordinary supplement to the Gazette has just been published:—

"WAR DEPARTMENT, SATURDAY, Oct. 7.

"His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has this day received the following:—

Translation of the exact copy of a despatch received 7th October, 9 a.m.:—

"CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 30, 1854, 10 p.m.

"Marshal St. Arnaud is dead. His remains have just arrived here on board the Berthollet, which is appointed to convey them to France. This vessel brings news from the Crimea up to the 29th, in the morning. It was supposed that Prince Menschikoff had returned to Sebastopol. The Allies were on the point of commencing the siege. General Canrobert had succeeded to the command of the French Army.

"STRAFORD DE REDCLIFFE.

"Despatched from Belgrade, October 6, 1854, at 7 p.m."

"The Moniteur publishes Marshal St. Arnaud's report of the battle of Alma. The Russians mustered 40,000 infantry, assembled from all points of the Crimea, and on the morning of the 20th they were joined by 6,000 cavalry from Theodosia. 150 field pieces were in position on the heights. A movement made by General Bosquet outflanked the left of the Russians and turned some of their batteries. The English took the Russian right, and the French formed the centre and covered a length of three miles. At half past twelve the signal to advance was made, and the Alma was crossed in double quick time.

"Prince Napoleon took possession of the village under the fire of the Russian batteries, and at half-past four the French army was entirely victorious on its side.

"The English advanced in admirable order against the Russian positions, stormed them, and drove the Russians out of them.

"Lord Raglan, with his ancient courage, gave his orders with calmness amid a shower of balls, until the Russians, utterly routed, threw away their arms and knapsacks in order to escape with greater celerity.

"The loss of the English is 1,500 killed and wounded. [Another account says:—] The losses on the Alma, on the 20th, were—English, 352 killed, of whom twenty-five were officers; wounded, 1,412, of whom seventy-three were officers."

"The Duke of Cambridge is perfectly well. His division, and that of General Brown, behaved splendidly.

"The loss of the French was about 1,400 killed and wounded; three officers were killed and fifty-four wounded; 233 non-commissioned officers and privates killed, and 1,033 wounded.

"Generals Canrobert and Thomas were among the wounded.

"The Russian loss was about 5,000.

"A despatch from the French Minister at Therapia of the 27th states that the Russians neither halted on the Katschan or the Helbek, but retreated at once into Sebastopol.

"Twenty-one guns will be fired to-day at the Invalides, on the occasion of this victory."

THE KILLED AND WOUNDED.

MARSEILLES, Friday.

Under date of Constantinople, 27th ult., we learn that the Russians have sunk eight of their line-of-battle ships at the entrance of the port of Sebastopol.

The allies are at the walls of Sebastopol.

The English cavalry has arrived in the Crimea from Varna. After the defeat on the Alma, the Russians regained their fortifications at Sebastopol without making a halt.

The following 25 officers are among the killed:—

7th Regiment.—Captains Hare and Monck.

19th.—Lieutenant Wardlaw; Ensign Stockwell.

23rd.—Colonel Chester; Captains Sir W. Young, Evans, Wyua, Couolly; Lieutenants Radcliffe, Anstruther, Butler, and Applewhite.

33rd.—Lieutenants Montagu and Worthington.

55th.—Major Rose; Captain Schaw.

95th.—Captain Eddington; Lieut. Eddington (brothers); Captain Dowdall, Lieutenants Pollitt, Kingsley, Braybrooke, Royal Artillery.—Captain Dew; Lieutenant Walsham.

From Odessa, reports are stated to have been received by Greek houses in the City yesterday, to the effect that Generals Osten-Sacken and Liders had entered the Crimea at the head of 40 battalions, besides the garrison of Odessa, 20,000 strong.

It is added that the inhabitants of Odessa have given a pledge that they will burn the place, should it be attacked, rather than allow it to fall into the hands of the allies.

At the battle of Alma, a cannon-shot passed in front of Prince Napoleon, and killed the horse of his aide-de-camp. The Scots Fusiliers, the Zouaves, and the Chasseurs de Vincennes displayed extreme courage.

DEAR, Saturday, 9.30 a.m.

Wind N.E., strong, with much rain.

Her Majesty's ship Talbot, from the Arctic regions, anchored last night; left Assistance in the ice.

TERRIFIC CONFLAGRATION AT NEWCASTLE. LAMENTABLE LOSS OF LIFE.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Saturday.

A most fearful calamity has befallen this town and the adjoining borough of Gateshead. Between twelve and one o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the worsted manufactory of Mr. James Wilson, of Gateshead, and, after raging with great fury for about two hours, an adjoining warehouse, known as Bertram's Bond Warehouse, but at present in the occupation of Mr. Sissons, containing vast quantities of sulphur, nitre, and, it is said, about seven tons of gunpowder, blew up with a terrific explosion, and with destructive consequences which it is awful to contemplate, and the full extent of which it will require some days fully to ascertain. Houses have been thrown down, many persons buried in the ruins, and others suffocated with the fumes of the exploded combustibles. A large building, used as a Methodist chapel, near the scene of the conflagration, was occupied by a body of the Camerouians, who are stationed at Newcastle Barracks. They were engaged with their fire-engine, operating on the flames, when the explosion blew down the greater part of the building, and buried several of the poor gallant fellows in its ruins. Lieut. Paynter, the commander of the force is amongst the victims.

Several are missing, among others, Mr. Charles Bertram, J. P., and Mr. Hutchinson, of the firm of Currie and Hutchinson, Samlhill; Mr. Davison, father of the young man who is killed, and who owns a neighbouring steam-mill has lost his eye-sight; but these are but the commencement of the sad catalogue to be recorded. Fifty or sixty persons, more or less injured have been already conveyed to the infirmary, and the hospital at the barracks is full of wounded soldiers. The cries of women for relatives killed or missing, is heart-rending. The loss of property is incalculable. The interior of St. Mary's church, Gateshead, is a ruin. Many of the gravestones in the churchyard were moved by the force of the explosion, and thrown to a considerable distance, knocking in the walls of some of the adjoining houses. There is scarcely a house, office, or public building within a radius of a hundred yards of the explosion which has not been injured, either unroofed or its windows broken. The noise of the concussion was heard at Shields and Sunderland, the latter town eleven miles distant from Newcastle. Many of the inhabitants in the outskirts of the town were startled from their beds by a violent rapping at their windows, and universal consternation prevailed. The progress of the fire itself has been most alarming and destructive. At the moment of the explosion large masses of blazing material flew over the Tyne like cannon balls, and set fire to several buildings on the Newcastle side. The flames spread with great rapidity, and special engines were dispatched from the central station to bring the fire-engines from Hexham, Sunderland, Shields, and other towns. There was happily no want of water, the Tyne being so close at hand, and the water company, the Whittle Dean Company, which is always at a high pressure, was served with admirable effect on the flames. They were gradually subdued, and no fear now exists of their extending further.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR,—The present has been a rather quiet week. I allude, of course, to our own particular theme—horse-racing. But it has not proved so with respect to matters of more serious interest and importance. Great excitement and enthusiasm have been followed by sudden and bitter disappointment. Sebastopol was not taken up to the 20th ult., the date of the last despatches. The electric wires we know can perform wonders, but they have lately been trying their noiseless tongues in an attempt to work miracles. Such an amount of enormous lying is really a stigma on the age.

But remains in nos moriturus. Kelsa, Chester, Wrexham, and the Union Hunt Club at York have been keeping the game alive. Your readers would have no cause of complaint against the selections made by me for the several races. For the Roxburgh Cup at Kelsa Lady Vernon and Braxey came in head and head in the contest for victory. The daughter of Moss Trooper ought to have made a more successful rail on the borders.

"While highlandmen hate tolls and taxes;
While moorland herds like gale fast braxies;
While terra firma, on her arms,
Dignified turns,
Chant on a friend, in faith and practice,
In Robbie Burns."

I fancied that Braxey would have accomplished the longer task of the Stewards' Cup, but the race was a repetition of the previous day's running. This double conquest, not forgetting the 9th extra, was a very clever feat of my Lady Vernon. At Chester, I pulled through with Amy and Gruyere for the "Shorts" and Imkepers' Plate; and, my friend, Mrs. Rigby was defeated by a head only in the Moetyu Stakes. The Maid of Cadiz, whom I made choice of for the 50 sovs handicap, proved to be good enough to win the Nursery Stakes. I said that Lady Palmerston would keep all the young ones safe for the Wynstay Plate. In the Chester Plate I was not quite so fortunate, my champion St. Clare, getting no nearer than third place, though he became a good favourite and afforded hedging. For the Ainsty Handicap at York, I sent you King of Tramps.

Well, we must turn from the past and cast a look towards Newmarket. "The Programme of the 'Second October,' strikes me as being rather weak to extend over five days. With your leave I will run through the several items in the order they are named.

MONDAY.—There is but one stake that has not yet to be entered for, RENEWAL OF 50 SOVS EACH, for three-year-old fillies, D. M. 6 subs., and I think that Mr. Combe's filly will be found most apropos to the occasion.

IN THE MATCHES I must prefer

Miss Wild, filly, before Twitter
Invasion, before Birdie
The Trapper, before Albert.
Humboldt, before Bomba.
Exact, before Bonella.

It is not unlikely that one or two of these will end in forfeit, as probably may be the case in the Produce Match between the Duke of Bedford and Lord Glasgow. Pagator, I fancy, will receive from Parchment.

TUESDAY.—The Cesarewitch absorbs all the betting, and that's not much to boast of. Speculation has been dull in the extreme for so important an event. I must confess that I by no means see my way clearly to the result of the race. It is not my intention to go through the pretensions of those who may take part in the fray. Some of the best horses are thrown out by adverse weight. Rataplan may start, but can have no chance with 9st 7lb. Knight of St. George will be an absentee. His stable will probably be represented by Indian Warrior, who ought to run forward. Muscovite still continues the favourite, though he has been somewhat shaken in his position. D. D. and Battle have risen considerably in the market within the last day or two. I prefer the chance of the latter. I believe him to be a good horse, but the weight is not in his favour. Scherz I know nothing of, but he must be a superior animal if he can win with 7st 7lb. Barrel will beat Coburn, and may prove dangerous. Old John Day gave in his adhesion with four, namely Bahrownie, Seythian, Star of Surrey, and Diana. Bahrownie, at one time greatly in demand, has lately been sent to the right about. Star of Surrey, I apprehend, will not shine this year and Diana is not mentioned in the betting. Report says that much of the stable money is on Muscovite. But, were Diana to start, the goddess would have more than a forlorn hope of snatching the prize. I prefer Exact to Ammonia. Indeed, should Rogers' filly be "in the phant mood," she would have an excellent out-ride chance. "Pretulamy," as the outsiders of the ring call him, is scratched. La Belle is not unlikely to show considerable improvement, and there is certainly plenty of room for it. Phaton, if in the humour, may run forward. Calamus, I have a great respect for, and I would as soon select him for the absolute winner as anything in the race, did not whispers reach me that certain active parties were busy in getting on before the stable could invest their money. Kidnapier does not entice me. Gouille and Rolomeli represent the same interest. Both have been treated by the handicapper with the greatest leniency. Should we have bad weather, and the race be slowly run, Puddle with his 5st 12lb may find the way to the winning-post; but the betting would indicate that Rolomeli is to represent Lord Clifden's interest. Lincoln's Inn, I fancy will be out of place in Cambridgehire. Hungerford is expected to play a more conspicuous part than he did at Liverpool. At the present moment, my inclination tends towards Muscovite and Calamus; with Rolomeli, La Belle, and Exact for the off chance. And, with a start, I would unhesitatingly rely on Diana as a cock-bout.

THE ROYAL STAKES I must award to Seythian.

CLEANWELL STAKES.—Will the great unknown, Graeculus Esuriens, condescend to show? If so, as he will have to receive weight from other likely animals in the race, he must win in a canter or resign the honour of premiership throughout the winter. But he may defer the visit till the "Houghton;" and I am inclined to name Oulston as the winner.

Kingston is not likely just yet to part from "THE WHIP."

WEDNESDAY.—THE BYEGOD STAKES should go to the representative of Day's stable.

MATCH.—If run, I must back Ariosto against Hungerford.

THURSDAY.—BRETRY STAKES.—Gretna.

MATCH.—Invasion ought to beat Pact across the flat at the difference of weight.

FRIDAY.—PREDEBAST STAKES.—Stroud may be brought out for this event, and ought to do credit to his high pedigree.

MATCH.—Fayaway must beat Daisy.—Your's,

Friday, 6th October, 1854.

TOMY PETERS.

CITY BETTING—(Friday.)

7 to 1 agst.—Muscovite (official)
11 to 1 agst.—Battle (taken and offered)
10 to 1 agst.—La Belle (not to be taken freely)
25 to 1 agst.—Indian Warrior (taken)
La Belle was in great force.

MANCHESTER.—FRIDAY.

Betting here to-day was anything but brisk, although a goodly number thronged the rooms. "The Wexham Handicap," run to-day, claimed the greatest share of attention.

The only changes we have to notice are in the Cesarewitch, for which Muscovite has receded to 8 to 1, and La Belle has advanced from 25 to 1 to 16 to 1—taken.

There was very little done on the Cambridgehire, and nothing at all on the Derby.

Cesarewitch Stakes.
8 to 1 agst Muscovite (1) 25 to 1 agst Bracken (1)
8 to 1 — B. G. (2) 7 to 1 — Robt. Moor (1)
11 to 1 — Battle (1) 10 to 1 — Rolomeli (1)
16 to 1 — La Belle (1) 40 to 1 — Lincoln's Inn (1)
20 to 1 — Indian Warrior (1)

Cambridgehire Stakes.
11 to 1 agst Early Bird 50 to 1 agst Githero

PERTH RACES.—FRIDAY, September 29.

A Plate of 50 sovs, given by the Perth Hunt, added to a Sweepstakes of 3 sovs each, 1 lb. Two miles. 7 subs.

Mr. Thirif's h.b. Little Jack, by Slane, aged, 8, 11lb, T. Webb 1
Mr. Rumpkin's h.b. Little Jack, 3 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 2
Mr. J. Dunlop's h.b. Little Jack, 3 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 3
Betting—2 to 1 on Little Jack, who won, after a good race, by a neck; two lengths between second and third.

A Handicap of 5 sovs each, with 20 added. One mile and a half. Mr. Halliwell's Mary Ann, by Warburton, 5 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 1

Mr. Thirif's Little Jack, aged, 8, 11lb, T. Webb 2
Mr. Rumpkin's h.b. Little Jack, 3 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 3
Mary Ann won in a canter by six lengths; Robinson a bad third.

A Sweepstakes of 3 sovs each, with 20 added. Once round and a distance. 3 subs.

Mr. J. Halliwell's h.b. Mary Ann, 5 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 1

Mr. G. Kippie's h.b. Gipsy Boy, 6 yrs, 8st 11lb, 11 Robertson 2

Mr. J. Dunlop's h.b. Little Jack, 3 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 3

A good race with the first two won by half a length. Medloch pulled up after running a distance, a circumstance deservedly noticed by the stewards, who gave her the top weight in the Free Handicap.

A Free Handicap of 2 sovs each, with 20 added. Three round. Mr. Halliwell's h.b. Mary Ann, 5 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 1
Mr. Rumpkin's h.b. Little Jack, 3 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 2
Mr. Kippie's h.b. Gipsy Boy, 6 yrs, 8st 11lb, 11 Robertson 3

An excellent race; won by half a length.

YORKSHIRE UNION HUNT CLUB.

THURSDAY, October 5.

This meeting drew together a large and fashionable company. The Grand Stand was well attended, the front balcony displaying a brilliant assemblage of the rank and beauty of the county. The weather was fine, but rather cold, a keen north-wester blowing during the greater part of the afternoon. The course was very hard, but the sport was good, the races in one or two instances affording very close contests. The meeting passed off pleasantly, the arrangements being complete and highly satisfactory.

The Yorkshire Union Hunt Stakes of 10 sovs each, 1 lb, with 50 added by the Club. Two miles over the Old Course. 5 subs.

Mr. Gregson's h.b. Tally, by Lago, out of Delaine, 4 yrs, 11st 11lb, 11 Robertson 1

Mr. Edwards's h.b. General Breeze, 3 yrs, 9st 11lb, 11 Robertson 2

Betting—5 to 2 on General Breeze, who cut the neck at a bad pace all within the distance, when Tally went up, caught the General in the last half-dozen strides, and defeated him by a head.

The Juvenile Handicap of 4 sovs each, with 50 added by the York Race Committee. T.V.C. 11 subs.

Mr. Popham's h.b. Tally, by Tally, out of Delaine, 4 yrs, 11st 11lb, 11 Robertson 1

Mr. Thirif's h.b. Little Jack, 3 yrs, 7st 12lb, 11 Robertson 2

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."

OUR SAILOR KING.

CHANTILLY'S fine course has been the scene of some spirited sport. Our worthy allies, the French, are certainly emulous of our racing fame. Their autumnal gathering at Chantilly, occupying the Saturday and Sunday, was the precursor of the great meeting commencing at head quarters on Monday. But, what will most interest the racing community, is the circumstance of the well-known Orestes sailing forth on foreign travel to take part in the principal contest. Nor was he the only one with whom the English turfite can claim acquaintance; for Aguilla, Trust, Jouvence, Valeria, and Hervine, were also competitors for the various prizes. These horses, though all bred in France, have on several occasions stripped and distinguished themselves on our own turf. Jouvence, it may be remembered, was the winner of last year's Goodwood Cup, with Hervine second; while the now victorious Muscovite, who was made the favourite at 7 to 4, could only obtain position as a bad fourth. Orestes occupied the same place on Saturday, in the great race for the Emperor's Stakes of 10,000 francs. The English horse was backed at even against the field, and his defeat was a great disappointment to our countrymen. But, it must not be forgotten that the distance (more than a mile and three-quarters), was considerably beyond the course on which Orestes has been found to excel; while, at the same time, he conceded 8lb. and a couple of years, to the victress. It cannot, however, be denied, that Hervine won with the greatest ease. Orestes might have been nearer had he been persevered with, but his jockey prudently gave in when defeat was certain. Should Hervine re-cross the channel, and show for the Cambridgeshire, she must find numerous friends. The mare finished seventh in the race last year with 7st 6lb, and now with 7st only on her back, and in improved form, she ought to be somewhat nearer the mark. Among the conditions for the Emperor's Stakes we find this clause:—"Weight for age, with 10lb extra for horses foaled in England, and 17lb extra on horses that have won stakes of £600 in England." A more graceful acknowledgment of the superiority of our racers we could not desire. The great event of the second day was the Omnium Handicap, with 4,000 fr added by the Minister of Agriculture, Commerce, and Public Works. The subscription was 300 fr, 200 fr, and 100 only declared on or before the 30th of June. An entry of twenty-six, ten of which paid the lesser forfeit, furnished a field of no less than fourteen to dispute the prize. The race was admirably contested throughout, and the pace first-rate; the result proving in favour of the four-yr-old filly, Dame de Cour, by two lengths, whose owner, M. de Baracé, is said to have netted a good stake. There were also three races for young ones. The First Criterion for two-yr-old colts, the

PICKING A BONE WITH A RAVEN.—DRAWN BY T. H. WILSON.

The heath was well attended, and speculation was carried on with much spirit. The weather was dull, but mild, and, on the whole, favourable to the sport.

From the appended quotations it will be seen that some important alterations have been made in the betting on the Cesarewitch:—

BETTING UP TO SIX O'CLOCK.

The gathering in and near the Subscription Room at night was neither so large as on previous Cesarewitch occasions, nor were the proceedings of that animated character which they were wont to exhibit. The cause, however, needs no explanation; it is sufficiently obvious to all sporting men.

Muscovite continued firm, notwithstanding the increased support given to Cobnut, Rodo-meli, Ammonia, Rattle, La Belle, and Ethelwolf. At 12 and 11 to 1 La Belle was backed for upwards of £300, and 25 to 1 was taken to a good deal of money about Ethelwolf.

The prices at the close of business were as follows:—

7 to 2 agst Muscovite	10 to 1 agst D. O.
7 to 1 — Cobnut	20 to 1 — Indian Warrior
9 to 1 — Rodo-meli	25 to 1 — Ethelwolf
9 to 1 — Ammonia	25 to 1 — Hungerford
10 to 1 — La Belle	50 to 1 — Balrowine
12 to 1 — Rattle

Mr. Drakall's Le Fripon, 8st 7lb, A. Day
Mr. Knowles's The Southey, 8st 7lb, Hundy

Betting—7 to 4 on Oulston, 5 to 1 agst Almond, 7 to 1 each agst Le Fripon and Polydora colt. Almond, with Oulston and The Hind second and third, and the others well together, made the running into the cords, where they all closed, and a very fine race terminated in favour of Polydora colt by a head, the second beating the third by a neck. Oulston and Le Fripon, close up, were fourth and fifth. Sandboy last.

Mr. Bennett's Brown Brandy, 3 yrs, 8st 1lb, Dowling
Mr. Mather's St. Clare, 3 yrs, 8st 3lb, T. Cliff
Mr. Mather's Candlewick, aged, 6st 2lb, Walters
Mr. Osborn's Gamelad, 3 yrs, 8st 6lb, J. Rogers
Lord Cliden's Rodo-meli, 3 yrs, 8st 7lb (carried 9lb) Fordham

Betting at starting—3 to 1 agst Muscovite, 8 to 1 agst Cobnut, 9 to 1 agst D. O., 10 to 1 agst Rodo-meli, 12 to 1, each, Rattle, La Belle, and Ammonia, 20 to 1 agst Hungerford, 25 to 1 agst Ethelwolf, 40 to 1 agst Ratanaplan, and 100 to 3 agst Candlewick.

Scherz and Adine took the lead at starting, St. Clare and Domino at a long interval, being the next two, and these at a distinct distance in advance of the pack. No change of moment occurred with the leading horses until they approached the New Ground, when Scherz, Adine, and Domino gave way, and D. O. joined St. Clare and took ground in front, followed by Muscovite, Rodo-meli, Ratanaplan, Candlewick, Rattle, La Belle, and Ethelwolf, and in nearly the same order they arrived at the Abingdon Mile Bottom, where Muscovite came out and bore his colours in the van. Ratanaplan persevered to half way up the hill and then declined. On entering the cords, Muscovite, holding a decided lead, showed his chance amounted to a certainty. Rattle, attended by D. O., Candlewick, St. Clare, and La Belle, made a vigorous effort to catch him, but he won very easily by four lengths; the second beating the third two lengths; Candlewick was fourth; St. Clare and La Belle next; Rodo-meli about seventh or eighth; the others finished at straggling intervals, most of them beaten off a long way. Pace good throughout. Joe Miller, who got badly off, came in some time after the others had passed the chair. Bricken, Balrowine, La Belle, and two or three others also got badly off. Balrowine broke down.

Match, 200 sovs, h ft. D.M. 7 furlongs 201 yards. Mr. Greville's Kaffir, by Alarum, 8st 5lb Flatman 1 Lord Glasgow's c, by Pantaloon, out of Physalis, 8st 7lb Bartholomew 2 Betting—2 to 1 on Kaffir. Kaffir made play. When half way in the cords, Physalis colt went up, but was at last defeated by half a length.

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each. For three-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 2lb. The winner to be sold for £100, if demanded, &c. D.M. 7 furlongs 251 yards. 3 subs.

Lord William Powlett's Bobby, by Robert de Gorham S. Rogers 1
Mr. Sargent's Cable Charlton 2
Lord Chesterfield's Communist Flatman 3
Betting—2 to 1 on Bobby. Won by a neck. Three lengths between second and third.

The Royal Stakes of 200 sovs each, 120 ft. For three-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 2lb. Certain winners extra. The owner of the second horse to receive back his stake. A.F. 1 mile 2 furlongs 73 yards. 13 subs.

Mr. Howard's Scythian, by Orlando, 8st 7lb Wells 1
Mr. Greville's Quince, 8st 7lb Flatman 2
Lord Cliden's Rodo-meli, 8st 7lb A. Day 3
Betting—3 to 1 on Scythian, who made all the running, and won by a length; the second beating the third by three lengths.

Challenge for the Whip. 200 sovs each. 10st. B.C. 4 miles, 1 furlong, 173 yards.

Lord Exeter's Stockwell, by the Baron Norman 1
Mr. Morris's Kingston, by Venison Basham 2

Betting—5 to 4 on Kingston. Won by thirty lengths. Kingston broke down.

Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each. For two-yr-olds, 6st 10lb; three, 8st 5lb; four and upwards, 9st. The winner to be sold for £20, if demanded, &c. Rutland Stakes Course, 5 furlongs 182 yards. 7 subs.

Mr. Rutson's Sweetness, by Sweetmeat, 4 yrs Sly 1
Captain Lane's Guy Mannerer, 6 yrs Bartholomew 2
Mr. Roger's Guitar, 2 yrs Flatman 3
Mr. Wood's Duet, 2 yrs Wells 4
Mr. Byrne's Petrol, 4 yrs Ashmall 5
Mr. Drakall's Danum, 2 yrs (carried 6st 12lb) Aldcroft 6

Betting—Even on Guy Mannerer, 5 to 1 each agst Guitar and Duet, 6 to 1 agst Sweetness. A good race in with the first three. Was won by a neck, same distance between the second and third.

Brilliant weather, and the town all bustle and business, the special and other trains to-day having brought in a vast accession of visitors. The scene on the heath was highly animated and exciting, and the preparations for the great race were watched with a very lively interest. At the saddling stables, and in and round the ring, professionals and amateurs congregated in large numbers, and speculation was anxiously and sedulously pursued as judgment directed, fancy imagined, and books were to be "operated" upon.

Muscovite maintained his position in the betting with unshaken firmness; and his performance in the race fully justified the strong confidence of his backers. He won very easily.

The challenge for the whip was not the least interesting incident in the day's sport. It is a severe task for the competitors, and although Kingston unfortunately broke down in the fateful joint of the off hind leg, whilst in possession of the lead, and when within half a mile of home, there is no doubt that Stockwell would have obtained the trophy had no such casualty occurred.

BETTING AFTER THE RACES.

Cambridgeshire Stakes.

10 to 1 agst Rattle (t freely) 50 to 1 agst Drinoco (t)
14 to 1 — Early Bird (t) 25 to 1 — Scherz (t)
On the course, after the Cesarewitch, 6 to 1 was taken about Rattle.

BETTING IN THE EVENING

The forward position which Rattle obtained for the Cesarewitch caused his chance for the Cambridgeshire to be very favourably regarded. On the course, 6 to 1 was taken about him. On unentering at the rooms, however, after the races, three or four points more were laid, but the layers were evidently the first to "decline." At night, 8 to 1 was taken freely.

Scherz was in strong demand, and was backed for a good deal of money, at prices ranging from 20 to 10 to 1.

At midnight the quotations relative to the Cambridgeshire were as follows:—

7 to 1 agst Rattle (t) 10 to 1 agst Scherz (t)
12 to 1 — The Early Bird (t) 10 to 1 — Orinoco

The Derby.

12 to 1 agst St. Hubert (t) 50 to 1 agst Polydora colt (off; in the course of the afternoon 1000 to 200 to 60 — Sandrab (t) to 30 was taken)

The Whip was not challenged for.

WEDNESDAY.

Mr. Saxon's John o' Bruges, 3 yrs, 8st 3lb, Clements
Mr. Harma's f by John o' Gaunt, dam by Emilius, out of Ophelia, 3 yrs, 8st 7lb, Ashmall Betting—2 to 1 agst Bobby, 5 to 2 agst John o' Bruges, 4 to 1 agst Calot. A good set-to with Bobby and John o' Bruges ended in a dead heat. Bobby was third—Deciding heat: 5 to 1 on John o' Bruges. Bobby made the running, and after a very fine race up the cords, won by a head.

The Bedford Stakes. A Sweepstakes of 50 sovs each, h ft. For two-yr-olds. Colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 4lb. Certain penalties and allowances. From the Ancaster Post to the Duke's Stand. 5 furlongs 170 yards. 18 subs.

Duke of Bedford's Para, by Paragon, 8st 7lb (including 6lb extra) F. Marson 1
Lord Exeter's Besika, 8st 7lb (including 3lb extra) Norman 2
Duke of Bedford's Pugnator, 8st 4lb S. Rogers 3
Mr. J. Pomeroy's William the Third, 8st 7lb Maton 4
Mr. J. M. Stanley's Contention, 8st 4lb Charlton 5

The betting opened at 5 and 4 to 1 agst Para, and even on William the Third; Pugnator's number was, however, subsequently put up, and it closed at 6 to 4 agst William the Third, 7 to 4 agst Pugnator, and 3 to 1 agst Para. Para jumped off with the lead, which she held throughout, and won cleverly by a length; Besika, after a fine set-to, beating Pugnator for second place by a head.

Match of 200 sovs, h ft. A.F. Mr. Mare's Ariosto, 8st 7lb; Baron Rothschild's Hungerford, 8st 5lb. Off by consent.

The first race being "set" to two o'clock, ample time was allowed for the business of settling. Complaints of the scarcity of money were, however, heard on all sides; and, indeed, the settling, so far as it went, was most unsatisfactory. Two persons received a large sum of money early in the morning, and absented themselves from their creditors almost immediately afterwards. Several are very heavy losers; but, until the general settling-day at Tattersall's, on Monday next, it is impossible to speak with any degree of accuracy as to the "hit and miss."

The sport to-day was of an average quantity and quality, and the Heath was well attended. Weather showery.

SALE OF BLOOD STOCK.

In the course of the morning the following blood stock was sold by the Messrs. Tattersall:—

Hay mare (foaled 1816), by Bay Middleton, out of Olive colt 27 guineas.
Leybourne, 4 yrs 20 "
Refoul, 3 yrs 10 "
Scandal (foaled in 1818) 50 "
Exchange (foaled in 1817), sister to Scandal 35 " Woodcock (foaled in 1816) 105 "
Miss Eyn, 2 yrs 31 "
Common, 2 yrs 21 "
Bay colt, 2 yrs, by Melhourne—Pandora 10 "
Sik, 2 yrs 15 "
H.M.T.—This horse has been purchased by Lord William Powlett for £1,200.

THE BETTING ROOM AT NIGHT.

The room was thinly attended, and business was evidently checked by the badness of the "settling."

Some of the betting on the Cambridgeshire varied considerably from the true tone of the market; for instance, whilst in one part of the room 15 to 1 was taken about Scherz, in another part 25 and 20 to 1 were betted in hundreds against him. The layer was manifestly in a humorous mood, but there might, nevertheless, be "method" in it. 6,000 to 500 he also laid in one bet agst Drinoco, and 3,000 to 100 agst Ianthe.

WEDNESDAY.

13 to 2 agst Rattle (7 to 1 t) 20 to 1 agst Helina (t)
12 to 1 — Drinoco (t) 25 to 1 — D. M. joff
500 to 30 — Scherz (t) 30 to 1 — Burlington (t)
10 to 1 — The Early Bird (17 to 1 t) 30 to 1 — Ianthe (t)

Some extreme outsiders were backed at the rate of 1,000 to 15, and 1,000 to 10 each. The most prominent in favour were Little Dard, Herrine, Octavia, Kialdja, and The Deformed.

Derby.

12 to 1 agst Greenhush. Eamius (t) 20 to 1 agst Cruiser (t) to £200 1000 to 25 — Wild Dayrell (t)
12 to 1 — St. Hubert (t) 1000 to 20 — Sandrab (t)
14 to 1 — Rillman (to £1 and 1d) 1,000 to 25 agst each of the last two was also taken in one bet.

Mr. Courton's Mure Bartholomew 5

Betting—2 to 1 agst Almond, 3 to 2 agst Habena, 4 to 1 agst Gretina, 5 to 1 agst Antiochette. Habena and Almond lay together, the former having a slight lead, until they arrived at the Abingdon Mile Bottom, whence they ran head and head into the cords; a few strides from home Antiochette made a vigorous effort, and joined issue; after a sharp set-to, Habena won by three-quarters of a length, and Antiochette beat Almond by a head.

Handicap Plate of 100 sovs. For three-yr-olds and upwards. A.F. One mile, 2 furlongs, 73 yards.

Baron Rothschild's Hungerford, by John o' Gaunt, 6 yrs, 8st, Charlton 1

Mr. Greville's Scarecrow, 5 yrs, 6st 11lb Carroll 2
Mr. Cumbe's Nervous, 4 yrs, 6st 12lb, Wells
Mr. Fenning's Humboldt, 3 yrs, 6st 12lb, Prior
Mr. Mather's Candlewick, aged, 6st 10lb, T. Cliff
Captain Lowther's Rackappell, 1 yrs, 6st 4lb, J. Stegless

Mr. Barber's Domino, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb, Ashmall
Mr. Megson's Roebuck, 3 yrs, 6st 12lb, Dowling
Count Bathynay's Determination, 3 yrs, 6st 4lb, M. Greville
Mr. Tomlinson's Tomyris, 3 yrs, 6st, Fordham

Betting—1 to 1 each agst Tomyris and Scarecrow, 3 to 1 agst Domino, 5 to 1 agst Rackappell, 100 to 15 agst Hungerford.

An excellent race, Hungerford winning on the post by a head. Nervous was close up with Scarecrow, and about half a length in advance of Determination, Rackappell, and Domino, who finished nearly abreast. Tomyris was next.

The sport to-day had only a passive interest, but nearly every race was closely contested, and the whole scene was highly animated and exciting. The weather, though somewhat cold, was genial and salubrious.

At one o'clock Mr. S. Rogers's Alton, aged, 12st 2lb (Mr. J. Arkey), walked over for the Annual Town Plate, first "set out" in the 17th year of the reign of Charles II., and, as his last recite, is "to be run for on the second Thursday in October for ever."

Great Warwick Handicap, of 15 sovs each, 5 ft, with 160 added. The winner of the Cesarewitch Stakes to carry 10lb extra; the second horse 5lb extra; and the winner of any other Handicap value £100, after the declaration of the weights, to carry 6lb extra; no horse to carry more than 10lb extra. The second horse to save his stake. Queen round, starting at the Stand.

Selling allowances. The surplus to go to the fund. Grey Stone Re-opened—to close and name on Monday.

The Richmond Handicap of 10 sovs each, 5 ft, and only 3 if declared, with 70 added. The owner of the second horse to save his stake. A winner of any Handicap value £100, after the weights are declared, to carry 4lb; of two such Handicaps, 7lb extra. Once round and a distance.

TURFIANA.

MATCH.—Houghton Meeting (Saturday).—Mr. Copperthwaite's The Early Bird, 8st 7lb, agst Mr. Fenning's Humboldt, 7st 7lb. Cambridgeshire Course, 1 mile 240 yards.

WARWICK OCTOBER MEETING.—It will be seen by the Programme of the Races, that the stakes are well filled, and as nearly £400 is given, good fields may be anticipated. Should the weather prove favourable, a numerous attendance is certain; Mr. S. Merry, the Clerk of the Course, (although having been very ill for some time), has been indefatigable in his exertions to get a good meeting up. Full particulars of entries, with colours, riders, and exact time of starting, will be found in Mr. W. Rose's cards of the day.

NORTHALLERTON RACES.—The following decision has been given relative to the dispute for the Northallerton Handicap:—"We, the Stewards of Northallerton Races, having gone into the objection made to Horatio's receiving the stakes, are of opinion that, under Rule 27 of the Racing Calendar, the objection on the score of his being in arrears of forfeits was not made in proper time, and therefore award the stakes to Horatio. (Signed) H. VAN STRAUBENZER and FREDERIC BELL. York, October 5, 1854."

LORD ANGLESEY has given the following names to two yearling fillies:—Br. f. by Chatham, out of Anspach—Alma. Filly by Red Hart, dam by Camel Junior, grandam by Gladiator, out of Canezon's dam—Elvina.

THE DUKE OF BUCKLEIGH'S FOX-BOUNDS will meet on Monday, the 16th, at Mossburnford; Tuesday, 17th, at Minto; Thursday, 19th, at Linsindenlaw; Saturday, 21st, at Woolpaw, at half-past ten.

THE CARMARTHENSHIRE HOUNDS will meet on Monday, October 16th, at The Red Roses, and on Friday, the 20th, at Mydrim, at ten o'clock.

THE HALSDON HOUNDS will meet on Monday, October 16th, at Huntshaw Wood; Friday, October 20th, at Wick Cross Gate; Monday, October 23rd, at Woolley Pound; Friday, October 27th, at Glen Cottage, at half-past ten.

MR. TRELAWNEY'S HOUNDS will meet on Saturday, the 21st, at Flete Western Lodge, at a quarter before eleven.

MR. TRELAWNEY'S HOUNDS meet on Tuesday, 24th, at Kingsbridge-road Station; and on Saturday, the 28th, at Kitley, at half-past ten.

MR. DEACON'S HOUNDS (late Woodovis) will meet on Monday, Oct. 16, at Grenofen Turnpike-gate; and on Thursday, the 19th, at Callington New Bridge, at half-past ten.

SOUTH DOWN FOX HOUNDS.—We are informed by the Committee that a book is open at Messrs. Hall, West, and Co.'s bank for subscriptions, the same as last season, for the above hounds. The town is much indebted to Freeman Thomas Esq., the gallant master, for bringing sport so near home to our visitors and residents.

CAPTAIN HAMPTON LEWIS'S HOUNDS will meet on Monday, Oct. 16, at Peutrecht Park; and on Friday, Oct. 20, at Trevor Gate, at eleven.

THE CARLISLE HARRIERS will meet on Wednesday, Oct. 18, at the Kennel; and on Friday, Oct. 20, at Broadneth, at ten.

DEER HUNTING.—A few days ago a valuable bound, belonging to a gentleman staying at the Lion Inn, dropped dead, while coursing one of the deer in Lullingstone Park. The hound, from its celebrity, is said to have been worth £50.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

SPORTING ACCIDENT.—A few days ago, a woman named Freeman, the wife of a collier residing at Heath, was gleaming in a field in the occupation of Mr. George Goodwin, farmer, when a covey of partridges rose from near the place where she was. A party of gentlemen, who were shooting in the field at the time, not seeing the woman, fired at the birds, when a quantity of shot entered her right elbow, leg, and side of her face. She was in a stooping posture at the time they fired. She was removed home, when medical assistance was speedily procured, and the shot extracted; she is now going on favourably.

CAUTION TO SPORTSMEN.—Mr. Freeman Parson, of Edwardstone, Suffolk, appeared, at the Boxford Petty Sessions, to an information, laid by the surveyor of taxes, for shooting game without a certificate for that purpose. He was fined in the penalty of £20, and double certificate duty, in the whole £28. It is due to Mr. Parson to state that he had no desire or intention to defraud the revenue, as it was proved on the oath of Mr. Smith, the collector of taxes for Edwardstone, that Mr. Parson had applied to him for a certificate but found he had not sufficient cash with him, and it was arranged that he should send his man with the money for it. He, however, unthinkingly went out on the 2nd of September last without a certificate, and was detected by Mr. Charles Mortimer, gamekeeper to Sir Joshua Rowley, Bart., shooting pheasants on that day.—The defendant in the last case, Mr. Freeman Parson, together with Mr. George F. Parson, of Waldfingfield, and Dr. G. Gurdon, of Boxford, were then charged, upon the information of John Gardiner, farming bailiff to Sir G. Rowley, Bart., with killing four pheasants on the said 2nd of September last. The case was proved as to the Messrs. Parson, and they were fined 10s. for each bird, and 12s. expenses. The information against Mr. Gurdon was dismissed.

CURIOUS FACT.—A correspondent at Amesbury informs us that there is at the present moment, near the South Gate in this town, and on the farm of Mr. William Long, a rook's nest, containing a brood of young birds. The circumstance has attracted the attention of many persons in the neighbourhood.

A RARE OCCURRENCE.—Mr. Harvey, of Cullompton, shot a cuckoo on the 3rd of October, which is now in the possession of Mr. Truscott, of North-street.

SOUTHERN COURSING CLUB, CORK.

The Club met at Crossbarry, on the 3rd inst., when a Puppy Stake, £1. 12s. 6d. entrance, was run for. Hares were numerous and ran stout, beating the dogs in some courses. Three gentlemen amateurs most kindly acted as judges, whose decision gave the most universal satisfaction.

Mr. Payne's bk w b Pretty Polly beat Mr. Wise's r b Wildfire.
Mr. Massy's w f d Scythian the Second beat Mr. Hayes's r b Haidie.
Mr. Hayes's bk d Harry Bedlam beat Mr. Massy's r d Barrister the Second (1).

Dr. O'Neill's r d Galtymore beat Mr. Payne's w f d King Cob the Second.
Dr. O'Neill's r d Peel beat Mr. Wise's r b Witch.
Dr. O'Neill's r b Mountain Sprite beat Mr. Parley's r b Penumbra.

Second Trial.

Pretty Polly beat Scythian the Second.
Galtymore beat Harry Bedlam.
Peel a bye (Mountain Sprite being drawn).

Third Trial.

Pretty Polly beat Galtymore.

Fourth Trial.

Pretty Polly beat Peel, and won.

The following matches were then run off:—

Mr. Parley's r b Penumbra against Mr. Wise's r b Wildfire (undecided).
Dr. O'Neill's r b Mountain Sprite, beat Mr. Hayes's r b Haidie.
Mr. Parley's r b Penumbra beat Mr. Wise's r b Witch.
Dr. O'Neill's r b Mountain Sprite, beat Mr. Gould's f b Hebe.

The next meeting will take place Nov. 7, when a Puppy Stake, confined to the members of the club, will be run for, to which £5 will be added.

BODMIN, CORNWALL, Oct. 9, 1854.

SIR,—A fine woodcock was this day shot at Dunmeer, near this place, by Henry Mark, Sir W. Molesworth's keeper. This is, I believe, the first that has been seen in Cornwall this season.—Yours truly, H. SANDERCOCK.

THE MOORS AND FORESTS.—The reports this year from the grouse-moors are excessively scanty. The fact is, that instead of sport, the grouse-shooting is becoming a task. The grouse have got so very wild, that it is more a business of grouse-stalking than grouse-shooting.

RIFLE CLUB.—A meeting was held in Markinch, on Monday evening, for the purpose of forming a rifle club in this district, but from the meagre attendance the matter has been but faintly advanced.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

The closing trip came off on Saturday last under a spanking breeze from E.N.E., just enough to render a topsail unnecessary and a reef in the mainsail advisable. During one part of the day a launch took place at Deptford, which will be found mentioned below, and off the Folly House an eight-oared gig capsized close to Mr. Cooper's yacht, Pearl. Luckily all hands were saved, and Mr. Cooper himself was among the first away in the boats to pick them up. The rendezvous at four p.m. was Blackwall-pier, whence the Avalon, with Mr. Monk and a party, Amazon, Mr. Young, also conveying several gentlemen, and the Dart, Mr. Clark, started together, and beat down the river in company. Blue-Eyed Maid, Pearl, Curlew, &c., being of lesser tonnage, had started before that hour; but, in working down, were seen every now and then making the best of their way to Erith. The closing dinner at the Crown was attended by about thirty members of the club, among whom we noticed Mr. Eagle (in the chair), Mr. W. Goodson (vice-chair), Mr. Crookford, Mr. Monk, Rev. Mr. Cooke, Mr. Staubridge, Mr. Dutton, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Farmer, Mr. W. Knight, Messrs. Fradley, Mr. Bonner, Mr. Greening, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Heseltine, Mr. Dunbar, &c. &c. Another party of yachtsmen were assembled in the same hotel, among whom were Commodore Tuckwell, Vice-Commodore Knibbs, Mr. Thomas, and others. Mr. Eagle gave the customary loyal and patriotic toasts in his usual able manner; and Mr. W. Goodson, in the absence of his brother, the commodore, responded for that popular officer, and explained the interesting necessity for his temporary absence from the chair he had so frequently filled at Erith. It is unnecessary to add that the commodore's health had been drunk with the greatest enthusiasm. At the conclusion of the banquet the members returned to London by train, to meet again on the 16th, not, of course, at Erith, but in London, where, at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi-terrace, the monthly meeting of the club will be held, on Monday next (the 16th), at eight o'clock p.m. precisely. On that evening the following notice of motion given by Mr. Crookford, will be discussed, viz.:—"That yachts not remaining at the station appointed for their measurement a reasonable time, be disqualified." We may here remind our readers that the annual dinner will take place on the 23rd day of November next, and that the following gentlemen have consented to act as stewards, viz.:

The Commodore.	J. W. Heseltine, Esq.
The Vice-Commodore.	R. P. Monk, Esq.
J. Crookford, Esq.	S. Morton Peto, Esq., M.P.
E. Downs, Esq.	E. S. Phillips, Esq.
C. F. Farmer, Esq.	J. Scott Russell, Esq.
W. Fradley, Esq.	G. R. Stephenson, Esq.
W. Goodson, Esq.	Richard Tress, Esq.
J. Duff Gordon, Esq.	A. J. Young, Esq.
G. Halfhide, Esq.

Tickets for the dinner may be obtained by members on application to the stewards at the club house. It is unnecessary to say that members wishing to dine at the club dinner at six o'clock on the evening of Monday, the 16th, are to give notice of their intention to Mr. Elder before two o'clock on that day. Each member may introduce one friend, upon giving such notice, but not otherwise.

The gentlemen proposed for election on Monday, are Mr. Edward James Eliot, C.E., Erith; Mr. Samuel Orchard, Islington; and Mr. Charles Brumfitt, Bradford. With regard to cruising, the season must be considered closed, and several yachts are now likely to change hands. The following are for sale:—Rambler, 7 tons, O.M., £70; Connet, 28 tons, O.M., £320; Whave, 6 tons, O.M., £40; Waterwitch, 8 tons, O.M., £70; Georgiana, 18 tons, O.M., £120; Alrum, 10 tons, O.M., £100. For particulars, apply to the secretary. The Waterwitch is a yawl, all the rest are cutters. We have above alluded to the launch that took place at Deptford, on Saturday, the 7th, the day of the closing trip of the Royal London Yacht Club. The following are the particulars:—The craft to be launched were the Ruby and Gleaner, light draught of water gun-boats, the former at halfpast one and the latter at two o'clock. These boats had been three months in building, and are similar to those recently built by Mr. Pitcher, of Northfleet, and they are of the following dimensions:—Length between the perpendiculars, 100 ft.; length of the keel for tonnage, 86 ft. 4 in.; breadth extreme, 22 ft.; breadth for tonnage, 21 ft. 8 in.; breadth moulded, 21 ft. 2 in.; depth in hold, 7 ft. 10 in.; burden in tons, old measurement, 215.53.4. Orders have been given to build two more of the same dimensions immediately at Deptford. The peculiarity of these vessels is, that they will draw very little water. Their mean launching draught of water proves to be only four feet, and it is estimated that when equipped for sea service it will not exceed from six feet six inches to seven feet. Their machinery will be entirely below water, and they will be worked by screw propulsion, and with engines of 60 horse power, on the high pressure principle. They will each carry two 65-cwt. guns, of eight inches bore, on Lancaster's oval principle, mounted amidships on gun carriages, with traversing platforms, to render them capable of being fired either as broadside guns, or as bow and stern guns. The interest attached to these gun-boats attracted a number of visitors to witness the launch of the Ruby and Gleaner, and the ceremony of naming the vessels was performed by the daughters of Captain Superintendent George B. Martin, C.B., of Deptford dock and victualling yards. As soon as the new screw steam gun-boats were out of the charge of Mr. Chatfield, master-shipwright, they were removed by Mr. Pearn, master-attendant to Messrs. Penn and Son's wharf, to have their boilers and engines taken on board, and to be made ready for sea service.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

A meeting was held at Auderton's Hotel, by the sailing committee, on Monday evening, at which it was resolved that "The closing trip of the season shall take place on Monday next, October 16th." At 10 a.m. the commodore, in the Blue-eyed Maid, will set sail from opposite Greenwich Hospital, at which hour he hopes all the yacht owners of the club, with their friends on board their respective yachts, will join company; and, to give additional zest to the day, the club have subscribed a purse of sovereigns for the second-class yachts, as a prize in a trial match below bridge. The yachts of this class (measuring 12 feet on load water line) are all quite new craft, and have never yet sailed in company. Five only of such length are yet ready. Two or three others were confidently expected, but they cannot be finished in time. The names of those actually entered are as follows:—

STATION.	YACHT.	OWNER.	RACING FLAG.
1 ..	Volante	Mr. George West..	White, Green Diamond
2 ..	Wasp	Mr. James Bertram	Blue, White Border.
3 ..	Dove	Mr. Alfred Bennett	Red, White Cross.
4 ..	British Fair	Mr. Ed. Richardson	Dark Blue.
5 ..	Little Mary Ann	Mr. Stephen Cullen	Dark Blue, Red Border.

The commodore has already in hand a sufficient sum to give a prize also to the second boat. The distance to be sailed is from Greenwich Hospital to Eritb, and back; L.M.Y. Club regulations to be observed. After the match, the members will rendezvous at Dowson's Portland Hotel, Greenwich, near the railway station, so that those members and visitors who must return to London at night, can stay till the last minute at the festive board. Should the weather prove favourable, a very interesting match and a very joyful evening may be anticipated.

At the next monthly meeting, on the first Tuesday in November, the annual nomination of officers for the ensuing year will take place. At that meeting (November 7th) Commodore Tuckwell's resignation will be accepted; the vice and rear commodores will be re-elected (such is the on dit), and also, if rumour have any foundation in truth, the commodore's flag will be offered to Mr. Biddle, of the Fawn. This is a good choice.

PRINCE OF WALES' YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting was held on the 6th inst., Vice Commodore Knibbs in the chair.

The notices of motion given by the commodore having been proposed by the chair, and seconded by the secretary, Mr. Chubb, were, after the loss of an amendment, "to refer them to the Sailing Committee," severally put to the ballot. The following was the result:—"For increasing canvas"—lost by 23 to 14. "For establishing the Squadron of Evolution"—carried by 35 to 2. That relating to life-buoys was withdrawn.

A letter from the commodore was then read announcing his appointment to an office under Government which took him abroad, and, consequently, resigning the commodoreship.

Mr. P. Turner proposed, and Mr. Lilley seconded, Robert Hewitt, Esq., owner of the Gnat, as a fit and proper person to succeed to the vacant office; and such appointment was afterwards, on the suggestion of Mr. Chubb, conferred on Mr. Hewitt, by acclamation.

Mr. Hewitt returned thanks in a neat speech, in which he hoped, that, under his leadership, there would be nothing but fair weather, and no breezes but those of the wind.

Dr. Bain gave a notice of motion "to alter Rule 2, by appointing a rear-commodore to the Club; and, until the necessity arose for nominating one for active service in the Thames, to confer that honorary distinction on their late commodore, as a mark of their esteem and acknowledgment for past exertions on behalf of the Prince of Wales' Yacht Club."

Mr. Legg handed in a long list of notices of motion, which were referred to the Sailing Committee, and upon which those gentlemen will report.

Four candidates were proposed for the next ballot.

The annual dinner will take place, as usual, on the 9th of November (the Prince of Wales' birthday). Tickets, 7s. 6d., without wine, to be had of the stewards—Messrs. T. Harrison, J. Webber, A. Turner, R. Sadleir, and J. Messent.

ANGLESEY YACHT CLUB.

The third meeting of the members of this new club took place at the club-house, Pier Hotel, Chelsea, on the 11th inst.; Commodore Chubb presided. The secretary received subscriptions, and several new members were nominated for admission on the 14th November next. Any gentleman wishing to become a member of this club should send his name and address to the secretary before the 7th November. The members present sat down to supper after the business was concluded, and then followed some excellent singing, which prolonged the meeting to a late hour.

ROWING.

"* We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others forwarding their appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience."

MATCHES APPOINTED.

October 19.—G. Robbins, of Battle Bridge, and R. Savage, of Horsley-down, to row from Putney to Mortlake for £25 a side.

October 23.—W. Nancy, of Putney, and J. Kells, of Christchurch, to row from the Pier at Putney to the ship at Mortlake, for 20 guineas a side.

October 25.—G. Robbins and R. Savage (below-bridge men), to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £25 a side.

November 20.—T. Cole (the Champion of the Thames) and J. Messenger, of Teddington, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £200 a side.

November.—Robert Newell and William Pocock, to row from Putney Bridge to the Ship at Mortlake, for £25 a side.

MATCH BETWEEN J. SYNNETT AND R. WHARF FOR £25 A-SIDE.

A rowing-match, now that the recognised season for aquatics is drawing to a close, comes upon us "like angels' visits, few and far between," especially when the contest is between men of merit, and the event comes off amidst the wealth and commerce of the world, and at the spot where the "Good Queen Bess" held her court in days of yore, instead of the still and dreamy waters of Putney or Mortlake. A match came off on Monday between J. Synnott, of Stone-stairs, Ratcliffe, and B. Wharf, of Mill-stairs, Bermoudey, to row for £25 a side, from the Old Barge House, Woolwich, to a boat moored off' Lincolnhole, and which turned out one of the most spirited events of the season. The rising fame of the men caused a great deal of excitement in their respective localities, so much so, that the friends of the men engaged the Ariel steamer to accompany the race, which was crowded with spectators. After the usual preliminaries had been arranged for the choice of umpires, and Mr. John Moore, of Bankside, Southwark, had been appointed referee, the men made their appearance at the scratch, "eager for the fray." The men both looked well and confident, and from their appearance there was little choice for favourite. Precisely at three o'clock the order was given to start, Wharf being on the Kent shore, and Synnott on the Middlesex shore, and the odds being 5 to 4 on Wharf. They got off well together; but Synnott being in smooth water and his opponent in huddling water, the former soon took the lead by seven or eight boats' lengths, and kept it till near Blackwall Point. When off the point Wharf began to overhaul his antagonist, and on getting clear round the point, was a clear boat's-length ahead. From this spot to the finish Wharf began to show the superiority, and gradually drew a head, never leaving Synnott a chance of showing to the front, and eventually winning by about twenty boats' lengths, to the great delight of his friends, whose countenances were a dead more cheerful at the finale than at the commencement.

CRICKET.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

Sir,—Allow me to revert to a publication from a correspondent of yours a week or two past on the subject of Cricket. He seems to look with regret on the rapid advancement and alteration made in the game during the last few years. I will ask—did any person having any knowledge of the game as it was and is now, witness the play between Surrey and Sussex, at Brighton, in July last? Will not be say that there is no comparison between them? There have been many who have sailed at Lillywhite for what they call his innovation on the old game, but you will, as a general rule, find that such men are wanting in science to play the round-hand ball, or if not, how under-hand themselves, and are anxious to back their own style at all times. I once came across a Cricket Guide of 1833, edited by Nynen, I believe, a Scotch work. He tells us of men who never rarely could be bowled out, from getting the mastery over the under-band ball, and also speaks of a player who brought a bat into the field, from its width, effectually covered his wickets, and by this "dodge" he kept them up. Now, I know not if your correspondent has read this work, and pictures to himself this style of play, regretting the formation of the rules by the Marylebone, which make cricket a scientific game rather than child's play. Your correspondent must go to Cesar and Caffyn, and persuade them such things, and we'll then have more chance of seeing an alteration. The past history of the game is interesting when we compare its arrangements with those of the present, but no "cricket" of our time, I feel assured, can regret the change.—I am, Sir, Yours, &c.

THE REGENT'S PARK ETON CLUB.

This Club played their wind-up match on Monday last, sides being chosen by Messrs. Wood and Gillard; Mr. Wood's side obtaining an easy victory, mainly through the excellent batting of Mr. Goldsworthy, who played remarkably well. After the match, the annual dinner took place at the Eton Hotel, and which was very numerously attended. A retrospective view of the club being taken was found to be highly gratifying to all present; the club having advanced in strength and position, as a cricket club, each successive season, and now numbering near one hundred members. Its strength being proved in having played such clubs this season as the Reigate Amateurs, Hertford, Mitcham, Blackheath Eagle, of which the club has won the majority, besides others of lesser standing.

At the close of the dinner, a very high compliment was paid to Mr. Horner by the members of the club, in the presentation to him of a valuable gold watch and chain, for his obliging manners and unremitting attention during the time the club has been established at the Eton Hotel, the following words being inscribed on the inner lid of the watch:—

"This watch was presented to Mr. Thomas Horner by the Members of the Regent's Park Eton Cricket Club, as a mark of respect, Oct. 9, 1854." Likewise, the members of the Camden Junior and Young England Clubs, emulating the spirit of the Regent's Park Eton, presented, at the same time, to Mrs. Horner a beautiful gold signet ring, as a mark of esteem for her kind co-operations with Mr. Horner in promoting the comfort of the members using the house.

The following is the score of wind-up match:—

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE—UPPER SCHOOL v. MODERN SCHOOL.

A match took place between a scratch eleven of the Upper and Modern Schools, on Friday, the 29th ult., in which, as the score will show, the former proved victorious by 19 runs, one innings only being played. The ground did not suit the bowling of Messrs. Graham, Byron, and Morgan, which was straight, but not very effective. On the side of the Modern School, Mr. Dolphin kept up his Norfolk reputation. Mr. J. Graham also played a brilliant and useful innings for his side. The following is the score:

CHESTERTON v. SOULDERN.

On Tuesday, the return game between the above clubs came off at the former place. Chesterton won in one innings.—Score: Chesterton, 93. Of which J. Lamb made 25; E. Heritage, 1; J. Simms, 15; G. Fundell, 8; J. Tanner, 0; C. Tanner, 6; W. Rodvight, 9; F. Tanner, 7; J. Jakeman, not out, 10; H. Jakeman, 1; E. Jakeman, 0. Byes, &c., 11. Southern, 46 and 45—91. Of which N. Ramsey, Esq., made 10 and 9; J. Stuchbury, 3 and 5; C. Hawkins, 7 and 0; W. Hawkins, nil; R. Stuchbury, 17 and 7; Harleidge, 0 and 3; T. Tebby, 3 and 1; E. Holloway, 0 and 13; H. Stuchbury, 1 and 0; G. Gibbard, 1 and 2; J. Boldington, 2 and 0. Byes, &c., 2 and 5. Refreshments, &c., were supplied by host Buckle on the field, and the evening was cheerfully spent.

NARGEN, OFF REVEL, BALTIC.—September 23rd, being a bright sunny day, upwards of 100 officers from the English fleet assembled at the village of Nargen, close to which was a fine grass field, where wickets were soon pitched, and the people of Revel might have seen the fine old English game of cricket played to their heart's content, or otherwise, for the distance is less than between the Isle of Wight and Portsmouth; and I fancy the people of that loyal town would not be pleased to see an enemy enjoying himself in their favourite island. Besides cricket there were foot races and quoits, and private little picnics among old friends. The people of the village were very civil to us, and the relatives of the brave fellows who died here in 1809 will thank them when they learn that, instead of allowing the headboards from the graves to lie down where the decay at the bottom has caused them to fall, they have been carefully collected and stand reared up against the walls of the little churchyard, with the names still legible.—Times Correspondent.

BRACKLEY.—On the 19th inst., a game of cricket came off between the married and single members of the Brackley Club. Score: married, 35 and 40—total 75; single, 60, and, with nine wickets to fall, 16—total, 76. The single thus winning with ease.—The return game took place on the 22nd. The married won in their first innings. The numbers being, married, 93; single, 46 and 37—total 83.

who is just now one degree more unpopular in England than himself. Lieutenant Knight has been tried by court-martial for the Portsmouth affair, and has been—as we said from the very first would be the case—acquitted of all charges except those of misconduct, for which his name has been placed at the bottom of the list of first lieutenants. Another officer of the Dauntless has been “admonished” for not having promptly interfered in the matter. The dreadful fire and loss of life at Newcastle is still the subject of official enquiry. A far more frightful casualty has occurred at sea, the American mail steamer, Arctic, having come into collision with a French iron steamer, the Vesta, and gone down, with the loss of 350 lives. In other times so melancholy an event would attract universal attention, but it will be but slightly heeded now. The Protection interest has been having a little revival in Essex, and Major Beresford has thought it desirable, while we are waiting for news from Sebastopol, to enter into a history of the “W. B.” scandals, and to abuse the Attorney-General.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA. SUPPLEMENT TO THE LONDON GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY OF SUNDAY, OCTOBER 8th.

ADMIRALTY, Oct. 8, 1854.

The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have this day received despatches from Vice-Admiral Dundas, containing intelligence as to the proceedings of her Majesty's fleet in the Black Sea, of which the following are copies:—

“ATTACK OF THE RUSSIAN ENTRENCHMENTS ON THE ALMA BY THE ALLIED ARMIES.”

“No. 485. “Britannia, off the Alma, Sept. 21, 1854.

“Sir,—In my letter of the 18th instant (No. 480) I reported to you, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that the allied armies were ready to move, and I now beg you will acquaint their lordships that on the morning of the 19th they marched to a position about two miles north of the Alma river, where they halted for the night; the French and Turks on the right close to the sea, and the English to the left, about four miles inland.

“The Russians, with some 5,000 or 6,000 cavalry and artillery, and 15,000 infantry, made a demonstration north of the river, but returned on the approach of the armies, and recrossed the river at sunset.

“About noon, on the 20th, the allies advanced in the same order to force the Russian position and intrenchments south of the Alma. This was effected by four o'clock, the Russians retreating apparently to the eastward of the main road to Sebastopol.

“The Russian left fell back before the French very rapidly, and their batteries on the right were carried by the bayonet by the English.

“Our loss has necessarily been severe, and is estimated at about 1,200 killed and wounded; that of the French about 900.

“The Russian loss has also been great, two general officers and three guns were captured by our men, but we have few prisoners beyond the wounded, in consequence, it is believed, of our deficiency of cavalry.

“Lieutenant Derriman, of the Canadoc, accompanied the staff of General Lord Raglan during the action; and I also sent Lieutenant Glynn, of this ship, to convey any message to me from his lordship.

“All the medical officers of the fleet (excepting one in each ship), 600 seamen and marines, and all the boats have been assisting the wounded, and conveying them to the transports, that will sail for the Bosphorus as soon as possible.

“I believe it is the intention of the allied forces to move to-morrow, and the Samson, which I detached last night with the Terrible off Sebastopol, has signalled that the Russians were retreating on Sebastopol, and that they have burnt the villages on the Katscha. “I have, &c., (Signed) “J. W. D. DUNDAS, Vice-Admiral.

“The Secretary of the Admiralty.”

“MOVEMENTS OF THE FLEETS AND ARMIES.
“No. 487. “Britannia, off the Katscha, Sept. 23, 1854.

“Sir,—I beg you will inform the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that since my letter to you of the 21st inst. (No. 485), the men and boats of the fleet have been employed in bringing from the field (about four miles distant), and carrying on board the transports, the English and Russian officers and men wounded in the battle of the Alma, as well as the sick of the army.

“2. All the medical officers of the different ships have been zealously and usefully occupied in attending them, and I have been obliged to send several assistant-surgeons in the vessels with the wounded to Constantinople.

“The Vulcan and Andes, with 800 wounded and sick, sailed for Constantinople yesterday, and to-day the Orinoco and Colombo, with 900, including some 60 or 70 Russians, will follow.

“Another vessel (by the request of Lord Raglan), with about 500 wounded Russians, will also proceed, under charge of the Fury, to land them at Odessa.

“4. On the night of the 21st instant the Russians made a very great alteration in the position of their fleet in Sebastopol. I enclose a report made by Captain Jones, of the Samson; and I propose attacking the outer line the first favourable opportunity.

“5. Captain Jones also reports that great exertions appear to be making to strengthen the land defences, as well as those by sea.

“New batteries on both sides of the port have been erected, defending the entrances and line of coast. One to the north, has heavy guns, of a range of 4,000 yards, two shots having passed over the Samson when nearly at that distance.

“6. Provisions for the army have been landed; and the forces move on to-day towards Sebastopol, accompanied by the fleets, which have anchored off the Katscha.

“I have, &c., (Signed) “J. W. D. DUNDAS, Vice-Admiral.

“The Secretary of the Admiralty.”

“OBSERVATIONS ON THE FLEET IN SEBASTOPOL, MADE ON SEPTEMBER 22, 1854, BY CAPTAIN L. T. JONES, C.B., H.M.S. SAMSON.

“Moored across the Entrance of the Harbour.

“From north to south are the following vessels:—

1st—A frigate, at northern extreme.

2nd—A two-decker.

3rd—A three-decker, with round stern.

4th—A two-decker.

5th—A two-decker.

6th—A two-decker, without masts, quite light, and appears to be newly coppered.

7th—A large frigate.

“Artillery Creek

“The top-gallant masts of these are on deck, and sails unbent.

“The ship without masts is lying across Artillery Creek; inside is a two-decker, ready for sea, and bearing an admiral's flag at the main.

“Head of Harbour.

“The ships at the head of the harbour, which had hitherto been lying with their broadsides to the entrance, are now lying with their heads out —

No. 1—On the north, a two-decker.

2—A two-decker.

3—A two-decker.

4—A two-decker.

5—A two-decker.

6—A three-decker, at the entrance of the Dockyard Creek.

7—A three-decker, bearing an admiral's flag at the fore.

“Above these are two ships; one appears to be a line-of-battle ship, and the other a frigate.

“Steamers.

“Five steamers under the northern shore. Three small steamers at the head of the harbour, and four in Careening Bay.

“General Observations.
